NONE BIG ENOUGH.

"So you're going to move into a larger apartment?"

"Yes, the one we're in now is too small. Our son has decided he wants to learn to play a slide trombone."—Life.

IT TAKES ALL-BRAN TO RELIEVE CONSTIPATION

More and more people are eating bran for "health's sake" these days. And it's a fine thing. But not everybody realizes what a difference there is in so-called "brans." Doctors say it takes 100% bran to supply enough roughage to relieve constipation. Part-bran products, at best can only be partly effective.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is 100% bran. It furnishes roughage in effective quantities—and in the most effective form: cooked and krumbled. It does a work part-bran products cannot hope to equal. Two tablespoonfuls daily—chronic cases, with every meal—are guaranteed to relieve constipation.

Serve ALL-BRAN often. With milk or cream—fruits or honey added. Be sure you get genuine Kellogg's though—in the red-and-green package. Use it in cooking. Sprinkle into soups. ALL-BRAN is sold by all grocers. Served everywhere. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

Abana Continues Firm; Other Stocks Lose Ground

TORONTO, Oct. 2.—(Canadian Press).—With the exception of Abana which registered a gain of twenty to $.4.70, stocks on the Standard Mining Exchange today were soft. Abanadd was the feature of the session. Opening with an overnight gain of fifteen it touched $4.80, then softened to $4.70 and held firm. Noranda showed signs of stiffening at the opening but reacted towards the close, which was at $47.75, a drop of $1.75. Amulet continued to decline, suffering a loss of 12 at $3.05, and Sherritt-Gordon was down ten at $6.40, while Teck-Hughes dropped ten to $8.99. Strong spots were Mond. Nickel, Pon Orielle, Mandy and Newbec.

Toronto Trading Light; Prices Generally Firm

TORONTO, Oct. 2. — (Canadian Press.)—Except for one or two issues trading on the Toronto stock exchange was light to-day, with prices holding firm. International Nickel and Massey Harris, however, provided heavy trading and the former was up three at 127¾, after touching 128½, while the latter was up a half at 45½ after touching 46. Brazilian at 58¼ was down a point.

As usual the oil stocks were the leaders of the unlisted section. British American and Imperial were fractionally lower at 40⅜ and 79 respectively. International Petroleum was unchanged at 39 and Service Stations was up a fraction at 45.

Corn Yield Estimates Lower Than Last Month

CHICAGO, Oct. 2 (Canadian Press).—Unofficial crop reports issued here to-day pointed to a somewhat smaller corn yield this season than was indicated a month ago. Domestic Spring wheat estimates were slightly larger. On the whole the reports coincided with general expectation. Starting at ¼ to ⅝ cents advance corn later showed further gains. Wheat opened unchanged to ⅜ up, rose a little more and then reacted. Oats were firm.

Opening prices were: Wheat, December 79⅛. Oats, December 42⅝, cember 78⅛. Oats, December, 42⅝ March 44.

Nine Per Cent Call Money Causes Drop In New York

NEW YORK, October 2 (Canadian Press).—Extreme nervousness characterized trading in to-day's stock market, which experienced frequent shifts of speculative sentiment. Prices headed upward at the opening but ran into a heavy volume of selling around mid day, when banks called $35,000,000 in loans and sent the call rate from eight to nine per cent. A partial recovery set in during the early afternoon, but the line of least resistance appeared to be downward.

Few stocks showed independent strength. Lambers ran up six points to a new peak at 132 7-8, and Grasselli Chemical moved up four to a new top at 75 7-8. The weakness of several of the high-grade investment rails had a disturbing effect on speculative sentiment. Wright Aeronautical dropped from an early high of 169¾ to 160 and General Motors from 217 to 212¾.

News From the Mines

Through Solloway, Mills & Company

Noranda

Noranda's new five compartment shaft is now well under way. The location of the new shaft is 750 feet north and 200 feet west of the present No. 3 shaft. The new shaft is already down 10 feet, and is five compartment, making it two compartments larger than the old No. 3, which has three compartments only.

The recent rise in the price of copper to 15¼ cents per pound is being reflected in the earnings of the copper companies in the United States and South America, the stocks of which have recently enjoyed considerable price appreciation on the Wall Street market. Producing 90 tons of blister copper a day, a one cent increase in the price of copper means an increase of $1800 a day to Noranda, or an increase per year of $657,000. With the boom in copper stocks in the States now going on and the improvement in price, Noranda's present decline may be expected to be short lived.

Newbec

Our field man in Rouyn advises us that there is nothing new at present to cause the strength in Newbec. The drill is now down to a depth of 250 feet. It will be five or six days at least before the favorable zone, which is around the 400 foot horizon, is reached.

Trout Creek Gold Mines

It has been decided by Mr. E. H. Orser, consulting engineer of Trout Creek Gold Mines, whose property is situated near Swastika that about 10,000 feet of diamond drilling will be done before shaft sinking is contemplated. The find was made a few feet from the south boundary of the property and is considered to be one of the most important finds ever made in the Kirkland Lake camp. Stripping and trenching are under way at a point about 2,000 feet to the northeast, but up to date the continuation of the zone has not been uncovered.

Potter Doal

Increased activity in the trading of Potter Doal recently may be attributed to the fact that a rich discovery of gold has been made at Lost Bay, Clearwater Lake. The Potter Doal property is said to be located to the southwest of and adjoining the property and holdings of Bob Jowsey on which the discovery is said to have been made.

Georgia River

Mr. Wellington Beaton, president of Georgia River, in a progress report announces that the strike on Summit vein has disclosed continuation of high grade ore.

Big Missouri

A wire received from our Vancouver office intimates that officials of Big Missouri are very pleased with recent results obtained at the mine, and in view of this anticipate a big advance in the stock, which they state is fully warranted by developments.

Market Review

In point of volume Abana showed a clean pair of heels to the rest of the stocks traded in on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange yesterday. In tremendous trading Abana advanced steadily from $4.15 to $4.69 in truly juggernaut style, easing off to close at $4.49.50. Nothing of a definite nature is available as yet regarding Abana's negotiations with New York interests which are under way. However, the Street is prophesying that Abana will sell at considerably higher levels.

Although not as heavy a trader as Abana, Noranda in less than seven or eight sales moved up from $48.00 to a high of $50.75, reacting to close at $49.25-50. Noranda's big new shaft is well under way and it is expected that the collar will be put on before the snow flies.

Hollinger again touched $8.00 in the day's trading, closing very weak at $8.01.5, while Amulet at $3.15-18 was off 14 points. Trading in Mond Nickel has simmered down to a few thousand shares a day. At $31.15 to $31.25, Mond was 35 points easier. Kirkland Lake at $1.38-40 was off 7 points. Barry Hollinger at 47½-48 was down ½.

From a fairly reliable source it is learned that two or three offers have been made to Mr. Gamber, president of Granada, for control of his promising gold prospect of the Rouyn camp. Granada at 26¾ to 27 was fractionally firmer.

Big Missouri at 57, Malartic at $1.68-$1.70, Howey at 99 to $1.00 were all unchanged. Sherritt-Gordon at $6.45-50 was off 25, Sudbury Basin at $6.26-30 was off 19 points, Wright-Hargreaves at $2.85-9 was 5 points easier, Bidgood at 58 to 60 was down 2¼ and Newbec at 56 to 57 was up 2¼ points.

Teck-Hughes for the first time in some weeks sold below $9.00, closing at $8.90-$9.00. Mr. John Reid's report on San Antonio could not have been very enthusiastic, as the stock sold off in the day's trading, closing at 32 to 33.

MINING BRIEFS

A Special Service to The Examiner

It is reported that Mr. E. H. Orser, consulting engineer of the Trout Creek Gold Mines, the scene of the sensational free gold discovery at Swastika, has stated that about 10,000 feet of diamond drilling will be done on the property before shaft sinking is contemplated. The find was made a few feet from the south boundary, and the report states that it is considered one of the most important in the Kirkland Lake camp. Stripping and trenching are under way at a point about 2,000 feet to the northeast, but up to date the continuation of the ore zone has not been uncovered.

A 100-ton concentrator is being installed at the Summerville Lead Mines at Burnt River, Ontario, and it is believed that the ore coming from development will partly offset costs of the deep development program. The shaft is now down 130 feet, and the plans involve sinking to 500 feet. About 500 feet of drifting was carried out on the 100-foot level.

A wire from the head office of the Kirkland Premier Mines in Montreal states that the mine manager reports the vein to be widening con-

FIRE DESTROYS APSLEY HOME

Mr. and Mrs. William Earnshaw Lose Home and All Its Contents.

RECENTLY MARRIED.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

APSLEY, October 2. — Fire destroyed the home of William Earnshaw, Jr., about a mile south of Apsley, on the Burleigh Road, for merly owned by W. Lean, at six o'clock on Monday evening. The origin of the fire is unknown. Mr. Earnshaw was in the room where it started only a very short time before. Practically the whole of the furniture and contents were lost, besides $250 in money. Neighbors rushed to the scene as soon as the news became known, but little could be done the flames spreading with great rapidity.

Robert Knox, who lately disposed of his sawmill and residence, had his furniture stored there, and this, too, was lost. Great sympathy is felt for Mr. and Mrs. Earnshaw, who bought the place, and started housekeeping only about six months ago, after their marriage. The house was one of the best frame houses in the district.

ELLEN STOTHART.

In Nicholls Hospital on Monday, October 1, there passed away, following an illness of several months' duration, Ellen Stothart, aged eighty-five years. Born in Smith Township, a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Stothart, she had resided all her life in Smith Township, north of Langton Street, attending St. Paul's Presbyterian Church in this city. Left to mourn are one brother, James, residing in Smith Township, and an only surviving niece, Mrs. Alfred Oliver of Clair, Saskatchewan.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday, October 3, from the family residence (Water Street North) to Little Lake Cemetery, the Rev. William Allan of St. Paul's Church conducting the service at the house at 2 p.m.

On Saturday he sails from San Diego in the whaler Larson for New Zealand to meet the ships of his expedition. Byrd yesterday said goodbye to his small son and three smaller daughters.

THINKS BANKERS' ASSOCIATION GOOD

American Association's Head Suggests Similar International Body.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., October 2 (Canadian Press). — The formation of an International Bankers' Association was urged to-day by Thomas Preston, president of the American Bankers' Association, before the convention of the association here. Such an organization would aid in solving financial and industrial problems, he said, and would bring to the world a better understanding of the problems and difficulties which beset every country.

DUKE AND DUCHESS NOT COMING HERE

No Foundation For Rumor of Early Visit To Canada.

LONDON, October 2 (Canadian Press Cable).—The Canadian Press was reliably informed to-day that there is no reason to believe that the Duke and Duchess of York contemplate an early visit to Canada, as rumored at Ottawa. The same authority stated that there is no foundation for the belief that Premier Mackenzie King proposes to formally invite Their Royal Highnesses to Canada when he is in London next week.

THE MARKETS

siderably in the winze and looking much richer. The work is progressing satisfactorily.

It is understood that important news regarding the Cobalt Contact will be forthcoming soon. Whether this deals with the original property or their recently acquired claims up the Bell River in the new Mattagami Lake field is unknown as yet. At the Cobalt property, the work has reached a point some 250 feet to the west of the big fault. The diabase or fault has a displacement of 440 feet vertically, and after passing through this, operations entered the conglomerate formation. Two parallel veins are said to have been cut, one reported to be over an inch in width carrying cobalt and ruby silver. The report continues that 50 feet to the west the second vein was encountered and preparations for drifting are being made. Meanwhile, crosscutting continues and to be driven through to the boundary estimated at about 700 feet further west.

A despatch from the north gives further particulars of the claims recently staked for the Dunlop Consolidated Mines, at Mattagami Lake, up the Bell River about 250 miles from Amos. A contract for 2,000 feet of diamond drilling was recently signed. The report states: "The Dunlop discovery, in the Mattagami Lake section of north-western Quebec, has been traced for 3,000 feet, with widths ranging from 50 to 200 feet. C. J. Dunlop, together with J. M. Dunlop and associates staked a group of 40 claims following which handstool and powder was taken in and considerable trenching carried out. Pits and trenching disclosed a large body of pyrrhotite with disseminations of chalcopyrite, galena and sphalerite. While channel samples have been taken, assay results are not yet announced. The holdings are situated to the east of the mouth of the Bell River and on the south shore of Mattagami Lake. Steamboats are operating between Senneterre and the lake and carry freight at the rate of 8 cents per pound."

One of the most important announcements made recently was the recently issued statement that East Sudbury Deep Mines had secured the Bellevue Mine, Oregon. Over $1,000,000 of ore has already been put in sight to comparatively shallow depths and mill plans will soon be considered.

Canadiani nterests who bought into International Nickel shares during the past two years on a scale that made them an important factor in controlling the destinies of the company, a long view of the stock and when New York speculators failed to dislodge them they came to take a view that the stock must be carried higher.

Canadian interests have not changed their attitude. Convinced that they have only to sit on their holdings and their equity will grow steadily to much greater proportions they are staying with the stock. A price of $250 is talked of for the stock, within a reasonable period while as much as $500 is mentioned as a more remote figure.

International Nickel earnings have shown big expansion during the past two or three years, and especially this year. The company is expected to earn $8.00 per share, or 28 per cent on the common for 1928. With the current dividend $3.00 per annum, the yield is relatively small, but the ratio of earnings to price is more impressive, being nearly 6½ per cent.

The company has completed its financing for expansion that will, it is anticipated, double or triple output and earning power within two years.

The factor that makes for the optimistic views entertained, however, is the assurance that the company when plant expansion is completed will be able to maintain annual earning power about equal to the par value of its stock for an indefinite period. The precious metal content of the ore bodies in the Frood are generous, and an average of 6 per cent. copper and 2½ per cent. nickel for some 100,000,000 tons of ore indicated mean that the company has resources of some $4,000,000,000 by way of physical assets from which to draw.

A high degree of prosperity for many years to come is the luring prospect ahead of holders of International Nickel shares.

Sinking of Noranda New Shaft Under Way.

Sinking of Noranda's new 5-compartment shaft is now under way. Two compartments larger than the old No. 3 shaft are already down 10 feet.

The advance in the price of copper to 15¼ cents per pound is an important factor in the company's earning power. Producing now at the rate of 90 tons of blister copper, one cent difference in the price for the metal means an addition of over $650,000 to revenue per annum.

In face of constructive news, Noranda shares have been going down. Probably, one item in the recent official statement on developments accounts for this, namely, that referring to drill results immediately under the H. ore body below 1,000 feet. Indications were not so good as just above 1,000 feet. This, however, may be regarded as just a phase in the development of a big mine.

Students of the market are freely predicting a major upward movement in the copper stocks in New York, which have not as yet reflected developments. Logically, Noranda would participate in such a movement.

Robinson Consolidated Cons.

Directors of Robinson Consolidated Cons met in the latter part of the week and matters up for discussion were practically all routine. Business for the summer months is said to have been entirely satisfactory and showed a normal growth over the previous year. The company's fiscal year ended with September 30, and the results for the first eleven months were made known to the board. In the past three years the average earnings were equal to $2.83 a share and the expectation is the profit for 1928 will be well above this figure, after all charges. A first dividend of 50 cents on the no par ordinary shares is being distributed to-day.

CHOIR HOLDS SOCIAL.

Murray Street Singers Begin Winter Season With Social.

On Thursday evening the season's work of the Murray Street Baptist Church Choir was inaugurated at a very successful rally.

A hot dinner, served by the social committee of the choir, was greatly enjoyed. At the conclusion of this, a short, informal program, presided over by Walter Kidd, choir president, was much appreciated.

Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe gave an inspiration address, expressing his appreciation of the choir's asisstance during the year he has been pastor at Murray street, and holding up high ideals for the choir, collectively and individually, to strive to attain in the year's work now opening.

He was followed by Dr. S. J. Graham, choir leader, in a brief address, endorsing the pastor's remarks and making further suggestions.

Community singing, led by Mr. Wearing, was hearty and enjoyable.

A short rehearsal was held at the conclusion of the program.

CURB PUMPS ARE STILL UP

No Move Yet Made To Comply With Council's Order of June 4.

READY FOR BUSINESS.

Are the gasoline pump owners whose pumps have been ordered off the streets going to defy the City Council is the question being asked in the city to-day. On June 4th the City Council at its regular meeting ordered the gasoline pumps off the streets in an area bounded on the north by Murray street, on the south by Sherbrooke street, on the west by the river and on the west by Aylmer street. Two pumps in this area and two outside of this area were to be removed before the first of July and the rest by the first of October. The first two pumps in the area were removed when ordered, but the rest are still decorating the streets and many of them to-day are pumped full of gasoline ready for business. In some cases moves are being made to erect service stations off the street but in the great majority as yet no heed has been paid to the order of the city council.

One citizen suggested to The Examiner to-day that in all probability the council intended to give the owners three days of grace to get rid of their gasoline supply, but from now on they will be closely watched to see who is going to make the first move.

It is not the first time in the history of Peterborough that the gasoline curb pumps have been ordered off the streets, for in 1918 the city council took the step and later rescinded its motion, but according to statements made by the aldermen at their council meeting there will be no ity the council intelded to give the rescinding this year.

PREMIER SEEKS BETTER HISTORY

Considers Introduction of More Interesting Textbook on British History.

COMMITTEE AT WORK.

TORONTO, Ont., Oct. 2 (Special to The Examiner).—With the idea of presenting British history in a more readable form, Premier Ferguson has a committee busily engaged in considering the adoption of a new British history for Ontario schools.

Recently a new history has made its appearance in Great Britain, which is in narrative form and has made a strong appeal to the people. Premier Ferguson is of the opinion that something along similar lines would prove acceptable in Ontario and is having investigations made.

Premier Ferguson stated that the history would be exact in every respect, the sole idea being to present the facts in a manner more easily digested by the youth of the province.

"There has recently been a history placed on the British market along the style that is being considered here and which impressed me very much," stated the Prime Minister. "As an indication of its popularity, it has reached the sixth edition, although it has only made its appearance. It is selling as rapidly as a novel."

IN POLICE COURT

William Timlin of Roseneath pleaded guilty this morning in police Court before Magistrate O. A. Langley to operating a car while intoxicated and was given ten days in the common jail. Timlin yesterday afternoon visited the vendor's store, where he purchased three bottles of liquor. Half of one was consumed before he started for home. Everything went fine until he got near Indian River on the Norwood Road, when he missed his road and ran into a Keene Creamery truck, damaging his own car badly. Provincial Constable H. Thompson was called and put Timlin under arrest and brought him to Peterborough. He also pleaded guilty to drinking in other than a residence and was fined $10.00 and $9.00 costs.

C. Harrison, who had taken a drink with Timlin, pleaded guilty to the same charge and was fined $10 and costs.

$22,000 IN POCKETS.

DETROIT, Oct. 3 (Canadian Press).—William Gibbs, 20, of Los Angeles, who robbed a Canadian National Railway mail car of amounts estimated from $22,000 to $75,000, was being held in Windsor to-day after furnishing authorities with a criminal narrative without parallel in this section. He boarded the train at Chatham and gained access to the mail car, holding up three messengers with a pistol, while he looted the registered bags. Just as the engine slowed down for the stop at Prairie Siding, Gibbs dropped from the mail car but re-boarded the rear coach of the train.

While alarms were raised and the description of the robber broadcasted Gibbs was riding into Windsor on the train that had been robbed. The train was stopped outside Windsor while the authorities questioned the crew, but Gibbs sitting on the rods beneath the rear car was not discovered.

After this investigation the train was released, and Gibbs' car was ferried across the Detroit River. Here the rough bandit came to grief for immigration officers were on the lookout for smuggled aliens when the ferry docked, and Gibbs was discovered when he came from his hiding place. The shabbily-clad youngster was searched and $6,500 in bank notes was found stuffed in his shirt, while he carried two sealed package of $10,000 and $6,500 respectively. He was turned over to the local police to whom he admitted the robbery, and described the crime. He waived extradition and was returned to Windsor less than three hours from the time the train was held up.

Canadian railway officials believed the money found on Gibbs was all that had been taken.

Gibbs described himself as a hobo and said he came to Windsor three weeks ago. He bewailed the "one little break" that resulted in his arrest. "Why the fellow that arrested me didn't know the train had been 'stuck up'," he said.

Gibbs was taken to Windsor Police Headquarters at midnight. He was readily identified by the mail clerks, poljce claim, but he declined to tell anything about his residence.

Ontario Gets Back Money.

Detroit officials turned over to the Provincial authorities $6,500 in bank notes and two sealed currency packages, one marked $10,000, and one marked $5,500, found on the prisoner.

Neither passengers nor train crew, with the exception of three mail car employees, knew anything of the hold-up until the train stopped at Prairie Siding.

The bandit entered the car just as the train was drawing out of Chatham Station. The mail car employees, Albert Gignac, R. H. Cromwell, and Harry E. Roos, all of Windsor, were closing the door when the man swung up through it, flourishing a revolver. He ordered the three to "Stick 'em up quick, and leave 'em up." They complied. Then he ordered Roos to cut open the money bags, twirling his gun menacingly to lend emphasis to his command. After this had been done he lined up the three men, making them face the wall, and threatened them with death if they lowered their hands.

Hindenburg, Eighty-One Years Old, Seeks Quiet In Lodge Near Berlin

BERLIN, Oct. 3.—President von Hindenburg celebrated his eighty-first birthday yesterday with his family and a few close relatives at his hunting lodge, on a former imperial game preserve, at Schorfheide, near Berlin. The President left the capital early yesterday and will not return until to-day or Thursday.

Dr. Hugo Eckener flew his new Zeppelin over the hunting grounds and dropped a wreath of flowers with a greeting on the lodge. Last year, when President von Hindenburg celebrated his having reached four-score years, the nation insisted on a public celebration, and the President complied. This year, fatigued from a long trip through Silesia, he insisted on a restful day and a "Not at Home" sign hung before the Presidential Palace on the Wilhelmstrasse.

The usual mass of telegrams and letters of congratulations are awaiting the President's return, but, owing to the warrior's earnest request that no money be spent for presents for him, only a few graced the table in the workroom of the nation's Chief. Among there was a crude little wreath of violets carefully kept fresh. They are from a very elderly lady who is a close friend of the President.

Franz Dziadek, who walked from Koenisburg last year to bring the President greetings from the Bradenburg Gate, at the foot of Unter den Linden, for a hike around the world, which he has named "the Hindenburg tour." He expects to reach America in June.

The President's grandchildren followed the old German custom of reciting a poem to their grandfather when they congratulated him.

TWO CASES FOR ASSIZES

BEFORE JUSTICE ROSE.

When the Fall Assizes of the Supreme Court of Ontario open next week before the Hon. Mr. Justice Rose, in the Court House of this city there will be at least one criminal and one civil case on the docket. The criminal case will be the manslaughter charge laid against Wesley Devall of this city, and the only civil case so far entered is the Nannie H. Ruttan—Niegel O'Conor-Fenton case arising out of a motor car accident in Norwood last October.

Mrs. Nannie H. Ruttan, the plaintiff, is a widow living in the village or Norwood, and she alleges that on October 29, 1927, while walking on a street in Norwood, she was hit by a car driven by Nigel O'Conor-Fenton and owned by Mrs. Annie Sophia O'Conor-Fenton, his mother. The plaintiff is claiming $4,000 damages and costs of the action, and her lawyers are Peck, Kerr, and McElderry.

The defendant denies operating the car in a negligent or reckless manner, and M. A. O'Shea is acting for both defendants in the action.

The amount recoverable is limited to arrears up to September 1, 1927. Mrs. Patterson was awarded alimony in February, 1924, and claims arrears amounting to $500.

MAKES STATEMENT.

Says He Is As Crazy As Chief Wigle—Tells Weird Tale of Adventures.

WINDSOR, Ont., Oct. 3 (Special to The Examiner).—John Gibbs, the train robber who held up the mail clerks on the Canadian National train last night and stole a sum veriously estimated at from $22,000 to $65,000 at Prairie Siding, eighteen miles from here, was a sensation in Number 1 police cell at police headquarters here. He is a new vintage for a crime-jaded border. He is either pretending that he is crazy, or he really is.

A keen debate is now being waged about his sanity. J. R. Wilkinson, head of the criminal detection bureau of the Windsor Police, claims that Gibbs is crazy. But Chief of Police M. Wigle maintains that Gibbs is a clever man shamming insanity.

Gibbs himself says he most surely is insane. "As insane as Chief Wigle," he said.

This latest brand of the modern Dick Turpin seemed to find it a pleasure as he talked in an exclusive interview with The Examiner through the cell door early to-day.

Through the peep hole in the outer door to the cells Gibbs could be seen in the semi-darkness behind the bars of the inner row of cells. He was reading a newspaper. It proved to be a copy of a Detroit morning paper which displayed his own photograph and a long story of his daring robbery and subsequent capture by the American Immigration Officers as he tried to cross into the United States, an hour and a half after the uproar at Chatham.

"Gibbs" we said. He jumped with a start, crumpled the paper, and pushed his fingers through an up-right pompador of black hair.

Contrary to the forbidding features in his photograph, he appeared to be a good natured person. He smiled back, featuring very large simple looking eyes.

"They say you were once in the hospital for the insane at Patton, California, Gibbs "

Lived in Cave

"Yes" he replied. "You mean those peach orchards down there. I used to go there for the sun. I used to lie in the sun. Oh, the asylum, sure, I was there for a year and escaped. I lived in a cave" Gibbs went on. "I had a nice little cave I used to live in."

"In Canada?"

"Sure I lived in an old shack near London for about a week. And I had a nice little cave, too, out in the bush."

"There was nobody with me in this job. I don't know anybody. I have pulled off several jobs like this, maybe six, maybe twelve. I don't know. I forget. I just wandered around all over. Sure I have pulled off lots of jobs. I just forget what they are. I wander all over and pull them off occasionally. I think they were burglaries. I did not pull one off before on a train. I have done that since I came back from the army. I was in the army for over a year, and I skipped."

No more details about his service, or whether he had been with the

SCHOOL BOARD RAISES SALARY OF PRINCIPAL

Overrules Recommendation of Advisory Vocational Committee.

BUYS EXTRA EQUIPMENT.

Collegiate Has Attendance of 747, With 105 From Outside City.

Over-ruling the recommendation of the Advisory Vocational Committee, the Board of Education voted last night to pay Principal H. R. H. Kenner of the Collegiate Institute $5,000 a year from Sept. 1 last, instead of starting him at $4,600 with a yearly increase of $100 until the larger amount is reached.

The board also voted to pay for extra equipment bought this fall and carry the over-draft until funds can be obtained to pay for it. The equipment will be needed in a year or so, but was bought now because after next March the Federal grant for technical education will be discontinued, and it was thought advisable to take advantage of it to a certain extent. Except for this extra equipment, the building was finished within the estimates, W. R. Turner of the Vocational Committee announced.

There are on the roll at the Collegiate Institute 747 pupils, 336 boys and 411 girls, of whom 645 are resident and 105 non-resident. Of these 418 are in the academic side, 227 are commercial students, 84 industrial and 18 household arts.

Attempts will be made to have Premier Ferguson, in his capacity as Minister of Education, open the Collegiate extension within the next two weeks. The Kiwanis Club wants to rent the auditorium for the programs for the Produced-in-Canada Fair from Oct. 15 to Oct. 20, and the board felt it would be absurd to throw the building open for this purpose and then have a formal opening a week or so later. In fact, unless the opening can be arranged the Kiwanis Club will not be granted the use of the building.

Dr. J. J. Craig acted as chairman of the board at last night's meeting, which was the regular session of the board, as Chairman E. Bruce Fowler is out of the city.

The matter of Mr. Kenner's salary came up in the report of the Advisory Vocational Committee, which stated that that body could not see its way clear to concur in the board's recommendation from last meeting. This report was read by Mrs. Morris, who moved its adoption, with Mr. Wilson seconding it. Mr. Strickland moved an amendment, seconded by Dr. Yelland, that the clause of the report covering this matter be not accepted.

Mr. Wilson and Mrs. Morris pointed out that the committee had gone carefully into the matter, considering salaries paid at other places and many other points in arriving at the figure practically unanimously.

Dr. Craig stated his opinion that the board should pay the higher figure in order to have a thoroughly satisfied employee, while Dr. Yelland declared that a man of Mr. Kenner's education and experience and with such large responsibilities should receive such an amount. This coincided largely with the opinion expressed in writing by Mr. Dawson, who was unable to be present, but wrote to set out his position on the matter. Messrs. Reid and Turner also spoke in support of the amendment.

The opinion being expressed that the extra $400 would all have to be charged against the academical departmen ts, led Mr. Strickland to declare his opinion that the board has gone too far at times in the matter of seeking grants. The people want vocational education, he said, and should not expect the Province as a whole to pay for it.

Inspector Mowat explained to the board the reason for the decrease of thirty-one in the enrolment of the Public Schools. The practice of the department, he said, has been to have better secondary schools and get the children there at a younger age, consequently the largest entrance class of the local schools had gone through, with nearly ten per cent. of the whole enrolment leaving, instead of the five per cent. expected fifteen years ago. Also, seventy pupils had left the King Edward School to go to the North Monaghan schools since the change in the board's policy of charging outside pupils, while enough have left the Queen Mary School to permit of one less class-room being operated.

The inspector also brought up the

WRECK INQUIRY OPENS TO-DAY

Captain Demers May Call Additional Witnesses For Manasoo Probe.

TO LAST SEVERAL DAYS.

OWEN SOUND, Ont., Oct. 3. — (Canadian Press).—Captain L. A. Demers' investigation into the causes of the foundering of the steamer Manasoo on September 15 with a loss of sixteen lives opened at the country court house to-day. The Dominion Wreck Commissioner intends that the probe will be most complete and additional witnesses to those already summoned, who include the five survivors, will be called if necessary. The enquiry is expected to occupy several days.

Captain John McKay, master of the steamer Manasoo, occupied the entire morning giving evidence concerning the disaster. He maintained ignorance of the cause of the ship foundering, repeating it suddenly listed into the wind until it was over on one side, when it sank.

Captain Demers expressed surprise that the captain, first officer and second officer should all have been in the wheel house from midnight until the ship sank two and a-half hours later. Captain McKay said this was the last trip before the boat was to be laid up, and he and the second mate simply intended to stay up until the boat docked at 4 a.m. He denied there was any appearance of danger, except for ten minutes before the ship went down. He admitted the main deck portholes were open, but did not agree with the suggestion that the seas would enter even when the boat listed.

80 FATALITIES ON SHIP CANAL

15 YEARS' WORK.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Oct. 3. —Canadian Press.—The fatalities on the Welland Ship Canal since the beginning of construction in 1913 total eighty to date, according to figures from the ship canal office, prepared since unofficial reports at the time of the disaster in August placthe fatalaties at 100. Twenty-one lives have been lost this year. The figures of eighty is slightly lower than estimate of one life for every million dollars, since construction costs have amounted to ninety-six millions.

Tunney Married In Hotel Chapel

ROME, Oct. 3 (Canadian Press) — Gene Tunney, retired heavyweight champion, and Miss Mary Lauder, of Greenwich, Connecticut, were married in the Hotel Russie to-day. Both the civil and the religious ceremony were gone through, Signor Profferio, leading Fascist, conducting the former, and Monsignor Joseph Breslin, Tunney's former parish priest, the religious ceremony. John McCormack, noted tenor, and his wife and daughter were among the guests. Performing the civil ceremony, Profferio read the articles of the Italian civil code, which prescribe that the husband is head of the family and must protect his wife.

ROWELL ENDS HIS ARGUMENT

Counsel For Dominion Says Navigable Rivers Under Federal Jurisdiction.

HEARING RESUMED.

OTTAWA, October 3 (Canadian Press).—"We do not ask Your Lordships to determine what rivers are navigable in fact. That would involve investigation of each separate river from the Atlantic to the Pacific. What we are asking Your Lordships to decide is that the rivers in each province navigable in fact are subject to the public right of navigation."

Drawing towards the close of his argument that every river capable of navigation is subject to the servitude of the public right-of-way and therefore under Dominion jurisdiction, the Hon. N. W. Rowell, Dominion counsel, made this declaration when the waterpower case was resumed before the Supreme Court to-day.

Young Boy Tells Story Of Death Hoax

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Oct. 3. —(Associated Press).—Robert Dallard, 17, of London, Ontario, yesterday told Rochester police an astonishing story of a death hoax staged so his parents could collect $10,500 insurance money. He was betrayed and traced here through an intercepted letter to his sweetheart. He is held as a fugitive from justice, pending arrival of Canadian authorities.

Dallard declared his parents were not implicated in the insurance plot. His clothing was found on a pier at Port Stanley, a Canadian summer resort, on September 25, and a suicide verdict was returned after a coroner's investigation and funeral services for the youth.

While the water adjoining the pier was being dragged for his body, young Dallard was begging rides to Niagara Falls. He said he hoped to obtain a temporary job in Rochester to earn enough to go to New York and join the U.S. Navy. He was living at the Railroad Y.M.C.A. here.

KNIGHTS ELECT NEW OFFICERS

Donald McKinnon Succeeds D. A. Costello as Grand Knight of Council.

MINISTER COMING.

Donald McKinnon was elected Grand Knight of Peterborough Council of the Knights of Columbus last night, succeeding D. Arthur Costello, who has held the position for two years. FOUR BURN TO DEATH.

Fire Destroys Farm Dwelling Near Regina To-day.

BRANDON, Man., Oct. 3 (Canadian Press).—Four persons were burned to death when the farm home of Alex. Wilson, near Moore Park, was destroyed by fire to-day. Wilson and his wife, his sister, Sarah, and son, Mervin, lost their lives.

The fire was discovered by a neighbor in the night, who was unable to do anything, the fire being too far advanced. The cause of the fire remains a mystery, other buildings on the farm being unharmed. The bodies were discovered this morning.

MISSION TREASURER ON WAY TO ATLANTIC

Alleged Embezzler of Million Dollars From Church Arrested in Winnipeg.

WINNIPEG, Man., Oct. 3 (Canadian Press).—Clinton S. Carnes, alleged embezzler of a million dollars from the Home Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Church, came to Winnipeg five weeks ago dressed in a faded blue suit. To-day, in smart raiment slightly the worse for wear as a result of confinement here for five days, he departed for Atlanta, Georgia, in custody of Atlanta officials to face the charges. The faded suit he arrived in, along with a heavy black moustache and a different mode of combing his hair, are charged to have been a method of disguise. He was apprehended on information given Winnipeg police by a former resident of Atlanta.

Inspector Seized By Runners

Forced To Battle For Life When Set Adrift On River.

IN LEAKY BOAT.

QUEBEC, Que., Oct. 3.—Canadian Press.—Forced to row for several hours against a strong tide with nothing but a piece of wood as a paddle, after being set adrift in the middle of the St. Lawrence by bootleggers, who captured him when he boarded the steam yucht Lobe, off Rievere Du Loup on Saturday night, Joseph Patry, Inspector for the Quebec Liquor Commission, had a thrilling tale to tell his superiors when he finally reached shore.

The Commission has suspected that the liquor was being run over the border from this province into New Brunswick and accordingly despatched Patry, one of their ablest men, down to Riviere Du Loup, to see what he could pick up.

He noticed a fine big yacht at anchor.

The inspector had a couple of assistants with him and without saying a word to anyone, the trio made their way out to the yacht.

Inspector Patry caught hold of the rope ladder that was trailing from the side of the ship and climbed up. As soon as he reached the deck, the engine jumped to full speed, her anchor having been hauled up simultaneously. The two men in the row boat were tossed about in the yacht's wake. As she sped away Patry tried to draw his revolver but was grabbed from behind, the gun taken from him, and then he was informed that if he kicked up a struggle or raised an outcry he would be killed, and his body thrown over board.

Realizing that if he did shout out his voice would be drowned in the roar of the engines, Patry did the next best thing possible, and remained quiet until his captors after a few hours set him adrift in a leaky rowboat, and told him to strike out for himself.

The inspector found a piece of old wood in the boat, and with this as a paddle, managed to make shore by dint of hard working after several hours.

He submitted his report to the Commission, and they, it is understood, are taking out warrants for the arrest of the men who laid hands on their representative. Patry himself has refused to discuss the question with anyone, referring all newspapermen to the Quebec Liquor Commission.

POST OFFICE LOSES $14,000

Package Consigned To Bank Stolen From Bedford Office.

TILL ALSO ROBBED.

BEDFORD, Que., Oct. 3.—Canadian Press.—Over fourteen thousand dollars was carried off by a robber or robbers who entered Bedford postoffice early to-day through a side window. The robbery was disclosed when the post mistress entered the office and it was found a package consigned to the local branch of the Bank of Commerce containing this amount was missing. Money was also taken from the till. The safe was not touched but the package had not been placed in the safe.

RUSHING TO HELP SINKING STEAMER

Captain Fried of America Reports Dutch Vessel in Distress.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—(Canadian Press).—A Wireless message was received by the Associated Press today from captain Fried of the steamer America, a thousand miles east of Newfoundland, saying the steamer was rushing to the assistance of the sinking Dutch steamship Celaeno which is in distress and sinking in a northwest gale. Captain Fried was commanding the Roosevelt at the time of the noted rescue of the captain and crew of the sinking British Steamer Antinoe in 1926.

ALGOMA STEEL SUBMISSION IS ADJOURNED BY TARIFF BOARD

Ask For Revision of Duty On Pig Iron and Structural Steel.

BRIEFS NOT PREPARED.

Automobile Interests Opposed To Final Disposal of Case.

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 3 (Canadian Press).—With the submission of the revised brief of the Algoma Steel Corporation, of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., for upward revision of the tariff on pig iron, structural steel, and abolition of prevailing drawbacks on specially treated steel and alloys, before the Tariff Advisory Board yesterday, another case was placed on the agenda of adjourned hearings to be considered during the November sittings of the board.

The adjournment was ordered over the objections of the representatives of the Algoma Steel Corporation, who contended that sufficient time had been afforded those opposing the application to enable them to prepare their briefs. Continued delay, it was argued, would defeat the desires of the applicants to have the reference considered at the forthcoming session of Parliament.

Particular opposition to final disposal of the case was voiced by R. E. Musselman, representing the Ford Motor Company of Canada, who stated that the automobile industry was greatly concerned with respect to the effects of the proposed tariff revision. He urged that time be given

LABORITES ONLY REALISTS LIVING IN POLITICS

DUDLEY, Worcestershire, Eng., Oct. 3 (Canadian Press Cable).—Rt. Hon. Ramsey Macdonald, speaking here last night, described the Labor Party as "the only realists living in politics today." The former Labor Premier spoke in support of Oliver Baldwin, son of Premier Stanley Baldwin and prospective candidate for the division at the next election.

Mr. Macdonald, in referring to his recent visit to Canada said: "I spoke to Canada and I asked from Canada what message she would like me to bring home. Twice, in the midst of a glorious national park and upon the nationalized railway lines, the message was 'Go on with your Labor work, because you are doing for Great Britain and the Empire exactly what the circumstances compel us to do for ourselves'."

It is expected that the next election will witness a hard-fought campaign in the Dudley division. Cyril E. Lloyd, O.B.S., Conservative, the present member, defeated Mr. Baldwin at the last election; the vote being: Lloyd, 11,199; Baldwin, Labor, 10,314.

SEVEN BEST OF BREEDS.

H. Routley reports that the outside entries for the Dog Show are considerably greater than ever. There areare several new breeds to b shown that have never been on exhibition here before. Seven dogs are entered that have won the best of all breds at the leading dog shows.

Mr. Routly has imported a cocker spaniel which is a full brother to one owned by R.H.R. Prince Wales. He left England on Friday and arrived the following Friday. He will be on exhibition at the Dog Show in the Brock Street Rink Thursday, and Friday, October 4 and 5.

BUCKWHEAT CROP POOR

CORN IS GOOD.

KING'S WHARF, Oct. 3.—The buckwheat crop is not as good as in former years and a few have been unable to get their buckwheat cut, there being so much rain the ground is so soft it will not hold a binder and it will be left until it gets dry. There are some wonderful fields of corn in this locality, the season being good for corn. The red clover is no good in this section this year.

Mr. Vincent Perdue has a number of men and teams drawing gravel for the midle line which will be a great improvement on the road.

Mrs. Thomas O'Neill of "Lakeview Inn" had a very successful quilting bee at her home Thursday when about fifteen ladies were present and a very pleasant day spent. A delightful supper was served by the hostess when the quilts were finished.

Mr. Connor Farrell and two children, also Mr. Fred and Miss Gertrude Fitzpatrick spent Sunday the guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Hutton at Little Britain.

Mrs. H. Hennessey of Ennismore spent a few days last week the guest of her sister, Mrs. Thomas Sullivan.

The Misses Irene and Florence Winn, also Messrs. A. White and J. Phalen of Peterborough spent Sunday the guests of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Winn.

Miss Clare O'Neill of Lindsay spent the week-end the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas O'Neil.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Guiry spent Sunday the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. B Crough in Ennismore.

Miss Alice Guiry of Lindsay is at present the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Guiry.

H. S. FIELD DAY ON THURSDAY

FINE CUPS DONATED.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence).

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 3. — High School athletes here are training intensively in a last desperate effort to acquit themselves creditably at the field day which is to be held Thursday afternoon, beginning at one o'clock. This fear, following the example of last season, the sports will be held on the north side of the school grounds, where provision for such activities has been made.

The trophies which are to be won are at present on display in the north window of the Birmingham hardware. They are displayed with a background of Campbellford High School colors, red, yellow and black. This year there will be an added incentive to the senior boys to make a good showing. The senior boys' trophy was won for the third consecutive time last year by Thornton Ibey, and is now his personal property. This year a beautiful silver trophy has been donated by Warden Charles H. Davidson. It is always a signal honor to be the one whose name is first engraved on such a beautiful piece of silver. There are four other cups, smaller in size than that presented by the Warden. These are for the junior and intermediate boy champions, and for the two girl champions. Ten individual cups complete the array of silverware displayed.

There are many valuable prizes besides the silver cups to be won. The display in the window has caused considerable comment on the wonderfully high-class prizes which prevail. These have all been donated by business men and High School old boys. To those who so generously assisted in making the prize-list so complete, the students of the school and the staff are truly grateful.

HIGH SCHOOL BOY SHOOTS HIMSELF

Fort William Lad Shoots Himself in Head at Home.

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., Oct. 3.— A high school boy of the city, John Mackie, 14 years of age, committed suicide yesterday afternoon at 4.20. The weapon he used was a single shot .22 rifle, which inflicted a bullet wound over the heart, causing instant death. The shot, which was fired from close range, caused powder burns to the lad's clothing. A note addressed to his parents was found lying beside the body on the kitchen floor of the residence, which stated that his reason for doing away with himself, was due to the fact that he had been suffering considerably from diseased hips, which had been troubling him more than usual lately. The district coroner decided that no inquest was necessary.

RAWDON BOY HURT BY FALL OFF HORSE

Carl Heath Breaks Arm When Thrown On To Big Rock.

SECOND ACCIDENT.

(Examiner Correspondence)

BONARLAW, Oct. 3.—Carl Heath, son of Everett Heath of the 10th concession of Rawdon suffered a very painful accident on Friday. He was riding a horse and fell off, striking a large rock and broke his arm just above the elbow. A few years ago he had a very narrow escape which necessitated several stitches on the back of his head. At the present time he is resting quite comfortably. Dr. Longmore, of Campbellford, took an X-ray of his arm and found it was broken just above the elbow.

Mackenzie King Honored At Paris

PARIS, France, Oct. 3 (Canadian Press Cable).—Canada's legation was the heart of the French capital's social life yesterday, when Hon. Phillipe Roy, first Canadian Minister to France, and Madame Roy held a reception in honor of Premier Mackenzie King.

Among the thousand prominent persons who passed through the Canadian Legation was Jean Knight, whose appointment as French Minister to Ottawa, was officially announced earlier in the day.

It was a day of intense activity for the Canadian Premier and M. Roy. Commencing with a visit to the Pasteur Institute, where Mr. King deposited a wreath on the tomb of Louis Pasteur, the Canadian statesman and diplomat were busy from morning till night attending official functions.

They were the guests of Aristide Briand, French Minister of Foreign Affairs, at luncheon, and later Premier King went to the Palais d'Elysee, where he was received by President Doumergue. After the legation reception, Premier King entertained at dinner at the Hotel Crillon in honor of the Canadian Minister and Madame Roy.

SILVER PLANT AWARDED FLAG

General Department Retains Star of Deloro Safety Committee.

FEW SUGGESTIONS.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MARMORA, Oct 3.—The monthly meeting of the Deloro Safety Committee took place at the Hub on Monday evening with but few absentees. Roll call and minutes disposed of, Chairman R. A. Elliott called upon W. Williams for the report of the suggestions committee. The receipt of only two suggestions was not taken as an indication that observation was lacking or interest waning. Next month this committee expects to have the average number of suggestions to report. R. D. Murray in reporting for the competitive committee had one minor accident to report for August and another for September. He also announced that the flag was awarded to the Silver Plant and that the General retained the star. Speaking for the same committee, E. F. Berry mentioned that a prize had been awarded one of the two suggestions received in September. J. Reardon gave a very satisfactory report for the inspection committee. W. J. Cottrell was appointed floating member for October. A. McKenzie was delegated to carry out prone method practices in the Engineering Department while H. Smith was chosen for a like duty in the Silver Plant.

W. R. Reynolds, chairman of the Publicity Committee said that a slogan contest would be announced within a few days. In discussion of this committee's activities the desirability of a mass meeting, safety journal and bulletin boards were dealt with in turn. C. H. Buskard gave the concluding report in mentioning the present standing of the Benevolent Relief Board funds.

To Parade.

The members of Marmora A.F. & A.M. 222 are parading to St. Paul's next Sunday evening for divine service which will be taken by the rector, Bro. Rev. A. B. Caldwell.

Household Sale.

On Saturday afternoon the household effects of Mr. John O'Sullivan were disposed of by Fred Johnston. Good prices were realized. Mr. and Mrs. O'Sullivan are taking up residence in Niagara Falls, N.Y.

Personals.

RURAL HYDRO EXPANSION IS FORECAST BY PREMIER

Hon. G. H. Ferguson Switches On Power Brought 250 Miles From Gatineau.

CEREMONY AT LEASIDE.

Message From Premier Taschereau Received By New Wire System.

TORONTO, Oct. 2.—A surging flood of electric power brought 250 miles from the Province of Quebec was released into the Toronto district yesterday afternoon, when Premier Ferguson turned a tiny switch as the climax of an elaborate ceermonial in the new transformer and distribution plant at Leaside of the Ontario Hydro Electric Commission.

The official loosing of the power for use in Ontario to supplement the limited source of the Niagara generating stations was hailed as a most significant event by the speakers.

Premier Ferguson, Attorney-General Price, Chairman C. A. Magrath of the Provincial Hydro Commission, Commissioner Alfred Maguire, George Wright of the Toronto Hydro Commission, Chairman Guy Long of the Hamilton Hydro Commission, and T. J. Hannigan, of Guelph, secretary of the Hydro Municipalities Association, addressed the gathering of Hydro men and civic and provincial representatives. Hon. Lincoln Goldie, Provincial Secretary, was present.

World's Longest Line.

Aside from its status as the longest power transmission line in the world and one of the greatest power supply enterprises on the continent, the project was seen as of vital importance to the people of Ontario in that it will avert a threatened power shortage in 1930. The transmission from the Gatineau also was characterized as a milestone in the history of the Dominion, as it involved an exchange of wealth and resources between two provinces aimed at upbuilding public service, industry and prosperity in both sections. The enterprise meant a great deal in the evolution of cordial relations between Ontario and Quebec and in the future progress of the Dominion, it was declared.

All speakers paid tribute to the late John R. Robinson, lauding his services as editor of the Toronto Evening Telegram in supporting the establishment of Hydro in Ontario. They commented on the coincidence that the day of his funeral should also see the consummation of one of the greatest projects in the progress of Hydro to a position of even greater influence, service and importance. Many of those present had attended the journalist's funeral services before going to Leaside.

Messages Exchanged.

A feature of the ceremony was the exchange of messages of greeting and felicitation between Premier Ferguson and Premier Taschereau of Quebec, over the automatic telegraph printers which are the channels of communication between the Leaside distribution plant and Val Tetreau, P.Q., the marshaling point for the power generated in the Gatineau system. At Val Tetreau and Leaside, operators tapped out the messages on instruments resembling keyboards, and the words were automatically typed out at the other end. The printers are to be used exclusively in transmitting orders and messages between the two plants, eliminating any possibility of error which might occur in verbal telephoned orders.

Premier Taschereau saw an enterprise of great national importance in the operation of the Gatineau plants at Paugan Falls, Chelsea Falls, and Farmers Falls, and in transmission of the power to Ontario.

"It is of the utmost significance to the development of industry, not only in Ontario and Quebec, but in the entire Dominion," his message said. "I extend my greetings and congratulations, and those of the people of Quebec, to all those who have taken part in the launching of the project."

Advantage of Co-operation.

"This enterprise makes the electrical energy generated in the one province available to meet the immediate and pressing needs of the other," Premier Ferguson wired Mr. Taschereau. "The event is a striking illustration of the mutual advantage of co-operation between these two great communities. On the one hand, the market Ontario offers for power has facilitated a great development and investment of capital in the province of Quebec.

"To both provinces, it is, I am sure, extremely satisfactory to realize that the natural resources of Canada are by this arrangement being utilized to build up Canadian industry. So long as Canadians stand side by side in upholding Canadian interests, we can face the future with confidence, and with the assurance that we are doing our part to advance the common welfare of our people."

When the Ontario Premier turned the small switch before him, it forged the final link in the chain which delivers into Ontarion through the Leaside plant, power generated on the atineau River, 250 miles away. This was symbolized by a large electric sign at one side of the room. At the left of the sign was the word "Niagara," illuminated, in the centre a circle with the word "Leaside," also illuminated, and at the right, the word "Gatineau," in darkness. When Mr. Ferguson threw the switch, the Gatineau sign was immediately brightly lit up, showing the completion of the joining of the two great systems of electric power generation.

Rural Development Foreseen

The Prime Minister presaged an even greater development of Hydro service in rural districts in consequence of the completion of the Gatineau-Toronto project. He commented on the remarkable feat of Hydro in reaching a point in 20 years where it distributed 1,900,000 h.p. to 500,000 people. There were now, he said, about 3,500 miles of rural distribution line, and this was being increased by new construction at the rate of 1,000 miles yearly.

When Hydro executives took up the problem of caring for rural needs and an increasing demand from urban centres, he remarked, they were faced with the unavailability of large sources of power. The St. Lawrence River was international in ownership and was affected by problems which would not release its power for some years, the Ottawa River was blocked by similar intricacies, and use of steam generating plants mean the sending of money to the United States for coal.

Shortage Forestalled

"In the meantime, we are fortunate to be able to get power from the Gatineau to avert a shortage threatened by the limitation by international treaty of the generating of the Niagara plants" he declared. "The Government believes in getting all the power that is needed if it is possible to obtain it at reasonable prices, and we must be prepared to co-operate with other Provinces in the development of power resources. Such co-operation is essential in regard to all resources if the Dominion is to go ahead in the future."

Commissioner Maguire revealed that the establishment of such a project as was consummated yesterday was attempted over a considerable length of time by the late Sir Adam Beck, who encountered obstacles which prevented him carrying out the plan at the time. Mr. Maguire and several other speakers paid glowing tribute to Sir Adam and characterized the Hydro system as the greatest monument possible to his foresight, vision and unflagging labors in the interest of the system.

C. A. Magrath, chairman of the Provincial commission, was chairman at yesterday's gathering, and outlined the transmission system. He explained that yesterday a peak of only 80,000 h.p. was reached over the new transmission line, but that ultimately the cables will carry a load of 260,000 h.p. into Toronto for distribution throughout the district and to relieve the burden on the Niagara lines.

The Weather

Meteorological Office, Toronto, 8 p.m.—Pressure is high on the Atlantic coast and low over the western half of the continent. A few scattered showers have occurred in Ontario and in some northern sections of Saskatchewan and Alberta. Elsewhere the weather has been fair.

Forecasts.

Western Provinces—A few scattered showers, but partly fair; not much change in temperature.

MULES CARRY FIRE ENGINES TO HELP GUARD FORESTS.

Portable pumps on burros have been used effectively in fighting forest fires in areas of the west, where rough country makes it difficult to employ motor equipment. Portable reservoirs are also provided for small fires. Five pumps, working together, project a fifty-foot stream of considerable volume, recent tests of the apparatus revealed.

More Attention to Your Coal Now, Means Less Attention to Your Heater Later On

IF, instead of buying just any coal, just anywhere, you will order Old Company's Lehigh from your local Old Company's dealer, you will save time and effort later on.

For this coal is of an exceptional density and purity that makes it burn long and steadily—with a minimum of attention to the heater.

In fact, when a household heater is properly fired with Old Company's Lehigh, one helping of coal in the morning and another at night is usually all that is required.

Old Company's Lehigh is still mined from the same great vein that gave America her first commercial supply of anthracite back in 1820. This coal, never surpassed in purity, continues uniformly high in heat and low in ash.

Your local Old Company's dealer is interested in giving you satisfactory heating service. Let him advise you how to use your coal most efficiently and economically.

THE NOVA SCOTIA RESULT.

Whatever other moral may be drawn from the Nova Scotia elections, in which the Government of Premier Rhodes was sustained by a majority of three, the near-defeat of the administration should make politicians generally reflect upon the inadvisability of springing snap elections upon the people.

Undoubtedly the feeling that the Government was not justified in suddenly calling an election when its term of office had two years to run played an important part in pulling the majority of the administration almost down to the vanishing point.

There was no major issue that made such an early appeal necessary, and the voters of Nova Scotia had a right to resent the inconvenience of a provincial election staged for no other reason than that the Government hoped to sweep back into power.

The strategy worked—but came so close to failing that other Governments who might be contemplating a similar move cannot be blamed if they reconsider their decision in the light of what happened in Nova Scotia on Monday.

THE WISE COURSE.

In causing the withdrawal of the permit that had been granted by the Ontario Liquor Control Board for the use of port wine at the banquet tendered the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company in Toronto last night, Premier Ferguson showed sound common sense.

All previous applications for similar permits had been refused, and it would have been a mistake to have granted in the case of this particular banquet a privilege that had been denied to other organizations.

And furthermore, a precedent would have been created that would have given the Liquor Control Board plenty of trouble in the future.

Once the policy of refusing to grant permits for social functions of this kind had been departed from a flood of applications for the same privilege might have been expected.

The Premier showed his appreciation of this phase of the situation when he prevailed upon the board to reconsider its decision and to withdraw the permission that had been granted.

THE 21ST BATTALION.

The former members of the 21st Battalion are to be congratulated upon their success in keeping alive the esprit de corps of the Eastern Ontario unit and in maintaining in the piping days of peace the close friendships formed during the war years.

The organization of 21st Battalion Clubs in various centres in Eastern Ontario and the practice of holding a battalion reunion every year have been very effective in attaining these two objects.

The 21st Battalion had a splendid war record, and its ex-members do well to preserve the traditions of the old days in Belgium and France.

It is a matter of regret that other units of Canada's Expeditionary Force have not been as successful in this respect as the 21st, but it is not too late for similar effort on their part.

The veterans of this particular battalion have succeeded in showing not only that the thing can be done but that it is decidedly well worth doing.

THE OLD HOME WEEK.

The City Council has appointed a committee to study all phases of an "old home week" for Peterborough, after which a special meeting of the Council will be called to consider the findings of the committee.

This question of a reunion of the city's old boys and girls has been frequently mooted, and the steps now taken to bring the event into being will be appreciated by a good many citizens, who have from time to time advocated that Peterborough should stage such a celebration.

If the Council eventually decides that a reunion is practicable the community, of course, will be expected to fall in line and provide the same whole-hearted support as made the Diamond Jubilee celebration such an outstanding success.

With the community united as it was on that occasion, there would be no reason to feel dubious about the "old home week."

Nor should there be much difficulty, judging from the experience of other cities, in securing a worth-while attendance of former residents of Peterborough.

Most of them would be glad to come back and share in the celebration.

LOW BIRTH-RATES.

The declining birth-rate in European countries is causing the gravest anxiety. One would not have suspected, however, that Italy, with her teaming population, would be amongst the powers which are worried by this tendency; yet it is a subject to which Premier Mussolini gives constant attention. He is encouraging the people by every possible means to have the largest families, and predicts dire consequences to the state if the modern tendency to restrict the number of children should gain headway. In one of his recent speeches, he resuscitated the bogey of the "yellow peril," or, in this particular case, it was rather the black peril. The United States was held up as an example of what happens when the whites have small families. In a country where there is a large proportion of colored people among whom the birth-rate is high. He declared that the negro population of the United States already amounted to one-sixth of the total. This estimate has been promptly challenged, and it would seem that it is much exaggerated. Probably the blacks in the United States number no more than a tenth; but the point made by the Italian Premier, even accepting this reduced estimate, is significant enough. Coming to British stock, this matter of small families is one which closely affects the whole Empire. There can be no question that the most desirable population which Canada could have is that to be obtained by the natural increase of native Canadians. It is the ideal solution of the problem; but this Dominion, so far as the English-speaking Provinces are concerned, at any rate, is confronted with the same conditions as those obtaining in the older countries.

Taking the birth-rate and the death-rate in the British Isles, it is calculated that the time is fast approaching when there will be no more surplus population available for emigration to the Dominions. "When the age categories from which emigrants for the Dominions and workers for our own purposes are both drawn attain stability," says the Round Table, "we shall no longer be able to send out people as in the past, and the day is approaching when this island, the mother of so many nations, will cease to count as a source upon which they can still rely to replenish their stock without endangering those ideals which are our common birthright."—Hamilton Spectator.

DEPENDS ON SELF.

(An Editorial for Young People)

Sir Robert Falconer, president of Toronto University, gave some excellent advice to students the other day. It was to the effect that each should rely more and more upon his own effort and initiative. However good a lecture or lesson might be, it would fall short of its full value unless it was augmented by supplementary research. In connection with this the necessity for "good reading" was emphasized, and the counsel was given that time and faculties should not be dissipated on trying to cover too wide a territory, but that energies should be concentrated on things which were worth while. "What you will be yourself will depend upon your own tenacity and courage," he said. There is a whole sermon in this sentence, and coming as it does from a great educationist who has guided thousands of young people along the road to success, it is of immense value. There is too much of a tendency to rely on the teacher, but, however learned and skilful he may be, he is not able to do more than point the way; it is for the student to pursue that way independently. In these days of great free libraries, it is possible for all to educate themselves almost as effectively as if they had the advantage of attending a university. Of course, there is no denying the benefit of having learned professors to lead and encourage; but they are not absolutely essential. "What you will be depends upon your own tenacity and courage."

At this time of year, when the winter season approaches, with its long evenings, the problem arises what to do with our leisure hours? A systematic course of reading, in one or two subjects in which the student is particularly interested, will accomplish wonders in a surprisingly brief period of time. There are the libraries waiting to be consulted, and no more enjoyable or profitable habit could be cultivated than that of reading good books. In them is locked up all knowledge. To make a wise choice, however, there must be good taste and informed discrimination. These come of their own accord if "good reading," as recommended by Sir Robert Falconer, is consistently practised. The public library has been truly called the "poor man's university." It is a university, too, that no man, rich or poor, can afford to ignore. No fees are asked—only inclination and perseverance—and the reward is great beyond measure.—Hamilton Spectator.

HUNDRED MILLION IS THE INCREASE.

Building construction throughout Canada for the first nine months this year is over a hundred million in excess of the same period for 1927 and September broke all records. This is further solid evidence of the growth of the country and present-day prosperity. There has never been a building year like the present one in Canada, and building construction represents permanency in development as well as it reflects an abounding confidence in the future.

The total awards for Canadian construction for the month of September as compiled by MacLean Building Reports, Ltd., went 38.5 per cent. over September a year ago, totalling $45,438,900. This was the largest total for any September on record.

During September the greatest amount of construction contracts were placed in the Province of Ontario, where $20,082,100 worth of new work was contracted for, being 44.2 per cent. of all Canadian construction for the month. Quebec followed with $13,387,100 or 29.5 per cent. The Prairie Provinces accounted for 10.9 per cent. on its total of $4,933,000. British Columbia showed $3,516,000 or 7.7 per cent., and the Maritime Provinces $3,520,700, also 7.7 per cent.

The total increase in the estimated value of contracts awarded for the first nine months of this year over the same period of 1927 is made up by increases in every classification. More money is being spent for all kinds of construction. The majority of the work contracted for comes under the business buildings classification, which total for the first nine months is $140,786,300 or 37.1 per cent. of all construction. Residential has accounted for $109,761,900 or 28.9 per cent., while public works and utilities took care of 21.4 per cent. or $81,254,700 and industrial $47,701,400 or 12.6 per cent.

By geographical divisions Ontario shows the largest amount of construction for the nine months period: 38.9 per cent. has been undertaken in that Province, the total being $147,369,000. In Quebec $116,123,900 is shown or 30.6 per cent. Prairie Provinces have accounted for $53,626,400 worth or 14.1 per cent., while the Maritime Provinces show $33,166,800 or 8.7 per cent., and British Columbia $29,218,200 or 7.7 per cent.

Contemplated construction for all Canada so far this year has been reported in exceptional volume. At the three-quarter year mark the estimated value of proposed work reached $597,443,300, corresponding with $488,046,000 for the same period of 1927. More work has been planned and actually started this year than ever before.—St. Catharines Standard.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

At least Premier Rhodes knows that he has been in an election.

That snap election in Nova Scotia was not so much of a snap after all.

Peterborough seems to be suffering from an epidemic of automobile collisions at intersections, the number of accidents indicating that that "Care and Courtesy" slogan has been forgotten.

"The only thing to do with a motorist who laughs at the law, deliberately, cold-bloodedly and repeatedly, is to make it impossible for him to operate a car. And if he is found driving aft er having been denied the privilege, a nice jail term without the option of a fine should be the result."—Border Cities Star.

Lots of people drive as if they were going for the doctor. And some who don't know it really are.—Kingston Whig-Standard.

GOD'S MINUTE.

Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth, but that which is good to the use of edifying, that it may minister grace unto the hearers. And grieve not the holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption. * * *

Almighty God, our Father and Preserver, Who, having refreshed us with night's slumber, hast awakened us to the duties of a new day, grant us, we humbly beseech Thee, Thy heavenly presence, that we may be able to do our work as in the great Taskmaster's eye. O Thou Who hast redeemed us through Thy mercy, be pleased to defend us by Thy grace from the evil without us, and within. Save us from the power of our own lusts; the subtle suggestions of our own thoughts; the treachery of our own hearts; and cause Thy face to shine upon us, O Thou in Whose presence there is no night, that this day and all our days may be pure and holy, and that we may walk in the light as children of the light. We beseech Thee to hear us, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

Some steers weighing 1,100 pounds, were sold between $9.50 and $10.50. Abattoir buyers do not seem anxious to acquire either steers or heifers.

There is a weaker feeling on cows. The offers placed on fat cows are 50c lower. Indcatons pont to a quarter drop before a settlement is made.

Choice light butchers bulls steady at 8.00 to $8.50. Heavy bulls are firm. Bolognas are easier at $5.00 to $6.75.

Calves are steady at $15.00 to $15.50. Well finished vealers bring $16.00. Most of the run is of the heavy and rough quality veal.

Yearling sheep sell at $8.00 to $9.00. Choice light butcher sheep are steady at $6.00 to $6.50.

Buyers are bidding lower on lambs. Choice lamb bids are placed at $12.00. Prospect of an early settlement unlikely.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Oct. 3. — Canadian Press.—The demand from United Kingdom and Continental buyers for grain here yesterday continued quiet and little business was transacted.

Owing to the strength that developed in the future grain market at Winnipeg a stronger feeling prevailed in the local cash grain situation and prices for wheat and oats were advanced three cents per bushel, and feed barley one cent per bushel. The trade was fair. Manitoba No. 5 wheat sold at $1.14, No. 6 wheat at $1.05, feed wheat at $1.02. Argentine corn at $1.06, American corn at $1.03; and Manitoba feed barley at 80c.

On account of the more pronounced strength in the cash wheat market at Winnipeg local prices for spring wheat flour were marked up twenty cents per barrel. Winter wheat grades were unchanged.

The trade in millfeed continued active and firm. A fair trade was done in standard grades of rolled oats and prices were steady.

The trade in eggs in a jobbing way was quiet, but the undertone to the market for fresh extras was very firm owing to the small offerings from country shippers and the light stocks on spot. The market for storage eggs was steady with a small business passing. In a wholesale way some Ontario shippers were asking as high as 48c per dozen for fresh extras, F.O.B. shipping points, but no sales were reported. The receipts were 1,403 cases.

There was no change in imported beans, the undertone being very firm which is likely to remain so until some fairly liberal arrivals come to hand as the market at present is pretty well cleaned up of available supplies and in consequence the trade was quiet with broken lots of choice white hand-picked quoted at $4.20 to $4.40 per bushel, ex-store, and car lots to arrive at $4 per bushel, ex-track.

The feature of the local butter trade was the weaker feeling that developed and prices scored a decline of 1-4c to 1-2c per lb. which was attraibuted to the continued indifferent demand from any source and the fact that some holders were disposed to liquidate their stock. The receipts were 20 packages.

The export trade in cheese was again very quiet owing to the fact that English importers showed little interest even at the lower prices quoted by exporters overnight and in consequence a weaker feeling prevailed in the market and spot prices were reduced ¼c to ½c per lb. At this reduction there was some demand from local buyers. The receipts were 7,724 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Oct. 3. —Canadian Press.—Assertions that Secretary of Agriculture Jardine was advising farmers to hold their wheat did much to bring about a decided upturn in wheat values yesterday. The advice was said to have been given during a radio talk which the secretary delivered yesterday.

Although details of Secretary Jardine's remarks were unobtainable up to the time that wheat trading ended no denial either was received. Wheat closed unsettled, 1½ cents to 1¾ cents net higher, within half a cent of the day's top level. Corn finished at ½ to ¾ cent up. Oats unchanged to ¾ cent advance and provisions unchanged to a rise of 42 cents.

The different versions of the talk which became current were all construed as favorable to highed prices, and in the absence of any particular selling pressure led to a quick expansion of buying of future deliveries.

Price bulges which followed were also more or less due to dispatches saying the government of India was buying wheat in Argentina as well as in Australia.

These estimates indicated that the 1927 domestic spring wheat held is 7,000,000 bushels under the government September figures although but slightly different from the unofficial average of a month ago. Another bullish factor was a summary showing September rainfall to have been seriously deficient over the greater part of domestic winter wheat territory, and less than normal also in both of the Dakotas. On the other hand, Canadian wheat receipts yesterday, 3,416 cars, were the largest ever known.

Corn and oats sympathised with wheat strength, and were also bullishly affected by unofficial crop estimates indicating 107,000,000 bushels curtailment of the 1928 corn yield as compared with the government September forecast. Cutting of corn however, was reported as making rapid progress in part of the main corn belt.

Provisions reflected announcement of a liberal reduction of Chicago stocks for the last month.

To-day's Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE BIG BANG.

"Certainly this is very queer," said Uncle Wiggily to himself, as he was hopping into the Hollow Stump School from which a few seconds before had come a loud noise like a firecracker. "I let Jackie and Peetie go to the store for Nurse Jane's sugar. Those puppy dogs beg some empty paper bags of the Grocery Cat and when I get to school I heard a shot and Jackie Bow Wow tells the Lady Mouse Teacher that he made the noise with one of my bags of wind. I have no wind bags."

And when the rabbit gentleman hopped into the room where Jackie and Peetie recited their lessons he was just in time to see Jackie walk up to the Lady Mouse Teacher's desk carrying a paper bag which had been blown up with air or wind and then had been burst by Jackie smacking it between his paws as you have often done.

"Oh, Uncle Wiggily! I'm so glad to see you!" squeaked the Lady Mouse. "Did you hear what happened?"

"I heard what sounded like the backfire of an auto," spoke Mr. Longears.

"Jackie made the big bang by bursting one of your paper bags in school," said Miss Mouse. "And, what is more, he and his brother Peetie have a lot more empty paper bags which I am afraid they will crack during the day and scare us all."

"No, they will not do that," said Uncle Wiggily, "for I am going to take the paper bags away from them—that is, those that can still be blown up and cracked," and he marched down to the desks of the doggie boys and took out half a dozen paper bags.

"They are your bags of wind and, of course, you should take them away," said Miss Mouse. "But I wish, Uncle Wiggily, you had not given those bags of wind to the doggie boys to bring to school to make noises. It disturbs the class."

"My bags!" cried the rabbit gentleman, twinkling his pink nose twice as fast in his excitement. "They aren't my bags! Jackie and Peetie begged them of the Grocery Cat when they went to the store for Nurse Jane's sugar; didn't you, boys?"

"Yes," barked Jackie, who was a little ashamed of himself, "that's how it happened. But they are your bags in a way, Uncle Wiggily, 'cause if you hadn't let us go to the store in your place we'd never have gotten them. I didn't mean that you told us to make wind bags and bust 'em in school."

"Well, I'm glad you didn't mean that," said the rabbit gentleman with a smile. "So I will forgive you."

"And I will forgive Jackie when he stays in school to write a punish lesson," squeaked Miss Mouse with a smile. "And please take those empty Wiggily."

"I will," said Mr. Longears. "They certainly make big bangs when they are blown up and cracked."

Mr. Longears was hopping along the road through the woods, carrying the empty bags which he intended to give back to the Grocery Cat when, all of a sudden, the bunny heard a noise behind him. He looked back and saw, coming down the path, the Fox in an old automobile which the Bad Chap had hired.

After trying in many ways, but without doing it, to catch Uncle Wiggily, the Fox at last decided to hire an old auto and chase the rabbit. That is what the Fox was doing now.

"And I'll catch him, too!" laughed the Fox as he saw the rabbit just ahead of him and made the auto go faster.

Poor Uncle Wiggily hopped as fast as he could, but he was no match for an auto and the Fox was coming nearer when, all of a sudden, Mr. Longears thought:

"I'll blow up a paper bag, make a big bang and the Fox will think one of his tires has blown out and punctured. He'll stop to look and then I can get away."

No sooner said than done. Stepping aside into the bushes, Uncle Wiggily blew a lot of air into one of the paper bags, puffing it up like a toy circus balloon. Then the bunny burst the bag with a big bang like a giant firecracker.

"Bless my tail! A blowout! A puncture!" howled the Fox. He put on brakes, stopped his car and jumped out to see which tire had a hole in. None had, but by the time the Fox found that out Mr. Longears was safe at home in his hollow stump bungalow. So this teaches us that paper bags are good for something else than to carry water in.

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 4, 1928
(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Astrologers read this as an unusually unfavorable day in planetary direction, since all the aspects are adverse.

It is a day when strife is easily precipitated in families or organizations. Self control should be practiced, for many provocations may develop.

Great nervous tension may be manifested on the part of employers and persons in authority, all of whom may be exceedingly captious.

Again the stars incline one to believe the worst concerning the world and its people.

This is a day in which to avoid listening to gossip or uttering anything discreditable regarding one's neighbors. It should be remembered that the truth if uncomplimentary is the most dangerous libel.

Agriculturists also come under rather a sinister direction of the stars today when unsatisfactory weather conditions and market reports may cause depression.

The aged should conserve their physical and mental powers, for the seers remind them that the new era brings to them many anxieties about the future which is, fortunately, to be more marvelous than man can visualize.

This is not a lucky wedding day for many financial ups and downs are presaged for those hwo marry under this rule of the stars.

The next year is to reveal among the reactionary tendencies a renewed reverence for marriage and the home, astrologers prophesy.

Girls are even now coming under a planetary government in which they will apply college training to home management to the exclusion of business or the professions, astrologers prognosticate.

While this configuration appears to presage for the universities great attainments in athletics, girls are to be less interested than formerly in the numerous sports for which they have proved fitness, it is foretold.

Persons whose birthdate it is should be careful to protect themselves against robbery in the coming year. These subjects of Virgo may arouse much envy for they have the augury of brilliant successes before the close of the year.

Children born on this day should be strongly individual and very talented. They require careful training, if they are true to the Virgo type which produces many geniuses.

VIOLET RAY IS NOT ULTRA VIOLET

One of the rays of light given out by the sun is a cold ray which has been found to be very important to the maintenance of all animal life. It is supposed that the larger animals of the Mesozoic age, such as the brontosaurus and dinosaurs were destroyed because this ray was prevented from reaching the earth by heavy clouds of vapor and volcanic ashes. The latest researches of science suggest that these animals probably died from starvation because a disease similar to rickets so weakened them that they were unable to walk in search of food.

This ray has been termed the actinic ray as well as the ultra-violet ray, but it is not the product of the so-called violet ray machines that may be purchased for a few dollars. The apparatus for providing the real ultra violet light costs several hundred dollars.

This type of light applied to the skin increases the body's ability to absorb calcium and to metabolise fats, hence its value in bone diseases and wasting disorders, such as anemia and tuberculosis.

Used in a very concentrated form, this ray will destroy tissues, and for this reason it is frequently used to remove skin blemishes and infections of the throat.

Although this ray is present in sunlight, curiously enough it will not penetrate through glass. It may produce blindness if allowed to shine too intensely directly into the eyes, and for this reason both doctor and patient use special glasses for treating with this ray. It has been manufactured artificially in some types of carbon arc lamps and in mercury quartz lenses.

The actinic ray does not penetrate deeply into the body, its action being principally on the blood passing through the surface capillaries of the skin. Through the use of machines generating this type of ray, doctors are able to administer the exact quantities that they desire the patient to have. By the use of sun bathing this ray will act beneficially upon the body, but one must be careful not to become overheated or burnt. There is a danger of sunburn from this ray, even though the skin does not become warm, and one should carefully regulate the time of exposure.

The ultra violet light has been found an aid in diagnosing measles, since after its use the rash can be discovered from two to three days before the usual time.

Vitamin D, which is now recognized as being of the utmost importance for producing growth in animals, is found only in foods that have been grown in or exposed to sunlight. This vitamin has been produced in larger quantities than normal in the following foods by exposing them to the action of the ultra violet ray: Cream, olive oil, linseed oil, cotton seed oil, corn oil, wholewheat flour, milk and dried milk, orange juice, yeast, lettuce, spinach and cod liver oil.

Treatments of the skin with this ultra violet light, which may be very destructive if improperly given, should only be under the supervision of your physician.

Questions and Answers.

Question: G. F. writes: "During the night I am awakened by my left arm aching dreadfully and this ache remains until morning. Could it be caused from poor circulation or lack of exercise, or is it all in my eating?"

Answer: Yes, the aching in your left arm may come from poor circulation, lack of exercise or from over-eating. When such aches come only in the left arm, one must be suspicious of angina pectoris, which is a serious functional disorder affecting the heart and its arteries.

Question: L. K. writes: "I am very fond of a dish called "brose" which is prepared by pouring boiling milk or broth over oatmeal or other meal and stirring until it resembles a sort of pudding. It seems to agree with me, but I would like to ask if you would recommend this way of using these cereals."

Answer: I would not recommend this dish for children or old people, or those whose digestion is not strong, but these cereals or meals require much longer cooking to be readily digestible.

Question: R. M. writes: "I have received so much help from your health articles and radio talks. You are doing a wonderful work, and giving untold relief to humanity at large. Please tell me, do you advise an operation for enlarged toe joints? I have seen advertisements of a medicine that would dissolve the joint. I have a bad enlargement on the left foot, the big toe. Tell me how to get rid of it."

Answer: The operation for an enlarged toe joint is quite a serious one and should not be undertaken if there is any other way you can reduce the inflammation which is causing the swelling. Local treatment and diet should be the same as for chronic rheumatism. Special articles appear from time to time about the cause and cure of this disorder; or I will be glad to send you instructions if you will write me again, enclosing a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

WHITE CRUST ON BRICK WALLS CAUSED BY SALTS

Nearly everyone has noticed the white formation that sometimes discolors brick walls, particularly after a season of damp weather, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. It somewhat resembles mildew and may occur on comparatively new as well as old walls. The crust is caused by the solidification on the surface of various kinds of chemical salts that become dissolved within the brick and gradually seep to the surface. Usually the formation disappears after a few seasons, as the salts gradually are washed away. Better design of walls to prevent moisture pentration and careful mixture of the brick and mortar are effective preventives in many cases.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY FAT PEOPLE ARE JOLLY

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.
(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

There is no scientific evidence that fat people are all jolly. To be wholly scientific we should find the coefficient of correlation between fat and mirth. I have known some that were anything but jolly. This may be the exception that proves the rule. At any rate fat people are universally hailed as jolly good fellows.

The notion that fat and fun are inseparable is supported by the circus clown, the comedian, and the literary writers. All clowns are fat in their own right or assume a fatness in the midsection to furnish the atmosphere so essential to the art of the fun maker.

The greatest worry in the animal world is food, the fear that there will not be enough to eat. Human beings are no exception. In certain parts of the world there are people in great numbers who have managed to reach maturity without ever knowing what it is to be full.

Perhaps the fat person's jolly disposition is due to a contented stomach. And it may be that the fat persons I referred to as being other than jolly were on a diet. And if fat people lose their reputation for being jolly it will be due to the fad of slimness set by the jealous ones.

Or it may be that fat people appear more jolly because their laughter attracts more attention since there is more of them to chuckle. A fat person laughs all over and is more expressive in his mirth.

Still another explanation of why fat people are jolly is that they have excess energy that must find expression in muscular activity. And since they are not given to violent exercise they take it out in the pleasant exercise of laughter.

Why do you do what you do? Write Dr. Thomson, care of this paper, and send stamped envelope for reply.

The Planter of the Tree

By RUBY M. AYRES

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY:

SALLY LINGFIELD, dancer at the Faun, a London night club.

JOSH AKERS, a waster, with whom Sally was once in love.

PHILIP SANDERSON, rich young man of wealth, who early one morning, when drunk, runs over Sally, badly injuring her. Sanderson loves Sally.

SOMETIMES, Sanderson's dog.

MRS. KIFF, his landlady.

Josh Akers, hearing of Sally's probably permanent injury, says he is through with her. Sanderson assumes her care, and establishes her in a cottage with Mrs. Kiff in the country. There she meets and falls in love with GARRY NAIRN, the rector's son. Sanderson, wretched because she prefers Garry to him, takes her to London for an operation which may restore her health. Garry goes, too, and meets Josh Akers, who says something insinuating about Sally's past. So Garry runs away, with only an inadequate written letter to Sally. Sally comes through the operation wonderfully. She goes back to the cottage and gradually finds herself able to walk more and more. And at last, though secretly grieving for Garry, she agrees to marry Sanderson. Then he goes to London to buy her a ring.

XLII—AN UNWELCOME MEETING

Sally lay back against the cushions, her hand still in Philips, her eyes on the garden outside the window, where a little sapling tree which Philip had planted in the early spring was bending its branches beneath the small weight of red summer apples.

"It's lived all right, you see," she said with seeming irrelevance. Philip followed the direction of her gaze.

"What has lived all right?" he asked.

Sally explained.

"The baby apple tree. Don't you remember how weakly it was at first? You thought it would die."

"Oh, yes, but it's all right now."

"It's like me, Philip, that tree."

"What do you mean, Sally?"

"That I was just as weak and frail when you brought me here, and that if it hadn't been for the way you looked after me I should have died."

He laughed to hide his emotion.

"I know you hate gratitude, but I am grateful! I lie awake at night often, and wonder what would have become of me but for you." She shivered with retrospection. "I'd have been dead—or worse—long ago."

"Well, there's no need to think about it," Philip said gruffly.

"But there is," she insisted gently. "When I think how hateful I used to be to you, and what an angel you were to me——"

Philip tried to jerk his hand free.

"Are you going to borrow something from me?" he demanded jokingly.

But Sally would not laugh.

"And whenever I look at that tree," she went on seriously, "I think how like me it is. You planted us both here, and looked after us both, Philip."

Philip rose to his feet. Although he loved to hear her talk so seriously, it embarrassed him.

"But the fruit does not always fall to the planter of the tree," he said lightly, then broke off, frowning.

What on earth had made him say that? It almost sounded like an evil omen. He was the planter of the tree, and the fruit had fallen to him. Sally was to be his wife.

In the morning Philip went up to Town.

"I may as well buy the other ring at the same time—eh?" he submitted as he kissed Sally goodbye.

There had been the tremendous business of measuring her finger.

"The jeweller chap will think I'm buying a ring for a baby," he teased her as with careful hands he cut a circle in a piece of cardboard and trimmed it down a little at a time until it exactly fitted her finger.

"I always had small hands and feet," Sally said with pride. "I only take a two in shoes."

Philip's face softened into wonderful tenderness.

"Do you, my dear?"

She nodded.

"It was a good thing in the old days," she told him, "because at the sales you could always get the small sizes so very cheap."

Sanderson came back a step.

"In future I shall buy all your shoes, Sally—all your clothes."

Sally smiled.

"But in future I shall be buying them for my wife," Sanderson said almost reverently; then he went hurriedly away, with a last caress to Sometimes.

At the garden gate he looked back. Sally had limped painfully to the sitting-room window, and was standing there with Sometimes beside her, his heavy paws planted on the narrow window-ledge as with anxious eyes he followed his master.

Sanderson waved his broad-brimmed hat.

He was perfectly happy; they were both his, those two waifs whom he had rescued from God alone knew what fate; he felt himself to be king of the earth as he strode along to the station.

It was wonderful how small a thing put Philip Sanderson into conceit with himself; a smile, or a kind word of appreciation, and all the birds of happiness sang in his heart.

As a rule he hated railway travelling, much preferring his own car, but today nothing could disturb his serenity; even the last ugly miles into Paddington Station were vested with a new glamor. His head was full of plans for the future. When Sally was strong enough he would show her the world. The Bay of Naples, moonlight on the Lido, the fairy-like glory of the south of France, and the rugged hills of Scotland. He knew them all well, and would glory in showing them to her.

The train glided into Paddington and he got out, blissfully unconscious of the many interested and amused glances cast after him by passers-by. He knew that he cut a strange, uncouth figure, and was content to know it. He told himself that very soon people would not have a glance to spare for him, because they would all be so busy looking at Sally walking beside him—Sally, who would play fairy princess to his ugly giant.

He walked out of the station and almost into the arms of Garry Nairn. The recognition was mutual and the smothered apology, then Philip would have passed on, but the younger man stopped him.

"Are you in such a hurry?"

"I am."

"I'll walk along with you, then."

Philip did not move.

"I don't want your company," Philip said uncompromisingly. "And I thought you were the other side of the world." His tone suggested that he had sincerely hoped so.

"I've been to America, that's all. I only stayed a month, and then something drove me back. The guv'nor doesn't know. Let me walk along with you, Sanderson."

Philip shrugged his shoulders.

"All right, but I'm in a hurry. If you've got anything to say, be quick and say it."

"Sally?"

"Very well, and quite happy."

He felt rather than saw that Garry winced.

"The operation? Did it—is she—"

"Thank God!"

"You make me laugh," Philip said cynically.

Garry Nairn flushed to the roots of his red hair.

"You've every right to say that. I behaved like a rotten cad. I must have been out of my mind. Sanderson, for God's sake, are you trying to win a Marathon?"

Philip reluctantly slackened his pace.

"I don't want your company," he said again rudely.

"I know you don't, but I want yours. I want to ask you a hundred questions—tell you things."

"You can't tell me anything that will interest me."

"Give me ten minutes. Good God, man, it's not much to ask!"

"Perhaps not, but it's too much."

LYRICS OF LIFE

OUTSIDE

Like some old dog outside the gate,
Who sees the cherry fire within,
So must a father stand and wait,
A father's sacrifice his sin.
He has been busy all the years,
To this arrange, and that provide,
And now he weeps his unshed tears,
A stranger at his own fireside.

He used to dream the lass and lad
Would tell him all the things they planned,
"But there is no use telling Dad,
For Dad would never understand.
For working more and making more
Is all he ever thinks about."
So inchby inch they close the door,
And day by day they shut Dad out.

I shall not say just whose the blame,
But there are fathers that I know
Who through the window watch the flame,
Their heads grown white with drifting snow.
And, oh, I wish there were some way
To throw the door forever wide,
That not a father felt today
A stranger at his own fireside.

Question: G. F. writes: "During the night I am awakened by my left arm aching dreadfully and this ache remains until morning. Could it be caused from poor circulation or lack of exercise, or is it all in my eating?"

Answer: Yes, the aching in your left arm may come from poor circulation, lack of exercise or from over-eating. When such aches come only in the left arm, one must be suspicious of angina pectoris, which is a serious functional disorder affecting the heart and its arteries.

Question: L. K. writes: "I am very fond of a dish called "brose" which is prepared by pouring boiling milk or broth over oatmeal or other meal and stirring until it resembles a sort of pudding. It seems to agree with me, but I would like to ask if you would recommend this way of using these cereals."

Answer: I would not recommend this dish for children or old people, or those whose digestion is not strong, but these cereals or meals require much longer cooking to be readily digestible.

Question: R. M. writes: "I have received so much help from your health articles and radio talks. You are doing a wonderful work, and giving untold relief to humanity at large. Please tell me, do you advise an operation for enlarged toe joints? I have seen advertisements of a medicine that would dissolve the joint. I have a bad enlargement on the left foot, the big toe. Tell me how to get rid of it."

Answer: The operation for an enlarged toe joint is quite a serious one and should not be undertaken if there is any other way you can reduce the inflammation which is causing the swelling. Local treatment and diet should be the same as for chronic rheumatism. Special articles appear from time to time about the cause and cure of this disorder; or I will be glad to send you instructions if you will write me again, enclosing a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

WHITE CRUST ON BRICK WALLS CAUSED BY SALTS

Nearly everyone has noticed the white formation that sometimes discolors brick walls, particularly after a season of damp weather, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. It somewhat resembles mildew and may occur on comparatively new as well as old walls. The crust is caused by the solidification on the surface of various kinds of chemical salts that become dissolved within the brick and gradually seep to the surface. Usually the formation disappears after a few seasons, as the salts gradually are washed away. Better design of walls to prevent moisture pentration and careful mixture of the brick and mortar are effective preventives in many cases.

PRINCE ALBERT NATIONAL PARK

The establishment of Prince Albert National Park last year gave Saskatchewan a park of importance. The new reservation has an area of 1,377 square miles in which are to be found some of the finest recreational and scenic areas in the Province. This park is linked to Hudson Bay by a chain of waterways which has been used as a fur trade route for more than 200 years.

UNCLE WIGGILY

By HOWARD R. GARIS

To-days Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE BIG BANG.

"Certainly this is very queer," said Uncle Wiggily to himself, as he was hopping into the Hollow Stump School from which a few seconds before had come a loud noise like a firecracker. "I let Jackie and Peetie go to the store for Nurse Jane's sugar. Those puppy dogs beg some empty paper bags of the Grocery Cat and when I get to school I heard a shot and Jackie Bow Wow tells the Lady Mouse Teacher that he made the noise with one of my bags of wind. I have no wind bags."

And when the rabbit gentleman hopped into the room where Jackie and Peetie recited their lessons he was just in time to see Jackie walk up to the Lady Mouse Teacher's desk carrying a paper bag which had been blown up with air or wind and then had been burst by Jackie smacking it between his paws as you have often done.

"Oh, Uncle Wiggily! I'm so glad to see you!" squeaked the Lady Mouse. "Did you hear what happened?"

"I heard what sounded like the backfire of an auto," spoke Mr. Longears.

"Jackie made the big bang by bursting one of your paper bags in school," said Miss Mouse. "And, what is more, he and his brother Peetie have a lot more empty paper bags which I am afraid they will crack during the day and scare us all."

"No, they will not do that," said Uncle Wiggily, "for I am going to take the paper bags away from them—that is, those that can still be blown up and cracked," and he marched down to the desks of the doggie boys and took out half a dozen paper bags.

"They are your bags of wind and, of course, you should take them away," said Miss Mouse. "But I wish, Uncle Wiggily, you had not given those bags of wind to the doggie boys to bring to school to make noises. It disturbs the class."

"My bags!" cried the rabbit gentleman, twinkling his pink nose twice as fast in his excitement. "They aren't my bags! Jackie and Peetie begged them of the Grocery Cat when they went to the store for Nurse Jane's sugar; didn't you, boys?"

"Yes," barked Jackie, who was a little ashamed of himself, "that's how it happened. But they are your bags in a way, Uncle Wiggily, 'cause if you hadn't let us go to the store in your place we'd never have gotten them. I didn't mean that you told us to make wind bags and bust 'em in school."

"Well, I'm glad you didn't mean that," said the rabbit gentleman with a smile. "So I will forgive you."

"And I will forgive Jackie when he stays in school to write a punish lesson," squeaked Miss Mouse with a smile. "And please take those empty Wiggily."

"I will," said Mr. Longears. "They certainly make big bangs when they are blown up and cracked."

Mr. Longears was hopping along the road through the woods, carrying the empty bags which he intended to give back to the Grocery Cat when, all of a sudden, the bunny heard a noise behind him. He looked back and saw, coming down the path, the Fox in an old automobile which the Bad Chap had hired.

After trying in many ways, but without doing it, to catch Uncle Wiggily, the Fox at last decided to hire an old auto and chase the rabbit. That is what the Fox was doing now.

"And I'll catch him, too!" laughed the Fox as he saw the rabbit just ahead of him and made the auto go faster.

Poor Uncle Wiggily hopped as fast as he could, but he was no match for an auto and the Fox was coming nearer when, all of a sudden, Mr. Longears thought:

"I'll blow up a paper bag, make a big bang and the Fox will think one of his tires has blown out and punctured. He'll stop to look and then I can get away."

No sooner said than done. Stepping aside into the bushes, Uncle Wiggily blew a lot of air into one of the paper bags, puffing it up like a toy circus balloon. Then the bunny burst the bag with a big bang like a giant firecracker.

"Bless my tail! A blowout! A puncture!" howled the Fox. He put on brakes, stopped his car and jumped out to see which tire had a hole in. None had, but by the time the Fox found that out Mr. Longears was safe at home in his hollow stump bungalow. So this teaches us that paper bags are good for something else than to carry water in.

LYRICS OF LIFE

OUTSIDE

Like some old dog outside the gate,
Who sees the cherry fire within,
So must a father stand and wait,
A father's sacrifice his sin.
He has been busy all the years,
To this arrange, and that provide,
And now he weeps his unshed tears,
A stranger at his own fireside.

He used to dream the lass and lad
Would tell him all the things they planned,
"But there is no use telling Dad,
For Dad would never understand.
For working more and making more
Is all he ever thinks about."
So inchby inch they close the door,

I shall not say just whose the blame,
But there are fathers that I know
Who through the window watch the flame,
Their heads grown white with drifting snow.
And, oh, I wish there were some way
To throw the door forever wide,
That not a father felt today
A stranger at his own fireside.

A process for plating aluminum on metal by electricity has at last been developed, Prof. D. B. Keyes of the University of Illinois announced recently to the American Chemical Society Institute, and scientists are predicting that the discovery will prove beneficial in many lines of industry and will help in the saving of millions of dollars.

ORGANIST TO GIVE RADIO PROGRAM

Applicant For Campbellford Position Will Play at Buffalo Stations.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence).

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 3.—Many citizens of Campbellford and particularly those who heard Mr. Nesbitt play the organ of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church here on the Sunday of September 16th will be interested to learn that he is broadcasting a program from two different radio stations this week. On Wednesday evening, October 3rd, Mr. Nesbitt goes on the air at eight o'clock from station WMAK, Buffalo. On Friday evening he will be heard from station WGR, beginning at nine o'clock. Mr. Nesbitt is well known to radio audiences and has been heard frequently from the above mentioned stations. Nor is he a stranger at WLW, Cincinnati, and WGY, Schenectedy. He has also an enviable reputation for feature work at theatres, among them being the Paramount Theatre, New York City. Mr. Nesbitt will preside at the organ in the Presbyterian Church here on Sunday, October 7th. His programs over the radio during the week ought to be items of interest to those who will hear him Sunday and to the townspeople in general. Mr. Nesbitt has made application for the position of organist here.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY FAT PEOPLE ARE JOLLY

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.
(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

There is no scientific evidence that fat people are all jolly. To be wholly scientific we should find the coefficient of correlation between fat and mirth. I have known some that were anything but jolly. This may be the exception that proves the rule. At any rate fat people are universally hailed as jolly good fellows.

The notion that fat and fun are inseparable is supported by the circus clown, the comedian, and the literary writers. All clowns are fat in their own right or assume a fatness in the midsection to furnish the atmosphere so essential to the art of the fun maker.

The greatest worry in the animal world is food, the fear that there will not be enough to eat. Human beings are no exception. In certain parts of the world there are people in great numbers who have managed to reach maturity without ever knowing what it is to be full.

Perhaps the fat person's jolly disposition is due to a contented stomach. And it may be that the fat persons I referred to as being other than jolly were on a diet. And if fat people lose their reputation for being jolly it will be due to the fad of slimness set by the jealous ones.

Or it may be that fat people appear more jolly because their laughter attracts more attention since there is more of them to chuckle. A fat person laughs all over and is more expressive in his mirth.

Still another explanation of why fat people are jolly is that they have excess energy that must find expression in muscular activity. And since they are not given to violent exercise they take it out in the pleasant exercise of laughter.

For a fat person, being jolly is equivalent to the daily dozen.

Why do you do what you do? Write Dr. Thomson, care of this paper, and send stamped envelope for reply.

The Planter of the Tree

By RUBY M. AYRES

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY:

SALLY LINGFIELD, dancer at the Faun, a London night club.

JOSH AKERS, a waster, with whom Sally was once in love.

PHILIP SANDERSON, rich young man of wealth, who early one morning, when drunk, runs over Sally, badly injuring her. Sanderson loves Sally.

SOMETIMES, Sanderson's dog.

MRS. KIFF, his landlady.

Josh Akers, hearing of Sally's probably permanent injury, says he is through with her. Sanderson assumes her care, and establishes her in a cottage with Mrs. Kiff in the country. There she meets and falls in love with GARRY NAIRN, the rector's son. Sanderson, wretched because she prefers Garry to him, takes her to London for an operation which may restore her health. Garry goes, too, and meets Josh Akers, who says something insinuating about Sally's past. So Garry runs away, with only an inadequate written letter to Sally. Sally comes through the operation wonderfully. She goes back to the cottage and gradually finds herself able to walk more and more. And at last, though secretly grieving for Garry, she agrees to marry Sanderson. Then he goes to London to buy her a ring.

XLII—AN UNWELCOME MEETING

Sally lay back against the cushions, her hand still in Philips, her eyes on the garden outside the window, where a little sapling tree which Philip had planted in the early spring was bending its branches beneath the small weight of red summer apples.

"It's lived all right, you see," she said with seeming irrelevance. Philip followed the direction of her gaze.

"What has lived all right?" he asked.

Sally explained.

"The baby apple tree. Don't you remember how weakly it was at first? You thought it would die."

"Oh, yes, but it's all right now."

"It's like me, Philip, that tree."

"What do you mean, Sally?"

"That I was just as weak and frail when you brought me here, and that if it hadn't been for the way you looked after me I should have died."

He laughed to hide his emotion.

"I know you hate gratitude, but I am grateful! I lie awake at night often, and wonder what would have become of me but for you." She shivered with retrospection. "I'd have been dead—or worse—long ago."

"Well, there's no need to think about it," Philip said gruffly.

"But there is," she insisted gently. "When I think how hateful I used to be to you, and what an angel you were to me——"

Philip tried to jerk his hand free.

"Are you going to borrow something from me?" he demanded jokingly.

But Sally would not laugh.

"And whenever I look at that tree," she went on seriously, "I think how like me it is. You planted us both here, and looked after us both, Philip."

Philip rose to his feet. Although he loved to hear her talk so seriously, it embarrassed him.

"But the fruit does not always fall to the planter of the tree," he said lightly, then broke off, frowning.

What on earth had made him say that? It almost sounded like an evil omen. He was the planter of the tree, and the fruit had fallen to him. Sally was to be his wife.

In the morning Philip went up to Town.

"I may as well buy the other ring at the same time—eh?" he submitted as he kissed Sally goodbye.

There had been the tremendous business of measuring her finger.

"The jeweller chap will think I'm buying a ring for a baby," he teased her as with careful hands he cut a circle in a piece of cardboard and trimmed it down a little at a time until it exactly fitted her finger.

"I always had small hands and feet," Sally said with pride. "I only take a two in shoes."

Philip's face softened into wonderful tenderness.

"Do you, my dear?"

She nodded.

"It was a good thing in the old days," she told him, "because at the sales you could always get the small sizes so very cheap."

Sanderson came back a step.

"In future I shall buy all your shoes, Sally—all your clothes."

Sally smiled.

"But in future I shall be buying them for my wife," Sanderson said almost reverently; then he went hurriedly away, with a last caress to Sometimes.

At the garden gate he looked back. Sally had limped painfully to the sitting-room window, and was standing there with Sometimes beside her, his heavy paws planted on the narrow window-ledge as with anxious eyes he followed his master.

Sanderson waved his broad-brimmed hat.

He was perfectly happy; they were both his, those two waifs whom he had rescued from God alone knew what fate; he felt himself to be king of the earth as he strode along to the station.

It was wonderful how small a thing put Philip Sanderson into conceit with himself; a smile, or a kind word of appreciation, and all the birds of happiness sang in his heart.

As a rule he hated railway travelling, much preferring his own car, but today nothing could disturb his serenity; even the last ugly miles into Paddington Station were vested with a new glamor. His head was full of plans for the future. When Sally was strong enough he would show her the world. The Bay of Naples, moonlight on the Lido, the fairy-like glory of the south of France, and the rugged hills of Scotland. He knew them all well, and would glory in showing them to her.

The train glided into Paddington and he got out, blissfully unconscious of the many interested and amused glances cast after him by passers-by. He knew that he cut a strange, uncouth figure, and was content to know it. He told himself that very soon people would not have a glance to spare for him, because they would all be so busy looking at Sally walking beside him—Sally, who would play fairy princess to his ugly giant.

He walked out of the station and almost into the arms of Garry Nairn. The recognition was mutual and the smothered apology, then Philip would have passed on, but the younger man stopped him.

"Are you in such a hurry?"

"I am."

"I'll walk along with you, then." Philip did not move.

"I don't want your company," Philip said uncompromisingly. "And I thought you were the other side of the world." His tone suggested that he had sincerely hoped so.

"I've been to America; that's all. I only stayed a month, and then something drove me back. The guv'nor doesn't know. Let me walk along with you, Sanderson."

Philip shrugged his shoulders.

"All right, but I'm in a hurry. If you've got anything to say, be quick and say it."

"Sally?"

"Very well, and quite happy."

He felt rather than saw that Garry winced.

"The operation? Did it—is she—"

"Thank God!"

"You make me laugh," Philip said cynically.

Garry Nairn flushed to the roots of his red hair.

"You've every right to say that. I behaved like a rotten cad. I must have been out of my mind. Sanderson, for God's sake, are you trying to win a Marathon?"

Philip reluctantly slackened his pace.

"I don't want your company," he said again rudely.

"I know you don't, but I want yours. I want to ask you a hundred questions—tell you things."

"You can't tell me anything that will interest me."

"Give me ten minutes. Good God, man, it's not much to ask!"

"Perhaps not, but it's too much."

RINK SOFTBALL LEAGUE OPENING

Annual Series at Lakefield Will Get Under Way Shortly.

GOOD GAMES EXPECTED

(Examiner Correspondence)

LAKEFIELD, Oct. 2.—The second week in October will see the opening of the annual Softball League arranged by the Lakefield Rink Co., and which is open to any team in the county of Peterborough. The High School have entered a team, and it is expected that the Cement Co. will enter, also the young men of the village. Then it is expected that old friends from Selwyn, Wesley, Buckhorn, Douro and Bridgenorth will also be present and probably several new teams. There should be a good league this year and snappy games which will keep up the interest to the last game.

Horseshoe Tournament.

The horseshoe tournament will be held on Thursday and Friday evenings, and it is hoped that the event will be even more successful than last year's initial effort as the weather will not be as chilly as for last year's event, which was held in December. This sport has regained its old popularity and is a feature of field days and athletic tournaments.

Sport Days to be Held.

The annual sports day of the Lakefield High School will be Thursday next, October 4, and this year the sports will be on the Exhibition Grounds, beginning immediately after dinner.

Wednesday afternoon, October 3, will be the annual sports day of the Lakefield Public School, and this year the sports will be run off on the Exhibition Grounds early in the afternoon.

RALLY DAY SERVICES

(Examiner Correspondence)

BAILIEBORO, Oct. 3.—Rev. Clare C. Norham conducted the three rally day services on the Fraserville Unit-Chruch Circuit on Sunday, in the absence of the pastor, Rev. E. Swain, who conducted the anniversary services at Norham on Sunday morning and evening.

Bensfort Sunday school held there rally service in the morning. Fraserville during the afternoon and the local Sunday school in the evening.

All three churches were beautifully decorated with autumn leaves and flowers, which told of a great deal of work on the part of the ladies and superintendent.

A special number on the program at the evening service was a beautiful pageant conducted by the primary children. Gates were erected at either side of a gorgeous flowered arch and as the junior girls sang the verses of the beautiful hymn, "Gates Ajar", the small boys and girls marched through the gates forming a semi-circle at the front of the platform and joining in the verses of the hymn.

Rev. Mr. Clare gave a brief address on the subject of "Peace" illustrating his topic from the flowers grown in a garden and comparing the cultivated flowers with the flowers that grow wild in fields and uncultivated gardens. With the thought of the flowers the pastor compared the lives of the Sunday school children with flowers grown in a cultivate garden and the children who are not sent to a Sabbath school the speaker compound as flowers growing wild without fragrance and beauty, and the opportunity to live the peaceful life of a cultivated flower.

TRENT RIVER UNITED S.S.

(Examiner Correspondence)

TRENT RIVER, Oct. 3.—Rally Day service was observed Sunday afternoon at the United church. The following printed service was used. Opening prayer, hymn, "O Worship the King"; prayer; scriptural reading; hymn, "The Beam that Shines From Zion's Hill"; readings by Albert Tyler, Helen Brown, Milton Hawley and Fleda Thompson; prayer; hymn, "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear"; offering service; address, "Blessed Are the Peacemakers"; hymn, "In Christ There is No East or West."

TRINITY CHURCH, MADOC.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MADOC, Oct. 3.—Rally Day services were held in Trinity Sunday school on Sunday morning. The rally day program for "Peace and Goodwill" was followed and proved both interesting and inspirational. The recitation parts were taken by Earl Wellman, Jack Kincaid, Kathleen Ludbrook, while the reading, "The Christ of the Andes" was given by Miss Helen Caskey. Miss Helen Ludbrook was pianist for the day. Rev. G. W. Rivers gave a short talk on the value of "Peace and Goodwill" finishing with an earnest Decision Day address to teachers and scholars. The collection was taken for extension Sunday school work.

SPRINGVILLE UNITED S.S.

(Examiner Correspondence)

SPRINGVILLE, Oct. 3.—Rally Day service was observed on Sunday morning in Springville United church. The attendance was good at both Sunday school and church.

A man is not greater than his thoughts. If we have a noble idea of Christ we will become like him. A "Man in Christ" is governed by the love of God, has the joy of forgiveness and having been forgiven much, is ready to forgive others.

Men and women are needed in the church who can say with Paul, "I am what I am."

MILLBROOK UNITED S.S.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MILLBROOK, Oct. 3.—The annual Rally Day service, in connection with the Sunday school of the United church, was held on Sunday morning, the pastor, Rev. W. W. Jones, the superintendent, W. Fred Fallis, and Rev. Joseph Wilks having seats on the pulpit platform.

The centre pews of the church auditorium were reserved for the school, but so large was the attendance that a goodly portion of the remainder of the congregation overflowed into the gallery.

The official Rally Day program "Peace and Goodwill," was used for the service, Mr. Fallis taking charge of the scripture responsive readings, and Rev. Mr. Wilks leading in the opening prayer.

The choir gave the anthem, "I Have Set Watchmen Upon Thy Walls, O Jerusalem," very effectively, the solo, "The Holy City" contributed by Mrs. Hicks, a visitor in town, was much appreciated.

The story of "The Christ of the Andes" was told most impressively by Mr. Fallis, the picture statue forming the frontpiece on the program which were in everyone's hands. The superintendent also explained the special purpose of the offering, the strengthening and extending of the Sunday school and Young People's work throughout Canada, and four of the Tuxis Boys, Clarence Ball, Robert Larmer, Arnold Fallis, and Oliver Brock, took up the collection. The pastor offered a brief dedicatory prayer, and the prayer-hymn, "We Give Thee But Thine Own", was sung softly by the congregation.

Jack Stinson recited the verse on Peace by the junior boy; Bernice Smith that for the junior girl, Aubrey Todd took the one for an intermediate boy, and Wilma Fallis the concluding selection, "Peace is like a mother to those who have suffered," the response being, "Peace is God's blessing upon the world."

In his address to the school which took the place of the usual sermon, Rev. Mr. Jones had as his objective, "to teach the boys and girls the force and meaning of habits," illustrating the first part of his remarks by winding strands of thread round and round the hands of a teen age boy, Eric Fallis, the speaker impressed the lesson that while the first few strands could easily be broken, a continued winding made it impossible to break the bonds without help, and drew the emphatic declaration that Christ alone is the Great Helper through whom the conquest of evil habits is accomplished.

A box of clay planted full of weeds illustrated the garden of the heart when evil has gained a foothold; replacing these by flowers, and by the planting of grain seeds, and drawing out by questioning what harvest might be expected, led to the teaching that the effort should be to get into the garden of the heart good thoughts, words, deeds, "for the language of a garden is purity, goodness, peace, and goodwill."

During the roll-call of classes the number on the roll, and the number present, was announced by one pupil in each case, the "Sunbeam" class, Miss Jean L. Burnham, teacher, having a perfect record—twelve scholars and twelve present.

The secretary's report showed twenty-one teachers and officers present; 308 scholars; and $20.42 in the offering for the Maintenance and Extension fund of the church.

Fall flowers were tastefully arranged about the altar, and in the entrance hall, making an appropriate decorative scheme for the Rally Day occasion.

BANDIT LOOTS MAIL; IS SOON ARRESTED

Siding, a switchman, puzzled because the door of the car was not opened to put off and take on mail, rapped at the door. Not receiving a reply, he forced the door open and climbed to find the clerks still lined up against the wall. The robber had disappeared. Police believe he dropped off as the train slowed down to a stop and probably escaped in an automobile that was awaiting him.

Conductor L. J. Gay, Glengarry Avenue, and Engineer H. McHarg, of London, knew nothing of the robbery until the stop was made at Prairie Siding, and said that they had seen nothing of the man. aGy was conductor of the train held up by mail-car robbers at Toronto several months ago. Passengers aboard the train also were ignorant of the robbery until the Prairie Siding stop.

Daring Robbery.

WINDSOR, October 3. — A single bandit, armed with a .48-calibre revolver, last night held up and robbed the mail car attached to Canadian National passenger train No. 11 between Chatham and Prairie Siding, shortly after 7.30 o'clock. The value of the loot has not yet been determined, but officials at the Windsor Post Office place the loss at not less than $22,000.

William Gibbs, aged 19, address undetermined, arrested by a C.N.R. policeman in Detroit in connection with the robbery of Canadian National train No. 11 between Chatham and Prairie Siding, has confessed, according to police here.

When arrested Gibbs had a large sum of currency in his possession, which was found to total about $22,000. This money was secreted about his overalls, and has not all been counted and checked over as yet. His pistol, a heavy .48-calibre weapon, was found on his person, police said.

Hid on Tender, Police Say

According to the confession given by Gibbs to the police, after jumping from the train at Prairie Siding he secreted himself under the tender. Arriving at Windsor, he made a quick break for the ferryboat, which was in waiting to carry the train to Detroit, its ultimate destination. Gibbs was found by the railway detective clinging to the side of the ferryboat.

The bandit, who was described by the mail clerks as a man with a fat, smooth face, and weighing 155 pounds, swung through the end door a minute after the last mail bag had been thrown aboard, and just as the train was pulling out of Chatham station.

Clerks Surprised.

Surprised by the daring of the intruder, Mail Clerks H. R. Cromwell, Albert Gignac and Harry E. Roos, all of Windsor, made no attempt to resist the invasion. They complied at once with a command to throw up their hands and turn their faces to the side of the car.

Gignac and Ross continued in this position while Cromwell, covered with the bandit's pistol, cut open three or four of the registered packets, the contents of which the thug stuffed in the pockets of a large suit of blue overalls he was wearing. When the process of looting the bags was completed, Cromwell was ordered to resume his face-to-the-wall position.

What happened after that the clerks could not say, but it is believed the bandit jumped from the car as the train was entering Prairie Siding. This theory is considered correct by Sergeant George Fish of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, who has charge of the investigation, because the door of the mail car next the engine, was found slightly ajar.

May Have Had Confederates

That the thug had confederates at Prairie Siding is believed by Sergeant Fish. The spot where the robber may have made his escape is one of the lonelinest railway sidings in this district. Near by is the River Thames, with a bridge leading to the Wallaceburg road. This route the bandit is believed to have taken in a fast-driven car, which, detectives stated, was seen by farmers of the district about 15 minutes after the train stopped at the siding.

STEEL SUBMISSION HEARING ADJOURNED

Have Strong Competition.

Norman Guthrie, appearing for the corporation, declared that under the present tariff provisions, the industry was confronted with strong foreign competition, as relatively higher costs of raw materials, labor and transportation in Canada constituted serious handicaps, which only more adequate safeguards could remedy.

Concerted opposition to the application was voiced by representatives of the automibel industry, foundries, railway companies and other interests whose products would be directly affected by increased protection.

In the course of the hearing, E. J. Long, of Toronto, who held a watching brief for the British Empire Steel Corporation, implied that he would submit a new brief respecting iron and steel duties at the resumed hearing. The British Empire Steel Corporation originally filed a reference, but this was withdrawn when the controlling interests of the former corporation changed hands. Mr. Long gave no indication as to the nature of the Besco application.

The dangers to which the opposing interests might be exposed, if the large steel corporations were given a virtual monopoly in Canada, were cited. It was claimed that increased tariffs would bring higher prices, limit the source of supply, and drive certain industries out of busines. The ability of the Algoma Steel Corporation to give assurance of dependable delivery under the burden of increased demand, also was challenged.

Changes Long Overdue

Mr. Guthrie, reply to these objections, stated that the changes sought in the customs tariff were long overdue. He characterized some of the provisions under survey as "obsolete" and added that urgent revision was essential to meet modern conditions.

W. H. Moore, chairman of the board, remarked that while Mr. Guthrie took that stand there were also others who assailed the government for "tinkering" with the tariff.

Continuing Mr. Guthrie reviewed the history of the iron and steel industry in Canada, stating that certain tariff concessions may have been justified when the steel industry was not in a puosition in the early days of its establishment, to meet demands fully. Gradual expansion, however, had altered conditions materially, and the corporation now was able to supply these needs. It was merely asking for sufficient protection to permit the consolidation of the industry and relieve it of certain handicaps.

"The proposals which we have laid before the board would work no hardships upon Canadian industry, but would eventually be to the mutual advantage of producers and consumers by building up a dependable source of supply of these materials within the Dominion," the corporation's brief said. "Canadian railways," it added, "would benefit by the transportation of an increased tonnage of both raw materials and the finished products, and we would be enabled to retain and employ in Canada workmen who would otherwise join the ranks of so many of their fellows who have crossed the border in search of work which this country should be providing."

The chairman observed that this contention raised a grave political issue and requested Mr. Guthrie to qualify it or submit supporting evidence at the resumed hearing. He also urged further elaboration of the special handicaps under which the corporation claimed to be operating, in order that the true facts might be placed before parliament.

SEYMOUR COUNCIL PASSES ACCOUNTS

Nothing But Routine Business Dealt With at Regular Meeting.

(Examiner Staff Correspondent.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 3.— There was practically nothing but routine business to be dealt with by the Seymour Township Council at its regular meeting on Monday afternoon. All the members were present but Councillor Locke. Henry Redden presented the only request to be brought before the council. This was for some road repairs on the eighth concession opposite lot eight. The council took no action.

George Anderson presented the school report which was received and placed on file. This brought the meeting to the place where the accounts were to be considered. The following were ordered to be paid:

WEDDING BELLS

WHIBBS—FITZGERALD.

St. Joseph's Church, Douro, was the scene of a pretty autumn wedding on Tuesday morning, September 25, at nine o'clock, when Miss Frances Fitzgerald, daughter of Mrs. Mary Fitzgerald, was united in marriage to Mr. Charles Whibbs, son of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Whibbs, of Indian River.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. M. J. McGuire, and the altar was beautifully decorated with autumn flowers.

The bride was attired in a beaded dress of shell pink georgette, with scalloped hem, black velvet hat and shoes to match. She wore the groom's gift, a beautiful amber fox fur, and carried a bouquet of butterfly roses.

The bride was attended by the groom's sister, Miss Annie Whibbs, who wore a pretty dress of peach crepe romain and radium lace, with black velvet hat and fox fur, and carried a bouquet of Columbia roses.

The wedding music was played by Miss Mabel Allen, and Miss Agnes Sweeney sang "Ave Maria."

The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a gold bar pin with amethyst setting, and to the groomsman gold cuff links.

After the ceremony the bridal party motored to the home of the bride's mother, where a sumptuous wedding dinner was served to immediate friends.

The happy couple were the recipients of many valuable gifts.

Later, Mr. and Mrs. Whibbs left on a motor trip to Niagara and Buffalo. The bride's travelling costume was a dress of beige crepe romain, with velvet trimmings, with hat, hose and shoes to match, and tweed travelling coat with fox fur.

On their return they will reside in Peterborough.

More time to play

You can always find people to tell you that the country is going to the dogs because we're doing so much playing.

"When did your grandmother find any time to play? There was a woman for you!"

No doubt.

Just the same, we'd like to have given her a vacuum cleaner, a washing machine, electric lights, running hot water, a telephone, baker's bread, delicious canned foods, an automobile and a set of golf clubs.

HARVEST SERVICE HELD AT HAULTAIN

Special Speaker Addresses Congregation in Eden United Church.

(Examiner Correspondence)

HAULTAIN, Oct. 3.—The annual harvest thanksgiving service was held at Eden United Church, Haultain, on Sunday morning, Sept. 30. The church was tasterully and abundantly decorated and a large congregation was present. Rev. Mr. Taylor, of Apsley, delivered an inspiring address.

Personals.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Thompson, of Peterborough, were guests at the Mount Julian Hotel for the week-end.

Miss Iris G. Willis, of Hall's Bridge, was in Haultain on Sunday attending the harvest thanksgiving service at Holy Trinity (Anglican) Church.

Mr. Herbert Windsor and Wilbert Edwards, of South Burleigh, were in Young's Point on Monday.

Messrs. Harry and Richard Stubbs, of Stoney Lake, were in Young's Point on Saturday.

Mr. Ephraim Bronson is at present installing an ice-house at the cottage of Reginald Bloomfield, of Toronto, at the foot of Eel's Creek.

Rev. and Mrs. R. C. Dwelly, their daughter, Marion, and their guest, Miss Iris G. Willis, were visiting Mr. and Mrs. William Thompson, of Mount Julian, on Monday.

MAJOR URQUHART VISITS BETHANY

Salvation Army's Versatile Musician Pleases Large Audience.

(Examiner Correspondence)

BETHANY, Oct. 3.—No doubt one of the best musical treats that has ever come to this village came last Friday evening, when Major Tom Urquhart, who has been in Peterborough for some days, entertained a great number of people in the United Church. With him were five of the bandsmen of the Army band who also gave some very fine selections. Ensign Green in his able manner made a good chairman and in all it was a splendid entertainment.

Children's Day Held.

Children's Day was observed in the both churches on Sunday, in the morning at the English church when the rector, Rev. Fierheller, spoke on "Love to one another." The choir gave special music. In the evening a special rally day program was given in the United church. The pastor took for his subject "Peace and good will." The choir also sang two anthems.

Mr. and Mrs. William Parcels and family of Norwood were the Sunday guests of their uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. F. B. McAdam.

Mr. Fred Burnett and family, of Kingston, visited his sister, Mrs. Walter Clarke, recently.

Mr. and Mrs. James Graham and son, Douglas, of Napanee, Mrs. W. B. Purdy and Miss S. Graham, of Syracuse spent Sunday the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Clarke.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Robins and Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Nichol and daughter, Doreen, of Roseneath, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Buchanan.

Warsaw

(Examiner Correspondence)

WARSAW, Oct. 3.—Mr. Fraser, a Knox College student, preached in the Presbyterian church on Sunday evening.

Presbyterian Sunday school will hold its rally service next Sunday morning and the United Sunday school will hold theirs in the evening.

Mr. A. F. Choate and Mr. Knight from California, a daughter of Mr. William Choate, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. H. G. E. Choate and went to Toronto on Monday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. McCauley and family moved to Norwood on Monday.

The farmers are rejoicing in the delightful weather. Potato digging and plowing is being rushed.

Those who are silo-filling are thankful. Very little corn is very much damaged by the frosts. It is still growing.

Most farmers who sowed buckwheat late report an excellent crop, though some of it is very wet soil.

THE PULP AND PAPER INDUSTRY

The manufacture of pulp and paper is a comparatively recent development in Canadian industry. The first paper-mill in Canada was established at St. Andrews in Quebec in 1803 and in 1825 at Crooks' Hollow, near Hamilton, was erected the first paper-mill in what was then Upper Canada. What is claimed to be the first wood-pulp mill in Canada was erected at Windsor Mills Quebec, about 1870.

SCHOOL OPENS FOR TEACHERS

Sunday School Workers Will Spend Week in Intensive Study.

AT BRIDGENORTH.

The Bridgenorth school for teacher training was opened last night in the Bridgenorth United Church. There were thirty-five pupils present.

Rev. J. O. Totten of Bridgenorth opened the meeting by reading the 27th Psalm.

Rev. W. S. Edgar of Gilmour Memorial Church, led in prayer.

The teacher of the Sunday school workers up to the junior division is Mrs. Norman White of Brooklands.

Rev. T. M. Wesley of Knox United Church, Lakefield, taught the workers in the senior divisions.

Mrs. White's topic for the evening was the characteristics of the children of the cradle roll, beginners, primary and junior divisions. As soon as the child is born, it is enlisted in the cradle roll; at this stage the chief influence that plays upon the child is that of the mother in the home. At the age of four it comes to Sunday school, and is put in the beginners' class. The peculiarities of the beginner are that he is every energetic, full of life and movement, and must not be unduly repressed. His activities must be turned into the right direction. He is curious, always asking questions; his work is his home, his friends, his toys and his pets, the cat, dog and canary.

The primary boy or girl has been to school, and consequently has entered a larger world than the beginner. He wants to know the truth of things, and is now forming his habits. Great care should be exercised to see that the habits he forms are good and wholesome habits.

The junior is a hero worshipper, very frank, and perfectly honest. Great patience is needed on the part of the teacher to handle him properly. He does not like to be bossed, yet he has a contempt for the teacher who is too soft with him. He resents authority, and yet admires those who can master him. His body does not grow as rapidly as formerly, but his memory is very keen and receptive. Now is the time to pour in those treasures of scripture and other literary gems, which may prove of immense value in the days to come. Now is the time when he makes definite choices, and now is the teacher's opportunity to get him to make the great committment of his life to Christ.

In teaching the children, these peculiarities must ever be kept in view.

Rev. Mr. Wesley's subject was the teaching values of the Old Testament. His address was mainly introductory. He dealt principally with the history of the people of Israel from the earliest days to New Testament times.

A. B. Burrows of Lakefield is the manager of the school.

CALLS CHARGES SHEER NONSENSE

Euler Answers Statements Made By Attorney-General of British Columbia.

KITCHENER, Ont., Oct. 3.—(Canadian Press).—The charges of co-operation of the Dominion Government with liquor law violators in British Columbia made by Hon. R. H. Pooley, Attorney General of British Columbia were "beyond comprehension", Hon. D. W. Euler, Minister of Customs stated here yesterday.

The licensing of distilleries is Federal matter, the Minister pointed out, and a provincial government has nothing to do with it.

Despatches had credited Mr. Pooley with refusing to establish new distilleries. The Dominion Government, however, always consulted the provincial authorities before granting charters, he stated.

The Minister described as "sheer nonsense" the report that Mr. Pooley had turned down a request for his consent to the import and export of liquor to the United States and the charge that Federal Government was "attempting to break its own liquor laws."

ROOSEVELT NAMED TO SUCCEED SMITH

Former Assistant Secretary of Navy Candidate For Governor.

ROCHESTER, N.Y., October 2 (Canadian Press). — Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York, was nominated by acclamation for Governor of New York State by the Democratic State Convention to-day in succession to Governor Al. Smith, Presidential nominee. Mayor Walker of New York nominated Mr. Roosevelt, who was former Assistant Naval Secretary.

ESCAPING GAS SOUNDS ALARM TO PREVENT ACCIDENTS.

Gas is made to sound its own warning, should it escape from the mains, in an alarm device demonstrated by an eastern inventor. It is so sensitive that it will respond when the air space in a room contains as little as one one-hundredth part of gas, the inventor declares. In a recent test, an open bag of illuminating gas was held near the alarm, a box-like contrivance, and in a few seconds an electric bell connected to the box rang the warning.

Millinery News!

The latest Hats of the draped beret type combine felt with flat fur in the same color, but generally in black. The fur is that of some mysterious unnamed animal, but it suggests a baby goat. Summer ermine is used as well. Both Marie, Alphonsine and Patou do this.

The three outstanding shapes are: the draped tam, the bonnet cloche, the brimmed Hat with the head-fitting crown.

Reboux is not really in her stride yet and is not so quoted for the moment. The few models she has brought out have been in bright, rather trying shades. For instance, she has a bright pea-green felt with the brim cut so as to form a cavalier shape and trimmed with three different shades of velvet ribbon.

Revealing the Fall Modes in Millinery!

Hats of Distinction
New styles in Silk Velvets and Panne Hats, showing the new draped tan with metallic trim. Smart matrons' headgear with clever folds of silk and embroidery on crowns. New colors are French beige, almond green, grey, navy and black. Millinery..... $5 to 7.50

Smart French Felts

TOWN COUNCIL WORKS QUICKLY

Little Business To Be Discussed By Campbellford Mayor and Councillors.

WANT DEED TO STREET.

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 2 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—There was little business to be transacted at the council meeting last night, and what was on hand was speedily and efficiently administered. The surplus from the official opening celebration of the streets was turned over to the clerk with instructions to have it apply to the charity work of the town. The by-law designating stop and through streets was dealt with, and the matter of street lighting was brought up for discussion. The final item of interest was a discussion as to the rightful ownership of right to collect rent from the portion of the old, and now no longer used, C.N.R. property between Front street and the canal wall.

After the usual opening preliminaries, the first item of interest was the handing over of approximately $125, the proceeds from the street opening celebration. This amount together with a detailed report was placed in the hands of the clerk, to be applied to works of charity during the winter.

Among the communication were several regrets from officials from a distance who were unable to be present in Campbellford, September 14. There was also a letter from the C.N.R. superintendent at Belleville, acknowledging the receipt of the council's request, and stating that the request had been forwarded to the proper officials. Notice of the decision of these officials would be sent to the council as promptly as possible. During the discussion that followed it developed that the street under discussion was senior to the railroad. This information had been furnished the office in Lindsay.

A letter from S. R. Hart Printing Company was read, requesting further orders for printing of certain assessment rolls and other documents. This company had furnished the town with this material for a great many years, and the order was placed as usual. The final communication was from the accident insurance company represented by J. P. Archer, stating that the claim of James Hamilton for injuries received by his child while on the street, had been settled. The letter was received and filed.

Resolutions passed by the local board of health and relating to the construction of water mains and sewers on Front street and on Queen street, were read, and the council passed a resolution in favor of the work as recommended. Reeve Bygott presented the by-law authorising the erection of signs and designating certain stop and certain through streets. The by-law was given its first and second readings, and the Clerk authorized to send a copy to the Department of Highways at Toronto for approval. This is necessary before the by-law can become effective. The by-law provides a penalty of not more than ten dollars for the first offense and not more than twenty-five dollars for each subsequent offense.

Lighting Criticized

There was, at the moment, nothing further to be brought before the council, and the pay sheets and accounts were dealt with. Then Councillor O'Sullivan asked regarding the colored light which had been removed from Front street. He was told that they had only been placed their temporarily and were the property of P. C. Denyes, hardware merchant. This question led to a considerable discussion of the street lighting in the town. The present system was not generally considered the best advertisement for a town that claims to have plenty of power.

One member of the council claimed that the town was supposed to have power to burn but that in some respects it was five years behind the times. It was generally admitted that there were several dark places on some of the principal street. Mayor Kingston expressed the opinion that the commission would gladly add to the lighting system if they had the consent of the counsel. He assured the council that the commissioners had been discussing ways and means of improving the system for several months, and he felt certain that the question would be brought up again at the next meeting of the board.

It was brought to the attention of the council that the railroad had sometime ago promised to give the town a quit claim deed for that section of the old C.N.R. right of way lying between the west side of Front street and the east canal wall. At the present time the Canadian National Railways were still collecting rental for this property. It was decided after some interesting discussion to write the railway officials, asking why the delivery of this deed had been delayed.

JOHN R. ROBINSON IS LAID TO REST

Telegram Editor Borne To Grave After Simple Service.

TORONTO, Oct. 2.—(Canadian Press).—The funeral of John R. Robinson, editor for many years of the Toronto Telegram, was held yesterday afternoon from the family residence on Wellesley street. The service, which was marked by simplicity, was conducted by Rev. Dr. L. B. Gibson, of Cooke's Presbyterian Church, asisted by Rev. Canon J. H. Kidd of Christ Church, Woodbridge, Ont., and Rev. Charles Simpson.

The pall bearers were Wilfred Bowles, representing the editorial department of the Telegram and John Thompson, of the mechanical department, Capt. M. A. Baker, son-in-law of Mr. Robinson, John Robinson, a son, K. D. Miller and W. W. Wells, Jr.

Interment took place in Mount Pleasant Cemetery.

Toronto Trading Dull With Prices Sagging

TORONTO, Oct. 3 (Canadian Press).—Trading was dull on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day with prices tending to sag. Massey Harris proved an outstanding exception. At the close it was up a fraction at 46¼. International Nickel, moderately active, declined 1½ to 125½, and Brazilian dropped a point to 57½. British American, Imperial Oil, and Service Stations registered fractional gains at 40¾, 79, and 45 respectively, while International Petroleum was slightly lower at 38⅞.

Wheat and Corn Prices Resume Upward Trend

CHICAGO, Oct. 3 (Canadian Press).—Lively trading and higher prices to-day in the future deliveries of corn accompanied reports of export buying and of abnormally scant stocks on farms. Wheat also displayed an upward trend, sympathizing with advances in wheat quotations at Liverpool. Opening ¼ to 1¼ up, corn later held near to the initial figures. Wheat started weak, but later rallied. Oats were firm.

Opening prices were: Wheat, December 118½, March 123¼. Corn. 79⅝, March 81⅞. Oats, 42⅞, March 44⅛.

Market Review

Abana continued to occupy the centre of the stage in yesterday's traing on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange, with the announcement that American Metal Company of New York are negotiating for a block of stock giving them control of the property. Opening at $4.65, Abana sold up to $4.80, easing off at noon to $4.50, closing at $4.60-65.

In direct contrast, Amulet sold off to $2.95 during the day, closing at $3.00 to $3.04. Newbec sold up seven points to 64, closing in strong demand at 64-65. Heavy buying is taking place in anticipation of ore being encountered in the second drill hole around the 400 foot horizon. The hole is now down to a depth of 275 feet.

Hollinger still continued to hit the skies and at $7.60 sold at the lowest price it has touched in the last seven years closing at $7.50 to $7.60. Kirkland Lake at $1.36-9 was off 4; Malartic at $1.65-6 was off 3; Noranda at $47.50 to $47.75 was off $1.75. San Antonio evidently is still suffering from Mr. John Reid's report and at 30 to 31 was very soft.

Sherritt-Gordon at $6.40-5 was down 15, while Sudbury Basin during the day was traded in over the counter at $6.00, rallying to close at $6.08-$6.10. Mandy at $1.82-5 was up 2; Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting at $19.05-25 was off 15.

Barry-Hollinger at 46½ to 47, Graham Bousquet at 33 bid, and Mond Nickel at $32.00 to $32.75 were all in strong demand and showed little change.

MINING BRIEFS

A Special Service to The Examiner

The Blue Diamond Coal Mines owned jointly by McIntyre and Temiskaming Mines has been closed down, it is reported, and it begins to look as though McIntyre will take a net loss of over $1,000,000 while the Temiskaming will have to strike off over $500,000. It is thought that a futher sum of $350,000 will be necessary to clean up the bank indebtedness of the Blue Diamond.

E. H. Waler, president of the Porcupine Paymaster Mines, is expected to arrive at the property within the next few days when the question of stepping up the tonnage of the cyanide mill will be taken up. It is said that tonnage of the mill has been brought to around 500 tons per day. It is also stated that the company is actually operating at a loss but the margin between profit and loss has been brought up to some few thousand dollars a month, and it is hoped that when operations are proceeding on a larger tonnage basis that this small loss will be turned into a profit.

Spectucular copper discoveries, equal to the Sherritt-Gordon when that operation was in its initial stages, are reported from northern Manitoba. The scene of the latest find is at Oxford Lake, about 160 miles east and slightly north of Le Pas. Prospectors are flocking into the field and it is reported that several big operators are in there in a big way. Among these are mentioned the Lindsley interests of Toronto. The ground is being staked up rapidly and many operators or rushing in supplies before the freeze-up. Further details of these finds will be forthcoming soon.

Recently published reports to the effect that the Potter-Doal Mines had securel a group of claims adjoining the Bobjo Mining Company's property in the Clearwater Lake field are entirely erroneous, the Financial News Bureau is informed officially, ork is continuing at the property near Matheson, Ontario, and officials state that satisfactory progress is being made.

A despatch from the north states that the oil flotation process will be installed at the International Nickel Company's properties. This is expected to effect a good saving and increase production.

Rouyn advices are to the effect that the Newbec drill hole, which is on its way to 500 feet, is now down to 250 feet and that it is expected the ore will be cut around 400 feet.

It is reported that a new board of directors has been elected by shareholders of Ankerite Gold Mines Ltd. This is said to include F. C. Baker, J. P. Ronaghan, F. Marscik, W. S. Walton and C. E. Smith.

Directors of Manitoba Basin Mines met Monday and it is expected that this was for the purpose of taking over the claims of the new tin discovery in Manitoba a short distance from the city of Winnipeg. Manitoba Basin already has many diversified holdings in various parts of the country and in addition it operates the Eastern Canada Airways.

The Pioneer annual meeting was held yesterday. As predicted in Saturday's "Mining Briefs" a good deal of interesting information was given out. This will be seen in another bulletin to-day. Saturday's "Mining Briefs" stated that 'interesting developments are going to occur." Thats calling them.

American Metal Company Negotiates For Abana

Montreal—It is reported that the identity of the American Company which has been seeking to gain control of the Abana Mines property, one of the largest operators in the Quebec field, is the American Metal Company, of New York. This company was incorporated in 1887 and is primarily a holding company with its assets mainly being shares in subsidiary companies. It participates in all branches of the metal industry and is claimed to be the second largest corporation of its kind, having interests in the United States, Cuba, Mexico, South America and Africa. The company has $10,000,000 6% preferred stock and 594,777 shares of no par common. The balance sheet of the company shows net working capital at about $21,000,000.

Enterprise Consolidated Makes Important Changes

At a shareholders meeting of the Enterprise Consolidated Mining Company, Limited, held last Saturday at Nelson, B.C., it was decided to change the name of the company to that of Yankee Girl Consolidated. The par value of the stock was made 50 cents instead of 20 cents as formerly and the number of shares were reduced from 12,000,000 to 4,800,000. This left the authorized capitalization at the same figure as before. Directors met yesterday to consider rights to stockholders, who will probably receive one share of Yankee Girl for each two and a half shares of Enterprise.

Verde Extension Enters Sudbury Field

Reports from Sudbury are to the effect that the United Verde Extension Mining Company of Arizona have taken an option on the Mount Nickel property and adjoining acreage in the township of Blezard, about 5 miles northeast of Sudbury, and intend going ahead with an electrical survey and some diamond drilling. It is said that negotiations for this property have been going on since last April, but that it was only yesterday before it was reported that the deal was closed.

Mount Nickel is one of the oldest of the Dormant properties in the Sudbury district. It was located in August, 1885, by James Stobie one of the first Sudbury prospectors on the south half of lot 5, concession 2, Blezard. A shaft was sunk to a depth of 175 feet by an organization known as the Great Lakes Company, and some drifting was done on the 75-foot level. An ore shoot was opened up, which disclosed considerable tonnage of ore.

Developments led to the erection of a small smelter, which was designed to make high grade matte without preliminary roasting. Owing to the failure of the smelting enterprise the mine wase abandoned in 1901.

COMMENT ON THE MARKET

A Special Service to The Examiner.

Large August Business For Canada.

Ottawa.—Business operations in Canada were more active in August than in the preceding month, according to indexes maintained by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. Most manufacturing lines were at a high level, automobile production, after seasonal adjustment, exceeding all previous records. The receipts of cattle at the stock yards were heavy in the early part of the month. Grain receipts at intermediate markets after seasonal adjustment were less than in the preceding month. The output of newsprint was larger than in July, while the exports of planks and boards indicated that the lumber industry was less active. Metal mining, judged by the exports and mint receipts, showed moderate recession, while coal was produced in greater volume. The award of new construction contracts was moderately greater than in July, though building permits showed a decline. Commodity distribution was in lesser volume as indicated by the number of employees engaged in wholesale and retail trade. Revenue carloadings show ed considerable increase.

During the latter part of August a stronger tone deevloped on the stock exchanges and a moderate advance occurred. The banks strengthened their liquid position by reducing current loans and call loans in Canada. Demand deposits were lower at the first of August and notice deposits showed a slight increase after the considerable decline of the preceding month. High-grade bonds averaged lower in August, indicating higher interest rates.

Lower grain prices were counterbalanced in part by the advance in animal products, the net result being a further slight decline in the index of wholesale prices.

The production of field crops in Canada during the present season promises to be the largest in the history of the Dominion. The official crop report, based on conditions existing at the end of August, places the output of wheat at more than 550,000,000 bushels, which is much in excess of any previous harvest. Of the fifteen field crops included in the report, only two or three show recession from the production of last year. The increase in oats was 36,000,000 bushels; in barley 48,000,000 bushels, and in rye, 2,000,000 bushels.

The information available, throwing light on the output of manufacturing establishments, indicates that, on the whole, production was greater in August than the preceding month. The resumption of operations by a large mill contributed to the important increase in the output of newsprint. The production of steel in lots and castings was increased volume, being maintained at a high level for the season. The output of motor cars was greater than in any other month. The imports of raw cotton were at a lower level than in July, while imports of raw wool, on the other hand, showed an increase.

Walker-Gooderham & Worts.

Directors of Hiram Walker-Gooderham and Worts met in the latter part of last week and will meet again in the current month to decide on the date for the annual general meeting of the shareholders to be held early in November. It is understood the board had before them the operating results for the fiscal year and that the figures compared more than favorably with other years. Various estimates of from $7 to $12 a share are heard on the street in well-informed circles, profit per share is said to be better than $7 and not near the top figure of $12. This company does not publish a balance-sheet, but the figures are presented to the meeting, and when this is done the actual earnings per share will be known, and not before.

Hinde and Dauche on Big Board.

The 299,933 outstanding no par value common shares of Hinde and Dauche Paper Company of Canada, Limited, have been listed on the Toronto Stock Exchange are to be transferred from the curb to the big board. This company ranks as the largest manufacturers in Canada of fibre shipping boxes and corrugated paper products, and is also the largest producer in the Dominion of straw paper for corrugating purposes. Last November a plant was constructed at Trenton and at the present time Hinde and Dauche have under contemplation additions to the Toronto plant and the erection of a new building in the vicinity of Winnipeg to serve the western territory.

Stock Prices Break But Recover Losses

NEW YORK, October 3 (Canadian Press).—The stock market broke sharply to-day on selling inspired by an unexpectedly large increase in stock exchange member loans and then made an irregular recovery as pool operations here were resumed in a number of specialties.

Call money renewed unchanged at eight per cent. and then dropped to 7½ as the return flow of October 1 disbursements reached substantial proportions. Time money was slightly easier.

Montmorency Ward, Curtiss, Wright, Commercial Solvents, Timkin, Dupont and Radio were hammered down five to six and a half points before they met effective buying support. Scores of other popular industrials and rails dipped two to four points.

Mine Prices Higher In Active Trading

TORONTO, Oct. 3.— (Canadian Press)—Prices on the Standard Mining Exchange reached higher levels to-day and trading was active. Amulet was stronger, advancing seven to $3.07, and Abana was weaker, dropping 24 to $4.44, these being the leaders. Hollinger touched $7.05 and closed at $7.20 with a net loss of forty and Noranda at $46.30 was down $1.25. Sherritt-Gordon was also weaker, closing at $6.30, down 15. Mandy sold up to $1.90 and closed at $1.86 with a net gain of four.

MACDONALD WARNS AGAINST ALLIANCE

Not Good For Either France Or England, He Says.

LONDON, Eng., Oct. 3. — (By Henry Sommerville, Special Cable.)—At the Labor conference yesterday Ramsay MacDonald made an important speech saying: "We must orient our diplomatic view. I say that without enmity to France. It is not good for France or for us that we should re-establish any sort of alliance.'

France is bound to take notice of this declaration on British policy from the leader of the Opposition. The country has not yet any clear knowledge as to whether the present government is re-establishing an alliance with France, but unpublished agreements as to armaments on land and sea seem to imply a new entente. Ramsay MacDonald promises to drag a declaration from the Government when Parliament meets next month. There are reports that the French Government will publish all correspondence on the naval side of the agreement. The understanding as to land forces is said to have been expressed only verbally.

RETURNS TO LONDON.

Boy Who Planned Insurance Hoax Freed By Police.

ROCHESTER, Oct. 3 (Canadian Press).—Robert Dallard, of London, Ontario, who told the police of a plot to enable his parents to collect insurance on his life, was released by the authorities to-day and soon after returned to London with his mother, with the authorities watching his movements.

ALL SQUARE.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 3 (Canadian Press).—Gene Sarazen and Jim Barnes were all square at the halfway mark in their 36-hole feature match of the professional golf tournament to-day. Sarazen came from behind to take a brief lead in the second nine but Barnes evened it up at the 18th hole.

GLADYS RENOUF RECITAL

A decided acquisition to Peterborough's musical circles was introduced to a large audience in the Conservatory of Music Hall last evening when Miss Gladys Renouf, new member of the Conservatory staff, scored a brilliant success in a pianoforte recital that embraced a striking and exacting program. Assisting were Mrs. Dorothy Allan Park, who sang two groups of widely differing songs with her usual artistry, and Mrs. Agnes Logan Green, accompaniste, and these artists were responsible for two hours of altogether delightful music.

Miss Renouf's performance justified all the good things that have been heard about her. Her playing combined mastery of technique with a beautiful tone, sureness of touch, and an evident breadth of understanding that revealed the newcomer to the Conservatory staff as a pianist of enviable powers, whose appearance on other concert programs will be eagerly awaited.

Her first number left no doubt as to the sterling nature of her musicianship, for it was that seldom heard sonata of Beethoven's, "The Appasionata," a long, intricate and difficult, albeit beautiful and impressive work that demands of the artist the utmost correctness of technique. This big number, the length of which was entirely discounted by its never failing beauty and novelty, was brilliantly played by Miss Renouf, whose interpretation, especially of the second movement, and the spontaneous joyousness of the finale indicated her entire appreciation of the spirit of the sonata. That one number stamped the pianist as an artist of outstanding ability and Miss Renouf gave further evidence of her powers as the program developed.

Her Chopin group, especially the delicately beautiful nocturne with which it opened, added to her laurels by its evident appeal to the audience and by the art with which the pianist interpreted the beauty of the three numbers.

Other offerings by Miss Renouf that scored heavily were two MacDowell selections, 'March Winds,' a number that is almost fully explained by its name, and most effectively played, and 'Czardas,' the fire and dash of which were well exploited by Miss Renouf. Her Liszt Polonaise in E major, the concluding number on the program, was a fitting finale to a remarkable performance, while the Mendelssohn-Liszt offering, 'On Wings of Song,' was another gem.

Encore numbers, demanded by the applause of the audience were a delightful little waltz by Levinsky and the Chopin Prelude in G.

Mrs. Dorothy Allan Park, heard all too seldom in concert numbers in Peterborough, was at the top of her form in the two groups of songs she offered last night, her numbers revealing her rich vocal gifts and unusual versatility. Mrs. Park adds to a voice of smooth beauty a dramatic instinct and histrionic powers that make her every number a delight and her well-chosen program last evening showed her at her best, her offerings covering a wide field of vocal effort. Perhaps her greatest achievement on this occasion was her flawless rendition of Schubert's immortal "Ave Maria," in which the singer scored a triumph, but scarcely less notable was her finished singing of Kurt Schindler's arrangement of the traditional Jewish lament, "Elli, Elli," a remarkable effort by Mrs. Park.

In a quite different vein was the lilting Purcell song, "Hark the Echoing Air a Triumph Sings," which the singer interpreted with a happy understanding of its brightness and again, far away from these numbers was the "The Tryst" by Sibelius, which was sung with great effect. The always popular old English song, "Drink To Me Only With Thine Eyes," the simple melody of which asks for correctness of intonation, and the merry "Hatfield Bells," were encore numbers quite in keeping with the standard set by Mrs. Park in her programmed offerings.

Mrs. Agnes Logan Green was a sympathetic and most effective accompanist, her work at the piano being a notable contribution to the success of a most enjoyable occasion.

Mr. Rupert Gliddon, director of the Conservatory, in introducing the artists, welcomed Miss Renouf to Peterborough and paid a tribute to the achievement of Mrs. Park in Toronto and elsewhere.

AIR MAIL PLANE IS FORCED DOWN

ACCIDENT AT COBOURG.

TORONTO, Oct. 3.—The new air mail service between Toronto and Montreal inaugurated on Monday had its first mishap yesterday afternoon, when a plane bound for this city was forced down near Cobourg.

After investigation the pilot found he could not preceed, and he had a passing motorist communicate with the Postmaster at Cobourg, to whom the 800 pounds of mail was delivered for transport to this city by the regular mail train on the Canadian National Railways reaching here at 6 o'clock this morning.

Delivery was made by the regular carriers on their first round of the business district, and in fact to all parts of the city.

When word was received here that the plane had been forced down owing to engine trouble, arrangements were made with the Postmaster at Cobourg to have the mail sent on here. Postoffice Inspector Hartley left for Cobourg by the first train to superintend the shipment of the mail to this city.

There are mail clerks on the train arriving here at 6 o'clock, and the air mail was all sorted and ready for delivery on it sarrival here.

According to the message received by the postal officials, the pilot was uninjured.

COMMISSION FINDS REAL AGREEMENT

Unity Exists Between Various Sections of Church of England.

LONDON, Eng., Oct. 3.—(Canadian Press).— An encouraging report on church unity was issued today by the Archbishop's doctrinal commission of the church of England which met recently under the Right Rev. William Temple, Bishop of Manchester and Archbishop-elect of York. Real agreement was found to underlie the various modes of expression traditional in various schools of thought in the church of England the Commission reported, and it was encouraged in the hope that given time for full discussion it may assist the movement toward unity in the church.

Wanted To Be Late For His Own Funeral

LONDON, Oct. 4.—(Canadian Press).—A request that he be made ten minutes late for his funeral was contained in the will of Percy Thomas Goodban, of London, who died recently leaving an estate of nearly $1,000,000. His wish was, however, not carried out.

"As I have always had the reputation of being late for my appointments," the will read, "my joy will be to be late at my funeral; may it long be postponed—and I hope my friends will enjoy the joke. Make me ten minutes late."

BISHOPS BEGIN GREAT CONGRESS

Thirty-seven Heads of Dioceses Assemble at Quebec To-day.

Quebec, Que., Oct. 3.—(Canadian Press.—Some of the highest dignitaries of the Roman Catholic church in Canada gathered here in the Basilica today for the religious ceremony which opened the great convention of Archbishops and Bishops. The ceremony was simple in itself but impressive through the presence of many Prelates, thirty seven heads of dioceses throughout Canada and Newfoundland attending. His Eminence Cardinal Rouleau occupied his throne and the Apostolic delegate, Monsignor Cassulo, sat on a second throne.

BISHOP PREDICTS BREACH IN CHURCH

Says Intolerance of Italian Curia Resented By Many Catholics.

LONDON, Oct. 3 (Special Cable by Henry Somerville, Copyright) Church Congress speakers are usually scrupulously unprovocative in their references to other Christian bodies, but the Bishop of Gloucester in his presidential address yesterday, made an attack on the Pope. The Bishop's anger has been roused because, while other denominations had sent their representatives to a congress and were willing to discuss the question of re-union, the Roman Catholic Church was absolutely uncompromising.

The Bishop said: "We know there are many members of the Roman Catholic Church in all countries who are dissatisfied with the tyranny of the Italian Curia, resent the intolerant attitude that it adopts toward modern thought and believe that in the Church of Rome there are movements of thought which even its discipline will not be able to restrain."

LOCAL OFFICERS LOSE IN LINDSAY

Second Game of Series Results in Victory For Home Team.

The local garrison officers softball team visited Lindsay last night and played a friendly game of ball with the officers of the Victoria and Haliburton regiment. In a very close game the local militia lost 12 runs to 11. It was the return game last night as the Lindsay officers won here a week ago by a large score. Those who made the trip were Lt. Col. Hall, Major Dodds, Major Winterbottom, Major Park, Captain Nicholls, Captain Monkman, Lieut. Newman, Lieut. Park, Lieut. Hall, Lieut. Langford, Lieut Dunkerley and Lieut. Melton.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall

Last autumn a number of women I know took their coats of the previous season to the tailors and had the fur carefully removed from the hem, and some of them had the flares removed to conform to the straighter lines. And this season—if the old coat is still on hand—they may wish that they hadn't, because fur borders are decidedly smart and fashion again turns with approval to coats that flare.

Lavish certainly is the word for the new use of fur on cloth coats. Jane Regny has a flare-from-the-shoulder coat with a band of fox fur over a foot wide all around the hem and cuffs as big as muffs. This coat is of velvet or velveteen and is made just short enough to show two or three inches of the velvet frock beneath. Often the fur border is, as it were, broken, marking merely the edge of the circular godet at the sides of the coat. Often there are what appear to be flounces with a circular edge which is outlined lavishly with fur. Various sorts of fox furs are used for these wide bandings and sometimes flatter furs such as Persian lamb, beaver or squirrel.

With these new fur-trimmed cloth coats there is no association of economy. That is, one would hardly choose a coat so lavishly trimmed with fur instead of an all fur merely because it was less expensive, because as a matter of fact such coats are anything but inexpensive. With the new wide cuffs—each as big as a muff—enormous shawl collars and wide flaring fur border almost as much fur is used as would be needed for an all-fur coat.

One objection that was made to fuller coats a season or so ago was, I think, that they detracted from the slender, girlish line so desirable. But these new fur-bordered coats impart a slender grace that rivals that produced by any straight-line model.

SILVER WEDDING IS CELEBRATED

Mr. and Mrs. J. Gordon Mann Receive Many Gifts.

BRIDGENORTH, October 3. — Mr. and Mrs. J. Gordon Mann, of Pinecrest Farm, Smith, celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding on Saturday, September 29. Mr. and Mrs. Mann were married in Peterborough by the late Rev. J. Bastow, then pastor of the Murray St. Baptist Church. A unique feature of this celebration was that all the members of the bride's and bridegroom's families who were present at the marriage ceremony were present at the silver wedding anniversary with the exception of Mrs. Mann's mother, the late Mrs. Jackson and Mr. Mann's father, the late T. R. Mann, and Mr. Mann's sister, Mrs. L. D. Palmer, who now resides at Shedden, who was unable to attend. The house was beautifully decorated in pink and white crepe paper and a profusion of pink and white dahlias and asters. The table was very prettily decorated with pink and silver crepe paper and pink lighted candles in silver candle holders, and was centered with a three-storey wedding cake.

Rev. Mr. Edgar, of Gilmour Memorial Church, gave an address congratulating the couple and wishing them many years of happiness. Short speeches were made by several of the guests.

The bride and bridegroom of twenty-five years received many beautiful and useful gifts, among which was a lovely wrist watch, the gift of the bridegroom, and a beautiful silver tea service and tray from Mr. Mann's mother, sisters, and brothers, accompanied by a suitable address.

Dear Laura and Gordon,

Those present at the gathering were as follows:

Mrs. T. R. Mann, Mr. Fred Mann, Mrs. S. L. Hammond and Miss Eunice, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph R. Mann, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Manning, Peterborough, Mr. and Mrs. A. I. Edminson and son John, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Moore and Miss Phyllis, Mr and Mrs. J. A. McGregor and Miss Lillian, Mr. and Mrs. Evans Storey and Miss Marion, East Emily, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Jackson, East Emily, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Mann, Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Fowler, Rev. W. Edgar, Mr. Earl Mann, River Rouge, Mich., Miss Margaret Mann, and Mrs. Clarence Mann.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

By MARION

AN INTERESTING conversion from a kitchen into a cosy living-room where all the family may take their meals has been accomplished not far from Peterborough, without removing any of the built-in cupboards, old-fashioned kitchen range or papering, that was suitable only to the room where all food was prepared and cooked.

• • • • • •

The kitchen range presented the chief difficulty. Economy dictated to a great extent the choice and manner in which decorations were to be carried out, and it was found that the removal of the kitchen range and substitution of an open fireplace, entailed too much expense, and so a new plan had to be thought of. Finally the range itself was left intact, built up into the wall with a covering of asbestos sheeting—which was colored to match the rest of the room. To break up the fall expanse thus created, a small mantelpiece was superimposed composed of a simple piece of stained molding. In front of this was placed a gas fire, space for the flue having been left in the structure.

• • • • • • •

An old dresser was then cut in half. The upper portion, stained a dark oak, was placed along the wall in another part of the room and used as a bookshelf; the lower half was also stained a dark oak and left where it was, covered with an artistic colored runner, and used as a sideboard where fruit dishes and glass could stand when wanted. The deep drawers beneath formed a most useful receptacle for holding table linen and silver table accessories.

• • • • • • •

The question of repapering received careful consideration. Finally it was decided to leave the old paper and distemper over it with a new daffodil-yellow. The effect was instantly successful. Warm curtains with a border of applique cretonne flowers—pink and yellow tulips—completed the coziness of this charming little living-room.

• • • • • • •

The following method has been given for taking the creases from velvet. This will prove very useful just now when velvet is being worn—probably my correspondent had the same thing in mind when she sent it in. Hold next to the wrong side of the creased area a cloth wrung dry as can be from hot water. Have the iron propped on two bricks or some similar support, so the hot surface is uppermost, and draw the damp cloth back and forth across it a few times. This steams the velvet, forcing apart the tiny threads that form the pile. When the wet cloth is dry, remove it and apply the wrong side of the velvet to the iron in the same manner until the cloth is dry. If the pile needs to be raised, brush it lightly with a soft clothes brush, the way of the nap, while the cloth is steaming.

• • • • • • •

In pressing velvet as described, care must be taken to hold the material tight so as to keep it perfectly smooth over the iron. To avoid marking with the finger nails, hold the goods double in the hands, so pile touches pile.

• • • • • • •

Place a board above the sink or work table and hang hooks on it to store the utensils used every day, as can-opener, bread and paring knives, scissors, slotted mixing spoons, measuring cups and spoons, and see how many steps are saved in a day.

• • • • • • •

The newest compacts—have you seen them? Of course they have nothing to do with powdering the nose. In fact, there is nothing cosmetic about them. They are sets of glass, pottery or enamel conainers to be used in the refrigerator.

• • • • • • •

They are given the name "compact" because they are made with straight sides, sometimes designed to be set one on top of the other. With a complete supply of such compacts it is possible to get twice as much in the refrigerator as with the miscellaneous set of spreading bowls, shallow trays and paper boxes.

• • • • • • •

A compact set consists of two oblong containers that fit one on top of the other and two smaller dishes which when placed across the top container fit precisely, providing a cover and room for two more dishes of food.

• • • • • • •

Perhaps you may not be able to afford this up-to-date sort of refrigerator equipment. If not, dishes and containers which are less expensive will answer the purpose. The one thing to remember in buying such dishes is that spreading or bulging dishes are never desirable for refrigerator use.

• • • • • • •

For storing soup, cold drinks, and other liquids, a perfectly straight jug, not too high, which will go between the shelves of the refrigerator is excellent.

• • • • • • •

Two or three straight-sides butter dishes—large enough to contain a pound of butter—would be a good investment. These are useful for holding small amounts of meat, cheese or other foods that should be kept well covered.

• • • • • • •

Before putting food which is wrapped in paper in the refrigerator, remove the paper in which it is bought. Paper is a non-conductor of heat. It tends to keep the heat in and thus the process of chilling is slower than it would be in a glass or enamel dish.

• • • • • • •

Paper, too, gets damp and soggy, and of course it has been handled and exposed to dust and is really not fit to put in your refrigerator in any case.

• • • • • • •

Have you sent in the coupon for this week's help? It consists of instructions for making French drawers for little girls and an easily made baby jacket. Enclose a two-cent stamp and they will be sent by return mail.

DAISY'S JOB

As private secretary to the managing editor of the magazine, Daisy Jones was the go-between that invariably appeared between that important personage and aspirants to literary honors.

Harold Rogers when he called with a brief case of manuscript at the editorial office was not to be sidetracked by Daisy Jones's interested smile or sympathetic eyes. Harold had sold books one summer as part of his scheme for putting himself through college and he was immune to all of Daisy's tricks and excuses.

"I want to see Mr. Stockbridge—I'm going to see him somehow," he said doggedly.

"But Mr. Stockbridge expects me to attend to callers with whom he is not personally acquainted. If you have manuscript I'll be very glad to take it and have it carefully read by one of the assistant editors."

"Yes, but this manuscript has already gone through the hands of your editorial readers, and it has come back with a rejection slip. It is the work of an old friend of min —Alden Bangs. I undertook to place it for him. He is especially eager to get you people to take it. I know your readers weren't impressed by it, but I also know that a man like Mr. Stockbridge might sometimes come to a different decision from that of his assistants. I happen to have heard how he took the first story from John Brandige. His readers turned it down."

"Of course, John Brandige was different," assured Daisy. "Mr. Stockbridge's sympathy was aroused. Mr. Brandige, you know, is blind."

"There may be just as good reason why this friend of mine should be encouraged as John Brandige. The fact is—the fact is he broke his neck once when he was trying—trying to save a girl from drowning. He has to support an invalid mother and a tongue-tied sister—"

"Tongue-tied?" queried Daisy.

"Yes; tongue-tied—that's what I said, isn't it? You see she studied to be a singer and then she became tongue-tied so she can't help support the family. Really it is a very sad case, quite as sad as that of John Brandige."

"That is pathetic," said Daisy, sympathetic concern written on her vivacious face. "I'll tell Mr. Stockbridge about it. Just leave the manuscript and I'll see what I can do."

Mr. Stockbridge was not in a very amiable mood nor a sympathetic one, and Daisy did not feel that it was an auspicious time to present the sad case of the broken-necked author and his tongue-tied sister. But she could not bear to disappoint them. So she read the manuscript very carefully herself.

She pondered long over the story and then in a letter she wrote she brought to bear all the literary criticism she had learned from her long association with Mr. Stockbridge. A second manuscript followed after two weeks. This showed, as Daisy thought, enormous improvement. So she wrote another letter as full of tactful encouragement as it was of unsparing criticism.

In a month and a day the third manuscript from Alden Bangs arrived and with it a brief hand-written letter expressing the deep gratitude of the writer for the sympathetic interest that Miss Jones had taken.

One quick reading gave Daisy courage; she knew that she had a really great story in her hands. She did not hesitate to take it to Stockbridge. Stockbridge was enthusiastic—more enthusiastic than Daisy had ever seen him before.

"Send for the author," bawled Stockbridge.

"But I'm afraid he can't come," said Daisy sadly. "He's a bedridden invalid."

"The devil," stormed Stockbridge. He mused for a moment. "Lives in Stoneton? That's 300 miles away. I say, Miss Jones, go home early this afternoon and to-morrow start out bright and early for Stoneton. Have a talk with this fellow. Look over whatever other manuscript he has on hand. Find out what stories he's got simmering in his head. Size up the situation. We want to get a contract with him for a smashing big serial."

The next evening Daisy Jones was ushered into the old-fashioned drawing-room of the old-fashioned house of the Bangses in Stoneton. She was kept waiting for a few minutes and then a stalwart young man of thirty came into the room.

"Miss Daisy Jones!" he exclaimed, seizing her hand.

"You are not Alden Bangs?" gasped Daisy. "You didn't write that story—you—why—I thought you had a broken neck and a tongue-tied sister."

"Mr. Stockbridge sent me to see you because we thought you were an invalid—that you broke your neck to save a girl from drowning—"

"That villain Rogers," Alden Bangs said, laughing heartily. "You see I had an idea that I could write a little. Harold Rogers is a born salesman. He is my best friend, too, and more eager for me to succeed than I am myself, and—well, I guess he thought if he told a hard luck story you'd be more interested."

Six months later when the first instalment of Alden Bangs's great serial had appeared the newspapers reported the quiet wedding of the much-talked-about young writer to Daisy Jones—and Harold Rogers was the best man.

PUBLIC SMOKING BY WOMEN RARE

SUDBURY, Ont., Oct. 3.— (Canadian Press.)—"Thank goodness, they don't smoke in public." With this Journalistic head-line the Star renews some facts gleaned in interviewing tobacco dealers of this town. "The fair sex constitute nearly one-fourth of the cigarette smoking population of Sudbury and the number is steadily increasing," says the Star. "The increase is not confined to any one class or age, but is general among all the women. That in most cases it is not merely an affectation is indicated by the fact that while ther is, from month to month, an increase in the feminine consumption of the weed, the use of cigarettes by women in public is still a comparatively rare sight in Sudbury. And may it remain so!"

"I don't know the exact numbers every day, but it is very large," stated one dealer. "It is so common now that we hardly notice whether the customer is a man or a woman. Most of them were rather self-conscious when buying smokes a few years ago, but that is unusual now. And they have decided preferences and know what they want."

"Between 20 and 30 per cent. of our customers are women to-day," stated another dealer. "Some of them are heavier smokers than the average man."

A prominent woman of the city said: "I do not smoke in public, even at women's functions, where other women are smoking. Perhaps I lack the courage of my convictions, because I don't think anyone has the right to criticize a woman for smoking. But in my case the comment might reflect itself on some of the work in which I am engaged, and so I take the easier course and only indulge in private."

"Smoking by women in public places, such as dances, is so rare as to be almost negligible," stated another socially prominent woman. "However, at many bridges that I have attended fully one-third of those present smoked. Of course, many of these only took cigarettes because they were offered to them. But many of the women were smoking simply because they wanted to.

"Lots of the girls smoke," said one, who disapproved. "Thtey don't think anything about it. Many of their parents know nothing about it and they certainly don't bother to tell them. Several times I have been at gatherings with my husband when most of the girls present were smoking and they didn't try to hide the fact. What could we do? If I tried to stop them they would think I was foolish."

TOM ARMOUR IS ELIMINATED

Star Golfers Battle Through First Round of Championship Play.

FOR NATIONAL HONORS.

BALTIMORE, Md., October 3 (Associated Press). — Tommy Armour was eliminted by Long Jim Barnes, Gene Sarazen was forced to wage a great battle from behind to escape defeat at the hands of Wild Bill Mehlhorn, and Al Espinosa played par-equalling golf both morning and afternoon as the cream of the country's professional golfers battled through the first rounds of match play in quest of their National championship yesterday.

In striking contrast to the ding-dong battles that featured most of the 16 matches was the easy, nonchalant, almost lazy manner in which Sir Walter Hagen, titleholder for the last four years, strolled around the course winning from Willie Ogg, Worcester, Mass., by four up and three to play. After getting away to a 3 up lead in the morning 18 holes, Hagen appeared content to halve the remaining ones with the result that he picked up on additional counter in the afternoon.

Not before the third round is Hagen expected to meet any serious opposition as to-day he is bracketed with Julian Blanton, a comparative unknown from Toledo, Ohio. The newcomer served notice that he might cause some trouble, however, by taking over Eddie McElicott, of Minneapolis, by the impressive score of 9 and 8. With Blanton out of the way, Hagen's opponent on Thursday, it is believed, will be George Christ.

CANADA WANTS CHEAPER RATE

Asks Steamship Companies To Charge Immigrants Only Fourteen Pounds.

NOW COSTS EIGHTEEN.

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 2 (Special to The Examiner).—Reduced steamship rates for British emigrants to Canada will be sought at a conference to be held in London, between Canadian immigration officials and representatives of the British Government and of the steamship and railway companies.

W. J. Egan, Deputy Minister of Immigration, and Bruce Walker, Canadian Director of Immigration in London, will represent the Dominion at the conference, and will seek, it is understood, to have the steamship fare from Britain reduced from £18 to £14 (approximately $68), and to have the British Government contribute £4 of this, thereby making the net rate to the immigrant £10.

The Canadian Government contends that the present rate is abnormally high as compared with pre-war rates, and that the steamship companies could make a substantial reduction and still leave themselves a margin of profit.

Canada does not approve of any cash grant to be available for any person who cares to come to Canada. Once the immigrant comes to Canada, the Canadian authorities will do everything to assist him in getting established on the land, but the day of assisted passages is waning.

Rt. Hon. L. S. Amery and Lord Lovat have both been anxious to get the Canadian Government committed to further assistance in the way of assisted passages. Mr. Amery wanted a £2 rate for everybody. Canada vetoed this idea, foreseeing that it might encourage undesirables to come to the Dominion. As the matter stands now, Canada is spending over £4 a head on every immigrant who comes to Canada, this expenditure being incurred before the immigrant sails.

Bishop Lloyd's advocacy of a closed door for all but Britishers is unlikely to be adopted.

SUCCESS IN TREE-PLANTING.

Reports made by the tree-planting inspectors sent out by the Forest Service, Department of the Interior, during the 1927 season show 83 per cent. of the plantations in Western Canada in first-class condition, 14 per cent. in fair condition, and 3 per cent., poor. Of the stock planted in the spring of 1927, there survived 98 per cent. of the seedlings, 95 per cent. of the cuttings, and 94 per cent. of the evergreens.

HART TO REMAIN WITH CANADIENS

Withdraws Resignation at Solicitation of Club Owners.

MONTREAL, Oct. 3.—It was officially announced yesterday from the office of Dandurand, Cattarinich and Letourneau, principal owners of the Canadien Hockey Club, that at the earnest solicitations of the directors, Cecil Hart has withdrawn his resignation, and will manage the team again for the coming season.

At one time this past week it looked as if Hart would not act again, and Odie Cleghorn and "Newsy" Lalonde were, figuratively speaking, waiting in the ante-room to take the position, with Odie the favorite in the betting.

At present neither Leo Dandurand, managing director of the Canadiens, nor Manager Hart himself care to go officially into the details of the meetings, or the arguments or inducements used to withdraw the latter's resignation.

All that is announced in that respect is that the reasons which caused Hart to offer his resignation were entirely of a personal and business nature.

Regular Players Get Full Share

NEW YORK, October 3 (Associated Press).—The Yankees yesterday decided what they will do with the money they will receive for the first four games. All the regulars, including the incapacitated Wilcy Moore, Freddy Heimach, and Tom Zachary, who joined the cast in mid-season, were voted a full share, as were two coaches, Arthur Fletcher and Charlie O'Leary. "Dog" Woods, the trainer, and Mark Roth, the travelling secretary, will get three-quarter shares.

Stanley Coveleskie, a pitcher forced into retirement by a failing arm, Al Shealy, a pitcher who went away and came back, Rosy Bill Ryan, a pitcher who came in from the minors late in the season, and Harry Matthews, the bullpen catcher, will get half shares.

Marty Campbell, a pitcher who went to St. Paul after starting with the champions, and Bill Dickey, a young catcher, who was recalled from Little Rock, will be cut in for $750 each.

The ground keeper and clubhouse men were voted $1,000 apiece, with $800 to Eddie Bennet, the mascot.

Cardinals Have Defensive Edge

(By Alan J. Gould, Associated Press Sports Editor.)

NEW YORK, October 3 (Associated Press). — The somewhat general recollection is that old Pete Alexander stopped the Yankees two years ago and enabled the Cardinals to win the World Series.

The bald facts are, however, that if the Yankee defence had not cracked up in the fourth and permitted the National Leaguers to get a three-run lead, there would have been no opportunity for old Pete to pull the heroic stuff.

A good offence may be the best defence in football, but not in baseball. The home run drive, like the forward pass, is a more spectacular instrument, but it takes a flock of circuit clouts to offset a wobbly defence.

The Cardinals appear to have a slight defensive edge over the world's champion Yankees in their forthcoming battle, especially if the superior pitching array of the Red Birds is taken into account as a defensive factor. On the season's fielding averages the National Leaguers have a five-point margin, the figures showing .974 and .969.

LIKELY SHERDEL WILL PITCH IN OPENING GAME FOR CARDS

Players Believe Waite Hoyt Will Open Series On Yankee Mound.

LIGHT PRACTICE WORK.

(By Brian Bell—Associated Press Sports Writer).

NEW YORK, Oct. 3—New York and St. Louis baseball players yesterday wasted a lot of base hits they will need on and after Thursday afternoon. The world series contenders engaged in perfunctory practice, confined almost entirely to batting.

The Yankees took no infield workout and the only regular Cardinal infielders to exhibit their wares were Andy High and Rabbit Maranville. The two veterans insisted that they needed work.

Coach Charles O'Leary left the American League infield off for the day, but promised that he would hit some sizzling grounders down to them to-day.

With only one day keeping them apart from actual hostilities, there is a marked contrast in the demeanor of the players on the field. The Yankees, with every reason to feel blue over an extended hospital list, apparently are carefree. They joked as they went about their abbreviated workout. They may be whistling to keep their courage up. There was great excitement and much cheering among the players when the diminutive Leo Durocher drove a ball into the stands.

The Cardinals, on the other hand, impatient for the serious play to begin, crab at each other and the world in general.

"Our bench is over here," a star yelled to an equally famous player as he stopped to speak to a former National Leaguer now with the Yanks. The suggestion evidently was a hint against fraternizing.

There was also a bit of general wrangling, regarded as a healthy sign in ball players and fighters.

Manager Bill McKechnie continues to insist that he has not decided on the opening game pitcher, but all the players think Bill is as certain to nominate Willie Sherdel as the silent Huggins is to draw the name of Waite Hoyt out of his old brown hat.

In the Yankee practice yesterday, neither Tony Lazzeri nor Earle Combs was in uniform. Lazzeri was having a treatment for his ailing arm, but will be at second base in to-morrow's game. Combs' status was different. He will test his injured wrist to-day but the chances are that he will not be in centre field in the opener.

With both managers keeping their own counsel as to the pitching choices, speculation was unrestrained as to the likely arrangement. Only the approval of Huggins and McKechnie is needed to have Hoyt, Pipgras and Zachary start in order for the Yanks, and Sherdel, Haines and Alexander take the first turns for the Cardinals.

This paper edge for the National League champions may turn out to be even greater in actual combat if the crippled Yankee infield, every regular member of which has been a casualty, fails to function to its usual high standard. Last year the Yankees yielded to no team in the strength of its inner cordon, but this season Lazzeri, Keystone man, has been out a good share of the time and is still handicapped by a sore arm. Dugan's decline forced Huggins to alternate at third with Robertson and Gazella, but jumping Joe is slated to work in the series, when southpaws are pitching for the Cards.

The Cardinal infield, defensively, is built around the agile and brilliant Frankie Frisch, who can go back faster, lose his cap oftener and grab more pop flies than any second baseman in the game. His running mate at short, Rabbit Maranville, has weathered many a storm but he cannot compare now as a fielder with young Tommy Thevenow, who guarded short for the Cards two years ago in sensational fashion. Tommy broke a leg last year and is doing only utility duty now.

Andy High, at third, and Jim Bottomley, rangey first sacker, are about on a par with their Yankee rivals, Dugan or Robertson and Gehrig.

The Yankee outer defence will be handicapped, even if Combs' injured wrist permits him to play. Babe Ruth, with a trick knee, isn't any spryer than he was, but the big fellow still has a powerfully accurate throwing arm to give the Yankees long range protection, along with Meusel's well-known ability in his line.

The fleet Taylor Douthit in centre, flanked by Chick Hafey in left and either Harper or Holm in right, gives the Cardinals an excellent outer defence. They cover a lot of ground, more than the Yankee trio, and their throwing arms are reliable, even if not as powerful as those of Ruth and Meusel.

Behind the bat Jimmy Wilson buttresses the Cardinal defence in fine style. Level-headed and aggressive, Wilson outshines the best of the Yankee receiving staff, Bengough, as well as the others, Collins and Grabowski.

BRIGHT BINDINGS ON OLD BOOKS ATTRACT MORE READERS

Library workers have found that little-read books often become more popular when dull-colored or soiled covers are replaced with brighter bindings, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. A special cover, coated with a material similar to a chemical finish used on automobiles, has been introduced. It is waterproof, finger-marks and stains may easily be washed off, and it can be obtained in a wide variety of colors and designs.

VIEWS ON SPORTS

The annual softball banquet will be held in Empress Hotel on Wednesday night, October 10.

The Yankees and the Cardinals indulged in a little light practice work yesterday in preparation for the opening of their series on Thursday. Lazerri and Coombs were not in Yankee uniform, but the former will be at his position on second base to-morrow. It is not known yet whether he will be in on the opener or not.

The cream of America's professional golfers were put to their best to escape elimination in the first round the match play for the National championship. Tommy Armour was put out and Gene Sarazen had to put up a stiff fight in order to escape defeat.

• • • •

Walter Hagen, titleholder for the last four years, had no trouble in winning his match. He played a leisurely game all around the course, and does not expect to be put to any great exertion until the third round.

• • • • • •

Cecil Hart will manage the Les Canadiens again this season. Withdrawing his resignation at the solicitation of the Quebec club owners, he has decided to take up the reins again, but declines to give any reason for wanting to resign his position.

• • • • • •

Belanger is back to his old form. The little French-Canadian boxed a few rounds yesterday upon his return from New York and the manner in which he performed sure delighted his friends. Playfair Brown has created further interest in the flyweight bout to-night in announcing that the winner of the scrap will meet Frankie Genaro in a championship bout on October 15th. Belanger has showed some good form against Genaro on former occasions, and is confident that he can beat Gold and the titleholder.

The Yankees' management have reached a decision on how to divide the money they will receive for the first four games. All the regulars, including Moore, Heimach and Tom Zachary with the two coaches will get a full share. Others will be given three-quarters and half a share each.

COPPER CLIFF TO PLAY HERE

Clash With Raybestos To Decide Intermediate Championship of Ontario.

AT EXHIBITION GROUNDS.

Exhibition Park will be the scene of the sudden death game here Saturday between Copper Cliff and Raybestos to decide the Intermediate championship of Ontario. Jack Gillespie, who groomed the playing field for the East Peterborough League, is back on the job with the promise that everything will be in fine shape for the week-end battle. The fact that the diamond at Exhibition Park can be quickly restored after a rainfall, played a big part in the Rays' decision. The club is grateful to the City Council for its offer of James Stevenson Park, as well as for favors on former occasions.

The baseball public has received the news of the announcement of the contest with enthusiasm, and indications point to a big sale of tickets, and a record attendance, which will include contingents of fans from the district.

"If they have Cloutier going in good style, it means a hard game for our team," said Manager Art Primeau last night. "Cloutier gave us plenty to worry about when C.G.E. met Orillia in 1923. He is also a dangerous batter, and the C.G.E. outfield always moved back when he was at the plate."

The contest will start at three o'clock, and it is probable that Toronto umpires will be assigned to the job.

Montreal Entry Have New Home Grounds

MONTREAL, Que., Oct. 3 (Canadian Press).—The Montreal "Big Four" football entry will play its home games at the M.A.A.A. grounds, despite the fact that fire destroyed the reserved section of the stand Saturday night. Following a meeting of M.A.A.A. directors and officials of the football club, it was announced that up-to-date portable stands would be installed in time for the opening against Toronto Argos on October 20. The temporary stand, it is understood, will seat 800 more than did the section destroyed by fire. It is planned to erect concrete stands in the spring.

Transport Unions Sub-Committee Votes Against General Tie-up.

HOPEFUL SIGN.

MELBOURNE, Oct. 3 (Canadian Press).—There will be no extension of the dock workers strike in Australia for the present, it was decided to-day by the sub-committee of the conference of maritime and transport unions which considered a motion urging such action. The sub-committee's adverse report against plans for a general hold-up of transport service is regarded as a hopeful development of the strike of the waterside workers.

ORILLIA DEMANDS NEW MAGISTRATE

Asks Attorney General To Remove Present Man For Laxity.

ORILLIA, Oct. 3.—The friction which has existed for some time between the Town Council and Police Magistrate Daniel McCaughrin was brought to a head last night when the Council, by a majority vote, passed a resolution asking the Attorney-General to remove Mr. McCaughrin from office.

Mr. McCaughrin was appointed less than year ago as successor to the late George H. Clark, who was killed in an automobile accident in Florida. Under his administration the court is said by the Council to be lacking in dignity, and it is alleged there is a laxity in the administration.

YANKEE STOCK ON DOWN GRADE

Betting Now Five To Three in Favor of Cardinal Victory.

COMBS CAN'T PLAY.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3 (Canadian Press).—It's the day before the world series but Miller Huggins would be just as satisfied if it was the day before Christmas. Baseball's world championship will have been decided by then, and Miller's burdens will have been cast aside for another year. Just now he is barely standing up under the strain of leading a squad of badly crippled New York Yankees into the world's series against a team so worthy of respect as the St. Louis Cardinals.

With the more or less definite announcement that Earl Combs, injured centre fielder, would see action only as a pinch runner if at all, the Yankee stock has dropped to a new low. The Cardinals are five to three favorites. The Yankees, at least, even if unintentionally, have an alibi prepared in advance, and as a result feel almost carefree, while St. Louis, at full strength, might not get credit even if they win and apparently realize it. The rival managers are reticent as usual, but apparently Waite Hoyt for the Yanks and Willie Sherdel for the Cards will be the pitchers for the first battle to-morrow.

Despite precautions, ticket speculators have got hold of $16.50 pasteboards for the New York games and are selling them from $50 up, mostly up. All reserved seats have gone, and a crowd of at least seventy-five thousand is expected at the opening game.

STAGED SUICIDE TO HELP PARENTS

Missing Boy Wanted Them To Collect $10,500 Life Insurance Money.

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Oct. 3.—Robert Dallard, 15, of London, Ont., yesterday told Rochester police an astonishing story of a death hoax staged so his parents could collect $10,500 insurance money. He was betrayed and traced here through an intercepted letter to his sweetheart. He is held pending arrival of Canadia nauthorities.

Dallard declared his parents were not implicated in the insurance plot. His clothing was found on the beach at Port Stanley, Ont., on September 23.

While water off the beach was being dragged for the body, young Dallard was begging rides to Niagara Falls. He said he hoped to obtain a temporary job in Rochester to earn enough to go to New York and join the U.S. Navy. He was living at the Railroad Y.W.C.A. here.

Located In Rochester

LONDON, Ont., Oct. 3—Robert Dallard, the 15-year-old boy who has been missing from his home, 419 Burbrook Place, since Sunday, Sept. 23, has been located in Rochester, N.Y., Judge Warner of the Juvenile Court announced yesterday. The lad went away without informing his parents and it was feared he had been drowned at Port Stanley.

Writes Letter.

Dallard was located in Rochester, after he had written a letter to a girl friend here, begging to be told what was said of his absence and asking for newspaper clippings referring to the event. It was learned that he deliberately planned his get-away and "planted" his bathing suit on the beach at Port Stanley to give the impression that he had been drowned. His mother has left for Rochester and he will be brought back to-night.

PROSPECTS NAMED FOR COURT VACANCY

Liberal Leader Sinclair May Get Supreme Court Judgeship.

TORONTO, Oct. 3.—With the increased demand on the Trial Judges of the Supreme Court of Ontario caused by opening of the fall term of the courts and the accumulated litigation after the long summer vacation, pressure is being brought to bear at Ottawa to name the new Judge who will fill the vacancy created by the death of Mr. Justice Mowat. The appointment is not likely to be made officially until the return to Canada of Premier Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King.

In legal circles it is generally understood that Judgeships are filled by the Premier after consultation with the Minister of Justice and the Cabinet Ministers for the Province concerned. The name of Gideon Grant, K.C., of the firm of Johnston, Grant, Dods and McDonald, is being associated with the vacant Judgeship. Other names have also been mentioned, including that of W. E. N. Sinclair, K.C., the Liberal Leader in Ontario.

SANDWICH ASKS STATUS OF CITY

Council Will Seek Separation From County To Prevent Amalgamation.

FOLLOWS FORD.

WINDSOR, Oct. 3.—What is considered a blow to the amalgamation plan recommended by J. A. Ellis, director of the Bureau of Municipal Affairs, was dealt yesterday, when the Sandwich Town Council instructed John Sale, town solicitor, to seek special legislation for separation from the county and incorporation as a city.

Move is Deliberate

Councillor Eugene Breault, former Mayor of Sandwich, who sponsored the resolution, candidly admitted that the proposal was framed with the idea of bringing out the vote against amalgamation at the municipal elections in January.

"I think the move to separate now, while we are presenting the quesiton of amalgamation to the people," Councillor Breault said, "is the right move at the right time. It will bring the issue of Sandwich as a separate city, freed from the burden of county taxes, directly face to face with the position of Sandwich as amalgamated with the other municipalities. I favor it because I am opposed to amalgamation and I believe it will bring out the vote against amalgamation."

Action Unexpected

The move of Sandwich to withdraw from the county came like a bolt from a clear sky, during general discussion of the Ellis amalgamation report. It was influenced largely by the fact that Ford City, having reached the required 15,000 population this year, will automatically withdraw from the county this fall, leaving Sandwich the largest municipality in the corporate body of the county. Two years ago the town paid $52,000 in county tates. This year the town is paying $75,000 to the county, and next year, it was predicted, the town would be paying $100,000 after the withdrawal of Ford.

CHAIN OF MEN TO SEEK MINER

Large Party Will Assist in Last Search For Missing Prospector.

NEAR GOWGANDA

COBALT, Oct. 3.—In a last effort to locate John Dick, missing Gowganda old-timer, before the hand of winter descends upon the country, it is proposed to organize a search party of such proportions that each man included in its ranks will be no farther apart from his neighbor on either hand than ten feet. This company will comb thoroughly the claim in Shining Tree which Dick was examining with Harry Jones when he disappeared on September 2. The underbrush there is very dense this year and men who have been in the section report that it is next to impossible to see more than a few feet in any direction, while the labor involved in pushing through the woods is exhaustive.

Other parties are still out in the district. One which left at the close of last week has provisions to last until the middle of the present month. In different places in the area being covered caches of food and matches have been left with notes giving instructions what to do in the event the missing man should turn up or be found by the searchers. One report from Gowganda stated that smoke had been observed rising from a distant point and inquiries are being made there.

DON'T BE A SLAVE TO INDIGESTION

Super-Acidity of the Stomach Needlessly Spoils the Eating Pleasures of Thousands

Thousands of people suffer daily for the good things they eat or else are slaves to their disordered stomachs—living on disagreeable diet, afraid to eat the things they like for fear of pain to follow. Yet good, healthy, painless digestion is easy for most folks, for nine-tenths of all stomach misery is caused by merely an excess of acid in the stomach. And a little Bisurated Magnesia, taken immediately after eating, will instantly neutralize this acid, stop food fermentation, prevent gas and sourness so that what you eat will digest just as nature intended it should. You can enjoy your next meal—and every meal—if you will get from the nearest drug store a package of Bisurated Magnesia—either tablets or powder. Give it a real trial and you may soon be eating hearty meals of those foods which now disagree with you, without the slightest fear of stomach trouble.

Citizens Pay Back Border Town Charity Money Spent Last Winter

WINDSOR, Oct. 2—Mrs. Estella Gelinas, Ford City social worker, is receiving payments at the rate of about $75 a week from people, mainly of foreign extraction, to whom the whole town was obliged to give charity last Winter, when most of the automobile factories, including the huge plant of the Ford Motor Company, were shut down.

Mrs. Gelinas says that these payments range in size from $1, which is being paid from the meagre earnings of a woman who is doing part-time work as a housekeeper, to $30, which is being paid regularly by a Czecho-Slovakian woman. It represents half of the earnings of her husband, the other half being reserved for the living of a family of six.

Many families have already paid in full the amounts that were given them when unemployment drove them to the town hall and to seek charity, and about a third of all the debts should be paid back within another year.

Nearly all of the $18,000 spent during the unemployment period suffered in Ford City in relief, was paid to new Canadian families—Russian, Armenian, Czecho-Slovakian, Hungarian, Siberian—almost every nationality but native Canadian, and during the early part of last Winter, most of these people were desperate, moving into shanties to save rent, and enduring all sorts of privations before going to the town hall for relief.

At present the Ford social service is helping a few families, but only about $35 a week is necessary to cover the town's charity bill.

REPORTS TO BOARD OF EDUCATION

Advisory Vocational Committee.

The Advisory Vocational Committee reported as follows:

Regarding the matter of the recommendation of the Board that Mr. Kenner, Principal of the Combination School, receive a straight salary of $5,000.00, dating from 1st September, your committee, after further consideration, cannot see their way clear to change their former recommendation and further recommend that the matter be reconsidered at the end of the present school year, June 30th next. (This was amended by the Board).

That Miss M. A. O'Connell be appointed to the staff of the Commercial Department in the Vocational School at an initial salary of $2,000.00, increasing $100.00 annually to a maximum of $2,500.00.

That a suitable adjustment be made of Miss Kendall's salary dating from 1st September, in view of the fact that Miss Gerrard was appointed at an initial salary greater than the salary which Miss Kendall is entitled to under the schedule.

The Advisory Vocational Committee recommended that W. P. Augustine be appointed to the Vocational School as a temporary teacher of drafting at a salary of $200.00 per month, and duties to commence 3rd October.

Committee on Appointments

The committee on appointments reported:

As authorized, we have appointed Miss Jessie H. Deyell to the Public School Staff as school nurse, at an initial salary of $1,200.00, with an annual increase of $100.00 to a maximum of $1,500.00, duties to commence 17th September.

Your committee recommend that the recommendation of the Vocational Committee, that Miss M. A. O'Connell be appointed to the staff of the Commercial Department in the Vocational School at an initial salary of $2,000.00 increasing $100.00 annually to a maximum of $2,500.00, be adopted.

Your committee also recommend that the salary of Miss S. M. Kendall, household science instructor, be at the rate of $2,300.00, dating from 1st September, and with increase according to schedule.

NEW FUEL TESTING STATION.

A new fuel testing station is being erected at Ottawa for the Department of Mines. It will be equipped with large scale apparatus for washing, briquetting and carbonising coals for boiler tests, powdered fuel tests, and for retorting shales and refining oils. This will furnish facilities for a much more complete study of Canadian fuels than has hitherto been possible.

AT THE CAPITOL.

PAT RAFFERTY LEADING COMEDIAN OF THE DUMBELLS CO. COMING TO THE CAPITOL THURSDAY, FRIDAY AND SATURDAY—COLLEEN MOORE IN "HAPPINESS AHEAD" ON THE SCREEN.

As an extra special treat for Capitol patrons on Thursday Friday and Saturday of this week, Manager Stewart has made arrangements for the personal appearance of Pat Rafferty for the past nine years leading comedian with The Dumbells Co. Pat needs no introduction to Peterborough theatregoers, having appeared at the Grand twice annually in the last decade, and is well known to all. Mr. Rafferty will be seen in new as well as some of his old successes.

"Happiness Ahead," Colleen Moore's new picture, which opens at the Capitol Theatre to-morrow is the twenty-first production she has made for First National Pictures. Miss Moore first appeared on the screen as a First National actress in "Dinty," which was followed soon after by the biggest success of her early pictures, "Flaming Youth." During the twenty-one pictures she has been starred in comedy-dramas, romances, and costume pictures, proving herself versatile in the extreme

AT THE REGENT.

Picture Plays to Packed Houses

Testifying to the enormous popularity of "The Harvester" Gene Stratton-Porter's famous novel which is now being shown in motion picture form at the Regent Theatre, it is announced by the publishers that six million people have read the book, and the engagement which ends tonight has been featured by crowded houses.

While readers of the book have been under the necessity of vitualizing the locale of "The Harvester" those who see the film version have the opportunity of seeing the incidents of the story actually transpire at the Limberlost Cabin and its surrounding state, since a company of 40 people was sent from Hollywood to the Porter property in Indiana for the purpose of filming the scenes.

Leo Meehan directed the picture, and the cast includes many such favorite screen players as Orville Caldwell, Natalie Kingston, Will Walling, Jay Hunt, Lola Todd, Edward Hearn and Fanny Midgley, as well as Bellchamer, a beautiful English setter.

Regent, Thursday, Friday and Saturday—"Valley of the Giants" Brings Star in Rugged Drama of the Redwoods.

Milton Sills, who has given some of the finest characterizations in the history of the motion picture, has one of his greatest roles in "The Valley of the Giants" which comes to the Regent Theatre Thursday.

Sills' portrayal of Bryce Cardigan son of the pioneer lumber magnate in the picturization of Peter B. Kyne's great romance of the Big Trees, is one that stamps him as a consummate artist, and one that will long be remembered.

"The Valley of the Giants" is a story set among the redwoods of California, with the colorful lumber industry as a background. In this environment Sills is perfectly at home, and his interpretation of Kyne's hero leaves nothing to be desired.

Paul Hurst is seen in the role of Randeau, the half-breed lumberboss. Arthur Stone plays Buck, Cardigan's buddy, with his usual comedy touches. Yola d'Avril plays the maid. Charles Sellon is Pennington, the rival magnate, George Fawcett plays the father and Phil Brady is Big Boy.

With this excellent cast, all the roles in "The Valley of the Giants" are well handled, and Sills is given excellent support.

The picture was directed by Charles Brabin and produced by Wid Gunning for First National release. It provides keen entertainment, thrills, suspense and has a beautiful romance.

"The Valley of the Giants" is superb entertainment, and adds another great role to the list of Milton Sills' successes on the screen.

OSHAWA CONSIDERS SEWAGE DISPOSAL

Plant To Serve 50,000 Would Cost $534,000, Engineers Report.

OSHAWA, October 3. — Preliminary plans for a sewage disposal plant in Oshawa, that would cost $534,000, were submitted by Gore, Nasmith & Storrie, consulting engineers, in conjunction with Cinty Engineer W. C. Smith, to the Oshawa City Council last night. The Council will consider the plans in a special meeting committee as a whole next week. The projected plant is recommended to be constructed on the city farm property near hte lake front. The plant proposed would be to provide for a population of 50,000, double Oshawa's present figure. The Provincial Department of Health has ordered the city to construct the sewage disposal plant, and in a recent letter to the Council asked that plans be completed this fall so that work could commence early next spring.

ZOGU'S KINGDOM IS UP IN ARMS

Many Albanians Refuse To Acknowledge New Ruler.

ANARCHY RESULTS.

VIENNA, Oct. 3.— (Canadian Press.)—King Zogu, recently elected Moparch of the Albanians, is closely guarded in his palace at Tirana, while trusted Albanian and Italian police agents are trying to round up plotters against the new regime, say uncensored despatches which have just leaked over the border of the mountain kingdom.

The despatches describe the country as being in a state of alarm, which in some places approaces terror. They state that 11 persons were executed on Sunday at Durazzo, and that 200 others were arrested there at the command of Zogu himself. The executions are said to have taken place in the market place of the dilapidated seaport, which is only 25 miles west of the Capital.

The movement against the Throne is reported to be widespread. The fact that it has reached Durazzo is taken as confirmation of this, because the entire situation is said to be an outgrowth of an uprising which started a few weeks ago in the mountains of Northern Albania.

Chiefs Declare Feud.

Revolt had its birth in the murder of one of the most conspicuous of the mountain chieftains, who was found dead in bed. His followers attributed the assassination to men hired by the new King, and they declared a blood feud against the Monarch.

A full regiment was sent into the mountains, but reports have it that two divisions of troops have now been mobilized because a majority of the Northern Albanians refuse to accept Zogu as King.

Most of the northerners are Roman Catholic Christians, while Zogu is a Mohammedan. Thus far nothing has come through to indicate that the Greek Orthodox Christians in Southern Albania have a mind to join their co-religionists of the North, but some observers here are predicting the possibility of rebellious outbreaks in that region also.

Italian Police Busy.

The despatches assert that Tirana and other centres are swarming with Italian and Albanian secret police, and that arrests are numerous.

King Zogu, it is stated, is virtually barricaded in the old Presidential palace, which contains so many machine guns, rifles and other weapons that it resembles an arsenal. He ventures out only when accompanied by trusted Albanian and Italian bodyguards. It is stated that he has screened himself entirely from public view since the day he was proclaimed King by the National Assembly, because of fear of assassination.

Because of the turbulent condition of the country and the widespread ramifications of the newest plot, it is stated that the coronation of King Zogu probably will be postponed indefinitely.

Foreign correspondents are forced by a strict censorship to send out despatches by indirect and devious routes.

AIMEE HIDING IN ENGLAND?

Secretary Refuses To Comment On Story That Evangelist Has Landed.

MUCH PUBLICITY.

(By Henry Somerville, Special Cable, Copyright.)

LONDON, Oct. 3.— London newspapers to-day say Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson, Los Angeles evangelist, had landed at Harwich on Friday, and is hiding in England. Her secretary, whom I interviewed, said he neither would confirm nor deny the rumor as he had been instructed by Mrs. McPherson to give no information to the press until Friday.

Aimee, he stated, had been pestered by reporters in Paris, and she required a few days rest before making a public appearance in England.

Aimee landed, reports indicate, after the Home Office had ruled there was no legal bar to her admittance. The ruling was prompted by editorial comment that she be debarred on the grounds that she may advocate religious beliefs and doctrines of a controversial nature.

Home Secretary Joynson Hicks has declined to become a party to the "clever advertising campaign" of the California evangelist by refusing her admittance to this country.

Since Aimee's arrival in Europe certain English newspapers have been devoting one or two columns daily to mild attacks on the American evangelist and incidentally describing her "almost super human" powers of convincing audiences.

Aimee's agents have hired Albert Hall, which has room for 10,000 people. There has been enough written about her in the last fifteen days to satisfy her publicity agents that Albert Hall will be at least half full.

STAINLESS-STEEL PROPELLERS REDUCE SHIPPING COSTS

Stainless steel propellers have been attached to four ferryboats operating in San Francisco bay, and their use is expected to effect a saving of at least $25,000 a year by eliminating some of the dry-dock intervals necessary with the usual equipment for repairs and renewals. A further economy is promised in a reduction of fuel consumption as the propellers are more efficient than the usual kind. The blades do not deteriorate so rapidly and can be repressed into shape more easily than those of cast steel.

PERSPIRATION ODOUR IS A BUSINESS HANDICAP

So difficult of self-detection is the odour from the one to two pints of moisture which, physicians say, the body sends through the pores daily, that the offender rarely knows that he offends.

So easy to be sure.

Simply use Lifebuoy, the superb Toilet Soap, for hands, face and bath. Lifebuoy's extra protection is free, because this pure toilet soap costs no more than the soap you are using now.

12 OPERATIONS ARE PERFORMED

Toronto Doctors Hold Clinic On Children at Red Cross Hospital.

MINOR OPERATIONS.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

APSLEY, October 3. — The great benefit and usefulness of the Red Cross Hospital to this district was well exemplified on Saturday when twelve operations on children were performed by Dr. Goldsmith of Toronto, assisted by Dr. McGregor. These operations, consisting of the removal of adenoids and tonsils, followed as a result of the inspections at the schools conducted by the nurse, Miss M. E. Fayler. It is understood that Dr. Goldsmith gave his services free, only a small fee being charged the parents, which goes to the Red Cross Society. Several other children were examined by the doctors, and the operations were performed only where absolutely necessary. Incidentally the examinations disclosed in more than one case the presence of other diseases that had been unsuspected.

Dr. Goldsmith, in conversation with The Examiner, wished that it were possible for groups of doctors to make a health survey of the district, and to hold clinics periodically at the hospital where those in need could be helped medically and where necessary operations could be performed, with Government aid for those unable to bear the expense.

Harvest thanksgiving services were held at St. Paul's, Lasswade, and St. Stephen's, Chandos, on Friday evening. Rev. T. J. O'Conor Fenton preached at the former and Rev. G. Bousfield, Sr., at the latter church. Both churches were beautifully decorated for the occasion.

A Sudden End to Stomach Trouble

PAIN or discomfort following a meal doesn't mean you must go on a "diet." Nine times out of ten indigestion, acidity, flatulence and heartburn are caused by excess stomach acid and food fermentation.

After too hasty a lunch, or too hearty a dinner, a little "Pape's Diapepsin," instantly neutralizes excess acidity, stops that fermentation, and soothes and heals the acid-inflamed stomach lining as if by magic. Your recovery is quick and complete. Make a special point of getting a 60-cent package of "Pape's Diapepsin" from your druggist today, and so follow the example of millions all over the world who use "Pape's Diapepsin" to end indigestion and allied stomach troubles.

With "Pape's Diapepsin" handy you can eat and enjoy whatever you fancy without fear of pain or discomfort to follow. At any rate, it's worth the trial, for lots of folks have found a new freedom at the table.

SECESSION TALK HEARD IN NORTH

CHARGE NEGLECT.

FORT WILLIAM, Oct. 3.—Secession from Ontario and formation of a tenth province, is once again being urged in this district. Re-opening of the campaign which flared up only to be dropped a few years ago is likely, and a public meeting of secessionists is expected to be called any day.

Thunder Bay, Rainy River, and Kenora districts would form the new province, making up in area what they lack in present population. Failing creation of a tenth legislature in the Dominion, advocates of secession are willing to move their allegiance from Ontario to Manitoba.

A body of young business men is behind the movement, which so far is confined pretty well to this city. Citizens in Port Arthur and other centres, however, are said to be willing to join in the proposed campaign.

Neglect of Roads Alleged

Business men interviewed yesterday declared apparent ignorance of the wants of this section of the province, was responsible for re-opening of the agitation. Neglect of roads and trunk highways, the last two season, they claim, has cost Port Arthur, Fort William and other places in the district thousands of dollars in lost tourist traffic.

"An announcement of an important nature may be forthcoming within a short time," one of the sponsors of the movement stated yesterday.

It is not so long ago that Frank H. Keefer with a number of Port Arthur and Fort William people, sponsored a new province, but the campaign died down with the announcement of an election in Ontario, and has never been renewed.

The demand for a separate province is nothing new to the two cities at the head of the lakes. More than thirty years ago public meetings were being held in the "old town hall" demanding separation from Old Ontario because of the distance to the seat of Ontario's Parliament and the difficulty of getting local public expenditure of revenues obtained from the natural resources of the districts.

Most Unlikely, Says Price

Questioned last evening, Hon. W. H. Price thought secession of this section of Ontario was very remote. He considered the agitation as an aftermath of the Canadian Good Roads Conference just closed at Regina, where action for the completion of the trans-Canada highway was one of the questions of the day.

The most feasible solution of the trans-Canada highway problem, and one which would result in quicker action than will ever be instituted by the provinces, he declared, would be the initiating of Federal grants of substantial proportions to aid the provinces in this work.

"The greatest check on developing northern roads lies in the lack of population," said Mr. Price. "If the civic bodies of Port Arthur and Fort William, who almost annually raise the same cry, would create an influx of settlers, the problem would solve itself. Our development of northern roads has been more rapid than any other province, even Manitoba, could possibly hope to accomplish. The large population of older Ontario can bear a portion of the costs on roads which are of benefit to newer sections, and this is something that Manitoba could not hope to emulate. With a population of approximately 600,000 over the whole province, I think Manitoba will find it hard enough to cover her own highways north and eastward, without casting eyes farther afield.

"As for the formation of a separate province in the north, I think it most inconceivable. Here again population would be their greatest drawback, and a real one. When work is done on Ontario's portion of the trans-Canada highway, Ontario will be the first to push the work.

EITHER INSANE OR PRETENDING

United States Expeditionary Force in France could be learned.

"Just Came Over."

"I just came over here," he said, "referring to how he came to be on the Canadian side of the river. Then he jumped to the subject of the robbery. "I wanted to get some dough," he said, "and I thought that that way would be easier. I didn't know there was any money there. But it was a mail car, wasn't it?"

"'After I robbed the car—it was easy—I just pointed my gun—I wanted to get out of the country. I thought it would be a good way to hide under the cars. I slid down from the door of the mail car and hid under the firebox on the engine. The sparks came down on me in a regular shower sometimes."

Could Have Touched Police

"I could have reached out and have touched the police, who were looking for me," he said. "They passed beside the engine dozens of times before the train left."

The same thing apparently happened when the train reached the Canadian bank of the river, just before the cars were put on the ferry to be shipped across to the American shore. Since the engine is not taken across, Gibbs had to act quickly. He was quite aware of this.

"I guess I must have fallen asleep for the first thing I remembered was falling off the rods on to the deck of the ferry. Then I wakened up. I might have got across, sure."

To the detective who got his statement, Gibbs, who is about 5 feet 10 inches in height, weighing about 160 pounds, boasted of the ease with which he looted the mail car.

"It's nothing but knowing how," he said.

Gibbs was pleased to tell where he gained his knowledge of the best method in robbing mail cars. He shrugged his soldiers, then said: "Sometimes I'm hard of hearing. I can't even hear a word you say."

"If it had not been for the dumb luck on the part of the men who nabbed me I would be safe on my way to Chicago now. You can figure out everything, but one little break in your luck and it's over. Say, the guys that nabbed me did not even know I'd stuck up the train."

Passed As Laborer.

Gibbs indicated the jacket he was wearing. It was an overall top that, combined with his dirty face, made him resemble a laborer. "I counted on this," he said. "It almost worked. I passed by a lot of uniforms that thought I was somebody working on the job.

"This mail car was soft. The open door was like an invitation. I swung inside before they noticed me."

"They just lined up and I grabbed the mail. I kept them covered and backed out of the door. That's when smartness counts. They all thought I'd jump from the train and run for cover. I ducked back a couple of cars and swung down under the rods.

"Near the ferry dock I slipped from the train. I stolled down and got on the ferry. By my looks I guess they thought I worked on it. Everything went all right until that fellow tipped off the immigration men. The funny part of it is that he thought I was a foreigner trying to get into the country. Until then it was a soft job. Most mail cars are soft even with the doors locked."

"How do we get past a locked door?"

"Soft. Did you ever hear of blue salve. Squirt a little on any lock and it aint a lock any more. It melts them."

Taken to Chatham

WINDSOR, Ont., Oct 3 (Canadian Press).—John Gibbs, confessed robber of the C. N. R. Detroit - bound mail car on Tuesday evening, left Windsor for Chatham just before noon to-day, in the custody of Inspector Arthur Moss, of the local Provincial force, and Inspector Hammond of the Criminal Investigation department. The bandit was taken to Chatham by motor car and was arraigned there before Magistrate Smith this afternoon.

Gibbs is either an escaped lunatic or is cleverly faking insanity in order to escape punishment for the hold-up in the opinion of officers who examined him here to-day. He told a colorful story of his wanderings which did not exactly "jibe." He had travelled all over the States, he said, but had never had any previous clashes with the law. The only school he ever knew, he said, had iron bars over the windows and the teachers were men who went around carrying clubs. He had been put in after being struck from behind while he was walking along, he declared.

Whatever may be the doubt of his sanity there is no doubt of his nerve. The robbery was one of the most daring in this part of the country, especially Gibbs' action in riding the rods on the train while the countryside was being scoured.

Assistant Postmaster J. C. Kelley announced not one cent was lost, although no check can be made yet of the real value of the packages recovered on Gibbs.

Offices trying to delve into Gibbs' past life got little information except as to the last few months. His home was originally in Los Angeles, he said, but he claimed to have no recollection of parents or relatives.

Awaiting Report.

OTTAWA, Oct. 3. — (Canadian Press.) Pending an official report, post office officials said to-day they were unable to say if any registered mail had been lost in the Chatham hold-up.

WON'T PUBLISH NAVAL ACCORD

Full Revelation of Terms Awaits Assembling of Parliament Next Month.

FURTHER NEGOTIATIONS.

LONDON, Eng., Oct. 3.—(Canadian Press).—The French Ambassador to London visited the Foreign office yesterday to raise the matter of publishing the terms of the Anglo-French Naval Agreement but it is understood there is little likelihood of publication until there has been at least another cabinet meeting and it is possible no decision will be made until parliament assembles in November. Official opinion apparently is that the American note rejecting the agreement will lead to further negotiations on different lines.

DISORDERLY HOUSES PAID POLICE WELL

New Line of Graft Exposed in Philadelphia Police Investigation.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 2.—(Canadian Press).—A form of alleged police graft which makes protection money paid by bootleggers look small in comparison has been uncovered by the District Attorney who is conducting the Grand Jury investigation here. Four detectives arrested for extortion received $220 a week from a single disorderly house in a district in which fifty such establishments were reported to have paid $11,000 every week. This is only one police district. One police captain is reported to have made a quarter of a million dollars in two and a half years.

Wedding Bells

HAWKINS—STENTON
A quiet wedding was solemnized at the home of the Rev. B. Greatrix, at 1 p.m. on Monday, October 1, when Alta, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stenton, was married to Mr. Frederick Cecil Hawkins, son of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Hawkins of Keene.

The bride wore a charming gown of rose chiffon velvet and georgette and carried a bouquet of kordes roses.

Mrs. John Fletcher of Seattle, Washington, sister of the bridegroom, acted as matron of honor, while Mr. Thomas Mather supported supported the bridegroom.

After the ceremony the bridal party returned to the home of the bride's parents, where a buffet luncheon was served. The guests included only the immediate family of the bride and bridegroom.

The happy couple then left amid showers of confetti for a motor trip east.

Obituary

R. R. FARROW.
OTTAWA, October 3 (Canadian Press).—R. R. Farrow, former Deputy Minister of Customs, died at his home here last night after a protracted illness.

MRS. THOMAS PETRIE.
The funeral of Elizabeth Coben, beloved wife of Thomas Petrie, was held from the family residence, Otonabee, on Saturday afternoon, September twenty-ninth, at three o'clock. The services at both the house and the grave were conducted by the Rev. C. V. McLean, of St. Andrew's United church, Peterborough, of which the deceased was a member, assisted by the Rev. A. E. Thornley, of Clark Street United church.

Rev. Mr. McLean gave an earnest and comforting address, basing his remarks on the death and resurrection of Lazarus.

Many floral tributes were placed on or around the casket by sympathizing relatives and friends who were in attendance in large numbers. Interment was in Little Lake cemetery.

JOHN WILLIAMS
The funeral of the late Mr. John Williams of Boswell Avenue, which took place on Monday, October 1st, showed the high esteem in which he was held by all who knew him. The service at his late residence was conducted by the Rev. D. Wren of Trinity Church, assisted by the Rev. B. Greatrix. It was very impressive and the words that were uttered eulogized the sterling qualities of the dead departed.

Amongst the very large gathering attending the service were: His Worship the Mayor, members of the Sons of England Society, a large representation from Trinity Church of which Mr. Williams was a member and many influential business men of Peterborough. Numerous floral tributes from far and near testified to the great respect his many friends and acquaintances had for him.

The burial service at the graveside in Little Lake Cemetery was of a two-fold character, the Rev. D. Wren conducting the first part and the Sons of England Society following with their service for the burial of any of their members, the late Mr. Williams having been a member of the Lansdowne Lodge for the past 41 years.

The singing of two verses of "Nearer My God to Thee" by the brethren, concluded the service.

Mrs. Menzies, Mrs. Henderson, Mrs. Gray and Mrs. Brown, daughters of the late Mr. Williams, attended the burial service at the cemetery.

The pall-bearers were Messrs. R. J. Kidd, R. F. Downey, Andrew Brown, J. Kennett, F. Rathbone, and C. E. Turner.

Around the City

In connection with Produced in Canada Week, October 15 to 20, the Chamber of Commerce Committee in charge have received a supply of "Produced in Canada" cards, and the larger ones, "Make Canada Prosperous by Buying Canadian Products." These are to be supplied to the retail section for display during the "week" and merchants may obtain same by applying direct to the Chamber, 358 George street; phone 1360.

DEATH.

Funeral will take place Thursday afternoon, Oct. 4th, from her late residence, to Norwood cemetery, with service at the house at 2.30 p.m., the Rev. McClelland officiating.

BRANTFORD, Oct. 3. — Adjournment was made yesterday evening at the inquest called by Coroner Dr. E. S. Hicks following the finding at noon yesterday of the body of a male infant on the dump at the end of East Avenue. Small boys playing near the scene discovered the body, notifying a passing police officer.

HIGH COST OF STRIKING

STUDENT CENTRE AT MONASTERY

PARIS, Oct. 3.—(Canadian Press)—Details are published here of a project to convert into an international intellectual centre, half of famous Grande Charthreuse monastery, at which, until 1903, monks manufactured the liquer of that name.

It is explained that the monks' cells and other monastic parts of the building are not to be disturbed, only the "lay" part being appropriated for the object mentioned.

Various modern universities supporting the project have already designated botanists, theologists, mineralogists, poets and musicians for a term of residence at a spot which from the standpoint of beauty solitude and noiselessness is almost unrivalled in Europe.

IRISH GOVERNMENT REGULATES BUSES

DUBLIN, Oct. 3.—(Canadian Press).—The Free State government in contemplating legislation to deal with the growing problem of motor-omnibus,

At present the authorities have very little control over the road-transport, being forced to depend almost entirely on the Carriage Acts passed in the middle of the last century. The growth of the omnibus traffic has been very rapid during recent months, and the time has come when steps must be taken to regulate it. Accidents have occurred with alarming frequency and in several cases they have been due to mechanical defects which a proper system of inspection might have detected.

The bill which the government hopes to pass into law before Christmas will provide for the regular inspection of motor omnibuses by the police and for the regulation of speed. All drivers will be required to pass exhaustive tests before taking charge of omnibuses, and care will be taken to see that all motor vehicles which are used for public transport are mechanically sound.

CAUSE OF SINKING STILL A MYSTERY

Manasoo's Mate Is Heard

Long Tells Wreck Commissioner of Night of Wreck.

NOTHING WRONG.

Inspector Says Ship Was Sound When He Inspected It Last.

OWEN SOUND, Ont., Oct. 4 (Special to The Examiner).—Further examination of Osborne C. Long, first officer of the steamer Manasoo, by Captain L. A. Demers, Dominion Wreck Commissioner, to-day, failed to shed further light on the cause of the ship's sinking in Georgian Bay on September 15.

Long said the ship drew six feet four inches forward and about eight feet six inches aft when light. Loaded with the 116 cattle, which perished when she sank, the after draft was nine feet three inches.

"So the method in which these cattle were placed—that is, most of them forward—just added a few inches to the after draft?" Captain Demers asked. "Yes," was the reply.

"Why was that?"

"I don't know."

The Commissioner drew from the mate additional details as to the loading of the cattle. Long stated that a slight list into the wind, such as the Manasoo showed ten minutes before she sank, was not cause for alarm, in view of the fact that 2,400 pounds of sand was piled in barrels on that side to counteract the wind.

"But as soon as you noticed a list you hurried to inspect the cattle that were aft?"

"Yes."

"Why did you hurry?"

"I don't know, I thought something might be wrong."

"And most of the cattle were forward, yet you hurried aft, why was that?"

"I don't know."

Short Warning.

"And you got no warning at all that the ship was sinking?"

"Well, a fireman came running up from the engine room with a life belt around his waist. He was shouting, 'The ship is gone, she is filling up aft.' But that was just two minutes before she sank."

Long told Frank Wilkinson, counsel for the owners, that the Manasoo had not quite completed a round trip with a man short. To R. S. Coulter, counsel for the cattle shippers, he said he had not troubled to close the pantry windows, but that the ship could not have filled from those openings. The pumps were not used on the fatal trip, he stated. U. L. Lesueur, counsel for Daniel Wallace, only surviving passenger from the wreck, brought out that there were 40 more cattle forward than aft, but that the 116 carried on the final trip was far from a record in number.

"Were the cattle pens built on scientific lines, that is, so many cubic feet for each beast?" Capt. Demers asked.

"Roy Brigham, Owen Sound contractor, said he had built the cattle pens and made other alteration to the ship, and that the pens were so built as to prevent concentration of cattle in any one spot.

Archibald Young, inspector of hulls and equipment for the Department of Marine and Fisheries, said he had inspected the Manasoo during the time she was being changed from the Macassa in Toronto harbor. He found the steel hull in good condition, with slight corrosion. One spot showed serious corrosion inside the ship, but this steel was perfectly sound outside, and no plates were ordered replaced.

Stability Unaffected

The inspector said that in his view the extensive alterations to the Manasoo had in no way effected her stability, that the life belts and boats were in good condition, and that the ship carried no radio.

Inspector Young said the Manasoo was licensed to carry 70 passengers, but when sailing from Toronto, this number had been 700. The difference was due to the fact that berth accommodation had been installed. The cattle load was estimated at 60 tons, and the inspector thought the way in which they were placed was perfectly safe.

"Then what caused this ship to list?" E. S. Coller demanded.

"Some weight may have shifted," the witness replied.

Butcher's Death Declared Accidental

DIED AS RESULT OF EXPOSURE VERDICT RETURNED BY JURY

Empanelled to Enquire Into Accident in Peterborough Lumber Company Yards.

SLIPPED FROM CAR.

Was Making Good Progress Towards Recovery When Gangrene Set In.

That Carl Butcher met his death accidentally as the result of injuries sustained on August 1st, when the stick with which he was braking the car slipped, throwing him to the railroad track and that his death followed as a result of exposure, loss of blood and gangrene was the verdict of the Coroner's jury empanelled last night to enquire into the accident in the yards of the Peterborough Lumber Company on the night of August 1st. The inquest was conducted by Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton, K.C., before Coroner Dr. T. W. H. Young.

Detective Sergeant William Meagher had the following jurymen in their places when the inquest opened: Harry Dickin, forman, Sandford Harris, Charles Primeau, J. H. Kemp, W. Martin, J. E. Henderson, W. O'Brien, Albert Warne, John Londerville, W. Welch, D. M. Minicola and C. B. Thornton.

Evidence submitted to the coroner's jury showed that Butcher on the night of August 1st was taking a car load of sawdust from the saw mill to a place near the main line of the C.P.R. He was on top of the car and a team of horses had drawn it to the top of a little grade after which it was let run down itself. Butcher in his attemp to brake the car and bring it to a stop, slipped and fell to the track and had one leg partly crushed. It being 2:00 o'clock in the morning medical assistance was slow in getting there and the boy lay where he was run over for half an hour or more. Finally he was taken to the hospital where the leg was amputated and he was making splendid progress towards recovery when gas gangrene set in and he died.

Father on Stand

Harry Butcher, father of the dead boy was the first witness called by Mr. Hatton. He gave identification evidence and said that his son had told him on the morning following the accident that it had been purely accidental.

Dickson Davidson, president of the Lumber Company said he had known the deceased for two years and had always found him a most careful employee. Mr. Davidson explained to the jury how the cars of sawdust were moved from the sawmill to the main line. At the mill the cars are drawn out by a team of horses to the crest of a little grade and from there on the car is let run down the grade and is stopped by a man at the brake wheel. Asked if he could give an explanation of how the accident happened Mr. Davidson believed that Butcher in braking the car must have slipped and fell forward. "He had been at this work for two seasons" said witness. "A car being moved was under the supervision of the lumber company, not the railroad and never was there any railway official there to look after the moving of the cars" said Mr. Davidson. He later explained to the jury that this year a contractor was looking after the cutting of the logs and the men were engaged by him.

Nobody Sees Accident

John Bettes foreman of the night shift when called to give evidence said he hid not see the accident but when Butcher did not return he knew there must be something wrong

MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE RETURNS WITH INFORMATION

Continent Would Trade With Canada

MARKETING PROBLEM.

OTTAWA, October 4 (Special) — The Honorable W. R. Motherwell, Minister of Agriculture, is just back from a trip overseas, when he visited Great Britain, Ireland, Denmark, Holland and some parts of Germany and France. His time in these countries was spent almost entirely in looking into agricultural matters of one kind and another, and much information that will be of use to Canada generally as well as to his own department, was gained.

To attempt at this time, to give even a list of the matters affecting agriculture that he looked into would make a too-lenghty item, and as Dr. Motherwell was just leaving for the West when approached in this connection, he had not time to make statements in connection with more than one or two matters.

One of the matters that seemed to be most exacting of attention, according to the Minister of Agriculture, was the rather unfavorable criticism being heard on every side in the British Isles, as well as in the different continental countries visited, in connection with our wheat shipments from the 1927 crop. This dissatisfaction so commonly voiced, did not seem to be entirely the fault of the producer. Of this he felt fairly certain, but before making definite statements regarding the situation as set forth to him by importers and millers, he proposes to look further into the matter with a view to determining, if possible, just what might best be done to correct mistakes, and to enable him and his officers to give the right kind of advice looking to the improvement and correcting of the very unsatisfactory conditions surrounding the handling of the product or of the product itself, of which complain is being made.

The staff of the Department of Agriculture are continuing their work of determining the best varieties for particular areas, and the creating of new varieties to suit more northerly districts, but something more may be necessary than this scientist-producer combination.

"Producing a crop is one problem, marketing it is a horse of another color," says the Minister of Agriculture, "and I believe a more co-operative spirit between the dealer and producer would result in the solution of most of our difficulties. This would seem to be necessary from evidence suggesting that some of the more daring dealers have been attemping to sail dangerously close to the limit in tampering with grades, and doing more mixing than seems just advisable. I am not in a position to discuss this authoritatively until I have made a somewhat closer study of some other angles of the situation. I can only say that certain investigations are being made and every effort will be put forth to meet the situation, and correct any influence which would tend to harm the sale of Canadian wheat on the world's markets."

With reference to bacon and dairy products, Dr. Motherwell found British importers were pinning their faith to Canada's system of standardization. Satisfaction with grades was general, but continuity of adequate supply was essential. In discussing this question, the Minister stated, "Let us double our production and thus be able to increase our exports of bacon and dairy products by, say, four or five hundred per cent, and Canada will then occupy a place second to none on the produce markets of the world."

The Honorable Dr. Motherwell is now on a western tour which will include Winnipeg, Regina, and his own constituency.

JUDGE PRAISES ARRANGEMENTS FOR DOG SHOW

EQUIPMENT GOOD.

Prominent People From Both Sides of Border Showing Fine Animals.

With the aristocrats of the canine world in attendance, the Peterborough Kennel Association's Dog Show opened to-day in Brack Street Rink, there being in the neighborhood of two hundred and thirty-five entries. Coming from New York City to judge all breeds, Charles G. Hopton, who has officiated at some of the foremost shows in America and in France, in conversation with The Examiner this morning, declared in the best of faith that undoubtedly, the Peterborough show is well up to the best of its kind in the Dominion.

"Does that go for the Toronto Exhibition dog show, too?" he was asked.

"Yes, indeed, it does," came the unhesitating reply. "You have a splendid building for such an event, and your benches and other accomodation has been a pleasant surprise to me. The benches are particularly fine and clean and new, whereas those at the Toronto show have been in use for years and have been whitewashed time without numbers."

At another juncture in the conversation, Mr. Hopton called attention to many of the prominent people exhibiting some of the finest dogs on the continent. "It is a fact, said he, that you have many very splendid people bringing their dogs here, not only from the Dominion but from across the border. Certainly the stock being shown here ranks with the best at any show I have ever attended."

The dog show that can provoke such flattering yet truthful commendation is certainly a credit to the city in which it is held, and judging from the large attendance during the first afternoon, the people of Peterborough have an appreciation of the Peterborough show. The judging started at 2 o'clock sharp in the spacious judging ring situated at the south end of the rink, and continued throughout the afternoon.

LABOR POLICY IS SET FORTH

Commonwealth Party Pledges Tariff Reform if Returned To Power.

REFERENDUM PROPOSED.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Oct. 4 (Canadian Press).—The policy of the Commonwealth Labor Party was announced to-day by James Mullins, Parliamentary leader, in a speech at Richmond. Tariff reform was pledged if the party was returned to power and a referendum was also proposed on what were considered vital changes necessary in the Commonwealth constitution.

Late For School, Boys Run Away

MONTREAL, Oct. 4 (Canadian Press).—Because they were late for school and feared punishment, eleven-year-old Gerard Plant and Gean Sharron of Ottawa left their homes early on Tuesday and arrived in Montreal late last night. The boys told the police they walked part of the way and had been given lifts by motorists.

New York Wins 4-1

Yankees Take Lead in First and Maintain It To End.

TWO HOME RUNS.

Meusel and Bottomley Hit For Circuit—Ruth Hits Two Doubles.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4 (Canadian Press).—For once in its baseball life New York became a "home team" town today as the embattled Yankees plugged crevices in their Harlem River citidel against the expected onslaught by the St. Louis Cardinals. Father Knickerbocker was in the first stage of his fifteenth modern World's Series, but it might have been mistaken for the first with seventy-five thousand fans marching upon the Ruppert Stadium.

Promise of Indian Summer sunshine fired the baseball spirit as it had not been fired for years past in this vicinity. The ominous shadow of Wee Willie Sherdel, he of left-handed magic, remained across the path of the Yankees, but New York fans were willing to string along with Waite Hoyt and the sort of fight with which the Hugmen pulled themselves along to the league pennant.

The Cardinals still were favored to take the series, but Yankee supporters were more hopeful than before. Earl Combs is definitely out of the fight with Paschal and Hurst scheduled to alternate in his place, but the other Yankee cripples were up and about, and Babe Ruth was almost playful.

The teams and umpires for the first game are:

St. Louis	New York
Douthit, cf	Paschal, cf
High, 3b	Koenig, ss
Frisch, 2b	Ruth, rf
Bottomley, 1b	Gehrig, 1b
Hafey, lf	Meusel, lf
Harper, rf	Lazzeri, 2b
Wilson, c	Dugan, 3b
Maranville, ss	Bengough, c
Sherdel, p	Hoyt, p

Umpires.—Owens (American) at plate; Rigler (National), first base;; McGowan (American) second base; Pfirman (National) third base.

Indications before game time were that a new record crowd in World's Series history would see the opening clash. Forty thousand spectators were probable in the unreserved portion of the big ball park and as many more held reserved seat tickets. The record series crowd is sixty three thousand. The Yankees too the field for practice some time before the Cards, the latter looking spic and span in new uniforms. Babe Ruth, one of the Yanks' so-called "cripples" appeared cheerful and brisk.

Blue sky, warm sun and balmy air gave promise of ideal weather conditions for the first game. The temperature promised to be above seventy, like yesterday.

First Inning

St. Louis—Douthit went out, Lazzeri to Gehrig. High sent up a high fly to Paschal. Koenig threw out Frisch at first. No runs, no hits, no errors.

New York—Paschal filed out to Hafey. Hafey took Koenig's fly. Ruth got a double into right for the first hit of the series. Ruth scored on Gehrig's double to the right field bleacher fence. Meusel sent up a high one to Frisch. One run, two hits, no errors.

Second Inning

St. Louis—Bottomley was given a base on balls, the fourth pitch being low and on the inside. Hafey fanned, taking a third called strike. The Cardinals were working the hit and run play, but Harper fouled the ball. Harper filed out to Paschal. Hoyt tossed out Wilson at first. No runs, no hits, no errors.

New York—Hafey gathered in Lazzeri's long fly near the left field barrier. Frisch tossed out Dugan. Frisch took Bengough's hopper and tossed him out. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Third Innings.

St. Louis—Ruth took Maranville's fly. Sherdel fouled out to Dugan. Bengough took Douthit's pop fly over near the St. Louis bench for a thrilling catch. No runs, no hits, no errors.

New York—Maranville made a wonderful one hand catch of Hoyt's pop foul near the left field boxes. Douthit snared Paschal's high fly Frisch tossed out Koenig. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Fourth Innings.

St. Louis— High fanned, swinging for third strike. Frisch popped out to Bengough, who raced to the screen to make the catch. Bottomley out to Gehrig unassisted. No runs, no hits, no errors.

New York—Ruth got a double into centre field, hooking one of Sherdel's slow balls. Sherdel tossed out Gehrig at first. Ruth holding second Ruth and Meusel scored on Meusel's home run into the right field bleachers. Lazzeri popped to Wilson back of the plate. Maranville went back

FIVE INJURED IN COLLISION AT ALDERSHOT

Twelve Others Shaken Up When Freight Car Sideswipes Passenger Train.

ONE MAY NOT LIVE.

London Clergyman Rushed To Hospital For Operation—Journal Breaks.

HAMILTON, Ont., Oct. 4. — Five persons were seriously hurt and twelve slightly injured when a Canadian National passenger train from Hamilton and London was sideswiped by a Canadian Pacific freight near Aldershot to-day. Some of the injured were brought here and the remainder taken to Toronto.

Rev. Dr. McGregor of London was critically hurt and his recovery is doubtful. Also in St. Joseph's Hospital here badly injured are William Ward and his wife of Winnipeg, and Nurse Hazel Thompson of Toronto. The five-year-old daughter of the Wards escaped serious injuries. Rev. Dr. McGregor was taken to the operating room in an effort to save his life.

Eight cars of the freight were derailed when a journal broke and one of the cars crashed into the side of the passenger train, passing at the moment. The passengers hurt were in a coach struck in the middle; those in the other cars escaping serious hurts. Both Canadian National main lines were blocked. Conductor Hunt and Engineer Wright were in charge of the passenger train and Conductor Curtis and Engineer Deacon in charge of the freight.

The passenger train was the International Limited going East. The Canadian Pacific frieght was going West into Hamilton when it left the rails three-quarters of a mile east of Aldershot. The International was held up for some time, but later proceeded. The scene of the accident was enveloped in a heavy fog.

THREE PERISH IN APARTMENT

Family Trapped By Fire in Edmonton Building.

FIRE SWEEPS BLOCK.

EDMONTON, Oct. 4 (Canadian Press). — Their escape cut off by flames and smoke, a family of three perished when fire swept through the Stanley Block Apartment Building here late yesterday. The dead are: Steve Glubisch, his wife and four-year-old daughter. The victims were trapped on the third floor.

Enraged Cameramen Make Demonstration

ROME, October 4. — Gene Tunney and his bride, the former Mary Josephine Lauder, were subject to a hostile demonstration yesterday when they left the Hotel De Russie after their marriage. The demonstration was understood to have been organized by disgruntled photographers who resented Tunney's persistent refusals to let them take pictures, and his threats to break their cameras. The crowd that gathered outside the hotel was insulting and hostile. The Tunneys gained their automobile and it sped away northward. Several in the crowd spat on it during the demonstration.

LABOR WANTS NATIONAL BANK

Control of Bank of England By Government Is Approved.

BIRMINGHAM, Eng., Oct. 4.—(Canadian Press.)—The Labor party conference to-day approved the special committee's report on the problem of banking and currency, including nationalization of the Bank of England. The report points out that although the bank is a commercial enterprise, actually its administration is closely connected with the treasury and many of its governmental functions are already recognized. The report holds, however, that the governing body of the bank should be made directly responsible to the community and not to individuals.

Total Assessment is $26,999,690, An Increase of Over $800,000 Over Property Value of Last Roll.

FEWER CHILDREN AND DOGS IN CITY MORE PERSONS SUBJECT TO TAXATION

The assessment rolls for the City of Peterborough, on which the taxes for 1929 will be collected have been completed by City Assessor W. J. Henry and returned to City Clerk S. R. Armstrong. The figures give Peterborough a total assessment of $26,999,690 and a total population of 22,012. The increase in assessment over last year's figures is $801,105, and the increase in population is 244. The number of taxable persons has increased 83, with the total for next year being 7,140, the north and west wards being the two which do not show an increase in the number of people taxed. The total acreage remains the same, being 2,826¾ acres.

The actual value of real property exclusive of buildings shows about $100,000 increase, while the value of the buildings has increased by $542,400. The total actual value of the real estate in the city is $22,938,035. The business assessment has increased from $1,533,555 to $1,668,850, and the taxable incomes from $719,190 to $847,250.

It is interesting to note that there were 300 births during the year, and 76 deaths, making an increase by birth of 224. The city's dog population shows a decrease of fifty-one.

FIGURES FOR WHOLE CITY

TTENDANCE RECORDS BROKEN AT MADOC AGRICULTURAL FAIR; MIDWAY IS BIG ATTRACTION

Wide Range of Exhibits With Competition Keen in All Classes.

SPILLS ON RACE TRACK.

(By a Staff Reporter.)

MADOC, Oct. 4.—President William Miller, Secretary W. J. Hill, Treasurer Samuel Rollins and every other officer and director wore a happy smile as, from early morning a steady stream of motor and pedestrian traffic poured into the grounds where was being held the Madoc Agricultural Fair on Wednesday. This, the second, and final day of the 1928 fair, had dawned bright and warm and until well on in the afternoon the line of visitors continued. In point of attendance, combined with an entertaining midway, a main building and poultry building filled to capacity with a wide range of exhibits, a good turnout of livestock, and a racing program chock full of excitement, it was the greatest fair in the history of the association. Only two accidents on the track, in one of which S. McQuigg of Havelock had his leg broken in two places, marred the happy scene. The accident to Mr. McQuigg occurred during the third of the four heats in a closely contested 2.35 class race, and he was taken from the grounds with Dr. Eagleson in attendance.

From the secretary's office, situated on a slight hill, the visitor looked on over a scene which, on closer inspection proved quite as educational as it was entertaining. To the north, in orderly array were tethered the livestock; immediately east was the turf track surrounding a space utilized for the parking of hundreds of cars; and to the south lay the midway, poulty exhibit and main building. Higher ground around gave the amphitheatrical effect that enabled a large portion of the crowd to sit down without missing any of the various features of the day's program.

The Midway

The midway of the Madoc fair proved far from being its weakest feature. Numerous refreshment booths including that particularly successful one operated by Madoc ladies; midway games ranging from a chance wheel to a baseball-throwing game, were there; a Ferris wheel doing land office business, and another ride receiving equally as much attention proved financially successful for the Jayland Company of Campbellford.

Exhibits Varied

The main building, to which there were hundreds of visitors during the afternoon, housed a particularly interesting display. Entering from the north, one noted the large display of cheese (57 exhibits) provided by cheesemakers in the district. Nearby were to be seen prize vegetables including the monster squash, pumpkins, cabbages and turnips and from there to the south end, the entire space was taken up with as beautiful a display of fancy work as could be seen anywhere. Needlework, quilts and rag mats gave evidence of originality and skill.

A display of plants and cut flowers came in for favorable comment while of first importance to parents and children of Madoc was the Public School exhibit. Under the direction of their teacher, Miss Ross, the students interested in domestic science had prepared a display of needlework and cooking that seemed a distinct challenge to the older folk, while the boys, supervised by their principal, J. B. Hough, had built bird houses, airplanes, etc. That work was supervised by Miss L. Hart.

Water colors and oil paintings had their place, too, while one could not leave the building without noting the display of apples and other fruit. Even the rafters held their share of the fancy work, and while the names of the prize winners could not be obtained at the time, the judges did report difficulty in choosing between the invariably excellent exhibits.

The same very well applies to the entries in the several classes of livestock competition, cattle and horses, sheep and swine, for the stock was of the best and competition keen. In charge of horses were Directors George Harris, Will Stewart, Edward Brown and F. Edward Brown, while those in charge of the other classes were: Cattle: Directors McMechan, Sr., and Fred Feeney. Swine: William McMechan, Sr., and Fred Feeney.

Sheep: Malcolm Allen and F. A. Comerford.

Poultry: John Armstrong, Edward Nayler, Frank Baalim.

Agriculture: J. Smith, A. Pitts and John Flemming.

Floral: Mrs. George West and Mrs. F. Curry.

Dairy Produce: John McCaffrey and Herb. Bailey.

NO MORE PILES

Thousands Bless Dr. Leonhardt, the Specialist Who Discovered This Common Sense Remedy

If you think that the surgeon's knife is the only method of escape from the misery of piles, it's because you haven't heard of the internal treatment known as Dr. Leonhardt's HEM-ROID.

J. S. Leonhardt, M.D., a specialist, set at work some years ago to find a real internal remedy for piles. He succeeded. He named this prescription HEM-ROID, and tried it in 1000 cases before he was satisfied. Now HEM-ROID is sold by druggists everywhere with money back guarantee. It is easy to take, and McDermid & Jury, Bond's drug store will gladly refund the purchase price to any dissatisfied customer.

Modernist Movement Defended In Paper

CHELTENHAM, England, October 4 (Canadian Press Cable).—A defence of the modernist movement was voiced yesterday at the annual church congress in a paper read by Canon B. H. Streeter of Hereford, on the broad-church and modernist movement.

Canon Streeter described modernists as persons who wished to offer civilization a religion which was "intellectually possible." For the discussion of moral and religious questions the younger generation were largely dependent upon writers like Bernard Shaw and H. G. Wells, and the masses had begun to ask questions. He insisted that under modern conditions, if the church desired to speak with a voice of authority, it must compel outsiders to recognize that within the church there was a body of investigators who were in nowise bound to defend established positions, but were free to follow the truth as they saw it.

HELPFUL TALKS GIVEN TEACHERS

SYSTEM NEEDED.

The second session of the Teacher Training School was held in the Bridgenorth Church on Tuesday evening. The subject of Mrs. White's talk was the aim in the lower divisions. She told the story of the great Swiss educator whose monument is seen with a little boy by his side. The boy's eyes are directed towards Heaven. He is not looking at his teacher but beyond. "This should be our aim in teaching the children to direct their gaze, not to us, but beyond us to Christ," she said.

The aim in the cradle roll is mainly to reach the parents. The child is a link between the father and mother and the school.

The aim with beginners to teach the Bible give them a knowledge of God's power, to protect, to provide, to care for. To know God as their Father, and Christ as their friend, to bring about ideals of conduct, reverence, obedience, praise and helpfullness.

In the primary division, the aim is all these things, only a little more is expected from them. "We look for

GROUNDS READY FOR EXHIBITION

OCTOBER 11 AND 12.

(Examiner Correspondence)

ROSENEATH, Oct. 4.—Only seven more days to Fair day. The vitality, development improvement, and growth of the Alnwick Agricultural Society have been such that the ballyhoo claim of "bigger and better" if true has been consistently true, and probably in no former year has the verity of that slogan been so much in evidence as it is this year. Certainly Roseneath Fair is to be bigger and better in an unprecedented degree. The spacious and beautiful Agricultural which is now completed with its finishing touch of fresh paint, straw color trimmed with crimson red, the comfortable and roomy horse stable, the poultry shed, the old hall to be used for the baby show will evidently draw many new exhibitors, therefore, in comprehensiveness and diversity of display Roseneath Fair is to be unrivalled by the Agriultural Fairs or other places. It is annually the last county fair of the season that it takes precedence over all other fairs in point of attendance.

Those who may away will fail to realize anything like the full potential benefits that should accrue to them from the greatest fair in the Province.

Agricultural products contribute the greatest single amount annually to the prosperity of Canada. Then may it be that more exhibitors bring their products and help make the Roseneath one huge success on October 11 and 12.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Ash Capture Prize For Having Largest Family At Madoc Fair

MADOC, Oct. 4.—While lack of entrants made it necessary to call off the baby show at the Madoc fair, there was another event that attracted much attention—namely the largest family contest. There was only one entry—that of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Ash who reside in Madoc township. Ten children there were, namely Violet, aged 20 years; Goldie, 18; Tommy, 16; Bobby, 14; Joseph 10; Reuben, 8; Donald, 6; Jean, 4; Phillip 2; Yvette, 6 months. Master Joseph stood out quite bravely and sang while he and his two brothers, Reuben and Donald sang together.

An interested visitor to the fair this year, and one who has seen many such gatherings in Madoc, namely D. E. K. Stewart, eighty-four year old veteran of the days when Marmora was a miner's town and from ten to seventeen coaches a day were running o'er the roads in these parts. Mr. Stewart, as is his custom, rode out on horse-back to look over the scene and received the respectful salutations of many old friends in the crowd.

DEPUTATION HEARD BY STIRLING COUNCIL REGARDING SIDEWALKS

No Action Taken Concerning Early Closing of Village Stores.

ACCOUNTS PASSED.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

STIRLING, Oct. 4.— The village council held their regular meeting on Monday night in the new Hydro Electric store in the Community Building. The members of the council were all present with Reeve Montgomery presiding. After council was opened in due form, Mrs. George Richards and Miss Sarah Knox, representing citizens of the west end of the village were heard regarding sidewalk conditions. The council promised to consider their plea. Accounts were discussed and passed. One from Houston Bros. for extras re the new building needed some consideration and was laid on the table.

Treasurer Patterson reported re finances which was satisfactorily adjusted.

Mr. Mackenzie of the Royal Bank asked for a change in the assessment of the apartments over the bank. The council agreed to the change.

Mr. J. S. Morton, on behalf of the Board of Education, complained regarding the condition of the street and of the drainage near the Public school grounds. The council promised to look the situation over and improve matters. The treasurer of Stirling Agricultural Society asked for a donation but no quarter was given the request, the majority of the council objecting. The early clos-

Trinity Mission Band Holds Successful Sale of Baking.

OMEMEE NEWS.

(Examiner Correspondence)

OMEMEE, Oct. 4.—The Anglican Young People's Association held its opening rally on Monday evening in the basement of the church, with a good attendance.

The officers for the coming year are:

President—Miss Marion A. Dickson.
Vice-president—Harry Burgess.
Secretary—George Dickson.
Treasurer—Miss Irene Clemett.

The evening was a social one and an enjoyable time was spent by all present.

Sale of Baking.

The bake sale held in C. L. Morcombe's store on Saturday afternoon, under the auspices of the Wide-Awake Mission Band of Trinity Church, was a decided success. The ladies in charge were Mrs. Blanchard, Mrs. R. H. Williamson and Mrs. C. L. Morcombe, and so great were the contributions that the old sign, which reads, "If you don't see what you want, ask for it," should have been hung out, as almost everything in the baker's line was on display, as well as eggs, cream, home-made candy, etc. The proceeds of the sale amounted to nearly $40, which will be placed in the treasury to help raise their allocation towards the mission fund.

Personals.

Clergy And Church Wardens Attend Reception Tendered Retiring Archbishop

LONDON, Oct. 4.—(Canadian Press Cable). — Approximately eight hundred persons, including the clergy and their wives and the church wardens from all parts of the archdiocese of Canterbury attended the farewell reception of the Most Rev. Dr. Randall Thomas Davidson, retiring archbishop of Canterbury, at Lambeth Palace yesterday.

The eighty-year-old Primate of the Church of England, accompanied by his wife, received the guests in the quaint old courtyard of the palace and cordially shook hands with everyone.

The archbishop sadly referred to the "end of twenty-five gloriously happy, responsible and interesting years," and referred to his successor, the Most Rev. Dr. Cosmo Gordon Lang, Archbishop of York, as a man of great experience, in whom his guests would not be disappointed.

He is a younger man than I and I hope he will be able to do much more than I have been able to do in late years," Dr. Davidson said. "I believe God will bring to completion the work that has been going on during these busy eventual years."

Dr. Davison expressed a desire to resign because of ill-health after his fight for ratification of the revised Prayer Book had been accomplished. The preparation of the modification and revision, to which he devoted the last few years, was regarded as the crowning work of his church career, and the rejection of the revision twice by the house of commons greatly disappointed him. He will retire on Nov. 12.

CONGREGATION BIDS FAMILY FAREWELL

Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Russell Are Given Dinner Set Before Departure.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MILLBROOK, Oct. 4.—A congregational gathering of peculiar interest was held in the parlors of Grace Presbyterian Church on Saturday evening, Sept. 29, to bid farewell and God-speed to Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Russell and family before their departure to Port Hope, where they will make their future home.

The pastor, Rev. Mr. Riddell, was in the chair, and after an informal social time had been happily spent, Mr. and Mrs. Russell and Miss Myrtle were called to the platform, the chairman reading a brief but eulogistic address, expressing regret at losing them from the church and the community, and voicing also sincere appreciation of the fine services rendered during the years, practically a lifetime, when they had been connected with Presbyterian activities here. Mr. Russell having served efficiently in a civic capacity, holding the position of town clerk as well.

On behalf of the congregation, and particularly of the Sunday School, of which Mr. Russell has been for some years the capable superintendent, James H. Paul presented to Mr. and Mrs. Russell a handsome china dinner and tea service combined; Miss Mary Armstrong presented Mr. Russell with a Masonic pin, his connection with this order having been of many years' duration; and Miss Ruth Ball presented Miss Russell with a solid gold wrist watch in recognition of her services as organist of the church for a considerable period of time.

Suitable acknowledgement of the gifts, on behalf of his wife, his daughter and himself, was made by Mr. Russell, and all joined in singing, "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows," the sentiment of the song, which usually suggests itself on such an occasion, being genuinely felt.

On account of its being Saturday evening, business and home duties claiming several of those present, the gathering was not unduly prolonged, and was dismissed by the pastor with prayer.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell and family left on Monday for their new home in the nearby lakeside town.

EARLY CORN GOOD; LATE CROP SHORT

(Examiner Correspondence)

ENNISMORE, Oct. 4. -Most of the farmers in this district have their corn cut and report the early corn good, but the late crop very short. Owing to the cold weather the fall wheat isn't doing very well. The buckwheat is very poor, the early crop being burned by the sun and the frosts ripened the late crop too early. Potato digging has started and some report a few showing the rot while others have a good crop. Onions are very scarce.

HELPFUL BOOK FOR FARMERS

"Hints On Judging" Will Prove Useful To Young and Old.

EDITION LIMITED.

The Ontario Department of Agriculture has recently issued a booklet entitled "Hints on Judging," which will be found of great value to all farmers, both young and old, in the Province. The following classes are dealt with: Live stock, poultry, grains, grass and clover seeds, potatoes and roots. The booklet deals with each class separately, pointing out the good points and the poor ones to look for in judging or purchasing, and it is expected it will be of great aid in developing boys for the annual judging competitions at the various fairs and exhibitions. A limited number has been printed, and it is expected that the demand will be much greater than the supply. J. B. Nelson, representative of the Department of Agriculture, has a number on hand in his office, which he will be glad to give to any who desire this kind of booklet.

COMMUNITY BIDS FAREWELL TO REV. AND MRS. P. C. HOWARD

Millbrook Town Hall Filled To Capacity For Final Gathering.

PRESENTATION MADE.

Entire Village, As Well As Parishioners, Regrets Departure of Assistant Minister.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MILLBROOK, Oct. 3.—The Town Hall was filled to capacity on Monday evening, the occasion being a community gathering in honor of Rev. P. C. and Mrs. Howard before their departure for their new home at Havelock.

Councillor F. P. Stinson filled the position of chairman, referring in his opening remarks to the fact that the large attendance, and the spirit of interest and goodwill that prevailed, were a fine tribute to the place Mr. and Mrs. Howard have won for themselves in popular esteem during the two years of their residence here, since all denominations were well represented, and peopl were present, not only from th people were present, not only from the village itself, but from all parts of the surrounding countryside as well.

Rev. Mr. Howard has been the assistant minister in parish of Millbrook and Cavan, and during his stay here, on account of his prolonged ill-health of the rector, Rev. Canon Allen, has had to perform the major share of the duties in connection with the four churches and throughout the large territory included in the parish. But from the remarks made on Monday evening, and the tenor of the address read, it was quite apparent that neither he, nor Mrs. Howard, have limited the scope of their interest and helpfulness to their own communion entirely hence only a community gathering could be satisfactorily planned previous to their removal to a new place of residence, and a new field of labor.

The Program

The formal program was fittingly opened with the National Anthem, the items which followed including:

Piano duet by the Misses Marcella and Marguerita Lang; Vocal Sola, "When You Come Home at Eventide," by Mrs. Lunney; Piano duet by the Misses Beatrice and Francis Jones; Song (in costume) "The Sidewalks of New York" by Joe Thorndyke and Dalton Brown; Wand Drill by ten girls of the Continuation school, under the direction of Miss Shirley L. Muir, Principal; Solo, "With You" by Mr. Charles Thorndyke' Song, "In Berry-Pickin' Time" by Joe Thorndyke and Dalton Brown.

The accompanists of the evening were Miss Hamilton, Miss Johnston, and Miss Bertha Lang.

Explaining that the principal reason for the gathering was "to give opportunity to pay our best respects to Rev. P. C. and Mrs. Howard" the chairman invited the guests of honor to the platform, requesting that with them should also come Rev. John Riddell, pastor of Grace Presbyterian church Rev. W. W. Jones, paster of the United Church, Messrs Thomas Wood, of Ballieboro, and W. H. Wood, of the Marsh (West Cavan).

Purse of Gold

J. J. Clarke, Peoples' Warden of Saint Thomas' church, read the address, and James H. Paul, on behalf of the large and representative gathering, presented Mr. Howard with a purse containing approximately $160.00 in gold; while flaxen-haired little Mary Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Smith, daintily attired in white, crossed the stage and gave Mrs. Howard a basket of beautiful cream roses, huge tulle bows adding to its attractive arrangement.

To the Reverend P. C. Howard:

Dear Mr. Howard.—The object of our meeting here to-night is to express to you in some special way the very high regard and esteem you have won for yourself in this community, not only in the church of which you are an honored minister, but also in your intercourse with those of other denominations. Many of these have come forward voluntarily and asked that they be allowed to be associated with this expression of friendship and esteem.

You may be assured, therefore, that you are carrying away with you to your new home, and your new work, the very best wishes of the whole community for your future success and happiness.

We do not doubt but that the same qualities that have won for you a place in our hearts, will again do so wherever you may go, but we do trust that the memories of your sojourn in Millbrook, short though it has been, will not be altogether unhappy ones.

In wishing you Godspeed, we would ask you to accept this purse as a slight evidence of goodwill.

To Mrs. Howard also we desire to express our deep regret at your departure, and our very best wishes for a happy future.

Signed by: Edwin Moore, W. H. Wood, P. I. Bentley, H. A. Fallis, T. J. Wood, Charles Thorndyke, W. E. Ball, T. J. Lang, Thomas Harkness, John J. Clarke, James H. Paul, Robert Stone, Wilfrid W. Brown, P. Stinson, T. H. Aiken.

Millbrook, October 1, 1928

In his reply, after expressing gratitude on behalf of his wife and himself, Mr. Howard spoke feelingly of their regret at leaving so many good friends, giving assurance that the bonds thus formed should never be broken, and that the time spent in Millbrook would always remain a bright spot in their memories.

"What you have done to-night is just in line with the kindness constantly shown throughout our ministry in our midst. I can truthfully say we have had more sympathy, kindness, and encouragement shown us here than in any other parish; many things might have been better done, but if we leave ourselves as instruments in God's hands, He will work out His purposes though we are but 'broke and empty vessels made meet for the Master's use.'"

Other Clergy Speak.

Rev. John Riddell was next called upon, and stated "This gathering to-night is evidence enough, without anyone saying a word, of the esteem in which Mr. and Mrs. Howard are held. Mr. Howard, I know, has helped socially in the community, but I wish particularly to say that I believe he has raised its moral and spiritul status as a whole by his work and presence here. As a fellow-minister, I desire to pay tribute to the kindness and the assistance in my pastoral work which he has shown toward me since his coming here, and I join with a host of others in wishing both he and Mrs. Howard every blessing and success in their new charge."

Rev. W. W. Jones was the next speaker, and as a comparative newcomer in the village, expressed his personal pleasure in being present, adding, "I have been splendidly impressed with the influence Mr. and Mrs. Howard have been for good in the community. I would also like to make reference to the fine work they accomplished during the five long years spent in missionary labor in the far north, holding up Christ to the Indians, while separated themselves by so great a distance from home and loved ones.

"I am wholeheartedly in sympathy with what has been expressed here to-night in the address, and by other speakers, and I add my wish to that of others, that God may speed you in all your work."

The chairman added a final tribute voicing the sincere conviction of all present when he said, "Both in action and presence those who are our honored guests to-night have shown always the spirit of a Christian gentleman and lady."

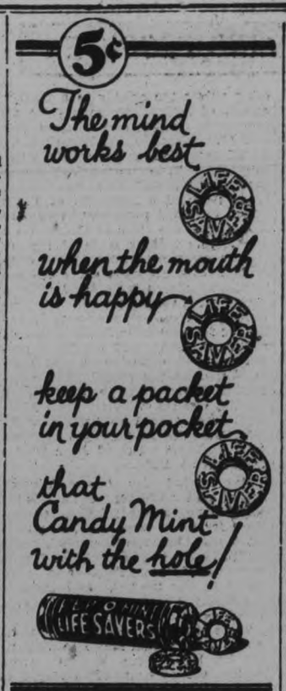
District Churches

WARSAW UNITED CHURCH.

Rev. Mr. Joblin, of Cordova Mines Circuit, preached in the United Church on Sunday evening. His text was from Numbers 21, verse 3. His main points were that the serpents were not removed, but a cure was provided and the choice was given to look or not to look, looking cured, not looking destroyed. The look had to be at the serpent not at the pile which supported it.

Then he drew the analogy that Christ was lifted up. Sin is not taken from the world, but Christ came to redeem from sin, but those who wish to be saved from sin must look to Christ.

Too many people to-day look to the profession, ministers and other Christian workers and not to Christ, but that is useless.



My Husband says
"Try Kruschen Salts."

The best advice in the world! Her letter, published below, proves once again that "it's the little daily dinner that does it."

"Kruschen Salts have done me a lot of good. I suffered from my kidneys, and about 3 months ago I was on holidays and I came home worse than before I went away, and my husband said, 'If I were you I should try Kruschen Salts.' I tried a jar, and now I am a different woman. I was in torture from morning till night with my legs and kidneys, but, thanks to Kruschen, I feel well and can get on with my work without any trouble." —(Mrs.) C. McN.

Original letter on file for inspection.

Kruschen Salts is obtainable at drug and department stores in Canada at 75c. a bottle. A bottle contains enough to last for 4 or 5 months—good health for half-a-cent a day.

BRAIN UNAFFECTED BY SPINAL DISEASES

Effect of Disease On Mind Discussed By Scientists.

GLASGOW, Scotland, Oct. 3. — By Canadian Press.—The powers of thinking are affected only temporarily by some forms of disease, but permanent effects are caused by alcohol, various drugs, fatigue, certain bodily injuries and some diseases, said Dr. S. Dawson in a paper on "Dullness and Disease" read before the psychology section of the British Association for the Advancement of Science. Tests that had been made on children showed that diseases of the nervous system, limited to the spinal cord, apparently did not interfere with intellectural performances, for the average intelligence ratio of this group was well up to normal.

In some allusions to sleeping sickness, Dr. Dawson said that the most striking of the extraordinary after effects of this disease was a change of character and emotional dispositions. Children, who were previously quite normal become quarrelsome, destructive, cruel, irritable, subject to fits of anger and rage, in which they were a danger to themselves and to others. Some of them took to stealing, swearing, and lying, sometimes of a very stupid kind. In some cases the after effect was more obviously intellectual, normality giving place to feeblemindedness.

The tests made confirmed the suggestion that sleeping sickness adversely affected the intelligence. His enquires indicated that while in a few cases sleeping sickness seemed to have no serious after-effects, yet it did on the whole arrest or retard mental development to such an extent that it appreciably reduced the intelligence of patients, the deterioration being greatest in young children.

THAT WILL BE ALL.

THE ACCEDENT RECORD.

"Some months it is one thing and other months it is something different," says R. B. Morley, general manager. Industrial Accident Prevention Associations, commenting on the industrial accident situation. "This past month it has been infection cases that stood out in our records."

It appears that, of the thousands of accidents reported each month to the Compensation Board, about one-tenth show infection in the early stages. This, it is claimed, is largely due to failure of men to report slight injuries. Some men seem to have a chronic objection to reporting minor cuts and scratches and too often such slight wounds have serious results because infection develops.

Last month there were 7,032 accidents reported by industries in Ontario to the Workmen's Compensation Board, including 58 fatal cases. In August, there were 8,022 reported, including 41 fatalities, and although the total for September is lower than the former month, there were 17 more fatal accidents reported in September than during August. The awards made by the board in September totalled $532,291.20, which included $84,965.05 for medical aid.

EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS.

Approaching this question of fire prevention from another angle ,did you ever stop to think that you paid your share of the cost of the 11,506 fires in Ontario last year?

The fire loss in the Province in 1927 amounted to $11,878,333, and those who had fires lost over and above insurance two million dollars.

And everybody helped to make good that unnecessary loss.

It was charged in the price of the things people bought.

It is always charged that way, and thus the greater the fire loss the higher the cost of living.

People who imagine that because they have had no fires involving their personal property they are not suffering any loss are deceiving themselves.

They are making their contribution toward meeting the annual fire loss every time they purchase anything.

That being the case, surely it would be good business for everybody to make every effort to cut down the huge economic waste represented by the annual fire loss, which has increased at a ratio of more than twelve times greater than the increase of population since Confederation.

The fact that every hour of the day and night somebody's home or place of business is being burned in Ontario shows how great is the need of fire prevention work and explains the necessity of such campaigns as announced for next week.

WHERE THE EMPLOYER CAN HELP.

Calling attention to the fact that three members of the Walkerville baseball club have lost their positions because their firms objected to their absence from work, the Border Cities Star pays a tribute to other employers who have given their men leave of absence in order that they might participate in league games.

This is a situation that obtains everywhere in sport.

One of the greatest obstacles encountered in operating a team of any kind is the difficulty of getting players away from their work to take part in out-of-town games.

There are employers who believe that sport and work or business do not mix, and while that contention is to a considerable extent justified, there is, however, another angle to the question.

Successful teams are a splendid advertising medium, giving their home city a vast amount of publicity that is useful and valuable.

The employer therefore who co-operates in the development of winning athletic organizations by taking good athletes into his service and enabling them to get away for the games in which they are needed is making an important contribution to the community, and in the final analysis, is the gainer from his generosity and spirit of helpfulness.

GET BEHIND THE RAYBESTOS CLUB.

The Raybestos team, after a series of triumphs in the intermediate O.B.A.A. playoffs, is staking its championship chances upon the outcome of a single game, to be played here on Saturday with Copper Cliff.

As a matter of fact, the local club is not only risking its prestige in this engagement but is undertaking as well a heavy financial obligation in meeting the expenses of the winners of the Nickel Belt League.

Beyond what can be accomplished by enthusiastic rooting, there is not much the public can do to assist in the winning of the championship, but in so far as the financial risk is concerned there is an opportunity for all sport-loving citizens to help.

The Examiner is confident that Peterborough people will appreciate that fact, and that they will so generally respond to the sale of tickets for the final game as to lift all anxiety as to the financial side of the situation from the minds of the Raybestos players and send them into Saturday's game with nothing to worry about but the task of proving that they are a better ball club than that of Copper Cliff.

By their consistent playing the Raybestos team has earned the support of their fellow-townsmen, and they should have it in abundant measure this week.

Good sportsmen will gladly rally behind the local club in its dash for the Ontario intermediate championship.

AN ESKIMO EXPERIMENT.

The bringing of two Eskimo boys from their homes in the Far North to a preparatory school at Lakefield is an interesting experiment and a worthwhile piece of service. It is a new world in which the children have been transplanted, and the effect it will have on their lives will be watched with interest. To be brought from a land of eternal ice and snow, a land that for weeks is practically shrouded in darkness, and placed in a beautiful town in Ontario when the trees are to be seen in all their autumnal glory, must seem like a fairy dream to these children. Of course, there is always the danger that when the novelty of their surroundings begins to wear off they may get homesick, as other children have done. It would be no cause for surprise if this were the case. After all, it matters little whether it be an igloo or a palace where one first sees the light of day. That place is home, and there's no place like it.—The Globe.

WHAT A STRAW VOTE SHOWS.

In the United States presidential election of 1924 the Literary Digest took a straw vote which became justly celebrated. In a poll of 16,000,000 ballots it was in error to an extent of less than five per cent. in the popular vote, and it was 99 per cent. correct in respect of the Electoral College. For this reason, a straw vote on the presidential election now being taken by this magazine challenges respect. The first few ballots have been received, about 32,000, and they favor Hoover by over two to one. "For a number of reasons," remarks the Digest, "it would be premature to consider these figures closely indicative of the final results." Their real significance so far, lies in the figures showing the turnover in the vote since the last election, for the poll provides an opportunity for the voter to state how he voted in the last election. The votes thus far counted, the 32,000 received show a turnover of 2,410 Democrats voting for Hoover and 4,455 Republicans voting for Smith. The States represented are only five in number, California, Maryland, Nebraska, New Jersey and Wisconsin. Wisconsin shows a turnover of 150 Democrats to Hoover and of 961 Republicans to Smith. In New Jersey the switch is similar: 1,507 Democrats voted for Hoover and 2,892 Republicans for Smith. Should these figures be in any way reliable they would seem to indicate, as the Digest (which is independent) remarks, "a very close election."

On paper, judging solely from the tremendous Republican majority of 1924, the Democratic chances of victory seem hopeless. The fact remains, however, that as the campaign progresses, a number of the most competent political observers are conceding that Smith's prospects are by no means forlorn. Take, as an illustration, Mr. Frank R. Kent, Kent, who is vice-president of the Baltimore Sun, is one of the best informed and most acute-minded journalists in the United States. Writing in his paper this week, he says:

"The Republicans can get 266 votes without counting in the New York, New Jersey and Rhode Island group, by conceding to Smith the solid South, most of the border States and the usually Republican strongholds of Massachusetts and Connecticut. On paper it has a most convincing look. The weak point in this Republican logic is that, great as have been their majorities, a singularly small shift of votes to the precinct will wipe them out even in the heaviest States.

"For example, Indiana gave Coolidge last time 200,000. That seems an almost hopeless handicap for any Democrat. Yet when you get down to the smallest political unit—the precinct—its formidable character evaporates. There are in Indiana slightly more than 4,000 precincts. A sustained shift from Republican to Democrat of approximately 25 votes to the precinct would wipe out that 200,000—turn the State Democratic. It would not take a much greater shift than that to wipe out Republican majorities in a lot of other States—Ohio, for instance, or even Illinois, neither one of which is even claimed by the Democrats.

"The shift from Republican to Democrat would, of course, have to be a net gain. If it is offset by a shift of Democrats to Republicans it leaves things as they were and the Republican figures hold. Obviously the Democratic chance is based on an average precinct shift from Republican to Democrat that will hold good all over the country and effect a net gain sufficiently large to wipe out normal Republican State majorities. The Republican problem is merely to hold what they have had in the last two fights—or at least not lose too much of it. The Democrats must not only hold what they had, but gain largely from the other side—to be exact, not less than sixty electoral votes.

"This difference in the situation accounts for the odds. It also accounts for the general Republican confidence. But among the more experienced Republican politicians who know how small the net change in the precincts need be to turn the so-called normal Republican States to the other side, this confidence is not very great. To those who also appreciate the power of money in the precincts on election day, the unprecedented fatness of the Democratic campaign fund has a further tendency to make this confidence, founded on so-called normal figures, extremely shaky. This isn't a normal campaign.

"On the Democratic side the answer to the Republican calculations is to point out that the combined Davis-La Follette vote of 1924 was greater than the Republican vote in 26 States, with a total of 280 electoral votes. Maryland was one of them. There is this time, it is contended, no place for the La Follette vote to go save to Smith."

As for the Digest's straw vote, it will be far more interesting when it gets to the "solid South." If Smith can hold the South, then there is hardly a doubt but that the election will be close. His attitude on farm relief and the power question has unquestionably made him formidable in the Northwest and Middle Western States.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

New York is more interested to-day in Waite Hoyt's arm than in Governor Al. Smith's voice, although both are recognized as potent weapons.

The Canadian debaters who are going to England will have to do a lot of talking to offset the remarks made there by some of the British harvesters.

The proposal has been made to instal a radio in every cell in the Maryland Penitentiary, to let the prisoners have the benefit of the bedtime stories, it is presumed.

The Orillia Town Council wants the police magistrate there discharged. The Attorney-General's Department, however, may have a different idea about the matter.

According to the straw vote, the St. Louis Cardinals will win the World's Series. But straw votes are not always reliable whether in baseball or politics.

Famous athlete says that there are more good women swimmers than men. As a rule they show better form.—Ottawa Journal.

GOD'S MINUTE.

Bless the Lord, O my soul: and all that is within me, bless His holy name. Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all His benefits: Who forgiveth all thine iniquities; Who healeth all thy diseases; who redeemeth thy life from destruction; Who crowneth thee with loving kindness and tender mercies; Who satisfieth thy mouth with good things; so that thy youth is renewed like the eagle's.—Ps. 103: 1-5.

* * *

Almighty God, Father of all grace, we adore Thee as the Author of our being, our Preserver, and our Redeemer. Cleanse us from all inherent iniquity, and from all the defilements of sin contracted as we have lived and moved in a sinful world. Command a double portion of Thy Spirit's power upon Thy ministers, upon al l Christian workers, and upon all Thy people who constitute Thy Kingdom upon earth. Grant that Thy children may show that spirit of kindness and helpfulness which was manifested by our Lord Jesus Christ when upon earth. Work in us the spirit of forgiveness towards all who may have in any way offended against us. Give us that which is necessary for the health of our bodies and endue us with the spirit of contentment. Give us a just onception of the things with which we are surrounded and make us faithful in the discharge of all our duties.

We ask in the name of Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

A Thought

"Internal Enemies Are More Dangerous Than External Enemies"

(By Velma Runnels, Campbellford)

We might say that an enemy is one who is ever ready to harm and foil you; one who lurks in the shadow as a foe. Can we say that an external enemy is dangerous? Why of course he is. There would be world peace and happy, united nations if the enemy was blotted out from every vocabulary. These external enemies harm the country. They keep every nation in debt; every person with ammunition at his feet.

Internal enemies are more dangerout to a person than external foes. They are harder to conquer in every way. First of all those enemies that pull down the character are the first steps that lead to the external enemies. On can not possibly be a foe to any man if he has learned how to conquer those enemies that roam within him.

The enemy of selfishness and greed is one that is tugging at a number of peoples' characters to-day. The great desire for more gold has brought more external enemies to people than anything. The great fight for money has curled many a lip and raised many a fist.

The internal enemies are too numerous to mention. Everyone knows that it is necessary to fight them and to conquer them if world peace ever stretches it arms to every pole.

Do not be a procrastinator and say: "I can be stronger tomorrow, a week or a year from now". That kind of talk will not do. We must capture those enemies before they grow to overpower us. A year from now is not the time, but today; this very minute when temptations are so inviting.

World peace is what we need. Did you ever stop to think that wars and misunderstandings originate from those tiny, troublesome foes of your own character? We can not actually see them but we can feel them and see the works of distruction that creep forth from them.

Everyone of us can forward peace among all nations. We can conquer our own faults, and when we are doing this, we are not raising a struggle with our friends. Keep the ripple's going until they splash against every nation's shore. They will hear the sound and come to see peace and love written on a glowing horizon.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Oct. 4 (Canadian Press).—Export business in corn alleged to be larger than the public has known of, gave a hoist to the corn market yesterday despite wheat weakness. Cancellation of 1,000,000 bushels of corn warehouse receipts here, a circumstance pointing to likelihood of big shipments out of Chicago, counted also as a bullish factor. Meanwhile, foreigners were credited with speculative selling of where here, and the world's available supply of wheat showed 35,234,000 bushels increase for the week.

Closing quotations on corn were unsettled ⅞ to 1¼c net higher; wheat ⅝ to ⅞c off; oats unchanged to ¼c up, and provisions varying from 35 cents decline to a shade advance.

In connection with yesterday's advance in corn values, much notice was taken of an announcement that on account of crop shortage Rumania is to import corn. The principal food supply of the rural population of Rumania is corn, and various other European countries are minus their usual requirements, helping further to strengthen the corn market yesterday was a despatch saying United States corn in Europe is underselling Argentine corn as much as 9 cents a bushel. There were also estimates from a leading Chicago authority that farm stocks of old corn in this country at present amount to only 90,000,000 bushels against 165,000,000 bushels a year ago.

Predictions were current that the corn carryover on November 1, would be 60,000,000 bushels compared with 111,000,000 bushels last year and 183,000,000 bushels two years ago. Under such circumstances, buying of corn future deliveries developed on a broad scale yesterday, and influential trade leaders asserted that United States corn not only has the inside track now abroad so far as new corn is concerned, but that prices are on an export basis for old corn.

Talk was likewise heard that a period of extremely small receipts of corn is at hand and that stocks of corn will be down to low proportions by the time new corn moves in volume.

Emphasizing foreign selling of wheat here and giving stress also to the big increase of the world's available supply total, it was reported that western markets yesterday were offering Number 2 hard winter wheat to Chicago at equal to the price of the December delivery in this city. Total world stocks are now 244,796,000 bushels against 171,313,000 bushels last year. Oats sympathized with corn.

Provisions averaged lower, ignoring an upturn in hog values. Changes, however, were small except for November and December bellies.

CHICAGO CATTLE

CHICAGO, Oct. 4 (Canadian Press).—Hogs, receipts 12,000; market closed mostly steady; shippers took 1,500; estimated holdover 5,000. BUTTER AND EGGS

TORONTO, Oct. 4.——The local butter market was quiet ,and the feeling again weaker at mid-week, with prices showing a decline of another ¼c a pound in wholesale and jobbing divisions. For over a week now, finest creamery has been working to steadier lower levels, although dealers have shown a relutance in lowering values too quickly in a market devoid of action. Demand from all sources is limited, and business dull and featureless, buying being largely to fill immediate requirements. Easiness settled in the market last Thursday, and some sections of the jobbing trade reported a reduction of ¼c a pound for No. 1 pasteurized creamery solids, with the close of the previous week. The jobbing price of highest quality creamery prints at the close of last week averaged 43.77 cents a pound, compared with 43.33 cents a pound for preceding week. Quotations for creamery solids yesterday ranged in price from 39 cents to 39¼ cents per pound, and for No. 2 pasteurized and unpasteurized 38 cents to 38¼ cents per pound. The volume of business passing was small.

Total exports of butter from Montreal from May 1 to September 29, 1928, were 4,919 packages against 4,489 packages exported from May 1 to October 1, 1927.

The market for cheese is quiet, easier, and with very little trading being done in local circles. Quotations for No. 1 large, colored, paraffined and Government-graded, range from 23 cents to 23¼ cents per pound. Buyers on spot are showing little interest in the market, and there is practically no response to cables, which at date are discouraging.

Total exports of cheese from Montreal for the period May 1 to September 29, 1928, were 808,764 boxes, against 660,015 boxes from May 1 to October 1, last year.

There is a healthy tone in the local egg market, with a firm undertone present for strictly fresh eggs of extra grade. Receipts of highest-grade eggs in incoming supplies continue light, and stocks are being well cleaned up as received, with a slight advance in prices to the retail trade trade reported in some market quarters. Storage eggs are moving freely into consumption.

Drive with confidence---There are Dominion Tire Depots everywhere

THIS is the era of the chain store. Immense networks of grocery stores, hardware shops, drug and departmental stores, and gasoline stations, have spread like magic across the land.

Co-operative methods in the merchandising and servicing of tires had to come. We are proud to be connected with the pioneer organization in this field.

Away across the length and breadth of Ontario and Quebec spreads our network of depots. Scarcely a town but you will find a shop with the distinctive orange and blue front. The map above shows the location of depots in this locality.

Each of the hundreds of depots offers the most expert and courteous tire service obtainable in its locality. Although each is independently owned, all are links in this great chain of service shops which is sponsored by the largest rubber organization in Canada.

So now, you can drive with confidence — wherever you motor. There are Dominion Tire Depots everywhere.

croft, Mrs. R. P. Wellman, Mrs. J. Caskey, Mrs. E. West, and Mrs. J. Hough.

Ladies' Department: Mrs. T. Tumelty, Mrs. Nickle, Mrs. C. Whytock, Mrs. G. Hill, Mrs. E. Brown, Mrs. Watson.

Arts and Crafts: Mrs. W. Whytock, Mrs. Wickham and Mrs. J. Robertson.

The Program

Situated directly south of the secretary's office was the performance stand and there, during the afternoon, a large crowd gathered to enjoy several features. It was there that the Madoc Citizens' Band held forth under the direction of Bandmaster James Alysworth, and when it had completed a well-chosen program, children from the Madoc Public School put on a series of drills and songs that won them hearty applause and reflected geneuine credit upon their teachers.

For their opening chorus they chose "O, Canada," and this was followed by a display of physical culture exercises by a group of boys trained by Principal Hough. There was also a very clever flag drill by twenty-four girls, and then came a patriotic drill in which the nine provinces were represented, placing their crowns at the feet of one who represented Canada, as a mark of unity. This pageant was particularly well presented.

A chorus, "My Own Canadian Land" and a Highland Fling by Miss Lenore Bird, concluded this part of the program. Throughout the choruses and drills, Miss Hart of the Public school staff presided at the piano.

Step Dancing

While it may not have appeared on the schedule of events, there was another "grandstand" feature that provoked plenty of merriment. Fred. McMullen had his fiddle along all the way from Campbellford and only the untimely interruption of an accident on the rack track prevented a first-class step-dancing contest. As it was, Edward McInroy, James E. Booth of Marmora, and Paul Alore of Madoc Township took their turns "tripping the fast stuff" in good fashion.

The Races

The turf track was in acceptable condition when Starter George O. Tice of Belleville, started the first heat in the first of three classes. There were nine horses entered all told, and these were divided into three classes: Free-for-all, 2.35, and classified. The result was keen competition and excitement galore with the money being distributed as follows:

Free-For-All

Fred Patch, owner J. McNaught of Tweed (2nd money)	2	2	3
Hal Pointer, owner S. Craig of Smith's Falls (1st money)	1	1	1

Time: 2.15¼, 2.15¼, 2.15½.

Classified

Barney Kelly, owner Cy. Garrison of Frankford	withdrawn
Mona Direct, owner S. Craig, Smith's Falls, (2nd money)	2	2	2
Leo Stewart, owner P. Sullivan, Frankford (1st money)	1	1	1

Time: 2.16¼, 2.17¼, 2.21¼.

2.35 Class

Marguerite Mas, owner R. Turley of Frankford (3rd money)	3	3	2
Red Peter, owner S. Mc Quigg of Havelock (1st money)	1	1	1
Dorothy H., owner F. Rush of Stoco ((2nd money)	2	2	3

Time: 2.35½, save in 2nd and 3rd heats, when accidents interfered.

Two Accidents

His leg broken in two places, S. McQuigg of Havelock was assisted from his sulky and removed in a car, following an accident just as the 2.35 horses were taking the north turn on the first lap of the third heat. They had made a beautiful start, as indeed all the heats had with very little scoring, when his horse, Red Peter broke, recovered and in some way came in contact with the sulky of R. Turley, driving Marguerite Mac. Red Porter went down as did his driver, while Turley escaped with a broken wheel. Neither horse was injured seriously.

Another accident, in which Mr. Turley had had a narrow escape, occurred in the second heat of the same race. The horses were just getting away and had rounded the first turn when a taxi drove through an entrance gate, fair onto the track. Red Peter had passed, but Marguerite Mac (Turley's horse) and Dorothy H. driven by F. Rush, piled into the car; horses and drivers having a miraculous escape from serious injury. Their "bikes" were badly smashed.

Drawing Contest

The drawing contest, staged in the ring, had its share of eager spectators, Walter Whytock's heavy team winning, along with John McCaffrey's light team.

In the women's driving competition, the entrants were required to drive twice around the track and then back into an allotted space within a certain time. Eight ladies entered, and the result was that Mrs. Lovelace of Ivanhoe took first prize, and Mrs. Reeves of Madoc, won second. The best decorated car prize went to Mr. Bateman of Madoc, while Mrs. Maybee won the prize for having the cleanest car.

The county road men were busily engaged on Tuesday fixing the street at the Montreal Bank corner, getting it ready for the cement which is to be laid at the intersection of Mill and North streets.

Harvest Services.

The Harvest Thanksgiving services of St. John's Anglican church was held on Sunday last. The Rev. J. A. C. Levason, of Bonarlaw was in charge. The church was suitably decorated for the occasion and large congregationes greeted the preacher both morning and evening. The choir rendered special music and Mrs. H. H. Alger delighted those present with her selections as solist.

'Sunday School Rally Day' of the Presbyterian church was observed in St. Andrew's church on Sunday. The program as prepared by the Provincial Sunday school authorities was carried out under the supervision of the minister, Rev. A. N. Reid, B.A. Thos. Foster, Helen Ward and Rosa Spry, pupils of the school, helped in the program by giving suitable readings.

The services at St. Paul's United church were withheld on Sunday night owing to the anniversary services at Carmel church, the rural appointment of St. Paul's. The ladies of Carmel church held a very successful fowl supper on Monday night in the ntw community hall on the lot adjoining. The attendance was the greatest ever. Supper was served from 6 to 8 o'clock, when Rev. Mr. Rowland, pastor of the church called the meeting to order and a pleasing program of music, song and readings, was rendered. The Rosebush orchestra of Glen Ross furnished the music. Miss Bell of Belleville, Mrs. Clancy of Frankford and Miss McConnell, of Mount Pleasant, gave vocal solos. Rev. F. Joblin of Rawdon and Rev. Doggett of Frankford, addressed the audience. Local talent of the church also contributed to the evening's entertainment. The proceeds amounted to over $180.00.

DIES AS RESULT OF EXPOSURE

He put the time of the accident as somewhere between one and two o'clock and as far as he knew nobody had seen it happen. That night he was working in the yard and the first thing he knew of Butcher being hurt was when he heard him calling for help "I was the first to reach him and found him lying by the railroad track. He told me to get an ambulance and the doctor. There was quite a delay in getting both as the operator had difficulty in calling a doctor so it was well over half an hour before either arrived."

Ephriam Wilson another employee of the company and teamster on the night of the accident gave evidence as to drawing the car out that night. He had drawn the car 100 yards when he came to the apex of the grade and the chain dropped off. The car then rolled down the grade about 150 yards.

It was about five minutes after the accident before Mr. Wilson got to where Butcher was lying. He asked him to send for his father and to not tell his mother.

Sergeant Arthur Thomas when on station duty that night received a phone call from H. Dodds and E. Lillico telling him that someone was calling for help near the C.P.R. bridge. When he got down there he found some men near the main line of the C.P.R.

"Butcher told me he slipped from the top of car when he was putting the brake one," said the witness.

Ernest Lillico said on morning of August 1st, he was awakened by downpour of rain and above the noise of the rain he heard the cry of a human voice. He called the police station, telling of the person crying for help.

Dr. Hewett said he received a telephone call about 2:15 and not knowing really where the place was and as it was a very wet night he did not arrive until 2:35. He found Butcher lying along the track quite conscious and soaking wet. He had him removed to the hospital.

"He told me how the accident happened. He said he had put a stick in the wheel to help braking the car and as he went to stop it the stick slipped and he fell forward."

The cause of death was given as shock although gas gangrene had set in in the stomach before he died. The doctor did not think if he had been picked up at once it would have saved his life.

love, and trust in the Heavenly Father and Christ. The beginners realize God in daily life. Hymns mean more to them than to the beginners. They can be taught love for worship and real unselfishness. In the junior divisions these same things are the aim, but we expect still more from them. They know God more truly and pledge allegience to Him. Expect them to do things, to help others without looking for money as a reward, to neip to develop right attitudes through learning the true meaning of facts in making right choices."

Rev. T. M. Wesley said that method of Bible study should be systematic, should have a time table and keep to it. "We should study the Bible first topically, that is, taking a subject at a time, such as love, or faith, and follow the Biblical references right through.

"Another method is that of the biographical or the men of the Bible. Study their history, their character and their work. God reveals His truth to the spiritual who have prepared themselves to receive it."

CREAM OF ASPARAGUS SOUP

1 bunch or can asparagus; 4 cups cold water; 2 slices onion; ½ tspn. sugar; blade of mace; 2 tblspns. butter; 2 tblspns. flour; 1 tspn. salt; 1-8 tspn. pepper; 2 cups Borden's St. Charles Milk; 1 egg yolk; dash of paprika.

If fresh asparagus used, remove tips and cook them in a little boiling salted water until tender; if canned, cut off tips and lay aside. Cut up stalks. Cover with cold water. Add onion, sugar, and mace. Cook until tender. Strain through sieve, pressing asparagus well to extract flavor. Melt butter in saucepan and stir in flour. Add salt, pepper, and asparagus puree. Continue stirring until thickened. Add one-and-a-half cups St. Charles Milk and the asparagus tips. Bring to boiling point, and simmer five minutes. Combine beaten egg yolk with the remaining milk and add to mixture. Let come to boil. Serve each portion with a dash of paprika over top.

POP-OVERS

2 eggs; 1 cup Borden's St. Charles Milk; 2 cups flour; ½ small tspn. salt; 1 cup water.

Beat the eggs ten minutes and then add the milk. Gradually add the flour, sifted, and the salt. Beat until absolutely smooth. Turn into hissing-hot, well-oiled gem pans and bake quickly.

LEMON MERINGUE PIE

¾ cup Borden's St. Charles Milk; ¾ cup hot water; 1¾ cups sugar; 4½ tblspns. corn starch; 1 tspn. butter; 2 eggs; juice 2 lemons; grated rind 1 lemon; few grains salt; 1 cooked pastry shell.

Combine the milk and water in a double boiler top, add the sugar and cornstarch, thoroughly mixed together, and cook fifteen minutes, stirring occasionally. Separate the eggs, beat the yolks light, combine them with a little of the hot milk, stir into the thickened mixture and cook five minutes longer, stirring occasionally. Then add the salt and when somewhat cooled stir in the lemon juice and rind, pour into the pastry shell, heap with a meringue made of two egg whites, and a third cup of powdered sugar, and cook in a slow oven for ten minutes until the meringue is firm and delicately browned.

TORONTO, Oct. 4. — (Canadian Press.)— Trading was light on the standard stock exchange to-day, with prices tending to firmness. Abana was down 10 at 4.30. Newbec's noon price was 65, down three. Hollinger recovered to 7.60, a net gain of 34. Sherritt Gordon was down three at 6.30 and Pend Oreille dropped sixty to 12.90. Teck Hughes, with a good volume of sales, was down 15 at .90. Mond Nickel gained 50 to 33.25.

Toronto Market Dull With Changes Small

TORONTO, Oct. 4. — (Canadian Press.) — International Nickel and Service Stations were the only live spots on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day. Service Stations was up 1½ at 4½ at noon and the former gained a point to 132. The noon price in both cases was below the morning high. Massey Harris showed considerable activity. Gypsum and Alabastine gained a point to 70 and Brazilian was up a half at 58. International Petroleum was fractionally lower at 38¾, as was British American Oil at 40½.

Upward Move Halted By Raskob's Warning

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—(Canadian Press.)—A sweep in stock prices today was temporarily checked by a heavy selling movement which followed the publication of a statement by John Raskob, former General Motors Executive, that prices had far outran demonstrated values and that a material re-adjustment was necessary. Early gains, which ran from two to eight points in many cases, were cut down in a few instances replaced by losses, but strong buying support was quickly provided and the market was headed upward under new leaders early in the afternoon. Call money renewed at 7½ percent. as against eight yesterday and then dropped to seven as a large volume of funds became available.

ATTEND THE DOG SHOW.

Now Being Held at Brock Street Rink To-day and To-morrow.

All dog lovers are reminded of the Dog Show, under the auspices of the local Kennel Club, now being held in Brock street rink. The show will continue to-night and all day to-morrow and tomorrow night.

SOAKS RIGHT IN AND LIMBERS UP STIFF JOINTS

Pharmacists Call it "Joint Ease" Because Its For Swollen, Sore, Painful, Creaky Joints Only.

It took a good many years to get together a combination of pain subduing and swelling reducing agents declared to be the one remedy that almost instantly penetrates through skin and flesh and starts right in to make swollen, inflamed, creaky, pain racked joints as good as new.

They call this new and wonderful preparation "Joint-Ease" because the medical man who turned the trick worked for years to perfect some low-priced remedy that would really benefit the millions of people who have one or more joints that need helpful attention.

So "Joint-Ease" is prepared only for people who have a swollen, painful, creaky, distorted or stiff joint, whether it be in knee, elbow, shoulder, ankle, neck or finger and whether it is caused by rheumatism or something else.

Of course, it can't help but quickly put an end to such superficial ailments as lumbago, neuralgia, neuritis, aching muscles, stitch in the side, crick in the neck or sore feet because of its penetrating action, but what it is really recommended for is joint ailments of any nature whatever.

Ask for a tube of "Joint-Ease." You an use it several times in one evening for quick results, beause it gets under the skin, it starts right in to clean up all joint trouble.

NEW YORK WINS

to take Dugan's hoist. Two runs, two hits, no errors.

Fifth Inning.

St. Louis—Hafey struck out for the second time, swinging for the third strike. Harper singled into left field for St. Louis' first hit. Wilson forced Harper, Lazzeri to Koenig. Wilson went out stealing, Bengough to Koenig. No runs, one hit, no errors.

New York—Frisch raced in fast to take Bengough's roller and toss him out. Hoyt rolled weakly to Frisch and was thrown out at first. Paschal pop filed out to Harper. No runs, no hits, no errors

Sixth Innings.

St. Louis—Maranville filed out to Ruth, who took the ball near the foul line. Sherdel missed the third strike. Douthit walked. High filed out to Meusel. No runs, no hits, no errors.

New York—Sherdel tossed out Koenig at first. Ruth fanned, taking third called strike. Frisch tossed out Gehrig at first. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Seventh Inning.

St. Louis—Durocner went in to play second base, in place of the injured Lazzeri. Koenig threw out Frisch at first. Bottomley scored on a home run drive into the right field stands. It was a smashing hit. Hafey sent out a long fly to Meusel, who almost lost the ball in the sun. Harper fouled out to Dugan. One run, one hit, no errors.

New York—Meusel sent a slow drive to Sherdel and was thrown out. Durocher struck out, swinging for the third strike. Dugan's grounder was kicked around by Maranville, and it was an error for the shortstop. Bengough filed out to Harper. No runs, no hits, one error.

Eighth Inning.

St. Louis—Wilson lined out to Paschal. Orsatti batted for Maranville. Orsatti got a base on balls. Holm batted for Sherdel. Holm lined out to Paschel, and Orsatti had to race back to first. Douthit fanned, taking a third called strike. No runs, no hits, no errors

New York—Thevenow now sent to play shortstop for St. Louis. Silvester Johnson went in to pitch for the Cardinals. Hoyt filed out to Douthit. Koenig lashed a single past Frisch. Ruth singled into left. Koenig stopping at second base. Koenig scored on Gehrig's single into right. Ruth stopping at second. Meusel popped to Thevenow. One run, three hits, no errors.

Ninth Inning.

St. Louis—Douthit went into centre field for New York. High struck out, swinging for the third strike. Koenig robbed Frisch of a hit, taking the ball deep on the grass and making a rifle shot throw. Bottomley singled sharply to right. Hafey filed out to Ruth. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Cast aside during the gold rush of '49, large crystals taken from a California mine are now sought for the making of lenses and fused quartz for ultraviolet ray instruments. Several years ago, a single crystal, weighing 2,200 pounds, was dug out of gravels, where, it is said, more than $2,000,000 in gold was taken during the famous rush period. Many of the crystals weight 100 pounds and more.

UNCLE WIGGILY

By HOWARD R. GARIS

Five-days Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE MUMPS

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

One evening, when Uncle Wiggily was eating in his hollow stump bungalow with his wife, Nurse Jane and the forty 'leven little bunny rabbits (or forty twelve if you count Baby Bunty) Mrs. Longears passed her husband the pickles.

"Of, don't, if you please!" exclaimed the rabbit gentleman with a look of pain and he held his paws to his face.

"Why, what's the matter?" asked Nurse Jane. "Those are very good pickles. I made them myself."

"Oh, please, please don't!" cried Uncle Wiggily. "Take them out of my sight!" and he held one paw to his eace and with the other covered his fyes.

Dr. Possum came to see him.

"This is queer," said his wife. "Perhaps, Wiggy dear, you would rather have lemons!"

"Oh, don't! Please don't! They are even worse! Oh, what a pain in my jaws!" cried the rabbit gentleman and he had to leave the table, much to the surprise of the forty 'leven little bunnies (or forty twelve if you count Baby Bunty).

"Whatever is the matter?" asked Nurse.

"I know," said Mrs. Longears suddenly. My husband has the mumps!"

And so Uncle Wiggily had. His two cheeks began to swell up like the paper bags which Jackie Bow Wow blew full of wind to crack in school. And if you have ever had the mumps (and I hope you never do) you know how much worse the pain is if you look at pickles or lemons or if some one even speaks the words.

So Uncle Wiggily could only eat soft stuff like corn starch pudding and even that hurt. He went to bed. Dr. Possum came to see him.

"You will be all right in a few days," said the animal doctor, taking some powders and pills out of the bag he carried on his long, curling tail. "Meanwhile keep as warm as you can."

So to keep warm, a few days later, when he was half way over the mumps, Uncle Wiggily sat out in the sun on the back porch of his hollow stump bungalow. He was wondering how he caught the mumps.

"I certainly didn't run after them to catch them," said Mr. Longears to himself. "They must have caught me." Dr. Possum said some of the forty twelve little bunnies might have brought the mumps home from school for their daddy. But each little rabbit said:

"Oh, no! I look in my pockets every day when I come home from school and never were there any mumps in my pocket."

"Well, anyhow, I have them," said Mr. Longears sorrowfully enough. "And I wish I could give them away to some of the Bad Chaps. I would not want to give the mumps to any of my friends."

Sitting out in the warm sun made Uncle Wiggily's mump pain feel better and pretty soon the rabbit gentleman fell asleep. He did not have far to fall for he was quite sleepy when he went out on the porch. Nurse Jane and Mrs. Longears went down town to buy a new gold can opener at the six and seven cent store and that left the bunny gentleman home alone. And pretty soon, as Uncle Wiggily slept, along came the Fox.

"Ah ha!" said the Fox to himself as he saw the sleeping rabbit. "At last this is a good chance to catch Uncle Wiggily —while he is asleep! I'll do it!" Sneaking up, the Bad Chap with the help of the Bob Cat who came along just then, picked up Mr. Longears and carried him away. And Uncle Wiggily was sleeping so soundly, on account of having been awake a number of nights with the mumps pain, that he never woke up. That is he didn't awaken for quite a while and when he did, the poor bunny found himself in the den of the Fox.

"Dear me! Where am I?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"I have you at last!" snarled the Fox. And when Uncle Wiggily saw that he was in the Bad Chap's den all his mump pain seemed to go away all of a sudden.

"What are you going to do with me? asked the rabbit.

"You'll soon find out!" snarled the Fox. "The Bob Cat and I carried you here to have supper."

Well did Mr. Longears know what this meant. But he did not sit down and cry as some would have done after being caught by Bad Chaps. Instead Uncle Wiggily began to think of how to fool the Fox and get away. And he did, too.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 5, 1928.

Good and evil planetary influences contend today, according to astrology which reads in the stars warning to be careful while the configuration prevails.

The mind today may be receptive where destructive and depressing thoughts are concerned. Women especially should maintain a positive mental attitude.

This is a threatening day for aviators and aviation. A serious accident in which many lives are lost is forecast for this month.

Newspapers and magazines will benefit at this time, but they must beware of libel suits which are indicated by the positing of the stars.

This should be a favorable day for banks and banking. It is well to pay old debts and to face one's financial situation, since there will be little chance of too much optimism under this direction of the stars.

All the signs seem to presage for newspapers a period of unparallelled development and prosperity. Inventions are to change many methods now employed in the dissemination of news, astrologers foretell.

Women are rather well directed today and should benefit by pursuing domestic and social affairs, thus avoiding public work.

The day is fairly promising for theatres and again success is promised to many independent enterprises outside the regular commercial playhouses.

This is read as an auspicious rule under which to shop and those who read the stars announce that the rule makes for bargains and for merchandise that is satisfactory.

There is a good sign for evening meetings on this date when the people will be inclined to hear speeches as well as to partake of refreshments.

Return to the simple life is to be much preached as the social season opens, astrologers predict, for there are aspects making toward the elimination of non-essentials.

Men are to be much interested in attire, and as women return to modest dress, men will wear striking clothing, it is foretold.

Persons whose birthdate it is probably will experience changes in the coming year, which should be eventful and marked by much happiness through friends. The subjects of Virgo usually have charm of manner and easily gain popularity.

Children born on this day probably will be restless and fond of travel. Many fine mathematicians are born under this sign which claims innumerable subjects of distinction. Virgo people are apt to be leaders and inclined to domineer.

Why BOVRIL prevents that Sinking Feeling

Why is it that one has such a fine feeling of buoyancy after drinking a cup of Bovril? Modern research has shown that in addition to protcins of exceptionally high food value, beef has certain unique powers of stimulating cellular activity—that is to say of stimulating vitality.

Bovril is the concentrated essence of this "vitality power" of beef. That is why Bovril is such a powerful stimulant and sustainer, why, in fact, "Bovril prevents that sinking feeling."

XLIII—TRUANT THOUGHTS

Sanderson struck across the road, reckless of traffic, and Nairn followed hard at his heels.

"I'm not going to leave you till you've heard what I've got to say," he said obstinately.

Sanderson stood still. His face was white and his eyes hard as he looked down at Garry, then he shrugged his shoulders.

They went into a musty bar with sawdust on the floor and wooden tables, and sat down at one of them.

"Whisky-and-soda?" Nairn asked.

"No, nothing. Well, I'll have a beer."

Sanderson sat with his long legs stuck out in front of him and his queer hat tilted over his eyes. It was just his cursed luck, he told himself, that today of all happy days he should run into this fellow.

"Say what you've got to say and be done with it," he said brusquely after a moment.

"Tell me what Sally said. I wrote to her, but she never answered. Tell me what she said."

"Nothing, except that she never wished to speak of you again."

"I hope so."

"And she can really walk."

"Yes. She improves every day."

There was a little silence, then Nairn said hoarsely:

"It was that fellow Akers. I thought you'd have guessed."

Sanderson stared at him with unblinking eyes.

"Akers?" he echoed.

"Yes. I told you that we met at the club—the day after the operation. I told you that we talked."

"Well?"

Garry's eyes fell.

"He told me—hellish things—about himself—about you and——"

"Go on."

"And about—Sally." Nairn's voice dropped to a shamed whisper. Sanderson did not move, but the long, thin hand lying on the table slowly clenched itself into a cruel fist.

"About—Sally?" he said slowly.

"Yes, and I believed it. I was half mad. I believed it. Not that I'm fit to judge any woman, but she—you see, I—I thought so much of her——"

Philip laughed mockingly.

"My heavens, you must have done!" he said with a bitter sneer.

Well, I did," Garry insisted brokenly. "I'm not like you. You'd have taken it differently, I know, but, you see"—he struck the table with his clenched hand—"it was just as if someone had poisoned my mind. I tried not to believe it; I called him a liar."

"Some hero!" Philip broke in insultingly, but the younger man went on, unheeding the interruption.

"It was while I was waiting downstairs in the nursing home for you that I knew I could never face it. It came over me like a horrible nightmare from which I wanted to run."

"So you ran—eh?"

"Yes."

Philip raised himself.

"It's all very interesting, no doubt, but not to me. I'm in a hurry. If you've nothing more to say——"

"But I have—I have!" Garry was boyishly incoherent in his earnestness. "I want to apologize to you. I want to kill that man Akers. I want to see Sally, to try and explain everything—to ask her pardon——"

"Sally will not be interested."

Garry grew white.

"You mean—she couldn't forgive me—doesn't care enough—never did? Is that it?"

"I mean that she's going to marry me," he said with deliberation.

* * *

As soon as Philip had left the cottage Mrs. Kiff took Sally out into the garden and "settled her," as she called it, in the hammock under the trees which Philip had hung for her with such care.

"And get a nice sleep now," she admonished her. "And be nice and fresh when Mr. Sanderson comes back."

"When did he say he was coming?" Sally inquired languidly.

Mrs. Kiff smiled knowingly.

"He said about six," she answered. "But it wouldn't kill me with shock to see him walk in soon after lunch. He won't stay away a minute longer than he has to, you bet your sweet life!"

Sally smiled dreamily. She had not yet conquered her vanity where men were concerned, and she liked to feel that Philip was never really happy when he was away from her.

"I'll try to sleep," she said submissively; "but I'm not a bit tired."

Mrs. Kiff lingered.

"And when you're married," she said after a moment, explosively, "I suppose it'll be an end of me? I shan't be wanted any more—eh?"

"You'll hurt yourself. Did you ever see sich a thing, now! And doctor's orders that you was to be slow and sure all the time!"

"I shan't hurt myself," Sally answered crossly. "And if I do, it's your fault for talking such nonsense. Why won't you be wanted? What am I going to do without you, I should like to know?"

Mrs. Kiff spread her fat hands.

"Married ladies has their own ways of doing things," she said tentatively. "Maybe Mr. Sanderson will wish to travel—and me such a bad sailor as was sick all the way from London to Margate!"

"Travel!" said Sally scornfully.

She stared at Mrs. Kiff's perturbed face for a moment, then lay back among her cushions. "Well, if he wants to travel he'll leave me behind," she said flatly. "I've never been out of England, and I don't want to go. This is good enough for me." She waved her slim hand towards the garden. "It's all I want," she said again. "A little house, and a garden, and to know that fields are out there beyond, and woods—woods—woods——" She repeated the last word in a whisper.

Mrs. Kiff's brow cleared.

"Well, so long as I know where I am," she said prosaically.

"Of course you know where you are," Sally answered sharply. "And where you'll stay, so don't talk any more rubbish."

But when Mrs. Kiff turned to go Sally said to her:

"Come here!"

And when she came, Sally looked up with her most enticing smile.

"You don't want to leave me, do you?" she asked.

Tears welled into Mrs. Kiff's eyes.

"It's not so much what I wants——" she demurred.

"No, thank goodness, it's what I want," Sally broke in. "So kiss me, and don't be silly."

Mrs. Kiff kissed her heartily enough.

"And if you ain't good to Mr. Sanderson——" she threatened.

Sally sighed and closed her eyes.

"I'll be good to him," she promised.

Mrs. Kiff went away, but Sally lay very still, listening to the sounds of summer in the garden all around her. The hum of a bee in a rose close by; the sleepy twitter of birds in the noonday heat, and somewhere across fields the barking of a dog.

It was all so peaceful, so restful!

"I ought to be happy," Sally told herself severely. "I've got everything I want, and yet——"

The thought snapped of itself. Not everything she wanted—not a man with a cheery smile and a firm handclasp; not the one person in all the world whom she loved and for whom she craved.

Sally's attitude of mind towards Garry Nairn was a strange one.

It had never occurred to her to ask him for explanations; she had not even passionately rebelled because he had left her; she had just accepted it as something cutting off a relationship which had all along been too beautiful to last.

Compared with her love for Josh Akers, her love for Garry Nairn was clean and young, and like a lovely flower. She just accepted him with all his faults, all his boyishness, all his shortcomings. He had done nothing for her except make her feel completely happy, and so she loved him.

At first when he left her she hoped she would die. She had almost prayed that she might never get any better; in the nursing home she had lain awake night after night, with her hands clenched under the coverlet, trying to keep back the sobbing that would rise in her throat.

Garry had gone! Gone! What was there left for her in life? Why need she make an effort to get well? If ever she could walk again, what was the use of it to her? There would be no Garry to walk with.

And then one night, when her bodily and mental pain together were more than she could bear, she spoke her thought aloud:

And she had heard someone sobbing beside her—dry, ugly, sobbing—and knew it was Philip. With infinite difficulty she turned her head on the pillow to look at him. There was only a subdued light in the room, but she could see the dark outline of his head and his hunched shoulders, and infinite pity and compassion had driven all other thoughts from her heart.

No matter how badly Garry Nairn had hurt her, she owed something to Sanderson—more than she could ever repay—and yet in her ingratitude she was wishing that she could die and leave him behind, unthanked and uncomforted.

That night had been the turning-point in Sally's life. From that moment she had tried honestly to put Sanderson first, to keep him always before her eyes, so that she would never forget her great debt to him.

It was only when she was alone with her thoughts that she let them slip back to Garry; only when there was nobody to see that in an aching imagination she let herself remember the strong feel of his arm about her, and the rough tweed of his coat beneath her cheek.

Love is a strange thing, given strangely and often most unwisely.

HARVEST FESTIVALS

ST. JOHN'S, IDA.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MOUNT PLEASANT, Oct. 4.—The Harvest Thanksgiving Services of St. John's Church, Ida, were held on Sunday, September 30. The church was suitably decorated for the occasion with grain, fruit and flowers, emblems of a bountiful harvest. At the evening service the choir gave the anthem, "The Earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof," and solos were sung by Miss E. Russell, of Millbrook.

The morning service was followed by a celebration of Holy Communion and the speaker was the Rev. Canon W. C. Allen, Rector of the parish, who took for his text, II. Corinthians, 6:1: "We then as workers together with Him...." Canon Allen stressed the point of thanksgiving throughout the sermon, and spoke of the glorious privilege that is ours, in being co-workers with God. He brought out the fact that some work only because they have to, some only for the money they receive, while others because of the opportunity they have in helping build the Kingdom of God. No matter how small our task may be, if we do it together with Christ and for His glory, there is a splendid dignity for all men, women and children engaged therein. He mentioned how Christ was engaged in labor while here on earth and how His coming to earth has dignified our labors; how God and man have their parts together, as in the harvest we plough the fields and plant the seed but it is God's Almighty Hand that feeds and waters the grain by sending the sunshine and the rain, the snow in winter and the warmth in summer. All good gifts around us come from Him. In closing Canon Allen asked that each one might realize his share of the work, and be co-workers together in the Master's vineyard.

Evening Service.

The Rev. Alex Allen, of Christ Church, Oakland, Calif., and brother of Canon Allen, was the speaker at the evening service and expressed great pleasure in being present at this time of Thanksgiving and because of St. John's Church is the mother church in the Parish of Cavan, it being the first church in the parish and the church where his father was rector for fifty-two years. He recalled fond recollections of his boyhood days and of his parents and referred to the different memorials that have been placed in the church in their memory. His text was from the Gospel of St. John 4:35 "Lift up your eyes and look unto the fields, for they are white already unto the harvest." The sermon was missionary and based on the story of Christ revealing Himself as the Messiah to the woman of Samaria, at the well and of how the woman left her waterpot and went to the city, saying, "Come see a Man, which told me all things that I ever did. Is not this the Christ"? As a result of this woman going forth and sowing seed for Christ, many of the Samaritans of that city believed on Him and besought Him to tarry with them. He compared our lives to the harvest and we as sowers in the field of life and stressed the spirit of sacrifice in our lives and of service for Christ; how the sowing of seeds of joy around us and a life lived in contact with Christ brings forth fruit both here and throughout Eternity.

TRINITY CHURCH, CAVAN

(Examiner Correspondence)

MILLBROOK, Oct. 4.— Trinity Church, the smallest of the four churches in the large parish of Millbrook and Cavan, observed its festival services on Sunday, Rev. P. C. Howard preaching appropriate sermons for the occasion.

The church was beautifully decorated with flowers, fruits, grain, and vegetables, and the hymns chosen were in accord with the spirit of the special season.

Mrs. Howard contributed a solo, "In the Garden," at the evening service, her voice being heard to fine advantage in the selection which peculiarly suited the theme which was developed in the sermon.

Rev. Mr. Howard chose his text from John 4:37: "And herein is that saying true, One soweth and another reapeth", and after referring particularly to Christ's interview with the women of Samaria, and the harvest of souls which followed, "And many of the Samaritans of that city believed on Him for the saying of the woman which testified, He told me all that ever I did" he proceeded to make earnest appeal for spiritual fruitage on the lives of the listeners.

Before closing the service Mr. Howard spoke feelingly of the constant kindness he and Mrs. Howard had experienced in their intercourse with the congregation at Trinity Church, and mentioned their personal regret that the pastoral tie was to be severed in the immediate future, their departure for his new charge at Havelock being made this week.

Assurance was given that the friendships formed would be lasting in quality, and the emulation of the example of Christ in the daily walk and conversation was urged, daily prayer being one means stressed whereby this desired result might be brought to pass.

At the conclusion of the services all present took advantage of the opportunity to say good-bye to their well-loved minister, and to give expression to sincere regard for both Mr. and Mrs. Howard, and to genuine sorrow that the pastorate, which had only lasted for two years, should be brought to a close.

Had Dandruff And Pimples 2 Years Cuticura Healed

"I was troubled for two years with dandruff and pimples. The pimples were scattered over my face, neck and head. They were hard, large and red, and festered and scaled over. They itched and burned badly, and when I scratched, it caused them to spread. The dandruff affected the growth of my hair, and it fell out badly. I lost a lot of sleep on account of the trouble.

"I sent for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and after using it I got relief. I purchased more, and after using three cakes of Soap and two boxes of Ointment I was healed." (Signed) J. W. Polenchuk, Donwell, Sask.

EDITORIAL

I hope you boys and girls are not forgetting the competition this week on "A Day in October." Just write a letter or a story or poem, and send it in before Saturday — a fine big 300-page book will be given the winner.

And don't forget the other prizes of pictures given for getting one or more members.

Extra Special

One of our members has a very nice father, who likes the club. He has offered a wrist watch as a prize for some club competition.

Don't forget, only members can compete. Particulars will be announced later.

LETTERS

Dear Seck.:

I'm coming to join your big club because the members seem to have so much fun. I like your stories every Saturday, and the letters are sure great.

Yours fair and square,
Edward Burton.

We're glad to have you, Edward, and I'll be looking for those members.

BAKERS PROMISED RELIEF FROM BAN ON SUNDAY WORK

Assurance of Non-Interference Received, President Tells Association.

CONDEMN RAISIN TAX.

Canada's Production of Bread 850,000,000 Pounds Annually.

TORONTO, Oct. 3.—Problems and progress of the baking industry in Canada were examined with microscopic thoroughness at the annual convention of the Bread and Cake Bakers' Association of Canada, which opened yesterday at the King Edward Hotel.

The worth of this year's wheat crop the value of salt in commercial baking, advances in the technique of cake-making, and similar topics took up the major portion of yesterday's session.

Questions stressed in the annual report of President James Dutton included the danger of over-concentration of business through mergers, the risk of reduced profits involved in high-pressure increase of business, the annoyance of the tax on raisins, and the progress made in relieving bakers of the regulations in the Factory Act forbidding Sunday baking.

Mr. Dutton reported that latest figures showed $80,000,000 invested in the baking industry, representing an increase of 10 per cent., and an estimated value of products manufactured of $112,000,000, an increase of four per cent. The cost of raw materials used is $56,000,000, and about 14,000 persons are employed in nearly 3,000 establishments. The annual production of bread in Canada is about 850,000,000 pounds.

Sunday Baking Necessary

The matter of the stricture of the Factory Act on Sunday labor, Mr. Dutton said, had been taken up with the Federal Department of Labor. Assurance had been received, he reported, that until such time as legislation could be introduced excepting bakers from the regulations, bakeries which operated on Sunday would not be molested.

The presidential report dwelt at length on the success achieved at the Trent Institute, the Canadian School of Baking conducted in connection with the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph. Students at the Institute now come from all over the Dominion, and visitors from England, the United States and even such far away spots as New Zealand, come frequently to the school. The Association is back of the school to the extent of $150,000.

Tests of this year's wheat crop had determined that it was of an excellent grade to use in baking, according to Dr. R. Harcourt, chemist at the Ontario Agricultural College.

The necessity of the use of salt in the baking industry was emphasized by George E. Collop, of the Canadian Salt Company.

He remarked that there was enough salt in the mines of South-western Ontario to last 90,000 years at the present rate of consumption.

Other addresses yesterday were those by M. Cavanagh, of the Stein Hall Manufacturing Company, on "Good Cakes," and by H. C. Maedel, assistant director of the Canadian School of Baking, on "The Science of Baking."

Last evening was devoted to competitions to select prize winning cakes made by members of the Association.

RELIEF FROM GAS STOMACH PAINS DIZZINESS

The doctors tell us that 90 per cent. of all sickness is due to stomach and bowel troubles. You can't be well if your digestion is bad; you are likely to get sick unless you relish food and digest it properly.

Tanlac has a wonderful record as relief from digestive troubles, even those of year's standing.

Mrs. George Bell, of 317 Grey St., London, Ont., writes as follows:

"I had suffered for years with Stomach trouble. Gas would form and bloat me up so I could hardly catch my breath. My nerves were shattered; I did not sleep, became weak and run-down; and spent enough on medicines to furnish a home.

Two months after starting Tanlac, however, I had gained eleven pounds and was entirely free of indigestion. Now I have no gas, no pains in my stomach. The headaches have disappeared. My nerves are calm. I sleep like a child, am always ready for my meals and my housework seems like play to me."

If you suffer from gas, pains in the stomach or bowels, dizziness, nausea, constipation or torpid liver; if you have no appetite, can't sleep and are nervous and all run-down, you need Tanlac. It is good, pure medicine, made of roots, herbs and barks. Get a bottle from your druggist today. Money back if it doesn't help you.

Contest Winners.

A special contest was arranged for ornamentation of cakes several storeys in height, within a given time, and was won by Fred Haynes, of Toronto, after keen competition with W. Wooten of Toronto, and Fred Smith, also of this city, who came second and third. The Toronto Retail Cake Bakers' Cup, for fancy cakes, was won by J. A. Horrocks, of Toronto, second and third places going to W Bourne of Toronto and Smith and McKay, of Yorkton, Sask.

The Lawlor Silver Shield, for fruit cake baking, was won by T. Anderson of Durham, with W. Horton of Burlington, and the Canada Bread plant at Walkerville second and third. The Turnbull Cup, for layer cakes, was awarded to Grant and Hastie, of Brockville. Second and third prizes went to T. G. Sedgwick, of Mount Pleasant Road, Toronto, and J. A. Hirrocks. The silver shield for cherry cakes, offered by the Allied Trades of the Baking Industry organization, was won by the Daylight Bakery, Toronto. T. G. Sedgwick and John McFarland, both of Toronto, came second and third.

A "Touch" of Indigestion?

The trouble is, that indigestion may not stay "just a touch." It keeps getting worse. More gas. More pain after eating. First thing you know, you have to give up eating the things you like and go on a diet. You can avoid all this by starting in now with a morning glass of ABBEY's. For ABBEY's stops little troubles before they become big ones. ABBEY's rests the stomach; keeps it sweet and clean; helps the whole digestive tract to function in a normal, natural way.

Many people take a glass of ABBEY's two or three mornings a week, just as a preventative—to keep themselves free of a "touch" of Indigestion or Biliousness—a "touch" of Headache or Rheumatism—a "touch" of Liver or Kidney Trouble—or of any of those little ills which—if neglected—so often lead to serious troubles.

Take...
ABBEY'S
The Morning Health Salt

Like the family physician, who has won your confidence by years of priceless service, so ABBEY's has won the goodwill of thousands of users because of its absolute dependability in times of need. Today, as half a century ago, ABBEY's always comes first to mind when the use of an effervescing saline is indicated. 428

REV. WILLIAM ALLAN SPEAKS IN GUELPH

Will Address District Meeting of Teachers' Institute There.

Rev. William Allen motored to Guelph to-day, where he will take part in the district meetings of the South Wellington and City of Guelph Teachers' Institute, which are being held to-day (Thursday) and Friday.

Mr. Allan addressed the Easter meeting of the Association in Toronto on "A Scotsman at Home and Abroad," and as a result of the pleasure given on that occasion, invitations to deliver the same lecture were received from Hamilton, Campbellford, and Guelph, Mr. Allan deciding at this time to go to the last-named city. This address will be given at to-night's assembly.

EXPANSION AT RILEY & HICKEY'S

Business Growth of 18 Months Necessitates the Extension of the Clothing Salesroom.

Just a year and a half ago, the new firm of well-known local boys, Messrs. Riley and Hickey started their men's wear business at 327 George street. Several definite policies were adopted—oen being a low scale of working profits, naming their place of business the "store of popular prices," and another being a resolve to run their business without sales. The result has fully justified expectations, and at present the showroom for clothing is being expanded the better to care for the rapidly growing volume of business.

The work is already being pushed ahead, and the difficulty of handling the selling end overcome by a lowered scale of prices to induce quick decisions and sudden relief of the overcrowding at present experienced. Their large advertisement in this issue tells the story, not of a sale, but of an opportunity.

The lowered prices will last only until closing time on Saturday October 13.

DRINKING BOUT IN DEATH HOUSE

Father and Son Battle While Awaiting Body For Funeral at Cobourg.

POLICE CHIEF INJURED.

COBOURG, Oct. 4.—Under arrest following a brutal fight in which 70-year-old Chief of Police Ruse had his nose broken, William McKenzie, Sr., and his son, Alex., may not be able to attend the funeral today of the elder man's youngest son, William, Jr., aged 2.

Terrified women's screams and the crying of children caused the undertaker, arriving at the home with the baby's body in a casket early Tuesday evening, to turn around and call the police. In a brutal fight, which police allege, terminated several hours' drinking, the father and the son, Alex., were trying to choke each other, it is claimed.

House in Darkness

The house was in darkness and the two men were rolling about on the floor it is said, when Chief Ruse and Constables Storey, Noble and McKee arrived. With some difficulty, Chief Ruse forced the elder McKenzie into a chair and was pleading with him to be quiet for the sake of his wife and the dead son whose body lay outside. Suddenly, McKenzie lashed out with all his strength and struck the police chief on the face, breaking his nose.

With this move, the fighting started anew. When the constables grappled with the angry father, the son, who had been prone on the floor, jumped up and piled in. Tumbling and wrestling in the narrow darkened hall, it took the officers some minutes to overpower the pair and get them into the police car. On the way to the jail, McKenzie, Sr., it is said, threatened to shoot Constable Noble first chance he got. Only when the constables drew their billies were the men cowed.

Remanded in Court

Both men appeared in court yesterday, McKenzie, Sr., being charged with assaulting an officer, while the son is held on a drunkenness charge. They were remanded until Saturday. Questioning of the men revealed no specific cause for their quarrel.

Chief Ruse, who is among the oldest police chiefs in the Dominion, was confined to his home yesterday, suffering severely from the broken nose and the shock of his experience.

addressed to every serious-minded and public-spirited citizen!

THE NATIONAL COUNCIL OF WOMEN are making their first appeal for public support in the vital work this body of public-spirited women are carrying on in their effort to bring about improved conditions for the Women and Children of Canada. That this body may continue its services to the needy . . . that the excellent work so ably started may continue . . . YOU must help.

From the Atlantic to the Pacific this great organization draws its membership from the flower of Canadian womanhood — mothers and wives of the Dominion. It exerts a powerful influence for good on the life of community, province, and nation.

The Council was founded in 1893 by the Marchioness of Aberdeen and Temair as the second body of its kind in the world. During its thirty-five years, it has occupied an increasingly important place in the realms of Canadian art, literature, education, religion, philanthropy, and social service.

In fifty towns and cities, including all principal centres of the Dominion, it is represented by Local Councils, each of which is composed of from ten to one hundred women's associations.

Other nationally organized women's groups are affiliated with it.

The Council's Platform is set forth in the titles of its standing committees, each of which is at work on some problem of National import. Conveners and members have special knowledge of the subjects with which the committees deal. The National Standing committees are:

Arts and Letters.
Child Welfare.
Cinema and Printed Matter.
Citizenship.
House and Town Planning
Household Economics.
Immigration.
League of Nations
Mental Hygiene.
Moral Standards.
National Recreation
Press.
Public Health.
Taxation.

Laws Concerning Women and Children

As a new need arises, a new committee is formed — when a committee achieves its goal, its members are released for other duties. In this way the Council is ever in step with the nation and the times.

Many national problems have been solved by this policy. One of them — the providing of skilled medical attention for poor families, or those of limited means, was cared for early in the history of the Council by the establishment of The Victorian Order of Nurses. These splendid women will be found on their errands of mercy in the slums of large cities and in sparsely settled districts where doctors have not yet become established.

As mentioned before, the Council secured supervised playgrounds. Through its efforts, it has succeeded in having Domestic Science and Manual Training added to the Curriculum, and Medical and Dental inspection later introduced into the schools. It demonstrated the need of women judges and police in cases involving women and girls — in some places this was done by paying these officials' salaries until civil authorities conceded their value.

The Council was instrumental in having the Mothers' Allowance Act passed, and in securing a Federal divorce law, giving equality in divorce between man and wife and in raising the age of consent to eighteen years. Through its influence the minimum wage was established, and mothers were granted the right of co-guardianship of their children.

These are some of the national achievements. The Council has an equally imposing record in the provincial and community fields.

The Council has the human resource to study problems, the ability to work out solutions, and the power to concentrate the influence of its member organizations. Its service to Canada would be of much greater value, however, if it did not have to face the obstacle — sometimes insurmountable — of inadequate finances. The revenue of the Council has been derived from the Two Dollar admission fee paid into local Councils by each Society, which in turn has been forwarded to the National Council with the Five Dollar Voting Fee of the Council and Ten Dollar Voting Fee of the National Organization Societies; but with increasing expense in conducting the work, this revenue is inadequate.

An assured income will enable it to develop an orderly method of study, planning, and action. TO ACCOMPLISH THIS, THE COUNCIL ASKS A FOUNDATION FUND OF $200,000 WHICH, WHEN INVESTED BY A BOARD OF TRUSTEES, WILL YIELD $10,000 ANNUALLY.

The workers are giving freely of their time and effort . . . efficient organization is complete and definite proof of the necessity of this body in the welfare of Canada today has been established . . . it now remains for every public-spirited citizen to contribute to the fund that will ensure this work being carried out year after year as long as the need is present.

The canvassers who are soliciting your contribution are volunteer workers contributing their time and effort to this cause . . . a favourable reception is asked for them . . . that their work may be lightened, and to enable them to cover as many as possible during this campaign, you are asked to forward any financial contribution you care to make to the Honorary Treasurer of The National Council of Women Foundation Fund, care of Mr. Merdy, Manager, Canadian Bank of Commerce at Kingston, Ontario.

Day by day throughout the Dominion the 200,000 members of The National Council of Women of Canada keep a constant watch on affairs in community, province, and nation. Whenever they are needed, they serve.

They perform a public service in which there is no self-interest. Their work in all cases is purely voluntary, and the only reward is that which comes from a good deed well done. There is no way of numbering the lives that have been saved, or of placing a yardstick upon the happiness and comfort that have been increased by their efforts.

In addition to these things — they care for many problems that otherwise would fall upon the communities, increasing the burden of the taxpayer.

The Council women will do their part in the raising of the Foundation Fund. But it will not be possible to raise the entire amount within the membership. Each member of the Council is an active worker in one or more component organizations to which she devotes her spare money.

For this reason The Council must go outside of its own ranks to secure part of the Foundation Fund, and since its work is for the good of Canada, it feels justified in asking Canadians to better the means of that work.

By aiding this cause you will pay a tribute to Canadian womanhood; you will help them in their constructive work. You will enable them to uphold Canada's proud position among the nations of the world council.

Two hundred thousand women — Canadian wives and mothers — ask you to help.

The National Council of Women can boast the following achievements

SUPERVISION OF PLAYGROUNDS
THE MOTHERS' ALLOWANCE ACT
REVISED FEDERAL DIVORCE LAW
MINIMUM WAGE ACT
WOMEN MAGISTRATES
WOMEN POLICE MATRONS
CO-GUARDIANSHIP OF CHILDREN ACT

A smart little chapeau in a George street store, of green felt and grosgrain, was most alluring, as was another model of velvet jewelled with gold and black pailettes.

I am told that confessional magazines are doing a lot to promote a higher regard for morals in this country, and that many people who read those periodicals are made better by so doing. I should imagine a contradictory state of affairs, for when a girl has had accepted a story of her one sin and has received payment for her confession at the rate of two cents a word, naturally temptation would say to her: "Go and sin some more."

• • •

Eight dollars a week, I have been told, is the average amount which a Peterborough girl has left for clothes, recreation and culture after paying for her board and room. Conscientious, these Peterborough girls? The average American business girl buys her clothes, recreation and (sometimes) culture long before she thinks of her rent. The amount she has left over may be more than eight dollars, but it is often not enough for room and board.

It has been said that 'Back of every worth-while accomplishment by man there is always a woman. Sometimes she is the mother, but more often she is a wife whose devotion, sacrifice and sympathetic understanding, together with patient and helpful counsel, serve to inspire the man and spur him on to success.'

• • •

Some of us who are forever trying to improve our memories need to train our forgetteries a bit. It's all right to try to remember the important events of life, but it's wise too, to forget some things. It will pay us to forget the sorrows and slights of yesterday. It will do us good to forget our tears and our heartaches. It will inspire our courage if we determinedly forget the injustices and disappointments we have known. We need to forget all the negatives and hold fast to the positives. Every tomorrow is an opportunity to profit by the hurts of today. So, when tomorrow comes, let's forget to-day.

• • •

Life's tears serve a purpose. Just as there would be no sensation of sweet had we not at some time tasted something bitter, so we must go through our vales of sorrow if we would come into full appreciation of the joy awaiting us on yonder mountain-top. I sometimes think that life would be very dull if it were not for the obstacles we encounter and the strength we develop through overcoming or living through serenely. Stop developing your character through times of doubt and fear and uncertainty and you'll find soon enough that there isn't much character left. The rough places in the road teach the right kind of woman—or man, to appreciate the smooth."

MARION'S MAIL

Dear Marion:

This is my first letter to your most interesting page which I look forward to every day. I have bought a plain scribbler and I cut out the recipes and little hints from each paper and paste them in so I will not lose them. Thank you very much for the instructions on the pointed slip and as someone was asking for the recipe of ginger snaps, I am enclosing mine. Wishing you success with your page.

Baltimore, Ont. M. M. M.

Thanks very much for the recipe and for the idea about saving recipes, both of which I am passing on to the neighbors.

Dear Marion:

I have just received the instructions on how to make flowers. I enjoy your page very much. Can you tell me what I can dye white kid shoes with to make them a pretty brown. Thanking you,

DOLORES.

White kid shoes cannot be successfully dyed a brown shade because they will retain a streaky appearance. There are two patented liquids for this purpose but men who know do not advise using them because you would not be satisfied with the result.

Dear Marion:

We read you page every week and sure find lots of helps. I would like the cape instructions of the week.

Yours truly,
MRS. A. HYSLOP.

Dear Marion:

I was surely delighted to receive the beautiful box of correspondence card you sent me. I'm sorry I haven't had an opportunity to thank you before but this is fall fair season and I have just returned after a very enjoyable trip to Bancroft which I call the land of scenery. The roads are wonderful. Anyone that loves nature's forests would enjoy the trip immensely.

I hope, Marion, that some day you will visit those parts, if you haven't already. Say, isn't the women's page a beauty. I have heard several remarks about it lately. I'm sure you work hard. I hope to write you many letters as the ones I have received from you are so friendly.

Yours loving'y,
J" ST ME.

Thanks for your very nice letter, "Just Me". I'm glad to know you liked the stationery, and to learn of your pleasant trip.

I'll be looking for the letters you promise.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

Even pearls take on modern art formation in the new necklaces. Those of the triangular shape are of a rose pink tint and the necklace below is of oblong-shaped brownish pearls with crystal beads between.

Diamonds, pearls, emeralds, rubies—real ones—are now worn for important occasions by women who can afford them. But for informal occasions there is still as much demand for less expensive costume jewelry as ever. Unless you are a motion-picture actress and can afford such expensive publicity you don't wear your rope of real pearls or your diamond bracelets when you go to dine and dance at a country inn or when you spend a week-end at a resort hotel.

And because the less expensive sort of ornaments are so effective the majority of women who cannot afford precious stones are content with them for all occasions. But even with this less expensive jewelry you may notice that there is more discrimination than there was a little while ago. Any sort of glass beads or metal choker will hardly do. There must be something really worth while and of intrinsic beauty in the design or it is hardly worth the buying.

Almost all the important French dressmakers have offered necklaces and other ornaments to go with their new frocks. Vionnet, Worth, Patou, Lanvin and Lelong are especially noteworthy in this departure, and Lelong perhaps takes preeminence. Usually these pieces are decidedly modern in design—but there is something very fine and rather restrained about this new modernism.

Lelong has made some lovely chains of tubular links of silver that suggest South Sea isle inspiration. Goupy has made bracelets and necklaces of strands of tiny pearl beads braided together. Lelong has made necklaces and bracelets of oblongs of colored bakelite strung together with metal links. Quite the most charming of all the new "modern" necklaces is the one of triangular-shaped tinted pearls shown in the sketch.

WOMAN EXPERT JOINS MISSION

Will Report On Opportunites For Women in Australia.

ECONOMIC QUESTIONS.

LONDON, Oct. 3.— (Canadian Press).—Closely following the departure of the economic mission to Australia comes the announcement that the ministry of labor has directed a woman expert to go to Australia to investigate the conditions for women workers there.

The ministry's choice is Miss M. A. Cox, senior work officer of Leeds Employment Committee and Secretary of Leeds Women's Migration Committee.

The Economic Mission, which left Britain consists of Sir Arthur Duckham, Sir Hugo Hirst, Sir Ernest Clark, and Dougal Malcolm. Their task is broadly, to gather information on any matter of mutual economic interest to Britain and the Commonwealth which may tend to promote trade between the two countries and the increase of settlement in Australia.

WOMEN ENTERING SKILLED TRADES

British Companies Apprenticing Women—Fathers Take Daughters Into Business.

OXFORD, Eng., Oct. 3.—(By the Canadian Press).— The prophecy that women will play an increasing part in skilled industry in future was made by Miss C. Haslett director of the Electrical Association for Women, in her speech to the annual conference of the Industrial Welfare Society at Balliol College.

Fathers she said, were beginning to take their daughters into the family business. Time was when only the sons had such an opportunity, or, if there were no sons, the daughter were only given a chance through marriage to a welcome partner, who found favor with paternal standards.

Recently, she related, a group of women engineers realized that the great problem of rural electrification offered possibilities for the employment and training of women. Already a small number of villages had been wired, the necessary plants and mains had been installed, and churches and small factories had been provided with electric power.

A significant move here was that these companies had taken on a number of apprentices. This meant almost the first chance for a girl with an engineering bent to become properly apprenticed in the same way as her brother.

HOYT AND SHERDEL TO PITCH FIRST GAME

Cardinals Favored to Win

Wagers of 6 to 5 Laid On National Leaguers to Win Series.

EARLE COMBS OUT.

Paschal and Durst Will Alternate in Furnishing Replacements For Centre Fielder.

(By Brian Bell, Associated Press Sports Writer.)

NEW YORK, October 4 (Associated Press). — Baseball players were wearing the colors for fun yesterday, and waited for the World Series to open to-day. After an extended final practice session the champions of the two leagues put play behind them, for the World Series is strictly business.

A bright, warm day gave the athletes a chance to close their preparations for the classic with extended batting drill followed by brief but brisk infield workouts.

Nothing happened at the last minute sessions to indicate that either manager has changed his mind on pitching selections for the opening game. Miller Huggins and Bill McKechnie steadfastly insist that they are open-minded as to nominations for pitching duty, but there will be widespread surprise if Waite Hoyt and Paul Sherdel are not the opposing moundsmen.

The Yankees learned definitely yesterday that they will not have the services of Earle Combs, their brilliant centre fielder, who was hurt at Detroit last week. Combs, hoping to the last that he might get in, tried to swing a bat yesterday, but found that his wrist would not stand the strain.

Ben Paschal and Cedric Durst will alternate in furnishing replacements for the fleet Combs, the choice depending on the St. Louis selections of pitchers. Paschal will bat against the southpaws with the left-handed Durst taking his cut when the right-handers pitch. The substitutes will be called on to assume an additional responsibility that of leading off, another of Combs' specialties. Manager Huggins had considered Mark Koenig, his shortstop, up first, but finally decided the infielder would bat second, leaving the line-up, with the exception of the first man up, that which finished the season.

Only Ruth and Gehrig will bat left-handed against left-handed pitching, for Koenig is a turn-around batsman, adopting his stance to oppose the styles of the pitcher.

The Cardinals will offer their regular line-up with Roscoe Holm and George Harper dividing the right field assignment. Jim Bottomley at first and Andy High at third will be the only two southpaws batsmen in the Cardinal offensive regardless of the pitching.

Yesterday was ideal for baseball and to-day may be even better, weather bureau officials said. The forecast is for fair weather with no decided change in temperature, but a tendency to warmer.

The World Series crowd descended on New York yesterday and hotel lobbies were filled with fans talking baseball. The Cardinals seemed to be the favorites of a majority of the visitors.

The usual wild scramble for tickets gained momentum and was expected to continue right up to game time to-day. Many seeking the rare bits of pasteboard were not trying for themselves, they said, but "for a friend."

The only reserved seats to be had were held by speculators at greatly advances prices. Unreserved seats in the stands and bleachers were placed on sale at the Yankee Stadium this morning, ensuring a good crowd house before game time.

The Cards were a slight betting favorite on the eve of the series opening, but top-heavy odds favoring the National Leaguers were more discussed than laid. Wagers of six to five on the National League entry to win the series were reported with even money on the first game.

Deloro Play De Laval In Gordon Cup Final

Local Team Travel to Deloro on Saturday—C.G.E. Forfeited Game to the De Laval.

A special meeting of the Peterborough and District Football Association was held last evening, in the Chamber of Commerce Rooms, with President Vincent Stewart in the chair. A good representation of the local clubs was present.

After a very lengthy discussion on the question of the game that was postponed last Saturday, between the De Laval and the Canadian General, the executive found that the latter club was at fault in not notifying the opposing club twenty-four hours before the match; therefore they lost the game, and the De Laval were instructed to play the Deloro team on Saturday next at Deloro.

The Deloro team are anxious that a good following of local soccer fans should visit the Smelter Town, and they guarantee a splendid game on an excellent field.

MacFARLANE BEATEN IN PRO GOLF TOURNEY

QUEEN MARY 1, PRINCE OF WALES 0

An Excellent Brand of Soccer Was Played By the Schools —White Scored.

LEAGUE STANDING.

Another school league fixture was played last night at King Edward Park, when the Queen Mary School gained the two points at Prince of Wales' expense by the small margin of one goal. It was scored in the last five minutes of the game.

Prince of Wales won the toss and compelled the West End boys to face the sun. In the early stages, the forwards paid repeated visits to the respective goals without any success. More combination was shown by the losers' front rank than the winners and it was only the stalwart full backs that prevented an early tally. Whenever any player got possession of the ball he did not get far, because he was tackled right away.

It was pleasant to watch the extreme men keep their positions, and time and again caused Queen Mary a lot of anxiety in clearing their charge. While at the other end, White, Queen Mary, at centre-forward, broke through time and again to find that he had a pair of backs to pass while in possession of the ball, although he was unfortunate on two occasions. His first try only needed a gentle touch past the custodian instead of banging the ball against the goalkeeper. Both elevens worked hard to get a goal, but the goal-keepers are very safe under difficulties.

Half time—No scoring.

Half Time

On resuming, after five minutes' rest, the boys went into the tussle at a harder pace than ever. The halfbacks on the teams were giving no scope to the forwards, while the full backs were always near to stop their progress. At this point, the boys were inclined to get into bunches which no doubt was caused by their enthusiasm to get a goal. In this half, the Prince of Wales' eleven were masters of the play in every department for the next ten minutes, while the west-end team had to go back into their defense area to safeguard their goal. They never succeeded, although they deserved to have scored in the tactics displayed around the goal, but the break went in favor of the winners in the closing period when White dribbled his way in between the full backs who held him outside the dangerous territory. He ran back to get the ball again to beat two men in succession, and wasting no time, rattled a hot shot for goal that was diverted through the goal by the right full back of the losing team. Not discouraged, the Prince of Wales' boys went back into the winners' area to keep them busy until the final whistle was blown.

Standing of League Table

Hornsby Trade Report Denied

NEW YORK, Oct. 4 (Canadian Press).—Report of the transfer of Rogers Hornsby, from the Boston Braves to the Chicago Cubs for $250,000 and players was emphatically denied last night by interested persons both in Boston and in Chicago. The story, printed in The New York Sun, said that the manager of the Braves would play for the Bruins next season. Hornsby recently signed a six-year contract with Emil Fuchs, owner of the Braves, carrying through the season of 1934 at a salary generally reported to be $40,000.

VIEWS ON SPORT

All junior rugby players are asked to be in Confederation Square at 5:45 to-night in full uniform.

Realizing that a lot of youngsters will want to see Saturday's big game at Exhibition Park, the Raybestos Club has decided to allow juvenile fandom to pass through free when accompanied by adults. Thus Dad or Mom will be able to take the family along without extra charge.

• • • • • • •

In the event of a World's Series game being played on Saturday there being none scheduled, arrangements will be made to give the crowd a play-by-play report of the contest by radio. And it will be a set with plenty of vigor.

• • • • • • •

Masterson and Maudsley will be in great shape for the final dash for the Ontario championship. Both pitchers are working out daily, and the long rest has been beneficial. The Rays had another profitable workout last evening.

• • • • • • •

The Rays are hoping that Bob Elliott the O.B.A.A. convener, will send Walter Gerow of Belleville as one of his selections to handle contest. Gerow worked with Colling in the Napanee game. Local fans would be given an opportunity to endorse the sentiments of Central Ontario in congratulating the Belleville Club on winning the senior title.

A great crowd are in New York city waiting for the gates to swing open, hotel lobbies were filled with fans talking baseball while reserved tickets were on sale at high prices by spectators. Wagers of six to five were made on the National leaguers on the series with even money on the first game.

Winning Of Honors Rests On Players

NEW YORK, Oct. 4 (Canadian Press).—"Did you ever see a manager win a world's series—from the bench?" demanded Bill McKechnie, chief of all the Red Birds, as he sat comfortably in a field box at the stadium yesterday while the Cardinals, spick and span in new road uniforms, frolicked under an Indian summer sun.

"Any championship that is won by St. Louis will have to be won by my players. They are all prepared. The battle remains up to them—and the Yankees. I must not predict since I really have no part in it at all."

Referee Assaulted During Soccer Game

LONDON, England, October 4 (Canadian Press Cable). — The referee of yesterday's Eastern League soccer game between Bristol Rovers Reserves and Plymouth Argyle Reserves at Bristol was assaulted by Plymouth's centre-half, Pullen, when the latter was ordered off the field for rough play. Pullen struck the referee twice in the face, cutting his lip and closing one eye. Pullen had been warned three times against rough play, and when ordered off the field for a fourth offence, struck the official. A Bristol player intervened and led Pullen off the field. The referee re-started the game after being attended to by field ambulance men.

Directors of the Rovers decided after the game not to take any legal action against Pullen, but to leave the matter entirely in the hands of the Football Association.

BELANGER WINS AGAINST GOLD

Toronto Boxer Starts Comeback in Attempt to Regain Title.

VICTORY DECISIVE.

TORONTO, Oct. 4. — One of the most common sayings of the sporting world and one that is correct so often that it is almost accepted as a truth is "They can't come back," but Frenchy Belanger, of this city, former world's and Canadian flyweight champion, staged a brilliant battle last night against Marty Gold, of Philadelphia, that belief in the statement is considerably shaken in local fistic circles at present. Belanger rose to the world's throne in a meteoric manner, but after being dethroned by Frankie Genaro he lost three bouts in a row, one to Frisco Grande on a foul, another to Steve Rocco for the Canadian title and the other to Johnny McCoy and he was promptly labelled a "has-been" or a flash in the pan and practically disregarded when the flyweight situation was under discussion. Belanger did not like the change in his fortunes and for a while tossed everything aside but finally he came to the point where he had to make a decision and he decided to attempt a come-back.

He took a long rest, then started to train and finally, after he had signed for the bout with Gold, who had lost by a close margin to Rocco, he went to New York and completed his training there. Glowing reports of his showing came back from the Big Town but they were taken with the proverbial grain of salt and classed as the outpourings of an enthusiastic press agent, but Belanger lost little time in demonstrating to all and sundry that he is back in the form that carried him to the highest peaks and by winning last night he is in line for a bout for the world's title against Genaro here on October 15. And those who saw the local lad make a pathetic defence of his title are now of the opinion that he may regain it within the next two weeks, but he will have to be better than he was against Gold.

Belanger Leads From Start.

The Philadelphian made the mistake of letting Belanger take the aggressive at the start and the local boy would not permit his opponent to set the pace from then on. As a result the bout was a one-sided affair with Belanger winning every one of the ten rounds and at the end Gold's manager did not make any complaint about the decision as he did in his bout against Rocco. Belanger shattered all Gold's hopes early in the bout when he let the Quaker City lad land several of his strongest punches, left hooks to the jaw, and without waiting to even shake them off the little Frenchman was in at close quarters and forcing Gold to break ground. In fact, retreating was the best thing the loser did last night.

Belanger, always cool, no matter how strenuous the going was, never excited last night, and a number of times he allowed Gold to land one of his hooks to the head in order to get an opening for his telling attack to the body and it was the punishment that he absorbed amidships that made Gold easy for the winner. Beady eyes always seeking an opening and his arms and hands nearly always taking advantage of the opportunities thereby gained, Belanger punished Gold severely about the body and it was the attack to this portion of the body that gave him chances to land about the head. The local lad was not only good on the attack but he showed a stronger defence than in the past, taking many of Gold's offerings to the body on his gloves and forearms. Belanger seldom, if ever, broke ground and he was continually driving Gold back and several times he forced the loser into a corner and administered heavy punishment. At least on two occasions the bell ending the round was a welcome sound to the American who, veteran of many bouts and a gladiator of much greater experience than the ex-champion, found the heavy punching of the latter too much for him.

WIN DIXIE SERIES.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 4 (Canadian Press).—Houston won the Dixie series here yesterday by defeating Birmingham in the sixth game, 5 to 1. It was the fourth straight victory for the Texas Leaguers, Birmingham having won the first two contests.

CHAMPION GATE-CRASHER ALL SET FOR OPENING OF SERIES

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—(Canadian Press).—The world series can't be far away. One-eye Connely is in town, mingling with the sportive throngs. Consternation was caused in and about press headquarters at a mid-town hotel by the report that the famous crasher of gates, large and small, had weakened and accepted a reporter's ticket from the baseball writers association. Envoys from Connelly promptly characterised this rumor as a canard started by a rival crasher, who is now working.

Charles J. McManus, under-secretary of the Yankees for Home affairs, marshalled a battalion of special officers in front of the stadium to repulse any efforts by Connelly to enter, with or without a ticket. The odds were two to one on Connolly.

CHILDREN HURT AT MILLBROOK

Clayton Thexton Breaks Wrist While Playing at School.

GIRL FRACTURES SKULL.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MILLBROOK, Oct. 4. — Clayton Thexton, the five-year-old son of Mr and Mrs. Marvin Thexton, Zion Line, met with a painful accident on Tuesday afternoon, having his right wrist fractured in a fall.

With other pupils at the Zion school Clayton was playing in the yard at recess, and while jumping across the ditch in front of the school, to the roadway, he fell, putting out his hand to save himself, and doubling it under.

The teacher, Miss Jean Burnham, gave first aid, and as soon as possible the little boy was brought to the village, Dr. H. A. Turner giving the necessary medical attention. The break is a bad one for a child's arm.

Florence Williamson, the nine-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Williamson, is in Dr. H. A. Turner's private hospital suffering from a fractured skull, the result of an accident on her father's farm a few days ago.

The little girl was letting down the bars for the horses to go through when, apparently, one of them kicked a bar which struck the child, knocking her to the ground with such force that the injury to her head resulted.

The patient is doing as well as could be expected, considering the serious nature of the accident.

GENE SARAZEN DOWNS BARNES

Margin For Favorite Was 3 and 2 After Spectacular Morning Round.

SMITH WINS VICTORY.

FIVE FARMS, BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 4.—The first casualty among the favorites in the professional golf championship occurred yesterday when Willie MacFarlane, former open champion, was defeated by Horton Smith, Joplin, Mo., 1 down, in 36 holes. MacFarlane was 3 down at the end of the morning round.

The Sarasen-Barnes match was the big attraction through the day, 1,500 watching Gene win.

They laid down a perfect barrage of stymies during their play, Gene profiting by most of them. Jim had the bad breaks throughout.

Glenn Spencer, Baltimore, after carrying the match to the 37th hole, was defeated by Perry Del Vecchio, Greensburg, Pa., 1 up.

Horton Smith, Joplin, Mo., 3 up on Willie MacFarlane, Tuckahoe, N.Y.; Perry Del Vecchio, Greensburg, Pa., 5 up on Glenn Spencer, Baltimore; Al. Espinosa, Chicago, 5 up on Bob McDonald, Chicago; Jock Hutchinson, Glenview, Ills., 2 up on Pat Doyle, Linwood, N.J.; Jim Barnes, New York, and Gene Sarazen, Flushing, L.I., all square; Al. Watrous, Grand Rapids, Mich., 2 up on Fred Dudley, Los Angeles; Leo Diegel, White Plains, N.Y., 1 up on Goerge Chryst, Rochester, N.Y.; Walter Hagen, Rye, N.Y., 3 up on Julian Blanton, Toledo.

THEATRES

TO-NIGHT THE CAPITOL OFFERS ANOTHER KNOCK-OUT SHOW, HAVING BOTH STAGE AND SCREEN ATTRACTIONS — PAT RAFFERTY, LATE OF THE DUMBELLS CO., WILL BE SEEN IN OLD AND NEW SUCCESSES, WHILE COLLEEN MOORE WILL BE THE SCREEN ATTRACTION IN "HAPPINESS AHEAD."

To-night and for the balance of the week, with daily matinees, the Capitol offers a program of stage and screen entertainment that should pack this popular theatre to the doors at each performance. As a stage attraction, Manager Stewart has secured for a personal appearance Mr. Patrick Rafferty, better known as Pat, and for nine years leading comedian with the Dumbells Company. The very mention of Pat's appearance should be enough in itself to draw capacity crowds. For the feature screen attraction the ever-popular Colleen Moore will be seen in one of her newest productions, "Happiness Ahead."

In a picture decidedly different from anything in which she has appeared in the past, Colleen Moore, winsome First National star, comes to the Capitol to-night in "Happiness Ahead."

Although this production provides her with every opportunity to display her excellent flair for comedy, Miss Moore will also be seen in moments of deep drama, in which she is said to have proven an unusually capable actress.

"Happiness Ahead" is the story of a little country girl who marries a city card-sharp, believing him to be an entirely honest young business man. The manner in which she discovers the truth, and the subsequent action of the principal characters gives "Happiness Ahead," a plot which is unique in the extreme. Edmund Lowe plays the chief support.

FAMOUS PETER B. KYNE NOVEL REACHES SCREEN—DORIS KENYON FEATURED

Filmed in Heart of Redwood Country

Peter B. Kyne's masterful story of the California Big Tree country, "The Valley of the Giants," comes to the Regent Theatre with Milton Sills in the starring role.

Kyne's great romance of the Redwoods is ideal picture material, and Milton Sills is the ideal artist to portray the role of Bryce Cardingan, the young son of the blind timber baron who bests his father's bitter enemy and saves his property.

"The Valley of the Giants" is a virile, stirring story of the West, where mighty Redwoods rear their branches 300 feet in the air, and life is rough and ready. There is human conflict, romance, danger, intrigue and suspense in the story, which holds the attention from the opening scene to the close.

Sills was never seen to better advantage than in this strong story, and his work as Bryce Cardigan is the best of his long screen career.

Pretty Doris Kenyon is seen opposite Sills, and a capable cast includes Arthur Stone, Paul Hurst, Yola d'Avril, George Fawcett, Phil Brady, Charles Sellon and many others.

"The Valley of the Giants" was directed by Charles Brabin and produced for First National Pictures by Wid Gunning.

Through the medium of this picture some of the most beautiful country in America is brought to the screen, and various activities in the lumber camps and mills are shown.

"The Valley of the Giants" is superb entertainment throughout and will increase the great popularity of Sills and Miss Kenyon with their many admirers.

ARGENTINE TEAM WIN SECOND GAME

Compete With United States With Polo Championship of Americas.

(By Alan J. Gould, Associated Press Sports Editor.)

WESTBURY, N.Y., October 4 (Associated Press). — With a roughriding, sahrp hitting attack that harried and up set their rivals from start to finish the Four Horsemen from the Pampas galloped off yesterday with the second game of the series for the polo championship of the Americas.

The Argentine quartette, after exchanging many a bump, emerged from this spectacular struggle victorious by the decisive margin of 10 to 7, over Captain Tommy Hitchcock's somewhat bewildered United States combination. It tied the count for the series with one triumph apiece, and extends the battle to a third and deciding game here on Saturday on Meadowbrook's sparkling green turf.

Except for a spurt that enabled them to tie the score twice, in the third and fourth periods, Hitchcock and his mates were outplayed, outhit, and outridden by the dashing horsemen from South America. The Argentines, their ponies showing a complete return to form, and their team tactics smothering most of the homebred thrusts, got to the jump at the start, checked the most serious U.S. threat midway in the game, and turned the battle almost into a rout with a whirlwind finish.

Seldom has international polo witnessed as rough and tumble a combat as was put on for the benefit of close to 25,000 spectators, most of whom were on their feet cheering throughout the game. It was exciting enough, hard and roughly fought at every turn, but it was marred by the constant tooting of the referee's whistle, inflicting a stream of penalties.

So fierce were the surging charges in the third period that Lewis Lacey, backbone of the Argentine team's play, was spilled and exposed to the kicks of his pony's hoofs after crashing into Hitchcock. Lacey and his mount both rolled to the ground and it was only a quick jump, after extricating himself from the saddle, that appeared to save the Argentine ace from serious injury.

He was severely shaken up, but returned to the saddle and dominated the play that turned the tide in favor of the invaders.

Thel ine-up and summary:

Argentina (10)—A. Kenney, No. 1; Jack Nelson, No. 2; John B. Miles, No. 3; Lewis L. Lacey, back.

Score by chukkers—1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, total.

Argentina—120, 112, 21—10.

Referee—F. S. Kiddy Vonstade.

Time of chukkers — 7½ minutes each.

The cosmic rays discovered a few years ago by Prof. R. A. Millikan, the famous California scientist, are the waste energy generated by the creation of oxygen, magnesium, silicon and iron in the vast laboratories of outer space, according to a recent announcement by their discoverer. The cosmic rays are the most minute yet most powerful radiations ever detected, with wavelengths less than one-hundredth of those of radium, and yet requiring the enormous electrical potential of 59,000,000 volts to generate them.

CLOTHING SALESROOM

Eighteen months of steady, increasing business—business so good that it reflects the expected influence of our "Popular Prices All the Time" policy as against the occasional sales idea. We have never held a sale, and are not talking sale now, but we have reached a point where more room in the clothing salesroom is necessary, and while the expansion is going on we will price our fine new Fall and Winter Overcoats and Suits at such low figures that they will induce quick buying, and a consequent relief of a crowded department with the carpenters at work. It's your opportunity—when our regular low prices are still further lowered.

MEN'S OVERCOATS

BOY BADLY HURT BY HEAVY TRUCK

Little Hope Held For Recovery of Leonard Swistelnikoff, Aged Six.

SKULL FRACTURED.

Leonard Swistelnikoff, six-year-old son of Kosma Swistelnikoff, was seriously injured last evening about 6.45 when he was knocked down by a truck driven by Herbert Payne at the corner of Murray and Aylmer street. The little chap, who lives at 240 Murray street, with his parents, was out playing on the sidewalk west of Aylmer street. He wandered up to the corner, and before any person saw him he was wandering across the street.

Herbert Payne, who was driving one of Cooney's trucks north on Aylmer street saw the little chap crossing, but thought that he was going to miss him. All at once the boy faltered and turned back. Payne tried to dodge him, but struck him; knocking him down.

The little lad was picked up and Dr. J. M. O'Brien was summoned and he had him rushed to St. Joseph's Hospital. There an examination was made, and it was found that the boy was suffering with a fractured skull. At midnight very little hope was held out for the boy's recovery, and this morning no improvement was noticed.

WHY SOME MEN ARE OLD AT 40

You've seen them, of course—on the streets, in the theatres, at work or business—those "men" old before their day. Weak, puny, wavering—just a hollow shell of their former selves. Once they were strong, vigorous and manly. Full of vitality. Women used to look back at them on the streets. Now they are old and unmanly long before their time. What's the reason?

Simply that they burned out the vital fire too quickly. Perhaps, in some instances, it was no fault of theirs—sickness, sorrow, trouble, overwork may have sapped their vitality. In many instances, over-indulgence in the pleasures of life accounts for their sad condition. Is there no hope for these men? Can they never bring back the vital fire of manhood which is theirs by right?

Listen: There has just been introduced a little, lemon-colored tablet called ERBAC (remember the name—it may mean much to you) that, when taken regularly according to the simple directions, goes straight to the CAUSE of many of these troubles. It is not an inexpensive remedy. It costs Two Dollars for a package containing a 20-day supply. But scores of people who have used it are enthusiastic in its praise and Bond the druggist has so much confidence in ERBAC that he will guarantee your money back if it doesn't prove exactly what you need. Therefore, if you long for the old-time manly fire, if you sigh for the good old lustihood which once was yours, try ERBAC and note results.

NOTICE: While ERBAC is a perfectly safe and harmless combination of scientific ingredients, it is not meant for children. Women, however, are reporting great benefits.

IN POLICE COURT

The charge of having liquor in other than a residence, laid against Joseph Johnston of Harvey Township some weeks ago by Provincial Officer Stewart, was dismissed without costs this morning in Police Court by Magistrate O. A. Langley. His Worship, in giving judgment, said he failed to see that the prosecution had proved that the garage where the beer was found belonged to Johnston or that he lived on that property. Alex. Elliott acted for the accused and Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton, K.C., prosecuted.

An Ennismore man pleaded guilty to being intoxicated at Curve Lake and was fined $10 and costs. Although the officers asked for the minimum fine, His Worship was inclined to pass a heavier sentence and henceforth he said he would try to make it his practice that in a charge of drunkenness where automobiles or Indians were concerned, the fine would be heavier.

Percy Holland elected summary trial and pleaded not guilty to the charge of entering the home of Dr. Morgan some years ago. The Crown was unable to proceed, and he was remanded until next Thursday.

A local man pleaded guilty to being intoxicated in a public place and was fined $10 and costs.

Abraham Williams was sentenced to 10 days in the common jail for stealing the sum of fifty cents from Mrs. Hubbell in the C.P.R. Station, Havelock.

Wilfrid McCullam entered a plea of guilty some months ago to failing to support his wife, and was then let go on suspended sentence, provided that he make his wife a weekly payment. For some months he kept this promise and then stopped. Although he was not present this morning, his case was called, and on his plea of guilty, he was sentenced to one month in the common jail.

Obituary

DOROTHY LOUISE LAING.

An illness extending over a period of ten months terminated this morning, Oct. 4th, in the death of Dorothy Louise Laing, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Laing, of 272 Armour Road. Born in Edmonton, she had come here with her parents twelve years ago and had attended Peterborough schools and Mark Street United church. She was 14 years 4 months of age.

Left to mourn are her parents, three sisters, Beth, Alice and Carlotta, and two brothers, James and Robert, all at home. The funeral will take place on Saturday, October 6 from the home of her parents, 272 Armour Road to Little Lake cemetery, the Rev. A. E. Thornley, of Mark Street United church conducting service at the house at 2 p.m.

MAJOR R. P. WATT.

The funeral of the late Major R. P. Watt took place yesterday afternoon from Comstock's burial parlours and was very largely attended by old friends he had made in the various circles of activity in which he was to be found when a resident of Peterborough. The funeral was under Masonic auspices and the members of his own lodge (Corinthian) and sister lodges in the city turned out in large numbers to pay respect to their late brother.

Major McLaren, of Renfrew, and Mr. Mayhew, a Masonic officer, came to Peterborough with the remains and remained for the funeral The floral remembrances from Renfrew and Peterborough attested to the esteem in which the deceased was held.

His father, Mr. John Watt, Ottawa, and brother Jack, of Rouyn, were in the city for the funeral, as well as other relatives from a distance.

Mrs. Watt and daughter will remain in the city for a few days.

Rev. William Allan took the service and his remarks were greatly appreciated by relatives and friends present.

The pallbearers were Messrs. R. G. Cottrell, Major H. Dodds, Colonel T. J. Johnston, Major Keith Lech, Captain J. E. R. Munro and R. M. Glover, all old friends made either in the Lodge, the old 57th Regiment or overseas in the 93rd Battalion.

Major Watt was well known and liked in his native city, but not any more so than in Renfrew, where he was town clerk.

Wedding Bells

JEFFORD—CALLANDER.

A quiet wedding was solemnized in Peterborough on Thursday, October fourth, when George Albert Jefford, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Jefford, England, was united in marriage to Hazel Elsie, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Callander, Weller street. Rev. David Wren, of Trinity United church, officated.

After a short honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Jefford will reside in the city.

Says Crew Agreed to 'Stick to One Story'

PASSENGER SAVED FROM WRECK OVERHEARD DISCUSSION ON RAFT

Woke Up From Doze To Hear Remark, He Tells Wreck Commissioner.

ASKED FOR INFORMATION.

Captain Said He Did Not Know, But Laid Blame On Cattle.

OWEN SOUND, Ont., Oct. 5 (Canadian Press).—The fifve members of the crew of the steamer Manasoo during the sixty hours they were on the raft after the ship sank in Georgian Bay, September 15, agreed to "stick to one story," according to Donald Wallace, of Oil Springs, the passenger who was saved, testifying before Dominion Wreck Commissioner Captain Demers to-day.

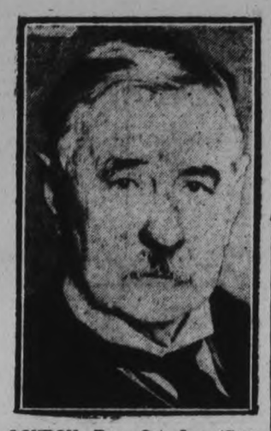
"I asked the captain what had happened," said Wallace. "He said he did not know. Something must have happened with the cattle."

"You overheard they agreed to stick to one story?" asked Captain Demers.

"Yes," I was dozing at the time," said Wallace.

He had lost cattle worth six thousand dollars in the wreck and, mentioning this, someone had retorted on the raft, "Look what we lost." He did not know who made the remark.

80 YEARS OLD.



LONDON, Eng., Oct. 5.— (Canadian Press.) — Tay Pay O'Connor, father of the House of Commons, celebrated his eightieth birthday today and the last survivor of the old Irish Nationalist party enjoyed considerably better health than for some time past. He described his creed as that of a realistic optimist in the sense that he believes every man can do something to relieve his sadness.

Y.M.C.A. DRIVE IS UNDER WAY

Trip to Varsity-Queen's Rugby Game Will Be Prize For Leader.

MEMBERSHIP DRIVE.

J. R. Marshall pressed the button at a largely attended opening supper meeting at the "Y" last night, when the workers on the membership campaign assembled to get under way. The attendance was the finest on record for a campaign of this nature in recent years, and the enthusiasm shown by those present was such as to assure a real successful effort. Mr. Marshall sounded the keynote in his opening remarks, thanking the workers for their splendid attendance and expressing his confident belief that they would more than exceed their objective. The chairman called on Divisional Chairmen C. S. Cummer, leader of the Blue and White team, and J. H. Vernor, leader of the Tri-Color Division, and each expressed his assurance that his side would come out on top in the friendly rivalry by the two sides.

As an incentive to work, Mr. Marshall announced that he would provide a trip to the Varsity-Queen's game at Toronto on October 27 to the worker with the highest points for the campaign. Mr. Vernor announced on behalf of his firm that two Big Ben DeLuxes were being given as recognitions for the higher men on each side with the exception of the one who won the trip to Toronto. The team with the highest showing at to-night's meeting will receive complimentary seats at the Capitol Theatre.

Points are awarded as follows:

One new member, 10 points.

One renewal, 5 points.

Cash in full with application, new or renewal, 5 points.

The distribution of prospect cards was made and the majority of the cards were taken by those present.

Report meetings for the balance of the campaign are as follows: To-night (Friday) 6.15 to 7.30; Monday luncheon, 12.15 to 12.45 Final report and victory supper on Tuesday at 6.15.

The objective for the campaign is 250 members in the men's division. This will bring the men's division membership up to 450, and together with 250 boys will give a total membership of 700

An evidence of the keen interest being displayed was the fact that several workers 'phoned in during the evening reporting results from two to four members secured. Every worker is asked to be on hand at the supper meeting this evening sharp at 6.15.

General chairman, J. R. Marshall.

Division A—Chairman C. S. Cummer.

1—A. E. Dryland, R. Sturgeon, G. Eastwood, L. Brown, D. Marsnall.

3—E. W. Jones, Dr. G. R. Scott, S. J. Black, G. Nichols, W. A. J. Giles.

5—H. Tranter, R. Bates, G. Palmer, G. Harper, H. Vinnette.

Customs Guard Who Killed Dock Worker In Liquor Search Ends Life When Indicted

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—James MacGuckin, a 24-year-old United States Customs Guard, who last July 24 fatally shot Leo Boice, a Hoboken longshoresman during the latter's alleged attempt to smuggle two pint bottles of whiskey, committed suicide yesterday by inhaling illuminating gas in his home in Jersey City.

His act was the culmination of mental distress over the shooting, which had caused him to be deserted by his companions and criticized publicly. A few hours before the guard climbed to a small third floor bedroom to end his life, he had learned that the Hudson County Grand Jury had indicted him for murder.

The killing of Boice received wide publicity. For two weeks the New Jersey authorities, though provided with a murder warrant, did not succeed in removing MacGuckin from the custody of the Federal Government. Boice's death effected no change in his slayer's status with the Customs Department, and United States Senator Edward I. Edwards, taking an interest in the case, charged the Government with "shielding a murderer."

The case was finally referred to the Department of Justice in Washington and on Aug. 7 MacGuckin was turned over to the Hudson County Prosecutor's office. After a night in jail he was released in $10,000 bond.

Accounts of the shooting vary. Friends of Boice, who left a destitute widow and three children, say that he was shot down "without a chance for his life." At the time of his arrest by the Hoboken police, who paroled him in his own custody, MacGuckin testified that Boice had hurled the two bottles at him when he attempted to search the longshoreman for liquor.

Mrs. Mary MacGuckin, the guard's mother, said that her son had been ill for more than a month. When she missed him at breakfast shortly after 7 o'clock, she went to his room. The door was locked, which was not unusual, since MacGuckin has received numerous threatening letters of late. She soon detected the odor of gas, however, and entered to find her son dead, a gas tube in his mouth.

YANKEES WALLOP ALEXANDER IN EARLY INNINGS TO WIN 9-3

Defeat Cardinals Badly in Second Game of Series.

PIPGRAS WINNER

Yanks' Fielding Wabbles, But Pitcher Hurls Well in Pinches.

YANKEE STADIUM, N.Y., Oct. 5 (Canadian Press). — The Yankees, after a wobbly start, knocked their old Nemesis, Grover Cleveland Alexander, out of the box to-day, and thrashed the Cardinals for the second straight game of the World's Series. The score was nine to three.

The line-ups for to-day's game are

St. Louis:	New York:
Douthit, cf.	Durst, cf
High, 3b	Koenig, ss
Frisch, 2b	Ruth, rf
Bottomley, 1b	Gehrig, 1b
Hafey, lf	Meusel, lf
Harper, rf	Lazzeri, 2b
Wilson, c	Robertson, 3b
Maranville, ss	Bengough, c
Alexander, p	Pipgras, p

First Innings

St. Louis.—Gehrig took Douthit's hot grounder and beat the Cardinal outfielder to the bag. High got a base on balls, Frisch also walked. Bottomley fouled out to Bengough, who took the ball behind the plate. Hafey struck out, swinging for the third strike. No runs, no hits, no errors.

New York.—Durst got a single over Frisch's head. Frisch almost got the ball by a leaping catch, but the ball bounced off his glove. Koenig filed out to Hafey. Ruth got a base on balls, the fourth pitch being outside. Durst, Ruth and Gehrig scored on Gehrig's terrific home run drive into the right field stands. Meusel struck out, taking the third strike with his bat on his shoulder. Alexander took Lazzeri's roller and tossed him out. Three runs, two hits, no errors.

Second Inning

St. Louis.—Harper got a base on balls. The fourth pitch being on the outside. Harper scored on Wilson's double into right centre. On Maranville's single to centre, Wilson went to third. Wilson scored when Lazzeri took Alexander's grounder and threw wildly past Gehrig. Maranville went to third. Play was halted while a discussion around Pipgras took place. Maranville scored when Douthit hit into a double play, Koenig to Lazzeri to Gehrig. High popped to Robertson. Three runs, two hits, one error.

New York.—Bottomley took Robertson's high hopper and raced to the bag ahead of the Yankee third base man. Bengough walked. Pipgras sacrificed, Wilson to Bottomley. Bengough scored on Durst's slashing hit into centre. Koenig sent up a high fly which Frisch smothered. One run, one hit, no errors.

Third Inning

St. Louis.—Frisch got a single off Gehrig's hand and stole second. Bottomley fanned. Koenig threw out Hafey at first, Frisch going to third. Harper struck out, taking a third called strike. It was a sweeping curve he let go by. No runs, one hit, no error.

Yankees.—Ruth got a single over the middle bag. Gehrig got a base on balls, the fourth pitch being low. Ruth scored on Meusel's double to left. Gehrig holding at third. High threw out Lazzeri at first, Gehrig holding third. Robertson walked; Gehrig scored on Bengough's single to right, Meusel stopping at third and Robertson holding second. Alexander was taken from the box at this stage. Mitchell, the only left handed spit-ball twirler in captivity or out, went into the box for the Cards. Meusel scored when Pipgras was hit by a pitched ball. Robertson moved to third and Bengough to second. Paschal batted for Durst. Robertson scored on Paschal's single to right, but Bengough was thrown out at the plate, Douthit to Frisch to Wilson. Pipgras went to second on Paschal's hit. Koenig popped to Bottomley. Four runs, three hits, no errors.

Fourth Innings

St. Louis — Paschal went into centre for the Yankees. Pipgras leaped into the air, speared Wilson's hopper, and touched him out. Koenig bobbled Maranville's grounder, and the batter was safe at first. Koenig made a nice running catch on Mitchell's seeming safe Texas leaguer, Gehrig took Douthit's high foul. No runs, no hits, one error.

Yankees.—Ruth shot a long hit into centre for two bases. Gehrig sent up a high fly to Douthit, back of second base. Meusel flied out to Hafey.

Minister Juggles Tray At Banquet

SIMCOE, Oct. 5.—The conquest of modernism was extended here last night, when the Liberals of Norfolk County placed the old-time political banquet upon a cafeteria basis. Hon. Peter Veniot and Hon. J. C. Elliott, who were the guests of honor for the occasion, were shown deference not by being seated at a head table, but by being accorded precedence in the long line of tray jugglers that filed past the serving tables.

So far as the more varied menu which the arrangement permitted was concerned, it was altogether satisfactory. Guests of the evening found that the Liberals had not only redeemed the political banquet from its stereotyped form of the ages, but that they had fearlessly dispensed with the traditional cold ham and potato salad. A choice was given of fricasseed chicken, roast pork, or roast beef. A local orchestra played a lively quick-step, which, however, it may have enlivened the proceedings, associated but poorly with progress that the inexperienced tray-handlers of this riding were able to make in assembling their meal.

The unique affair was in the nature of a birthday party for Hon. Mr. Veniot, who was celebrating his 65th birthday.

COUNTY TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION MEETS IN ANNUAL CONVENTION

Normal School Is Scene of Gathering of Peterborough School Teachers.

HELPFUL ADDRESSES.

W. J. Stacey Presides—Inspectors and A. N. Scarrow Talk on Teaching.

The teachers of the County of Peterborough opened their annual convention in the Normal Assembly Hall on Thursday morning. The meeting was opened by the reading of the nineteenth chapter of Acts by the president, W. J. Stacey.

The usual routine business followed. Inspector R. Lees read a number of resolutions from the O.E.A. which were to be dealt with by committee consisting of Inspector Lees, Inspector R. F. Downey, Mrs. Jackson, Mr. Yuill, Mr. Chaplin, and Mr. Little. The fees were to be the same as former years. Mr. Lees then read a communication from the School Board and Ratepayers' Association of the O.E.A., urging the use of the School Board Journal. He said that it contained the story of "Jean Mitchell's School,' the first instalment appearing in the September issue, also reports of the O.E.A.

Mr. Downey then mentioned the use of the little flag on a stand for the teacher's desk. He also spoke of bulletins on the teacher's desk. He urged that the bulletin on Public Speaking and Debate be placed there.

Mr. Lees mentioned the ones on the Noxious Weed Control Act and Pure Seed Act. These may be obtained at the Department of Agriculture, Toronto.

M Stacey, the president, after thanking the teachers for appointing him president, gave a very inspiring address on The Essential Features of Education. Mr. Downey suggested that this excellent address be given in full to the press.

A few moments was given to community singing, led by Mr. Downey, with Miss Johnson at the piano.

Mr. Breckenridge gave a very interesting report of the O.E.A. held at Toronto last April.

Afternoon Session.

The afternoon session was opened by a very instructive address given by Mr. Downey on "Estimating the Teacher's Work." Mr. Downey said in order to estimate the teacher's work there must be some standard or measuring stick as it were. If Miss A is a good teacher, why is Miss B not? These must be seen in the school to estimate them.

He then spoke of the results obtained. These were judged by returns gotten in the children. Mr. Downey then asked, "What kind of results are required? Or shall we look to the other side? Citizenship.

Dominion May Invade Provincial Rights To Implement Treaties, Counsel Argues

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. ' (Canadian Press).—The exclusive right upon all matters covered by treaty was claimed by the Rt. Hon. N. W. Rowell, on behalf of the Dominion when the waterpowers case resumed before the Supreme Court to-day. "This power may be exercised to the extent necessary to implement the treaty, to enact legislation which may invade matters which originally would be exclusively within the provincial field; for example, matters affecting property and civil rights," he said. He was referring of course to the British North American Act and cited as an example the Japanese Treaty of 1911 between Britain and Japan.

KEEN COMPETITION NOTED BY JUDGE AT LOCAL DOG SHOW

Tri-International Championship Won Here For First Time.

BY BULLDOG "SESSUE."

Many Fine Dogs, With Great Records, Displayed at Brock Street Rink.

The Peterborough Kennel Association's Dog Show, which opened in Brock Street Rink yesterday morning was further elevated by the statement of Charles G. Hopton, of New York City, judge of all breeds, who this morning declared that "the competition was marvellous." That remark, coming from the international judge of foremost shows on the American continent, England, Ireland, and France since 1896, must have been well founded. It was back in that year and for the ensuing four years, that Mr. Hopton crossed the Atlantic with the first dog from America to compete in the Old World.

Going on to discuss the competition, Mr. Hopton first dealt with the Springers, that breed of dogs made so popular on this side of the Atlantic by the Trent Valley Springers. While the competition at Peterborough lacked a certain amount through the sportsmanlike action of the Trent Valley kennel proprietor, Herbert Routley, who did not enter his dogs so that the competition might be more keen, there was a pleasant thrill in the fact that the breed championship went to "Dan of Toronto," owned by Harold Mountain.

This year's Peterborough show had the unique distinction of creating a "tri-international championship" for the first time in the history of a Canadian or United States show. The dog so honored was that famous bulldog "Sessue," owned by the well-known Syracuse, N.Y., sportsman, William E. Chetwin, whose "Coldstream" kennels house many champions.

Student Is Deranged, Wrecks Baptist Church

ALBANY, N.Y., Oct. 5—Temporarily deranged, Frederick Hunt, 21, a former high school Athlete, and for a year a Syracuse university student, disappeared from his home here, clad in a gray swimming suit, and before he was apprehended had wrecked the interior of the Memorial Baptist Church. A policeman's bullet ricochetted, struck him and brought him down. Hunt appeared at the church a few hours after he had left his home. He hurled the pulpit from the rostrum, smashed every window, destroyed a valuable acousticon instrument, hurled vases, pictures, stools and chairs through the window littering church ground, and tore prayer books to bits. His rage will cost the church at least $3,000, it was estimated.

SCHOONER SINKS.

Four Fishermen Forced To Take To Boats—Are Picked Up.

NORTH SYDNEY, N.S., Oct. 5 (Canadian Press).—The captain and crew of three of the small fishing schooner Guinea Gold were forced to the boats when the ship sank off Glace Bay yesterday, after one of the flooring planks gave way. They were picked up by the French trawler Saggitaire, which returned the four seamen to this port last night.

CLOSER RELATIONSHIP WITH SONS URGED ON FATHERS BY SPEAKER

Frank Mitchell of Windsor, Addresses Kiwanis Club To-day.

SYMPATHY NEEDED.

Boy's Problem Is Father's Problem Pure and Simple, He Declares.

Sympathy, encouragement and recognition of the boy were urged by Frank Mitchell, ex-Mayor of Windsor, when he addressed the Peterborough Kiwanis Club to-day. His address, with Biblical basis and concluding with irresistible appeal for a closer relationship between father and son, stirred the Kiwanians deeply for, as John Marshall put it in moving the vote of thanks, "It was a real message in a real way from a real boy's man." It emphasized the three main essentials in moulding life and character—the boy, his teacher and his God, and went on to appeal for a better place for the lad in his home.

Said Mr. Mitchell: "Robert Rakes conceived the idea of a Sunday school in England, away back in 1760, and to-day I propose to base my address on Zeckariah viii., 5: 'And the city shall be full of boys and girls playing in the streets thereof.'

"In our Sunday schools, the girls are much in the majority, while the boys go elsewhere. Yet what is the boy worth? Just what we make him through years of training his body, mind and soul." The speaker compared the lad to a dynamo with his energies spresding in all directions.

"I believe there is no boy problem but that it is the father's problem pure and simple. Every father is his son's hero, and the example and friendship which he affords the boy will largely determine his future. We are practicing too much surgery on our boys and not sufficient hygiene. We should build in the spirit of the old man in this poem:

'An old man, going a lone highway.
Came at the evening, cold and gray,
To a chasm vast and deep and wide.
The old man crossed in the twilight dim.
The sullen stream had no fear for him;
But he turned when safe on the other side
And built a bridge to span the tide.

'Old man, said a fellow pilgrim near,
You are wasting your strength with building here;
You never again will pass this way;
You've crossed the chasm deep and wide.
Why build you this bridge at evening-tide?

Husband Finds Bodies On Return From Work to Aylmer Street Home

Note Said To Have Been Written By 19 Year Old Schoolboy Avows Love For Married Woman Caused Crime—Borrowed Revolver From His Father To-day.

CORONER DR. T. W. H. YOUNG WILL HOLD INQUEST AND CONDUCT THOROUGH PROBE, HE DECLARES

Youth Came From Boston To Be Educated in Peterborough, and Boarded With Woman Found Dead To-day—Had Missed School Several Days.

When Thomas Pacey, 585 Aylmer street, returned to his home for lunch to-day he found his wife, Mrs. Lottie Pacey, aged 35, and George Frederick Knox, 19, a boarder, shot dead, lying side by side across the bed in one of the upstairs bedrooms. The motive for the double shooting is said to have arisen out of a love triangle, confirmation being found in a note left by the youth.

Thomas Pacey, employed in the Canadian General Electric Company, arrived at the house at 12:15, and was unable to enter the front door because it was locked. He then went to the back door, he says thinking his wife might have gone out and would soon return. This door was locked, also, and Pacey was compelled to gain entrance through a small hole in the woodshed, used by the dog to pass in and out.

Note is Found

On entering the house his attention was first attracted by a letter on the sideboard, in an unsealed envelope, addressed 'Dad". He passed on up the stairs and there, on the bed in the room on the right of the head of the stairs, he was shocked by the sight of his wife and Knox, lying on their backs side by side, both shot through the head. A revolver was lying at Knox's left hand, and he was on the left side of Mrs. Pacey. His coat was off, and Mrs. Pacey was fully clothed, having apparently just relaxed from her morning's housework.

It was plain to the distracted husband that both were dead, so he immediately telephoned to the police station. The alarm was there taken by Inspector James Reid at exactly 12:20. Knox, the father of the boy, was communicated with, and the police rushed to the little Aylmer street home.

The police investigation was made by Inspector Reid, Sergeant W. Wigg and Constable J. Thompson, and County Coroner Dr. T. W. H. Young was quickly on the scene. The Coroner examined the bodies and ordered an inquest.

Father Heartbroken.

Knox, a student in the Peterborough Collegiate Institute, has been boarding at the Pacey home since early last fall. His home is in Boston, but his father brought him to Canada so that he might be educated in a Canadian school. His father, Rupert E. Knox, has been in the city for some time, residing at 577 Bethune street.

When the heartbroken father arrived at the scene of the tragedy he told the police he loaned the small Smith and Wesson .22 calibre revolver to his son this morning. George told him last night he wanted the weapon to do some practice shooting, and he left the revolver at the Pacey home this morning at eight o'clock.

The letter, found on the sideboard downstairs, was given to Mr. Knox. It was signed by his son George, and asked forgiveness for the deed he was about to do. The youth expressed the hope that his father would fine some one in a few years to whom he could give a fatherly love such as he had given him. The boy declared he was intensely in love with "Lottie," and had been ever since he met her. He "could not bear to let Tom have her." He closed by asking forgiveness for his waywardness, and sent his love to his mother and his aunt, both resident in Boston

When he had read the letter, Mr. Knox complained of having a weak heart and swooned. Dr. J. Murray Fraser, who had been called, rendered medical aid.

The bodies were removed to the undertaking parlor.

Had Missed School.

Young Knox has not been at school for several days, complaining in excuse that he was ill. Some of the Collegiate teachers made inquiries for him yesterday. His pals in the fifth form were astounded when told that "Bob" Knox was dead. He appeared to have been well liked by the students of the Institute, and many of them found it difficult to believe that so intelligent-appearing a boy should end life under so dark a cloud

A physician who was on the scene shortly after the discovery of the bodies gave as his opinion three hours as the length of time the couple had been dead. That would place the shooting at between nine and ten o'clock this morning. The revolver, taken in charge by Inspector Reid, was found to contain two empty and two loaded shells in the magazine.

The flag over the Admiralty in Whitehall, London, is never lowered, as a sign that the work of the Board of Admiralty never ceases.

Local Council Of Women

Appeal to the Citizens of Peterborough. Desire to Raise $1,000.00 as Share of National Foundation Fund.

Some particulars as to accomplishments of the Local Council of Women during the fifteen years of its existence:

The Local Council of Women of Peterborough, has been organized for fifteen years, during which time earnest women have sought to improve, and build up the city. It is made up of most of the women's organizations, seeking to unite and co-ordinate women's work for women and children.

During war years they were first to ask the National Council to have a food controller appointed. Every Saturday before Mothers' Day, they sold carnations on the streets, the proceeds of which went to the equipment of the playgrounds. They inaugurated the sale of waste paper in the city for community purposes. They gathered the parents together in the schools for the purpose of helping each other. Through the efforts of Mrs. Medd and Mrs. Morris, these parents were later organized into the Home and School Clubs of to-day. They have stood for Minimum Wage, Mothers' Pensions, Sale of Oleomargarine, Pasteurization of Milk, and all measures relating to the health and happiness of the community.

They now ask your assistance for the Foundation Fund which is being solicited from coast to coast during this week and next. The present officers of the Local Council of Peterborough are: Past President, Mrs. Arthur Stevenson; President, Mrs. C. H. Edwards; Vice-Presidents: Miss Lancaster, Mrs. Deyell, Mrs. Pollack, Mrs. Helson, Mrs. Dearborn; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. A. Mowat; Treasurer, Mrs. N. D. Seaton; Recording Secretary, Mrs. J. Wearing; Convenors of Committees—Arts and Letters, The Art Club; Child Welfare, Miss Wood; Moral Standards, Mrs. A. Stevenson; Education, Miss Hamilton, Mrs. Morris; League of Nations, Mrs. Kenner; Household Economics, Mrs. Morrison; Immigration, Miss Brownscombe; Laws for the Protection of Women and Children, Mrs. C. Ray; Public Health, Mrs. (Dr.) Sutton; Soldiers' and Sailors' Pensions, Mrs. W. R. Morris; Trades and Professions for Women and Children, Mrs. Joseph Mills; Convenors of Foundation Fund, Mrs. N. D. Seaton and Mrs. Wearing.

PASSENGER ON ILL-FATED SHIP TO TAKE STAND

Donald Wallace Will Give Evidence at Manasoo Investigation.

VESSEL WAS SOUND.

Captain Tells Commissioner Had No Time To Do Anything Before Plunge.

OWEN SOUND, Ont., Oct. 5 (Canadian Press).—The second day of the inquiry by Captain L. A. Demers, Dominion Wreck Commissioner, into the loss of the steamer Manasoco, which foundered in Georgian Bay on September 15, with the loss of fifteen lives, closed yesterday evening without solving the cause of the accident. Three members of the ill-fated crew gave evidence, but failed to reveal any further clues. Donald Wallace, a passenger on the ship, will be on hand at the opening of the probe today, for examination.

The only outstanding evidence submitted yesterday was a statement made by Roy Fox, oiler, who stated that he met Dougal McLean, fireman, rushing up from below with his life preserver on, and yelling "water aft, she's gone." First Officer Osborne Long said that five minutes before the meeting of Fox and McLean, he had gone aft to see what was making the ship list. The cattle were quiet and in their pens, and there was no water on the deck, he declared.

Archibald Young and Robert C. Blyth, inspectors from the Department of Marine, stated that they had inspected the ship at Collingwood and Toronto, and that the ship was in excellent condition. Certificates were granted on the strength of their inspection.

Plunge Was Sudden

When questioned as to what he had done when he had realized that the ship was in danger, Captain John MacKay, master of the vessel, said there had been no time to do anything and he had remained at the wheel until the boat went down. MacKay was reminded by the Commissioner that much could be done in five or six minutes, but the master maintained that the final plunge was so sudden, there was no time for anything.

"Could you not have blown your whistle to call other boats?" asked Captain Demers.

"I did not think she was in danger until it was too late. I remained at the wheel until the last."

"Can you tell me what was the cause of the death of the engineer besides exposure?"

"No, it must have been exposure; we were all chilled."

Captain Norman McKay, president of the Owen Sound Transportation Company, declared that all five survivors of the wreck had told him the same story of the disaster as had been told the court. He agreed if there was any weakness in the Manasso, it was in the after part. Captain Norman McKay had implicit confidence in First Officer Long and did not believe he would tell an untruth. Captain McKay also described the efforts which had been made to find any further survivors than the original five, and also the search which had been carried on to recover the bodies.

Fred Walmsley, general manager of the company, explained the delay in starting search for the Manasso. When the ship had not arrived on Sunday, he had wired Little Current to find out the time of her departure. The wire, dated on Sunday, had said she had left "at noon yesterday." This was an error. The telegram should have been dated the 15th, the day the ship sank, and it would have meant Friday, which it actually did mean.

Had Jumped Overboard

Mrs. Agnes Hepburn, mother of Wheelsman Beatie, had heard that First Officer Long and her son had jumped overboard with one life preserver between them. As this was the second son she had lost in six weeks, she wanted to know all there was about her son's death.

Mate Long stated that when the time came to save themselves, he and Beattie both had hold of one life preserver. They went down in the water together and when he came up, Beattie was not with him. He wished to clear up any impression Mrs. Beattie might have about her son's death. For that purpose he had visited her home on Sunday last. But she was not home.

Frank Wilkinson, counsel for the company and for the surviving officers made a statement to the court, explaining his many interviews with the five survivors. He had done everything possible to get at the truth and had never advised his witnesses to withhold any facts. The cause of the wreck was just as mysterious to him as it was to everyone else.

The Commissioner hoped this explanation would be satisfactory not only to the court but to the public.

TEACHERS HOLD CONVENTION AT CAMPBELLFORD

East Northumberland Institute Hears Number of Interesting Addresses.

CONCERT IN EVENING.

Teachers Visiting Championship School Fair in Warkworth This Afternoon.

CAMPBELLFORD, October 5. — There were more people in Campbellford yesterday capable of imparting knowledge to others than have been for several years. The reason for this circumstance is the occasion of the convention of the Public School teachers of Numoer 3 Northumberland Inspectorate, which is being held in the Public School here. Some very interesting features have been introduced at this gathering, and there was considerable advantage derived from the morning and afternoon sessions yesterday. The evening session was in the form of a concert held in the auditorium of the High School. This morning's was the final regular session, since in the afternoon the meeting adjourned to allow the members to attend the rural school championship fair to be held in Warkworth.

Yesterday morning Rev. R. C. Talt, minister of St. John's United Church, was present and opened the meeting with prayer and Scripture reading.

Mr. Davey, of Roseneath, was the first speaker. He described a motor trip which he and his family had taken from his home to the Pacific Coast. So interesting were his remarks that it was with some surprise that his listeners learned that he had spoken for fifteen minutes over the hour. Before adjourning for the noon recess, the registration and resolution committees were appointed.

Afternoon Session.

The afternoon session began at half-past one with the official address of welcome by Mayor G. A. Kingston. C. L. Jones, B.A., Carleton Place, delivered a most interesting address on education. Mr. Jones is a man who is fully aware of the innumerable hardships which confront the man who is trying to better his position, and it was only by many long nights of work at home and classes in night schools that he was able to attain his degree of Bachelor of Arts. Frequently he referred to the obstacles which he had been forced to overcome in order to achieve

SHOWER TENDERED BRIDE AND GROOM

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Duff Receive Many Useful Gifts.

A very pleasant evening was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Tedford, on Monday, September 24, when about one hundred and fifty neighbors and friends gathered together and presented their daughter Bertha (Mrs. Roy Duff), with a miscellaneous shower.

The house was very prettily decorated for the occasion and after the arrival of the guests, Thelma and Zelda, the twin sisters of the bride, entered, dressed as a miniature bride and bridegroom, drawing a decorated wagon laden with gifts, while Mrs. Wood read the address.

Mrs. Duff made a most suitable reply, and the bridegroom also spoke a few words of appreciation on behalf of his wife and himself.

After the opening of the many gifts, luncheon was served and the remainder of the evening was spent in games and music.

Among those present were friends from Toronto, Peterborough, Hastings, and surrounding district.

The fastest man has ever traveled on land, slightly better than 200 miles an hour, is far exceeded by the speed of the water jet that drives the waterwheels in the new Big Creek plant of the Southern California Edison Company. Falling 2,300 feet down the mountainside through a big conduit, the water jet, passing through an eight-and-a-half-inch pipe, strikes each bucket of the wheels with a velocity of 255 miles an hour, exerting an impact force of 90,000 lbs.

DOCTOR HAS BROKER ARRESTED FOR LETTING RAIN IN RENTED HOUSE

NEW YORK, Oct. 5 —An attempt to eject his tenant by removing locks from doors and windows and removing skylights to permit the entrance of rain was charged in Jefferson Market Court yesterday by Dr. Henry W. Graves against Anthony Prestigiacoma, 26 years old, real estate broker, whom the physician had summoned to court on a charge of malicious mischief. Magistrate Silbermann ordered a full complain drawn and, at the broker's request, adjourned the case until September 11, bail of $500 being fixed.

Dr. Graves said he had lived at 233 West Fourth Street for thirty years and Prestigiacoma who has charge of renting the house, tried recently to get him to move. Failing, he said, the broker ordered locks removed from all of the windows and doors and had the skylights removed.

After the court proceeding, the real estate broker told reporters that the physician is suing him in the State courts for $35,000, alleging that efforts to oust him from the premises had hurt his business.

MASONS HONOR DISTRICT DEPUTY

Dr. Fraser, of Lakefield, Guest of Campbellford Lodge.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 5.—Brethren of the Golden Rule Lodge Number 126, A.F. & A.M. turned out en masse to welcome the D.D.G.M., Dr. Fraser, of Lakefield. Following the proceedings inside the lodge rooms, the brethren retired to the banquet hall where a most enjoyable evening was spent. The banquet was served by Long of Campbellford, and there were about one hundred and twenty-five members and visiting brethren seated around the tables. The visitors were from Peterborough, Lakefield, Lindsay, Hastings and Warkworth.

After duly honoring the royal toasts, Rt. Wor. Bro. Ben Buchanan, Warkworth, proposed the toast to Grand Lodge. During his remarks, Bro. Buchanan claimed that the Masonic Order was doing much to establish peace throughout the world. He also emphasized the principle of honoring veteran members. Later, Brother Fraser reviewed the work of the Grand Lodge, but more from the angle of its benevolent work.

The toast to the candidates was proposed by W. Bro. Kingston and responded to by Brother J. C. Grier, Lindsay and Bro. Allan Watson of town. W. Bro. Bygott proposed the toast to the visitors and in doing so, he not only paid tribute to Dr. Fraser for the number of Masonic Orders which he has received, but recalled the fact that he himself had been a member of the Lakefield lodge and had come to know Dr. Fraser very well. He also accorded the visitors a very sincere and hearty welcome. In response to the toast, many glowing tributes were paid by the visiting brethren to the Golden Rule Lodge. Among the speakers responding to the toast were Walter Fowlds, Hastings; Rev. Dr. Battersby, W. Bro. Morrison, W. Bro. Hornsby and W. Bro. Johnston of Lindsay.

The entertainers for the evening were the male quartette, Bros. Bygott, Hazel, Henson and Richardson; Bro. J. Storie, soloist, the orchestra.

NO ACCOMPLICE IN MAIL CRIME

Police Think Gibbs Acted Alone in Robbing C.N.R. Car.

WINDSOR, Ont., Oct. 5.—(Canadian Press).—When John Gibbs, Los Angeles youth, climbed aboard a Canadian National mail car near Chatham and took from it about twenty thousand dollars, he acted alone. This is the general opinion of police officials, who scouted the theory that any one else was connected with the hold up and possibly with two previous robberies in the province. Provincial Inspector Moss said to-day that no further search will be made for him for persons who might be involved unless other clues developed. He is satisfied Gibbs was solely responsible.

"If Gibb had accomplices he probably would not have left in such a hurry to get across the river," said Inspector Moss. "Certainly he would not have had all that money on him when captured. It would have been passed to an accomplice if there was any."

Witness Arrested.

WINDSOR, Ont., Oct. 4 (Canadian Press).—The possible source of the rumor a gang was connected with the hold-up was the arrest in Chatham of Ernest Lusby, who is held as a material witness. Lusby has a criminal record but police say he is merely held because he witnessed Gibbs at the station in Chatham.

MANTEL CLOCK FOR MRS. DOAK

HAS SOLD RESIDENCE.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MILLBROOK, Oct. 5.—A pleasant social gathering was recently held at the home of Mrs. S. E. Eakins, Anne street, under the auspices of the Women's Missionary Auxiliary and the Womens League of Grace Presbyterian Church in honor of the retiring president of the W. A., Mrs. R. J. Doak, who has since gone to Orillia to reside.

Music and conversation passed the time enjoyably during the early part of the gathering, and at a pre-arranged hour the guest of the evening was presented with a handsome mantel clock, the accompanying address being signed by the women of Grace Presbyterian Church:

W.M.S.—President, Mrs. W. T. A. Deyell; secretary, Mrs. J. R. Eakins; treasurer, Mrs. F. A. Kidd.

Taken by surprise, Mrs. Doak expressed her sincere appreciation of the gift and the kind words which were its accompaniment, mentioning also the pleasure she had had in working with her sister members in the church and the women's organizations, and referring with especial gratitude to the spirit of co-operation which had always prevailed, and which had manifested itself in the harmonious way the various undertakings of the societies had been carried out.

For some time past Mrs. Doak had filled the office of president of the Women's Missionary Auxiliary, carrying out the duties of her position

RALLY DAY SERVICES

(Examinre Correspondence)

MILLBROOK, Oct. 4.—The Sunday School of Cavan United Church held a successful Rally Day service on Sunday afternoon, Rev. Joseph Wilks being the preacher for the occasion.

Fall flowers were used for decoration purposes and the seating capacity was entirely occupied when the opening hour arrived.

The official program on "Peace and Goodwill" was used for the service, and the special offering for the Maintenance and Extension fund was taken up. Reports were very encouraging and showed the school in a prosperous condition.

The story of "The Christ of Andes", appropriately chosen in connection with the special Peace program, was read impressively by Miss Mary Moise. A fine showing was made by the Junior Testament League, formed last June by Rev. Mr. Wilks at this school, when nineteen dollars came forward in response to the roll-call stating they had read through the gospel of Matthew and were given the gospel of Mark; when the reading of this book is completed Mr. Wilks will supply Luke and then John, the object being to encourage Bible reading, and especially the life of Christ, among the young people. Some time ago the Testament League was started in the Millbrook Sunday and the interest has been maintained in a most encouraging manner.

Unable to do as much active work as he used to, Mr. Wilks is devoting his later years to the distribution of good literature, and has evidence, as the weeks go by, of the good results growing out of this commendable way of carrying on in the Master's service.

NORWOOD UNITED CHURCH

(Examiner Correspondence)

NORWOOD, Oct. 4.—The Annual Sunday School Rally Day service was observed in the United Church on Sunday morning. The special program prepared by the Board of Religious Education being followed, the congregation joining with the scholars in their service. The responsive reading was led by A. Brethen, superintendent of the school. The theme of the whole service was "Peace" and short recitations on this subject were given by boys and girls of the junior and intermediate divisions of the school.

A very eloquent and interesting address was given by Joseph Wearing, of Peterborough, the subject of which was "World Peace." The special offering was taken by some of the senior boys. During the service a solo entitled 'Peace," was sung by Roger McMillan.

AUCTION SALE IS SUCCESS

Farm Stock and Implements Bring Fair Prices—In Good Condition.

BAILIEBORO NEWS.

(Examiner Correspondence)

BAILIEBORO, Oct. 5.—Mr. Frank Dawson's auction sale of his farm stock and implements, which took place on Tuesday afternoon, was a splendid success.

The stock and implements sold well, although the large crowd present did not bid briskly, which caused the sale to be somewhat draggy.

Mr. Noble acted as auctioneer and kept everything active during the sale.

The stock and implements were in excellent condition, the horses and cows were fat.

Probably the horses sold the slowest of anything at the sale. The farmers did not seem to require horses and it took considerable time to dispose of the five beautiful young horses. They ranged in age from one to eleven years, and sold all the way from $75 to $160. It was generally considered every horse was bought at a bargain.

The sale of eight beautiful Milch cows, fat and sleek, was very brisk. They sold from $105 to $135.

Y.P.L. Meeting.

The Young People's League executive of the United Church held a meeting on Tuesday evening to arrange for the meetings, which will commence on Tuesday of next week.

The president, F. Barnard, was in charge, while those present were Miss May Earl, Rev. E. Swain, Mr. J. Porter, Mr. N. Earl and Mr. A. Deyell.

The meetings were planned ahead until the last of December, the topics were chosen, the members to handle the topics, and the leader for each meeting.

Stanley Johnston was selected to act as temporary secretary during the absence of Herbert Dean, who is in the West assisting with the Western harvest.

Miss Esther Lang was chosen as vice-president of the social and literary department, in place of Miss Edna Wallace, who was teacher in the Continuation School last year.

Altogether the executive feel they have a very interesting program set up for the ensuing months.

Personals.

Dr. and Mrs. M. Mason, of Toronto, who have been the guests of friends here for the past week, have returned home.

The Rev. E. J. and Mrs. Swain were visitors to Long Island on Wednesday.

Misses M. Earl, E. Falls, E. Deyell, L. Ball and F. Bonneycastle are among the teachers attending the convention at Cobourg this week.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Thompson and son, Billie, are spending a three-week vacation the guests of Mrs. Thompson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Barnard.

Mr. Kellough, of Port Hope, was a visitor to the vicinity on Tuesday.

Mrs. N. Thompson has been visiting at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Tabscot, of Port Hope. Mrs. Thompson was called home on account of her father's serious illness.

The fine warm weather this week is bringing quite a number of tourists to Rice Lake.

NATURE'S HERBAL BALM

Miss Muriel Smith motored to Toronto last week, remaining in the city for a few days, the latter being the guest of her sister, Mrs. H. Graham, Mr. and Mrs. Howard visiting her mother during the brief stay.

Mr. and Mrs. William Budd, Jr., and family moved to Port Hope this week to take residence in that town. Mr. Budd's work being there at present.

Mr. W. Wilkinson went to Midland on Wednesday morning, owing to the death of his sister, Mrs. Henry Lamb, of that town. Mrs. Lamb was in her eighty-third year, and had been ill for some time.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Ball and Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Henderson motored to Orono on Wednesday and attended the Fall Fair.

faithfully and efficiently, her resignation being necessarily accepted because of her decision to make her future home at Orillia, where her son will have educational and other advantages not available in the smaller community.

Mrs. Doak's residence here has been purchased by T. A. Ingram, who purposes moving into his new home in the immediate future, and offering for sale the house he has been occupying since coming to Millbrook to reside. Mr. Ingram also bought the business block on King street, owned by Mrs. Doak, and the latter disposed of the major part of her furniture by an auction sale, which was well attended and at which good prices, on the whole, prevailed. J. H. Roddy was the auctioneer.

Personals.

Rev. P. C. and Mrs. Howard left on Tuesday morning for their new home at Havelock, where the former has been appointed rector of St. Paul's Church.

Miss Nellie Ingram, of Peterborough, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. W. Wilkinson this week.

Dr. H. A. Turner was a business visitor to Toronto on Tuesday.

Miss Kathleen Sutton, who intends pursuing her studies abroad for the ensuing year, left this week for New York where she will be joined by her sister, Miss Josephine Sutton, R.N., who will accompany her, their passage being booked from that port.

Mr. N. Lamb returned recently from visiting his daughter, Mrs. W. Whyte, at Daventry, Northern Ontario, the latter, with her husband and baby boy, accompanying her father on the trip home.

Among those attending the reunion of the 136th Battalion last week at Bowmanville was Major A. V. Thorne, of Cavan.

Mrs. Hurd and daughter, Miss Lulu, who have been visiting the past two or three weeks with friends at Oshawa, Whitby, Manchester and other points, are now home.

Rev. P. C. and Mrs. Howard and Church, Boskung, to Charles Herbert Hamilton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hamilton of Peterborough. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. H. String, B.D.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. George Hewitt, looked extremely graceful and nice in a gow of white georgette, with a long tulle veil, charmingly arranged into a bandeau of lace and orange blossoms. She carried an arm bouquet of ... etheart roses.

Her bridesmaid, Miss Laura Oartshore, was attired in a gown of powder blue georgette and carried a bouquet of deep red beauty asters. Miss Phrona Sisson played the wedding music, and Mr. Richard Hewitt, brother of the bride, supported the groom.

The church was prettily decorated for the occasion by school chums of the bride, who evidently threw heart and soul into the undertaking.

A reception was held afterwards at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. T. Redner, which was largely attended, and the dance which followed it, was heartily enjoyed by young and old alike.

The bridegroom gave a very pretty amber and pearl jewel case to the bridesmaid, Miss Phrona Sisson received a gold and pearl ... brooch, and the best man gold cuff links.

The wedding presents were many and all carefully and thoughtfully chosen, and will do much to beautify the home which the happy young couple have wisely prepared for themselves in Peterborough.

It was generally admitted that the wedding passed off most happily and the popular young coupl will begin their married life with the sincere and hearty good wishes of all who love and know them.—Haliburton Recorder.

Obituary

MRS. McGILLIVRAY KNOWLES.

TORONTO, Oct. 5 (Special to The Examiner).—Word has been received of the death of Mrs. McGillivray Knowles.

Mrs. Knowles enjoyed continued success with her pictures at New York, where she and her husband spent some years. They made it a custom to return to Toronto each winter and exhibit their pictures here.

Mrs. Knowles was elected some time ago as a member of the American Water Color Society. This is a decided distinction, as it is futile to apply for membership in this society. If the executive decides an artist is of sufficient standing to be elected, the society advises the artist and that is the first he or she knows about it.

Mrs. Knowles was also a member of the artist group of the League of American Pen Women, and last year was awarded $100 for a picture exhibited in New York.

They travelled in Europe for some time, studying. Before many years had elapsed, Mrs. Knowles found herself one of the greatest artists Canada ever produced.

It was at Tiverton, N. Y., that Mrs. Knowles' death took place.

Born in Ottawa of English parents, Mrs. Knowles from childhood studied music, ... and literature. At first she concentrated on music, and her education in that art was very intensive until she was nineteen years of age. Mrs. Knowles at about that age came to Toronto to study in the school of art which McGillivray Knowles was director. In a short time she became Mrs. Knowles and decided to make a specialty of art. Mrs. Knowles will always be best remembered for her intimate observations of birds in whom she discovered strange moods, likes and dislikes and whimsies.

Lakefield

(Examiner Correspondence)

LAKEFIELD, Oct. 4—Field Sergeant Thomas Urquhart of the Salvation Army performed to a crowded house in the Regent Street United Church on Thursday evening last. Sergeant Urquhart is a musical genius and held his audience spellbound with his versatility, ... ability and his pleasing personality. It was an unusual entertainment and well worth the large patronage.

The annual Harvest Festival service in St. John's Church will be held on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock with Rev. R. C. Blagrave, D.D. of Peterborough, the special preacher. St. John's choir of Peterborough will also be present and occupy the choir stalls.

Mr. G. G. Connell, the genial manager of the local branch of the Royal Bank, is receiving congratulations from friends, both rural and urban, on winning the Canadian Packing Company's first prize for the best three bacon hogs. This is Mr. Connell's first venture in stock raising and his showing was remarkably good.

The anniversary services of the Lakefield Baptist Church will be held on Sunday, October 7th, with Rev. C. H. Schutt, D.D., of Toronto, as the special preacher. On the following evening (October 8th) Dr. Schutt will give an address on his trip to the Holy Land which will be illustrated with slides. Dr. Schutt is well known in Lakefield and will be greeted on this, his return visit, by hosts of friends.

The regular meeting of the Woman's Institute will be held on Thursday afternoon, October 11th, instead of Wednesday, October 10th. The change in date has been made because of the Norwood Fair and Championship School Fair in Norwood on October 10th.

Wedding Bells

LYNCH—HEFFERNAN.

On Tuesday, September 25, a pretty autumn wedding was solemnized at St. Paul's Church, Norwood, by Rev. Father McCarthy, when Mary Monica, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Heffernan, became the bride of Cecil Joseph, only son of Mr. T. J. and the late Mrs. Lynch, of Hastings.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was charmingly attired in ... ampine blue georgette dress, black velvet hat, fox neckpiece, black satin shoes and carried a corsage bouquet of Ophelia roses and maidenhair fern.

The bridesmaid, Miss Muriel Lynch, cousin of the groom, wore a pretty ... of blonde georgette and radium lace, with cand velvet hat and fox fur. She carried a bouquet of Columbia roses.

The groom's gift to the bride was platinum bar pin set with an amethyst; to the bridesmaid a bracelet; to the organist a bar pin; and to the groomsman gold cuff links.

After the ceremony a sumptuous wedding ... nner was served at the home of the bride's parents. The dining-room was artistically decorated for the occasion. Amid showers of confetti and good wishes the happy couple left by motor for an extended honeymoon. On their return they will reside on the groom's farm in Asphodel.

W.M.S. STUDYING 'THE ROYAL ROAD'

Norwood Presbyterian Women Hear Interesting Reading On China.

(Examiner Correspondence)

NORWOOD, Oct. 4.—The meeting of the W.M.S. of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church held at the home of Mrs. J. Rork on Tuesday afternoon was in charge of Mrs. Howard Ford.

The scriptural reading was taken by Mrs. W. Gratton and the chapter from the study book, "The Royal Road," was taken by Mrs. William Robb. Miss Jennie Clysdale gave a very interesting reading from "The Glad Tidings," on Chinese in Canada. During the meeting Mrs. John Rogers sang a solo.

Sale of Cooking.

The Y.W.A. of the United Church held a sale of home-made cooking in the basement of the Public Library on Saturday last. As a result they have in the neighborhood of $20 to add to the funds.

Personals.

Miss Evelyn Scott, of Peterborough, spent the week-end at her home here.

Mr. Eric Elliott, of Toronto, spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Elliott.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Squire visited their daughter, Mrs. C. Patterson in Oshawa last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Kidd, of Peterborough, were guests of Norwood friends on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Giffen are visiting in Brampton and Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Burgess, of Toronto, were guests at the home of Mr. J. Weir on Saturday last.

Mr. W. Thomson, of Brighton, has been visiting his brother, Mr. K. G. Thomson.

ADVERTISING PETERBOROUGH.

The fact that the Peterborough Kennel Association's show has attracted dogs not only from many Canadian points but from across the border as well indicates that it is a medium through which Peterborough will secure considerable advertising.

And such advertising is valuable.

It is from publicity that calls attention to the many-sided nature of a city that the chief benefit is gained.

Winning ball teams, successful musicians who follow up their victories in competition by being heard over the air, the Industrial Exhibition drawing exhibitors from far and near, the musical competition of the Kiwanis Club Produced-in-Canada Exhibition—these things all piled up together advertise Peterborough as a live, wideawake and progressive community.

The Dog Show is playing its part in attracting attention to this city, and it should be liberally patronized by Peterborough people on that account, as well as because it is decidedly well worth seeing.

A MASS EFFORT NEEDED.

Perhaps that could be named as the principal object of a fire department, inasmuch as it is much cheaper, safer and better to prevent fires breaking out than it is to fight them after they have started.

The Peterborough department does much in the way of a systematic and thorough system of inspection to remove fire hazards in places of business, factories and public buildings, but the whole responsibility should not be left to the fire chief and his men.

There is no reason why there should not be a regular and rigid inspection of premises by merchants, manufacturers and householders alike to make sure that unnecessary hazards are eliminated.

In the business and residential sections, back lanes, yards, basements and attics should be cleaned up, and all waste inflammable material removed.

Next week is Fire Prevention Week.

There could be no better time for Peterborough citizens to take over this responsibility and inaugurate a mass effort to stop the economic waste and safeguard life and property from destruction by fire.

THE CITY'S GROWTH.

While it cannot be said that an increase of 244 in population approaches anything like rapid growth, there is some measure of satisfaction in the fact that Peterborough has left the 22,000 mark behind.

The assessor's figures show the population this year at 22,012, as against 21,768 in 1927, which is perhaps as large an increase as could be expected without any material change in industrial conditions here.

Big gains in population as a rule come through the opening out of new or the expansion of existing industries, and where these changes have not taken place the growth is slow.

The city of Kingston, for example, has not shown any substantial increase in population for many years, Peterborough, by reason of industrial expansion, coming from well behind the Limestone City to practically equal her population.

And while the growth here has slowed up in the last few years, Oshawa, by reason of the tremendous development of the automobile industry there, has sprung up from a small town into a city of almost as many people as Peterborough or Kingston.

Fortunately, industrial development in this city is promised, and it will not be long before the assessor's returns will show a surprising increase in population.

MAKING THE PUNISHMENT, ETC.

In Toronto the other day a motorist convicted of speeding through a school zone was not only fined but his driving license was cancelled for six months.

The case is referred to because it is to be feared that there is little respect for school zones in Peterborough, in spite of the fact that the necessary signs are in place.

Many motorists disregard the warnings and drive in the neighborhood of schools at a rate that is most decidedly dangerous.

The probabilities are that they will continue to do so until the offence is treated with the same firmness as was shown in the Toronto case mentioned.

Speeding past schools, over intersections and generally is not going to be stopped in Peterborough unless the police see to it that enough offenders are summonsed and the magistrate makes certain that heavy enough punishment is inflicted to make the reckless drivers realize that their game is not only unsafe but unprofitable.

There was a monentary improvement in driving conditions earlier in the year when a police check-up had its effect upon the situation.

It is time for another.

On many of the city streets enough cases of fast driving could be seen in an hour to fill an armful of Hon. Geo. S. Henry's complaint cards.

That condition is not safe and should not be tolerated.

THE CAT.

"The cat will mew and the dog will have his day," according to the old adage, but according to the New York Times the cat will have her day, too. She is even being cited as an authority on health. Puss's example in habit and diet may lead humans to learn the secret of her silky coat and fine set of whiskers. The Times writer tried to learn the secret of kitty's life, moralizing in this way:

"Milk, as every one knows now, is a complete food. Pussy loves it. The little sphinx did not have to be told that it was good for her. When liver was ten cents a pound, she was loud in praise for it. She still likes it at a dollar, but her uninstructed instincts guide her taste. There is nothing snobbish about her. The idiosyncrasies of individual cats make some like green beans while others prefer cantaloupe, but all want some vegetable food.

"Unless human interference for which the cat is not responsible alters natural conditions, the feline figure is noted for grace. Stretching exercises keep it beautiful. She will curl up in a sunny spot as if she knew that violet rays were good for her. Considering these things, one must join the Milwaukee writer in watching the medical journals for an announcement that all the vitamins from A to Z are to be found in catnip."

THE LIQUOR ISSUE IN THE CAMPAIGN.

Asked by certain citizens of Omaha, at the beginning of his speaking tour in the West, whether he regarded prohibition as the chief issue in the national campaign, Gov. Smith replied with emphasis that he did not so regard it. However, his speech in Milwaukee on Saturday evening has served to bring that issue unequivocally to the forefront. Certainly the eighteenth amendment, the Volstead law and the abuses of prohibition enforcement seldom have come in for a more unmerciful scoring than that given them by the Democratic candidate.

His action in forcing the issue into prominence sets the American people to thinking on the subject seriously and to a definite purpose. Many are asking themselves whether they as individuals so earnestly desire to vote prohibition up or down that they are prepared to go outside their respective parties in the effort. In seeking the answer they are induced beneficially to reflect upon the available pertinent facts.

Constitutional and statutory prohibition is a legacy of the Great War. It stands as part of the nation's effort to conserve food, money and man power in the course of that gigantic struggle. Though it went into effect nationally after the war was over it had found forceful expression earlier in the independent adoption of prohibition by a great majority of the States and by large sections of other States that had not voted themselves wholly dry. The people, who brought on prohibition deliberately by their votes, can undo that work in the same manner if a sufficient number of them so desire.

Gov. Smith urges early amendment of the Volstead law to replace the arbitrary limitation of one-half of 1 per cent. by "a scientific definition of the alcoholic content of an intoxicating beverage." That change manifestly is desirable if such a definition can be framed. The Daily News long has advocated it and has sought in this country and in Europe for the proposed scientific definition. But the universal verdict of men of science appears to be that no such definition is possible. If Gov. Smith knows how to arrive at it he ought to enlighten the scientists—the physiologists, physicians, jurists, chemists—on the subject.

Chiefly Gov. Smith wishes to see the eighteenth amendment to the constitution so changed that each State will be authorized to decide for itself on a referendum whether it will or will not go into the business of manufacturing, importing and selling liquor. That return of former powers would not extend to private manufacture and sale of liquor. If one is prepared to concede the desirability of putting State Governments into the liquor business—of putting the liquor business legally and officially into State politics—there remains the question whether it is possible so to do in the present state of public sentiment. It is well known that there are enough dry States in the South alone, to say nothing of dry States elsewhere, to prevent any change in the eighteenth amendment. And from the dry States and dry congressional districts in other States come a sufficient number of dry congressmen to prevent the submission to the State Legislatures by the national lawmaking body of any modification of the eighteenth amendment. The present Congress has a dry majority in both Houses.

Let us assume, however, that a later Congress will so modify the Volstead law that it will permit the manufacture and sale of light wines and beer. The question of the constitutionality of the modified law then will be brought before the United States Supreme Court. Legal authorities predict that under existing precedents any considerable increase of alcoholic content above the present limit would be declared intoxicating by the court and therefore constitutionally banned.

But suppose Gov. Smith's State option plan were made constitutional. In that case some States might be expected to provide sanctuaries for John Barleycorn. But John in his strictly private capacity has no respect for State lines. And State traffic in liquor would be, wherever liquor was legalized, a prolific source of governmental corruption and other demoralizing abuses. The statistics of faithless Federal prohibition agents which Gov. Smith quotes give some idea of what might be expected to follow the entrance of State Governments into the liquor business.

It is fair to suppose that Mr. Hoover's plan for "an organized searching investigation of facts and causes" of the existing "grave abuses" in prohibition enforcement would include as an essential element determination of the direction in which conditions under prohibition are headed. Are they growing better or worse? It is important that the American public should know. Probably such an investigation as Mr. Hoover advocates would find one reason for widespread violations of the Volstead law to be the changed policy of prohibition advocates. Persuasion, which was applied of old time, now has given way largely to compulsion. Just here, one must think, has been committed a grievous error. If friends of prohibition would recall how effective were their old appeals to mankind's better nature when they fought the liquor habit without the aid of the law they would realize that similar appeals at this time might be potent in overcoming the evils of the existing lawless liquor traffic, particularly as those evils affect the young.

That a better moral background for law enforcement is sorely needed is not open to dispute. The present assault on prohibition should convince its defenders of the necessity henceforth of exerting greater efforts to develop such a background.—Chicago Daily News.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Make Fire Prevention Week mean something by having the fire hazards removed from your home and place of business.

Premier Rhodes claims that over-confidence caused the close election in Nova Scotia. Well, it certainly helped to wreck the Walkerville ball club.

One British harvester writes the Regina Leader that the work is a regular picnic. Canada, says the Globe, needs thousands more like that lad.

Peterborough's population shows a gain over last year, but not of such proportions as to seriously jeopardize the position of Montreal as Canada's largest city.

Story Current That He Has Run Away With Rumanian Girl.

BUDAPEST, Oct. 5.— (Canadian Press).—The newspaper Naplo says that Prince Nicholas of Roumania had eloped with a Rumanian girl of aristocratic lineage and was living in the Paris villa of his brother Carol, the former Crown Prince. No confirmation of the report was obtainable. The paper said the censor did not permit the matter to be discussed, while the Rumanian court maintained Prince Nicholas was on holiday. He visited the United States and Canada with his mother, Queen Marie, some years ago.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

TORONTO, October 5. — Five hundred cattle were left from Wednesday. Most of them are unfinished butchers. Trade remains very slow, as buyers are not anxious to take poor quality cattle.

The best heavy steers reach $10.75 and light butchers $10.00 to $10.50.

Common steers and heifers are selling at $8.00 to $9.25. A few showing better finish sell stronger.

Heiferish cows are purchased at $9.00 to $9.25. Choice fat cows are $8.00 to $8.75. There is only a small number on yesterday's market.

The yards are practically cleaned of bulls. The best heavy bulls bring $7.50 to $8.00. Rough bologna bulls are unchanged at $6.25 to $7.00.

Some stocker and feeder cattle are still around. Possible customers show a tendency to acquire them at easier prices. Choice steers are $10.25 to $10.50. Yearling heifers of good quality bring $9.00.

Stocker and feeder show starts at yards next week. Salesmen are looking toward a resumption of activity.

Trade on calves is steady at $15.00 to $15.50, with fancy at $16.00.

Lambs to-day sell for $11.75. Sheep are steady at $8.00 to $9.00 for yearlings with light butchers sheep at $5.00 to $6.00.

No bids for week-end loadings on hogs are out yet. To-day's hogs are selling at $10.50 f.o.b. selects and road hogs are $11.25.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., October 5 (Canadian Press). — There was a marked improvement in the inquiry from foreign buyers for wheat here yesterday, but owing to the sharp advance in prices at Winnipeg none of the bids were accepted by local exporters.

The local cash grain market was strong in sympathy with other centres and prices for wheat and oats were advanced two cents per bushel, and Argentine corn one cent per bushel. The demand was steady. Manitoba No. 5 wheat sold at $1.15, No. 6 wheat at $1.06, feed wheat at $1.03, Argentine corn at $1.07, and American corn at $1.03.

The market for spring and winter wheat grades of flour was firm, with a steady business passing.

Prices for all lines of millfeed were firmly maintained under a good demand. A fair trade was done in standard grades of rolled oats and values were unchanged.

The trade in fresh and storage eggs continued active and values were well maintained. The receipts were 1,445 cases.

The market for imported beans was without any new feature to note owing to the fact that supplies on spot are still limited and until arrivals increase the trade will be of a hand-to-mouth character as buyers are not disposed to operate freely at the present level of values. Sales of odd small lots of choice white handpicked were made at $4.20 to $4.40 per bushel, ex-store, and car lots to arrive were quoted at $4.00 per bushel ex-store.

A feature of the butter trade was the improved demand and the market was a little more active. Prices were steady. The receipts were 240 packages.

An easier feeling developed in the cheese market and values were reduced ¼c to ½c per pound. This was attributed to the limited demand from all sources. The receipts were 9,819 shares.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, October 5 (Canadian Press). — Corn went soaring yesterday and outdid previous high price records for the season. Buying of future deliveries took on large proportions owing a good deal to word that Secretary of Agriculture Jardine is urging 50,000,000 bushels increase of corn feeding.

Despite liberal sales to realize profits, closing quotations on corn were firm, 1⅝ cents to 1⅞ cents net higher. Wheat finished ⅝ cent to 1¼ cents up, oats at ⅝ cent to ⅞ cent to ⅛ cent advance, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 10 to 12 cents.

Right from the outset, the corn market was on the advance, and the topmost points reached were during the late dealings.

Throughout the day, attention of traders focused on the fact that Secretary Jardine had publicly advised farmers to use millions of bushels more corn in feeding cattle, hogs, and poultry this season than would ordinarily be devoted to such a purpose. Meanwhile, trade talk centred also on the relative cheapness of U. S. corn in Europe as compared with corn from Argentina.

Reports that industries in Iowa, the banner corn state, were buying corn at Chicago, formed an interesting feature of yesterday's bulge in corn values. It was asserted that 100,000 bushels of corn had been purchased here for shipment to Clinton, Iowa. Aside from this purchase, brisk shipping demand here was apparent, and vessel charters were made for 300,000 bushels of corn to go to Georgian Bay, with the cash corn trading basis as much as 2½ cents a bushel higher on some transactions. Receipts of corn in Chicago yesterday amounted to only 34 cars, and arrivals were likewise scanty elsewhere.

Wheat and oats proved responsive to corn strength.

Besides, Canadian wheat grading was reported to be making the worst showing of the season, only 51 per cent. of receipts being of number four quality or above. Furthermore, the volume of wheat deliveries at interior points in Canada has fallen off sharply to below 6,000,000 bushels or the first time since the 1923 crop movement got well under way. Another bullish influence yesterday was news that India is in urgent need of foreign wheat.

Provisions averaged higher, helped by an upward trend in the value of hogs.

BUTTER AND EGGS.

TORONTO, Oct 5.—The Toronto egg market was the firmest spot in local produce trading yesterday. Some dealers in customary manner revised their prices for future commitments, and strictly fresh eggs of extra grades were marked up 1c per dozen over last Thursday's quotations. The extreme range for fresh extras being paid locally to country shippers is now 44c per dozen, so far as can be ascertained. Buyers of large quantities of eggs will no doubt rearrange their quotations to shippers to-day for supplies next week. Receipts of highest grade eggs for the week to date have not been excessive, with the result that prices continue to work to higher levels. Domestic consumption is good for the season of the year, and local dealers are closely watching the strong situation in the United States. From reports received storage eggs are moving more freely in the local market, although the outward movement is still relatively slow. There have been some complaints regarding the quality of the average run of receipts, and it appears that some quantities of held eggs are coming forward.

COUNTY TEACHERS

Is it active and re-active, progressive? Hence we see there is a wide field. Standards must be set up. Competent men and women must be found. By your fruit ye shall be judged."

Teachers should test themselves. If the teacher would take an hour once a week to test herself it might be fruitful. An effective teacher must have a message and get an answer back from the child.

He next compared teaching to the use of the needle and thread and the making of all kinds of cuttings, but leaving the loose ends unfastened and so the garment soon falls apart and vanishes away.

Mr. Downey then expressed his desire to help the teachers, and said anything he said was given to help the teachers rather than find fault.

1. Scholarship. Mr. Downey advised the teachers who haven't first-class certificates to get busy as the first-class teacher was in demand.

2. Preparation. Keep abreast with the times. Have a desire to improve. Teachers may take summer courses at college of education, which is a hive of industry in July. He said it was an excellent place to go.

3. Personality is "you." He said that personality must sell the goods.

4. Neatness. Teachers should be neat, keep their desks neat and the class-room neat. How can a teacher teach neatness or make her pupils neat if she is not neat?

5. Self-Control. One must have self-control.

6. Cheerfulness. He said he did not wish to be in a school where the teacher nags. Don't growl. Be cheerful.

7. Sense of Humor. Often teachers are too sedate. Sometimes a sense of humor will save the situation.

8. Resourcefulness. In a new section mind your own business. If a teacher has trouble, tell it to the inspector. He is willing to help.

9. Teachers must have self-confidence and sympathy. They are never too old to learn. They should be plastic.

He next referred to filling in reports. This year he said only seven out of twenty-five reports for entrance, Part I., were filled in properly.

10. Promptness. Be on time. He told of visiting a school at 9:15 and the children were still playing. Was that teacher efficient? Teachers ought to be so zealous that they put no stumbling block between them and efficiency.

11. Course of Study. In filling in Christmas reports consult the course of study. Teach the child to sit down and face the problems, adjust them. Make him think.

12. Administration.

13. Organization is very important. Have work prepared.

Mr. Downey then mentioned the fact that discipline may be gained by using games as softball, baseball and horseshoe.

Mr. Scarrow's Address

This was followed by very interesting address given by A. N. Scarrow of the College of Education, University of Toronto. He expressed great pleasure in being back in Peterborough after eighteen years. He said there was more red paint brought by the auto coaling stations. There are more cars and more activities in Peterborough.

He also mentioned the sound of the bell at the Normal School as being the same as when he was there.

He urged the teacher to take work seriously but not to get discouraged, to be self critical, but to cheer up.

Mr. Scarrow's topic was Manual Training, but he said he wasn't going to talk on Manual Training alone. He said, "There are certain fundamntals in life which arise at birth and grow as we grow. There is physical activity and mental activity.

"There are five gateways to knowledge: seeing, hearing, feeling, tasting and smelling. The first three are the main ones used in teaching."

Mr. Scarrow pointed out how the little child turns to the environment and how obstruction leads to investigation. Some think when anything becomes a habit there is no education in it but he did not think so as it gave freedom to think about other things than method.

He said there were no elevators in knowledge. One must strive to gain it. The child must be active to learn of the big world in which he is placed. The playground saved the school of olden days, as there was more hard work then. The children learned on the playgrounds nto to be selfish or domineering.

The child learns by imitating as Wordsworth says:

As if the whole creation
Were endless imitation.

There must be more intellectual methods of construction. He said he was sorry for boys who don't know the kinds of wood. "Get some of the beauty out of yonder in your work," said Mr. Scarrow, pointing out of the window.

They used to ask the pupils to make something during vacation. One boy brought back a rustic seat with "God Save the King" woven in twigs on the back in 1914, showing that he had been thinking of the war while making it. Thus activity made him think and put his own individuality into work. He said a house should be made a home and home a beautiful home by applied art.

Learn By Doing.

Some criticize these activities, but it doesn't matter whether the child is constructing or destroying so long as he is learning. If the boy takes a twenty-five cent toy and tears it apart, getting fifty cents worth of learning, he is twenty-five cents ahead.

He also advised the keeping of note books to see the progress of the child and for him to look over when older.

The ordinary boy in the city does not know much about a knife. He mentioned the old test or giving a boy a knife and some wood. If he made something he was all right. If he only made shavings send him on.

Mr. Scarrow then compared nature study to object lessons or sense training, stating that to get the best from nature, one must go out and sit down and listen. He said words do not convey ideas. They stimulate the mind to bring out the ideas. He also urged reeview to get another idea of the subject. Mr. Scarrow concluded his address by saying school work is great work.

Mr. Lees' Address.

This was followed by an address given by Mr. Lees in which he stated it was not an address, but just a chance to get off the annual growl on annual reports.

"The other day, I think it was yesterday, shortly after eleven when classes were being dismissed, one little lad ran across the grass—another followed. A little girl tried, but failed. 'If it were low enough, I could jump over it easily,' said the child.

"Too often we are like that. When difficulties come, we wish to lower our standards. We can never get our pupils to face their difficulties until teachers face their own difficulties. Are we doing always in our work our very best? Are we putting all the thought and energy we can? At the same time we are not to put to-day's energy into to-morrow's work. We must keep within our ability and strength. It is the duty of every one who occupies any public position that they put in the best energy possible without overdoing it.

"We must be growing all the time. "If you let me go out into the backyard, I can tell the kind of boy who lives there. If there are not a lot of knotty sticks, he is a boy who has some sand to him. He is the boy who is not going to let an old knotty stick stick him.

"You must do a hard thing each day to enable you to be able to do the hard thing that comes to-morrow."

"After five years' teaching teachers often get into a rut. They are full grown. The thing to do is to keep alive; read educational journals and books."

An explanation of the method of reckoning the attendance reports was then dealt with, to the satisfaction of the teachers.

Then the urgent need of having the agriculture reports to be mailed immediately at the close of school was stressed. The very same thing applies to the annual reports, which must be in by the end of December.

"Some can do it. Why can't all do it?"

"The reason for these reports being correct and punctual is that the Department in Toronto requires it."

TEACHERS HOLD CONVENTION

his end. The other speakers of the afternoon were Miss F. Halliday, B.A., B.Paed., Toronto Normal Schools. Miss Halliday spoke on Practical Arithmetic. Mrs. Lohnes, principal of Hastings School, gave an address on The Use of Commonplace Things.

The afternoon session was concluded at four o'clock.

The Concert.

Mrs. Fred Free, Miss Margaret Dickson, Miss Lillian Hay, Miss Bella Lofchy, Miss Aileen Linton and Miss L. Runions were the artistes who presented a concert of such a high standard. The entertainment was held in the High School auditorium, under the auspices of the Northumberland Teachers' Institute of Inspectorate number three. The auditorium was well filled and generous applause marked the approval of the audience.

Mrs. Free was the first to appear. She sang three numbers: "I Blame Thee Not," by Schumann; "Sink, Red Sun," by Del-Reigo, and "A Song of Thanksgiving," by Allisten. Of this group, the second number appeared to be the most popular. Recently it won much favorable comment when sung by Mrs. Free from Station CKGW.

Miss Bella Lofchy appeared next in the "Valse Tulip," from the musical comedy, "Tulip Time. "Tulip Time" was played by a caste from the High School at the commencement exercises last year, and Miss Lofchy's dancing was one of the features of the evening. Just as it was then, so it was last night. She was the first to receive an encore.

Miss Margaret Dickson's first appearance was in a group of three songs, "Solveig's Song" (Greig); "Vissi d'Arte," from the opera, "La Tosca" (Puccinni), and "Bid Me Discourse" (Bishop).

Miss Lillian Hay, elocutionist, won great approval with "Her Letter," by Bret Harte. This was a very melodramatic affair, with a piano accompaniment played by Miss Grace Payne.

Mrs. Free and Miss Dickson each sang one number, "Softly Awakes My Heart" (Saint-Saens) and "Villanelle" (Del Aqua). The latter number, sung by Miss Dickson, was one of her numbers on her recent broadcasting program.

Very pleasing was the Minuet danced by Misses Linton and Runions. In the costumes of many years ago, both young ladies moved with all the grace and precision that has ever been accorded the ladies of those gallant times.

In her last group Miss Dickson sang an old English air, "Shepherd Thy Demeanour Vary," "The Rockaby Train" (Akers), and "The Thrush's Love Song" (Travers). All were well received, but it was apparent that the second number, a sweet, tuneful lullaby, sung in a half voice, was largely responsible for the applause which demanded an encore. "A Brown Bird Singing" (Haydn Wood) was Miss Dickson's encore.

The last number on the program was a group of three numbers by Mrs. Free. She sang "How Do I Love Thee?" (Ware), "Glow of the Western Sky" (Hulbert), and "The Glory of the Sea" (Sanderson). The group was well received, and when the last note of Sanderson's stirring composition had been sung, an encore was demanded. Mrs. Free sang "Bayly's Long, Long Ago."

That the concert was a success was evident by the applause throughout. At the piano for Mrs. Free was Miss Dickson, Agnest Logan Green of Peterborough; for Miss Hay, Miss Grace Payne; for Miss Lofchy and the Misses Linton and Runions, Miss Maynard.

Following the concert, dancing was the order in the auditorium, the music being furnished by Leonard and Frederick.

The Planter of the Tree

By RUBY M. AYRES

McClure Newspaper Syndicate

XLIV—JUST A WEEK!

Only that morning, when Sanderson had said to Sally, "What sort of a ring would you like? Diamonds?" passionate words had risen to her lips, and she had only with difficulty repressed them.

"Diamonds! I hate diamonds! There is only one thing I want in all the world—the man I love. Give him back to me, please—please!"

But Garry had gone; he had walked out of her life with a four-page letter explaining that he did not love her well enough, and that was all!

"I was never good enough for him," Sally told herself humbly. "I was never enough of a lady for him."

But the tears rose to her eyes and pushed their way out from beneath her closed lids. What was the use of trying to pretend that she did not care? What was the use of trying to forget?

She had been passionately hurt and angry when Josh Akers left her, but this was something quite different; a wound that went deeper; a wound which, even if it did not bleed much for a critical world to see, would take longer to heal—perhaps would never heal.

The garden gate creaked, and Sally hurriedly brushed the tears from her eyes as she opened them and saw Garry's father coming towards her.

"Asleep?" he asked, and then, "I have waited so long for an invitation to call that I grew bold and came uninvited. Well, my dear, and how are you? I am very glad to see you home again."

Sally raised herself eagerly.

"I'm almost well. No, let me show you, please!"—as he would have restrained her. "Don't try to help me. I can manage for myself quite well. Look!"

With childish pride she put first one foot then the other over the side of the hammock and gently down on to the soft grass below, then with a little effort she stood upright, looking at him with proud eyes.

"Isn't it wonderful? You never believed it would come true, did you? Nobody did—not even Philip."

"It's wonderful," Garry's father said. "Wonderful! The fairies have indeed been at work. And now you must go back again amongst the cushions, or I shall run away, please."

He waited till she was comfortably settled, then he brought a chair and sat down beside her.

"And where is Mr. Sanderson?" he asked.

"He's gone to London." Sally hesitated, then added, with a touch of defiance in her voice: "He's gone to buy a ring—at least, he's gone to buy two rings! We are going to be married."

The vicar held out his hand. If he was surprised he did not show it; he only said "I'm glad—very glad. Philip is a fine fellow."

"Yes, the best in the world." But Sally looked away from him as she spoke. Sitting there, he reminded her so forcibly of Garry; there was something in the turn of his head and in his smile that was almost more than she could bear.

"Shall I always feel like this?" Sally was asking herself wildly. "Will a day ever come when the sound of his name or a smile like his, or anything that reminds me of him, doesn't hurt?"

"And when is the wedding to be?" Mr. Nairn asked.

Sally shook her head.

"I'm not sure yet. When I'm stronger Philip says. He wanted it to be in your church, but——" She broke off.

"You'd rather be married in London somewhere without any fuss, is that it?" Mr. Nairn asked sympathetically.

"Yes."

"And very sensible," he agreed heartily. "You're not strong enough yet to stand a great deal, and the villagers here, with all respect to them, do love a wedding! You'd have the entire population standing round the church door."

He laughed, but his eyes were kind. He was an understanding soul, and he knew why Sally shrank from being married in his church.

There had been no actual exchange of confidences between himself and his son, but the vicar knew well enough that once, at any rate, Garry had loved this little girl, and had believed that she loved him.

"I hope you'll be very happy, Sally," he said gently; and Sally answered:

"I hope Philip will. I'm going to try to make him."

They sat silent for a little while after that, but to both of them it seemed as if a broad-shouldered man with a cheery smile and crinkling red hair was there between them, waiting, perhaps hoping for recognition, till suddenly Sally broke out:

"Isn't it a funny world, Mr. Nairn? Nobody ever seems to be really quite happy, do they?"

"It depends what you mean by happiness, my dear. Some of us are only allowed to find it by giving it to others, just as some of us are only allowed to find it by taking it from others."

Sally sighed.

"Philip deserves to be happy," she said.

"He does, indeed."

She looked at him with mournful eyes.

"Do you like him?"

"Yes, and, what is more, I admire and honor him."

"I shouldn't have thought you would. He drinks and swears," Sally said thoughtfully. "Though he's certainly been much better lately," she added, hurriedly. "And when we are—well, married"—she slurred the word over—"I expect I shall be able to do as I like with him, and then he won't drink at all."

"He loves you very dearly," Mr. Nairn said.

"Yes," Sally was indifferent. "It's funny that the wrong people always love you best," she said unthinkingly. "It always seems to me that when you love someone so much that it hurts, that they ought to have to love you in return, but they don't!"

It was not possible to misunderstand her.

"Such things are difficult to explain," Mr. Nairn said.

Mrs. Kiff came down the garden.

"It's lunch-time, Miss Sally. Will you have it out here, or will you come indoors? Oh, I beg your pardon, sir!" she added hurriedly.

The vicar rose to his feet.

"Not at all. I was just going. This is only a fleeting visit. Miss Sally is going to invite me to tea formally soon."

"Come the day after tomorrow," Sally said eagerly.

Mrs. Kiff went back to the cottage, and the vicar took Sally's hand.

"It's au revoir till the day after tomorrow, then," he said.

Sally's face was pale and constrained.

"I hope you have good news of—your son," she said formally.

It was a sentence which she had recently read in a book, and she thought, poor child, that it would hide her passionate anxiety for news of Garry, and merely sound polite and formal.

Mr. Nairn came back.

"As a matter of fact, I have not heard from him at all for some weeks," he said very gently. "I have only had one letter from New York since he went away, but that is like Garry—he is a bad correspondent."

"Yes," said Sally faintly.

He had been a good correspondent the only time he wrote to her, she thought with a stab. Four pages in which to say, "I don't love you well enough." Four pages with which to break her heart when her body was already broken.

* * *

"Thought I might as well do the thing properly," he explained bashfully, when Sally cried out at his extravagance. "Do you like them, Sally?"

"Oh, they're lovely—lovely!"

Mrs. Kiff, who had found some excuse to be in the room, came forward, her face all red with excitement and curiosity, as Philip snapped the wrist watch on to Sally's slender wrist.

"Now you'll always know the time," he said whimsically. "And if I'm ever a minute later than I said I would be, I shall expect a good wigging."

"It's lovely—much too good for me," Sally said, almost in tears.

"Nothing's too good for you," Sanderson insisted. He slipped both rings on to her third finger, and Mrs. Kiff gave a loud cry of protest.

"That's the worst of bad luck, sir! Trying on a wedding-ring before the day! As bad as trying on a wedding-veil. Why, a friend of mine—at least, she wasn't a friend, she was my sister—before her wedding-day——"

"I don't believe in bad luck any longer," Philip interrupted, cutting short her volubility. "And isn't it nearly supper-time? I'm dying of starvation."

"I don't want supper," he said gruffly. "I only wanted to get rid of her so that I could kiss you." He sat down on the arm of Sally's chair. "Have you missed me to-day?"

"Of course I have." But there was not much enthusiasm in her voice, though she turned and rubbed her soft cheek against his coat-sleeve.

"Been lonely?" he asked.

"No. The vicar looked in this morning."

"Oh."

"But he didn't stay—at least, only a little while."

"Anyone else?"

"No. I slept all the afternoon."

"Good child! And, Sally——"

"Yes?"

"We're going to be married a week tomorrow. I've arranged it all."

Sally's pale face turned crimson.

"A week! Why—why——" With an effort she controlled herself, but her lips shook. "Isn't it very soon, Philip?"

"What is here to wait for?" he demanded bluntly.

"Nothing, only——"

"There's nothing to wait for," he reiterated. He rose, and began pacing about the little room like a caged lion. His meeting with Garry Nairn had decided him. He was taking no risks on the verge of his happiness.

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1928.

Astrologers read this as an unfavorable day in planetary direction, and for that reason advise caution in all important decisions or activities.

It is a day to rest and to catch up the loose ends of the week's work and not a time for any sort of initiative.

Those who seek employment will benefit by postponing any active effort to obtain a position until a more favorable rule of the stars.

The sway makes for bad judgment of opportunities and for poor salesmanship where personal talents are concerned.

Under this direction of the stars intrigue and double-dealing are supposed to be encouraged. It is not favorable for political work.

Warning again is given that there will be many severe storms at sea and ocean travelers would better study the weather chart before embarking.

Saturn now is held responsible for sinister forces that will affect the British government. Statesmen who are not unlike dictators will achieve new fame, it is prophesied.

Education in America will continue to receive immense benefactions from millionaires, it is foretold, and the universities will perform important public service.

The coming winter season is to be marked by entertainments of great brilliance, but they will be conducted on the most conservative lines, it is forecast.

The late autumn is to bring to England and France heavy rains and floods which will affect foreign travel, it is prognosticated.

Sensational disasters at sea again are prophesied and there will be heavy losses of human life before the holidays, if the stars are rightly read.

Persons whose birthdate it is should resist the temptation to change business or domestic associations. Promotion that is unexpected will come for many, it is augured. These subjects of Virgo usually succeed in material ambitions and when spiritually minded are remarkable for their understanding.

Children born on this day probably will be ambitious to found homes and to centre their interests in domestic affairs. The Virgo women are generally fine housekeepers.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE ARE CARELESS

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.

(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

Carelessness, like any other human trait, is possessed in varying degrees by different people. Some are more careless than others. But all of us are careless at times.

Extreme carelessness is a temperamental habit found usually in the happy-go-lucky, easy type of person, who has never shouldered a responsibility. Or it may be just the opposite. One may recoil from too much obligation to absolute carelessness and no obligations. This is the type of the "gentlemen of the road," who renounce all ties, and all social obligations, even the responsibility of earning a living.

Sheer laziness is doubtless the commonest cause for carelessness. Precation involves foresight, and this involves the expenditure of energy. Lack of vitality coupled with innate laziness and plain shortsightedness and stupidity make for carelessness.

The careless person also usually lacks interest. We are careless in remembering the names of people we do not care to meet again, but not the names of a business prospect, a likely pal, and the girl we hope to marry.

False sense of security that comes through familiarity is another ally to carelessness. The proficiency gained in practice is offset by familiarity and recklessness. The experienced burglar is much more proficient than the amateur. He is also likely to be more careless on account of his false sense of security based on past success.

Fatigue reduces the stock of energy and leads to carelessness. We say that we are too tired to care or to take the necessary precautions. This is a form of laziness brought on by overwork. There are those who are born tired, that is, lazy. Fatigue is temporary laziness. The spirit may be willing but the flesh is weak.

Why do you do what you do? Ask Dr. Thomson. Write him care of this paper, and send stamped envelope.

GOOD-BYE KISS IS KNIFE-THRUST LURE

By NEA Service.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—Young man, beware the woman whose love you have spurned. That's the advice of Donald Backus of Leicester, who suffered a knife thrust wound in the neck when he consented to a goodbye kiss after informing his sweetheart that he no longer loved her.

"As I kissed her," Backus told police, "I felt a sharp stab in the side of my neck. She was using a penknife which I had lent her a day or two before." Authorities found the girl's father ill and her mother expressed inability to cope with the situation.

UNCLE WIGGILY

By HOWARD R. GARIS

Today's Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY'S PRESENT

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate

Uncle Wiggily had been caught by the Fox and Bob Cat and carried off to the Fox den when the rabbit gentleman was asleep on the back porch of his bungalow, sunning himself to get over the mumps. And now, as I told you in the story last night, Mr. Longears was trying to think of some trick to play on the Fox so he could get away from the Bad Chap.

"When you say I have come to your den for supper, Mr. Fox" asked Uncle

"What's the matter?" asked the Bob Cat.

Wiggily, "did you mean your supper or my supper."

"I meant my supper!" barked the Fox, who in some ways is much like a dog. "Pretty soon my friend the Bob Cat will be here and we shall eat you for our supper," said the Fox, smiling to show his white, sharp teeth and red tongue, though Uncle Wiggily could see nothing funny at which to laugh.

"I must get away before the Bob Cat comes," thought Uncle Wiggily to himself as he sat there in the den of the Fox. "Two Bad Chaps are worse than one to get away from, and this fox is bad enough."

The Fox kept between Uncle Wiggily and the door of the den so the rabbit uncle had no chance to slip out. The fire was blazing in the stove, the water was simmering for tea, the table, such as it was in the Fox den, was set. Everything was ready for supper as soon as the Bob Cat should come.

This Bad Chap, with the silly little tail, had helped the Fox carry Uncle Wiggily to the den of the Bad Chap with the big, dusting brush of a tail. Then the Bob Cat had gone to his own den.

"But he will be back as soon as he washes his paws and puts on a white tie," said the Fox.

"Why does the Bob Cat put on a white tie?" asked Uncle Wiggily, thinking that perhaps if he talked enough the Fox would finally go to sleep, giving the rabbit a chance to slip out.

"The Bob Cat always put on a white necktie when he comes to a party," growled the Fox, "and this is to be a party."

"Oh," said Mr. Longears and he was glad that he seemed to be all over the mumps, for he felt no more pain

All the while the bunny gentleman was trying to think of a way to trick that Fox and escape from the den. All of a sudden a noise was heard and Mr. Longears was hoping it might be the Police Dog coming to rescue him. But it was only the Bob Cat.

"Is everything ready?" asked the Bad Chap with the silly tail.

"Yes," said the Fox. "Everything is ready."

"I am not!" cried Uncle Wiggily. "You say this is to be a party, Mr. Fox. Well, if it is, let me go and I will bring you a present. There ought to be presents at a party."

"Maybe!" laughed the Fox. "But you are present enough for us. If you went to get another present you might not come back," which was true. So that trick didn't work.

"What's the matter?" asked the Bob Cat.

"I have such a queer pain in my jaws," said the Fox.

"So have I!" growled the Bob Cat, making a funny face. "Oh, how it hurts! I wonder——"

And then Uncle Wiggily knew! The two Bad Chaps had caught his mumps! Hurray!

"Dear me," said the Fox. "This is very queer!" His face began slowly swelling. So did the Bob Cat's.

"Pickles! Lemons! Sour drops!" suddenly cried the rabbit.

"Stop it!" yowled the Bob Cat, doing the same.

But Uncle Wiggily only shouted the more:

"Pickles! Lemons! Sour drops!" And the thought of those puckery things made the Bad Chaps' mumps hurt so that they rolled around on the den floor and thought no more of eating Uncle Wiggily.

"Good-by, Bad Chaps!" laughed the rabbit as he hopped out. "You didn't want any presents at this party, but I gave you each one! I gave you the mumps! Ha! Ha! Pickles! Lemons! Sour drops."

And away he hopped leaving the Bad Chaps with such puckered faces that they could hardly open their mouths to take in the head of a pin.

So everything was all for the best.

THE CAT CAME BACK

COLUMBIA, S.C., Oct. 6.—The J. L. Daniels family decided to get rid of their cat. So they drove into the country and deposited puss and her kittens on the edge of a lonely road 50 miles from home. Two weeks later madam cat was back on Daniel's front step, albeit somewhat the worse for her long journey, and sans the little ones.

Happy Motherhood

There is no substitute for maternal milk. Authorities have proved that breast-fed babies have many more chances of growing up strong and healthy than those that are artificially fed. For in maternal milk Nature has provided the ideal food for healthy growth . . . germ-free and of correct composition. No substitute will safeguard the child against nutritional diseases such as rickets, etc.

OVALTINE ensures a rich supply of maternal milk . . . enables nearly every mother to breast-feed her baby. Doctors, nurses and mothers daily testify to this, to OVALTINE's help in maintaining mothers' strength during confinement and to its ability for restoring them to normal health quickly, afterwards.

OVALTINE is a remarkable concentration of ripe barley malt, fresh eggs and creamy milk. Delicious. Easily digested and assimilated. Scientifically correct. One cupful contains more nourishment than 3 eggs or 12 cups of beef tea.

Made in England. Sold at 50c., 75c., $1.25 and special $4.50 family size. size. The larger tins are more economical to purchase.

'OVALTINE'

Enables Mothers to Breast-feed their Babies

Ovaltine Rusks are more appetising, easily digested and far more nourishing than ordinary rusks or biscuits. Made from finest Canadian wheaten flour to which Ovaltine is added.

MORE FIRES; LESS DAMAGE

Figures For August, 1928, Compare Favorably With August, 1927.

BARN FIRES NUMEROUS.

A copy of the Ontario Fire Marshal's report for the month of August has reached the office of Fire Chief George Gimblett, telling a story of comparisons and losses worthy of close study by those who do not "think safety."

Comparing the month of August, 1928, with the corresponding period of 1927, the report indicates an increase of 300 in the number of fires, but the total loss decreased by $495,609.00, the insurance loss decreased by $453,788.00 and the loss not covered by insurance decreased by $41,821.00.

Barn fires in August totalled 130, with a loss of $187,473.00, while the largest fire during the month was of a Hawkesbury lumber company mill, which caused a loss of $100,467.00.

Under a section dealing with the four leading classes of risks for the eight months of 1928 the report states that there were 456 barn fires, an increase of 68 over the same period of '927, but the loss decreased in 1928 by $101,632.00. 1928, so far, boasts 5,825 dwellings burned, an increase of 617 in number and of $123,041.00 over 1927, while stores fires, totalling 804, were more numerous, by 54, than in 1927. The loss was also increased by $498,793.00. Factory fire proved an exception, for while there was an increase of 23 in their number, the loss was decreased by $1,224.00.

A comparison of losses for the eight months of 1928-1927 shows that in the present year there have been 871 more fires than in 1927; an increase of $1,172,089 in the total loss; an increase of $991,561.00 in the insurance loss, and an increase loss not covered by insurance of $180,528.00.

NEW STUDENTS ARE INITIATED

Millbrook Continuation School Girls Enjoy Social Gathering.

ENROLMENT INCREASES.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MILLBROOK, Oct. 5.—The girls' reception of the "freshies" at the Continuation School took place recently, the unfavorable weather compelling a change of plans, the event being held in the school rather than outside as had been originally planned.

The first stage in the "initiation" occurred when the "freshies" were required to serve the hot dogs and other refreshments to the seniors. After supper further steps in the initiation ceremony took place, its completion being accomplished when the "freshies," perforce, carried out several stunts, which they were invited (?) to perform.

Games and singing occupied the remainder of the evening, not forgetting three hearty cheers for the two teachers who have just joined the staff, Miss Hamilton and Miss Orchard. The hope was expressed that such enjoyable gathering might frequently be held, even though there was no initiation ceremony to provide an "excuse" in connection therewith.

Enrollments at the Continuation School continue, several pupils having come in since the opening day. Though the staff welcomes all such newcomers, pupils would find it a distinct advantage to be present from the opening of the school year, being on hand on the very first day of the term, since work is always well begun during the first week. It may readily be seen that it is a difficult matter for any scholar to "imagine" work that has already been covered, and those who were present from the start are inclined to resent the repetition of work for the sake of absentees.

The usual holidays were granted for the Fall Fair and the Rural School Fair this year, the pupils of the Continuation School desiring to cheer the efforts and accomplishments of fellow pupils from the Public School when the gathering was on the fair grounds in the interests of the rural schools of the South Cavan district. Hearty congratulations were extended to the Public School pupils for the fine showing made when the prize list was announced.

Boys' Initiation.

The boys of the Continuation School put on their initiation ceremony a day or two previous to the date chosen by the girls. The newcomers to the "gang" earned a life membership by collecting firewood, serving the older members with hot dogs, pie, cake, tea and coffee, and later in the evening, by performing the numerous stunts required of them.

A very pleasant evening was brought to a close by a sing-song round the camp-fire.

MONTREAL GROCERS FIGHT CHAIN STORES

Organize Big Syndicate to Compete—Will Use Boycott as Weapon.

MONTREAL, Que., Oct. 5.—(By the Canadian Press)—Montreal grocers have formed a corporation known as "Modern Grocers" which will link both independent wholesalers and retailers to stave off chain store domination, beat chain store prices and control the field. It is announced that 1,500 members will be in the syndicate within a few weeks. There are 300 chain groceries in Montreal at the present time. In addition, two large wholesalers have formed their own circles which retailers are tied up to their distribution. This latest move, however covers the retail grocer without affiliation.

Merciless competition for the chain stores is promised with free use of the boycott for manufacturers who persist in giving favors to the chain store organizations.

NO PROSPECTS OF LOW TARIFF

Senator McCumber Expects Protection of United States' Farmers to Continue.

WHOEVER WINS.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 5 (Canadian Press).—No matter which party wins the election in the United States, there is likely to be a high tariff against Canadian agricultural products, declared Senator J. McCumber, of Washington, member of the International Boundary Commission, here last night.

"We are pretty selfish, you know," said the Senator, "and there is likely to be very little lessening of the United States tariff against Canadian agricultural products, no matter what party is returned. Agriculture is suffering in the United States and it will be by maintaining a high protective tariff wall that the Government will seek to aid it. Yes, the tariff will be against Canadian farm produce of all kinds, including cattle."

Information has come to hand from Sir Eustache Fiennes, Governor of the Leeward Islands, stating that very serious damage has also been done to Dominica, Nevis, Antigua and St. Kitts. Press dispatches have given details of heavy los sof life and damage to property.

In order to organize relief, a committee has been formed of representatives of the Canadian West Indian League and the Montreal Board of Trade, and this committee has decided to make a public appeal for subscriptions in aid of the sufferers. The movement has received widespread endorsement and the Governor-General has graciously consented to act as patron. We give in the margin list of honorary members of the committee who are co-operating to make this movement a success.

The French Government recognized the seriousness of the situation as far as the French West Indies are concerned by voting relief to the extent of 100,000,000 francs, and the American Red Cross is conducting a nation-wide appeal to raise a fund for $5,000,000 for Porto Rico alone, and a similar appeal is being made for the Florida area.

We feel that our appeal for the British West Indies will meet with prompt and generous response from the Canadian public. The need is urgent and quick action is essential.

Subscriptions should be sent to S. R. Noble, Assistant General Manager, The Royal Bank of Canada, Montreal, who has kindly consented to act as Honorary Treasurer.

Yours truly,
T. B. Macaulay,
President
The Canadian-West Indian League

WAHABIS PLAN NEW WARFARE

Attack On British Mandate Territories Feared As Weather Moderates.

TRIBES MOBILIZING.

JERUSALEM, Oct. 5 (Canadian Press).—Advices received here to-day indicated that a new attack by the Wahabis, ruled by Ibn Saud, King of the Hedjab, on the Near Eastern territories under British mandate might be developing. With the failure of negotiations between Ibn Saud and the British such an attack has been expected with the coming of the cooler season. Word came from Mecca that several thousand horsemen had been mobilized by the Hedjaz Government. There was also a report of tribe manoeuvres near the Transjordanian boundary.

FIRES CLAIM TEN VICTIMS

House and Apartment Blazes Numerous in West This Week.

CHILDREN BURNED.

WINNIPEG, October 5 (Canadian Press).—House and apartment block fires in Western Canada have taken a toll of ten lives in the last three days. The latest victims are two young daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Huff, burned to death in their home at Tisdale, Sask., last night.

NO CONCERN FELT FOR OVERDUE SHIP

Mackenzie River Boats Can't Cross Lake During Storm.

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 5 (Canadian Press).—No concern is felt for the safety of the Hudson Bay steamer Distributor, which is eight days overdue at Fort Smith on Great Slave Lake, on the trip up the Mackenzie River. Officials here pointed out today that storm conditions on the lake probably caused the delay as on former occasions, the flat bottomed ships that navigate the northern waterways having to wait for calm weather before crossing the lake. The distributor is not equipped with wireless, so it will not likely be heard from until its arrival.

DIRIGIBLE TO FLY TO U.S. NEXT WEEK

Date and Route Depend On Wind and Weather, It Is Announced.

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, October 5 (Canadian Press). — The flight of the German dirigible Graf Zeppelin to the United States has now been set for some time next week, and th route depends on wind and weather, according to Dr. Hugo Eckener. The northern route by way of Newfoundland is preferred, but the longer southern route would offer less trouble if bad conditions prevailed. He declared he estimated the actual ocean crossing would take forty-five to eighty hours.

SUMMER SCHEDULES IN WINTER SNOWS

With the discontinuance after September 29 of the "Trans-Canada Limited", Canada's de luxe transcontinental train, the Canadian Pacific popular "Vancouver Express" will continue its summer schedule throughout the winter making the trip to Winnipeg in 36¾ hours and Vancouver in 95 hours. The convenient connections at Winnipeg for Saskatoon and Edmonton, at Regina for Saskatoon and at Calgary for Edmonton, have been arranged with due regard to the wants of the many Canadian Pacific patrons who prefer this up-to-date popular trans-continental train. Its equipment consists of diner, observation, compartment and standard sleepers and leaves Toronto Union at 9.00 p.m. daily.

CLOSER RELATIONS URGED WITH BOYS

"The builder lifted his old gray head.
Good friend, in the path I have come, he said,
There followeth after me to-day
A youth whose feet must pass this way.
This chasm has been as naught to me
To that fair haired youth may a pitfall be;
He, too, must cross in the twilight dim;
Good friend, I am building the bridge for him."

"Do this," said Mr. Mitchell, "and when you come to the sunset of life, a welcome sign will be hanging there and your admittance to the Great Beyond will be marked paid. Remember, that an inheritance of character, passed on to your boy is more than an inheritance of gold."

Previous to the main address of the day, Joe Wearing arose to voice the appreciation of the club for the provision made by Harry Huffman for accommodation ofc Peterborough Kiwanians at the convention in Kingston. He it was, also, who introduced Mr. Mitchell to the club.

Jack Craig had a word of progress to speak for the Made-in-Canada Fair, being held October 15 to 21 and urged that every Kiwanian be on hand every night and as many of the days as possible during the Fair. He stated that Sir Joseph Flavelle would formally open the Fair and that Rotarians and Kiwanians would have a joint luncheon.

A guest of his brother John, Reg. Turner was heard boosting the Peterborough Dog Show and suggesting that the club show a greater interest in that which is so fine an advertisement for Peterborough.

Miss H. Bairrie, accompanied by George Liddle, provided the musical numbers of the day, and did it in most acceptable manner. Her pleasing voice was heard in two numbers, one of which was the ever-popular "Mighty Lak a Rose." Miss Bairrie was thanked in turn, by President Joe John.

Fire Prevention.

Every Kiwanian can be a fireman and he doesn't have to wear a uniform, declared Fire Chief Gimblett in a five minute talk to the club. Fire prevention week begins this Sunday, and the Chief asked the cooperation of all present in removing fire hazards, not only during the next week, but throughout the year.

Won Booster Prizes.

Declaring that his boost was contained in the little booklet of Postal Information which he had had placed at every place, Postmaster Charles Lacheur called out the numbers which awarded his prizes to Miss Bairrie, Frank Mitchell and Art Reynolds.

MAYOR APOLOGIZES.

Regrets Questioning of Rabbi On "Ritual Murder" Rumor.

NEW YORK, October 5 (Canadian Press). — Mayor Gilbert Hawes, of Massena, New York, has expressed "deep and sincere regret" over the questioning of a Rabbi concerning a "ritual murder" rumor. The Mayor's letter was published to-day by Dr. L. Wise, president of the American Jewish Congress, after hearing on the case in Albany. Wide protest was aroused over the questioning, which was in connection with the disapeparance of a young child who later was found.

STRIKE EXTENSION PLANS POSTPONED

Maritime and Transport Unions Will Negotiate Further With Government.

MELBOURNE, Oct. 5.— (Canadian Press.)—Plans for immediate extension of the strike of the dockers by the conference of Maritime and Transport Unions were postponed today pending further negotiations with the government. The Waterside workers remain on strike at Melbourne, Freemantle and Brisbane, but the trade union conference is attempting to reach a settlement.

GETS FOUR YEARS.

Ernest Likener Goes To Penitentiary On Six Charges of Theft.

TORONTO, October 5 (Canadian Press). — Ernest Lineker, mining broker, found guilty on six charges of theft, was sentenced to four years in Portsmouth Penitentiary by Magistrate Robert Browne in Police Court to-day.

COMMENT ON THE MARKET

A Special Service to The Examiner.

Canada Malting Elevator Ready Within Six Weeks.

Toronto.—The large new elevator and malthouse of Canada Malting Company Ltd., at the waterfront in Toronto, is nearing completion, and officials expect that the elevator will be ready for operation in a month or six weeks and that the malthouse will be operating at the beginning of next year. The elevator will have a capacity of 750,000 bushels and the malthouse capacity of 1,000,000 bushels a year.

Officials report that the current year has been a favorable one for the company, and that sales and earnings have been on a satisfactory scale. While the fiscal year ended August 31st last, no exact figures covering earnings are available yet.

London.—Will of Sir Mortimer Davis, who died several months ago, disposes of an estate estimated at $150,000,000.

Canadian Bankstocks, Inc. Earnings in Past Year Equivalent to $1.30 on Each Certificate, According to President.

Net results of the operations of Canadian Bankstocks, Inc., from October 1, 1927, to October 1, 1928, indicate earnings applicable to distribution from dividends, capital increment and rights received but no exercised totaling $1.30 each investment trust certificate outstanding, according to Ray W. Arnold, president.

Total disbursement in dividends during this period was $1, the undistributed surplus being used to exercise rights to subscribe to shares of the Bank of Toronto at $200 a share, which shares have a market value of approximately $300. It was deemed more profitable for the trust to use the funds in the manner than to distribute them at the present moment; when profit on this transaction is taken, consideration will be given to the distribution to holders of the investment trust certificates.

Stock Averages up Month of September.

Prices on the Toronto Stock Exchange in the Month of September made an average gain of practically three points and the average of 60 stocks at the end of the month was approximately on the same level as of January 31 and over 5½ points above the close of 1927. Only three months in the current year have returned a higher average than at the end of September.

September average of 107.66 compares with a peak of 110.23 reached in April last and a low of 103.25 at the end of July.

Of four groups the utilities was the only one to show a decline at 115.69, contrasted with 116.92 in the preceding month. The high for the year of 121.33 was obtained in May last and the low of 115.21 in July. Passing of Twin City common dividend made for a decline of 8¼ points in the price of this issue and brought the average for the group of nine down materially.

Thirty listed common industrial stocks were up close to 3 points at 75.21 contrasted with 72.41 at the end of August. January saw the high of 79.20 established for the group and July the low of 70.94.

The unlisted group advanced over four points from 43.36 to 47.70. Goodyear Tire common gained 25, Farmers' Dairy 4, Service Stations 8 and Hiram Walker-Gooderham and Worts, 5. The oils were up in a body. Imperial advanced 9 and British American and International Petroleum from 2 to 4 points.

Bank stock boosted their average from 311.75 to 317.75. The high for the group of eight of 325.62 was attained in April last and the low of 300.75 in January. Striking gains were made by individual members of the group. Royal was up 23, Dominion 6, Imperial 5, Montreal 10 and Nova Scotia 10.

McKinnon Industries Enjoying Good Business.

The recent market activity in the McKinnon Industries common stock and the voting trust shares are reflections of the fact that the company has had good business all this year in its plants at St. Catherines and Buffalo, manufacturing parts for various motor concerns. The Buffalo plant is now earning a small surplus as against deficits formerly, and the profits made in 1927 by the Canadian plant are greatly increased this year, according to reliable advices. The company's output of automobile gears and axles is said to have attained record proportions, a constant market for the whole capacity being given by General Motors and Willys-Overland. The ratio of production is said to be 55 per cent. of motor products and 45 per cent. of other products. The demand for hardware to be used in construction on the farms has increased. The fiscal year of the company ended on September 30, and the hope of dividend action soon by the directorate is reviving in consequence.

The common and voting trust shares on equal basis as far as earnings are concerned. In 1927, earnings on the common amounted to $1.91, and various unofficial estimates are to the effect that this may be doubled in November.

News From the Mines

Through

Solloway, Mills & Company

Mining Corporation.

Mining Corporation are now building a road from the Makamik Road to the old Verde Extension property next to Noranda. The Noranda people advised them to move their power line 700 yards farther north as they were purchasing the surface rights of part of the Brownlee property for tailings disposal from the concentrator.

Mandy Mines.

Orders for extra compressor equipment for Mandy Mines is taken to indicate that development of the property on the three lower levels will be pushed forward with increased vigour. It is stated that lateral development on the three lower levels, the 300, 400 and 500 is in very encouraging geological structure, considerable of which is showing a good grade of ore. The speed at which development can be carried on has been held back by compressor limitations, but this handicap will be removed when the new equipment has been delivered and set up.

Manitoba Mining Development Co. Ltd.

The Manitoba Mining Development Company, Limited, has been formed by prominent Winnipeg business men for the purpose of general exploration, development, sale and operation of mineral claims in Canada. The company is capitalized at 200,000 shares of $1 par value. A group of claims has already been secured in the Central Manitoba area about one-half mile south of Central Manitoba Mines. Preliminary exploration work is now well under way.

Pioneer.

The annual shareholders' meeting of Pioneer was held Thursday afternoon. The most important features of the meeting were as follows: The veins opened up on the third and fourth levels all showed gold values with free gold in most places near the foot or hanging walls. Generally speaking, expectations from drilling have been confirmed by underground work, according to Mr. Whitehead, the engineer. A total of 675 feet of lateral work has been done on the third and fourth levels. Operations are just being started on the second level.

GIGOLOST REPORTS FAVORABLY IN ANGLO-SUDBURY MINES.

J. A. Merrill, consulting geologist, has just completed a report on the Ridout Basin property of the Anglo-Sudbury Mines, Limited. While unfavorable weather restricted the scope of his operations, he was, nevertheless, able to make a comprehensive survey of all parts now in progress of development. The report says, in part:

"Test pits and trenches have been dug in various parts of the property, exposing the ore body in cross-section for 1,000 feet or more. The ground is uneven in places, but the mineral zero zone extends across the entire area included in the development. Back of the drill the land rises in steep hills, and, since the ore is exposed at different places to the top of these hills, a vertical section of the ore body over 200 feet in height is thus shown.

"A diamond drill is now running in two shifts, going twenty hours per day. The drill is a standard rig and is efficiently managed. It is set so that it will explore the ore body to a depth of 1,000 feet or more. This drilling will be pushed with all possible speed and the other drill now on the ground should be put to work as early as possible."

In conclusion, Mr. Merrill states, "Had I found but one vein, such as is shown on this property, I should have considered the property a promising one. Instead, I found ten such veins close enough together to make one continuous mineralized area at least 1,000 feet in width."

Pending development of the Ridout Basin property, Anglo-Sudbury is holding its West Shining Tree and Sudbury Basin property in reserve and will develop these at a later date.

UNION MINIERE IS COPPER ENTERPRISE TO BE RECKONED WITH.

Proved ore reserves at the end of 1927 of the Union Miniere amounted to 78,500,000 tons, estimated to contain 5,439,000 tons output; present ore reserves will last for 38 years, per ton of 7%. Production in 1927 was 89,156 tons, against 80,639 tons in 1926, while output during the first half of 1928 was at the rate of 113,000 tons of copper. When the electrolytic leaching plant at Panda is commissioned late next year output is expected to be at the rate of 140,000 tons of copper per annum, with further increase to follow, as additional units to the plant are completed. The rise in the price of copper appears to assure a large increase in profits per ton this year, and with the increased tonnage output, results should be highly satisfactory.

Commenting on the Union Miniere, the South African Mining and Engineering Journal says:

There is little doubt that the Union Miniere is destined in due time to become the world's largest individual producer of copper, and as evidence suggests that this company will also produce copper more cheaply than any other, the Union Miniere promises to be the outstanding factor in world copper in the future. Evidence of faith in the future is conveyed to the onlookers by the fact that the Union Miniere has been carrying out a most energetic programme of expansion, as to both mines and works, during a period when prices for the metal have been on the low side. Moreover, it is most creditable that the company should have earned increased profits last year, when copper was abnormally low

It is decided that a railway is warranted into Sherritt Gordon property, a distance of 35 miles from rail head at the Flin Flon. The construction interests, who have full equipment at the Flin Flon, would like to go with it without delay. It would save something like $50,000 by not bringing this equipment south. The vital question is whether Sherritt Gordon has proceeded sufficiently with development for such a step to be taken.

A brokerage house journal has just published an interesting view on the situation surrounding the large nickel producers and potential producers of Ontario. The journal states that the outstanding development of the past year has been the entry into Sudbury of powerful unknown interests—presumably United States Steel Corporation or interests closely allied—into the copper-nickel belt, using as its agents the Sudbury Basin and Longyear interests. The object of the group is then stated to be the establishment of an industry to mine and smelt copper-nickel ores in direct competition with International and Mond.

According to reliable information from Abonde, No. 7 diamond drill hole has been started to follow up the copper-zinc discoveries reported in diamond drill hole No. 6. This copper-zinc ore deposit is stated to have been encountered at respective depths of 150 feet and 250 feet.

A report from West Shining Tree is to the effect that the east drift on the 100-foot level of the Buckingham property shows considerable free gold and that the west drift should be into the vein in two days. The development is said to look promising.

Word from Central Manitoba is to the effect that good progress is being made in stripping the main vein on the Golden Rod claim and that appearances point to it shaping up like an important prospect. The Golden Rod vein has been traced for 1,000 feet with a width averaging seven feet. The property consists of about 500 acres lying east of Rice Lake. The syndicate is capitalized at $35,000. It is planned to incorporate with a provincial charter as soon as a small balance of units now remaining in the treasury are disposed of and the present programme of surface exploration is completed. This should be finished quite soon now.

GEORGE COPPER MINE DEVELOPS FAVORABLY.

The George Gold Copper Mine in the Portland Canal district has attracted considerable attention due to its inclusion in the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company's list of operations, the latter company holding an option on a controlling amount of this company's stock.

The company's holdings consist of a large block of claims situated on the south side of Bear River, six miles by trail from the end of the wagon road. Since "Smelters" has taken the option on the property a large exploration programme, principally in diamond drilling, has been instituted.

Eight diamond drills are being used. Unofficial reports from the property, in the absence of an official statement regarding progress, have been of a decidedly bullish nature and it has been commonly accepted as a fact that one hole disclosed a mineralized zone at some depth on the "George" considerably more than 50 feet wide, with good values throughout. Setting a good value on ore so far proved on the George, of course, is largely guesswork, and these estimates range from $10,000,000 to $20,000,000.

Price Changes Small On New York Exchange

TORONTO, Oct. 5 (Canadian Press).—While there were few large price changes on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day, Massey Harris and International Nickel attracted most of the attention. At noon, Massey was 48, a fractional gain over yesterday's close. Nickel was up a quarter at 135 after touching 136. The only gain of any consequence was made by Gypsum and Alabastine which reached 75 and at noon was selling at 74¼, with a net gain of 2¾. Service Stations was down 1¾ to 46¼.

Lower Price Tendency On Standard Exchange

TORONTO, October 5 (Canadian Press).—Abana and Jackson-Manion were the chief centres of interest on the Standard Mining Exchange today. Jackson Manion at 94½ showed a net gain of 1½. Abana scored a gain of twenty-eight at 4.60. Trading was light and apart from a few issues, the price tendency was downward. Noranda, with a drop of 1.05 to 45.55 was the active leader.

Season's High Record Established For Corn

CHICAGO, October 5 (Canadian Press). — In brisk trading, corn ran up to-day to above the season high price records established hardly twenty-four hours before. The arrivals of corn in the western markets were reported scant with the demand unusually urgent. Opening at ¾ to 1¼ advance, corn later showed material further gains. Wheat started ¼ to ⅞ higher, but subsequently reacted. Oats were firm.

Opening prices were: Wheat, December 119, March 123½. Corn, December 82¾, March 84⅞. Oats, December 43½, March 44¾.

KEEN COMPETITION NOTED AT DOG SHOW

by Herbert C. Stuart of Long Beach, Michigan, gained the coveted title.

The quaint-looking Scottish terriers competition brought about a most popular win when "Gingersnap Judy," owned by L. L. Maguire, won two firsts, but best in this breed went to the British champion, "Bassetlaw Rosiera," owned by Edward Ward, of Clarkson, Ontario.

Another clever and well merited victory was that of the cocker spaniel "Frontenac Speckled Beauty," so well shown by the owner, W. M. Nickle, of Kingston, Ontario. This remarkable dog defeated a record entry of the breed, and according to the judge's opinion proved one of the best ever bred in the Dominion.

Climax To-night.

In all, it was a most interesting entertainment which, however, will be totally eclipsed to-night when all the champions will be brought into competition for the valuable array of silver trophies, and among the dogs will be the Tri-International champion, "Sessue," the Scottish terrier "Bassetlaw Rosiera" (who was the runner-up or the second best of all champions at the recent Halifax show), and the famous wire-haired fox terrier "Champion Albany Matchless," who won the distinction of the all-breeds championship at Ottawa and other Canadian shows before she was out of her puppihood.

In all, there will probably be thirty famous champions in the final line-up, so Mr. Hopton will have to be on the alert to find the ultimate winner. In the opinion of those who know, the quality of stock at the Peterborough show is the best ever seen at such an exhibition in Canada.

Asked his opinion of the management of the show, Mr. Hopton stated "that it was most refreshing to see the honorary show manager, Reginald P. Sparks (who owns the famous Kamel champion bulldog of Toronto) insist that all dogs be benched and brought into the ring for competition immediately the class had been called. This supplied a long-felt want at Canadian shows, where exhibitors have been somewhat lax in their manner of showing their dogs."

U. S. REFUSES INVITATION

GENEVA, Oct. 5 (Canadian Press) —League of Nations officials to-day were disappointed at the communication from United States, declining an invitation to sit with the Council of the League in appointing a central board of control under the Geneva opium convention. Washington gave as one reason that the convention would tend to destroy the unity of purpose and joint responsibility accomplished by the Hague convention.

OBITUARY

MRS. ALBERT LONG

The death took place on Thursday, October 4, at 676 Water street, Peterborough, of Frances Rhoda Daniels, widow of the late Albert Long, following a lengthy illness. She had been a resident of this city for fifty years and her passing is mourned by a sorrowing family.

The funeral will be held on Saturday, October 6, from her late residence, 676 Water street, to Little Lake Cemetery, the Rev. Dr. Blagrave of St. John's Anglican Church (her pastor) conducting the service at 3.15 o'clock.

YANKEES WALLOP ALEXANDER 9-3

Fifth Innings

St. Louis—Robertson made a diving catch of High's hot grounder, jumping to his feet to throw him out. Frisch struck out, taking the third called strike. Bottomley struck out for the second time, swinging at the third strike. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Yankees—Frisch tossed out Robertson at first. Frisch went back of second and took Bengough's high fly. Pipgras popped to Maranville. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Sixth Inning

St. Louis.—Hafey flied out to Meusel, Harper flied out to Ruth. Wilson grounded out to Gehrig unassisted. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Yankees.—Paschal was given a ticket to first, the fourth pitch being on the inside. Koenig struck out, swinging for the third strike. The Babe struck out, taking a third called strike. Gehrig sent up a high fly which Douthit took. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Seventh Innings

St. Louis.—Maranville missed the third strike. Mitchell sent up a high fly to Robertson. Douthit flied out to Paschal. No runs, one hit, no errors.

New York.—Meusel got a base on balls, the fourth pitch being just off the corner of the plate. Meusel stole second, Mitchell juggled Lazzeri's sacrifice bunt, the batter being safe at first, and Meusel going to third. It was an error for Mitchell. Dugan batted for Robertson, Meusel scored on Dugan's sacrifice fly to Harper. Lazzeri held first. Bengough hit into a double play, Frisch to Maranville to Bottomley. One run, no hits, one error.

Eighth Innings

St. Louis.—Dugan went in to play third base for the Yankees and Durocher went to second base in place of Lazzeri. High popped to Gehrig. Frisch singled through the box for his second hit of the game. Bottomley struck out, swinging for the third strike. Frisch stole second. Hafey flied out to Meusel. No runs, one hit, no errors.

New York.—Wilson took Pipgras' weak lick in front of the plate and threw him out. Paschal sent up a high fly in front of the plate which Wilson took. Hafey took Koenig's fly. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Ninth Innings

St. Louis.—Harper sent up a high one to Dugan, who took the ball over near the box. Wilson whiffed, swinging for the third strike. Maranville got a walk. Orsatti batted for Mitchell. Orsatti grounded out to Gehrig unassisted. No runs, no hits, no errors.

W. A. WORKERS HOLD MEETING

Girls' and Evening Branches of Deanery Assemble at St. John's.

HEAR ABOUT MISSIONS.

A meeting in connection with the Peterborough Deanery of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Church of England in Canada was held in St. John's Parish House on Wednesday evening. There was a very fair attendance representing the Girls' and Evening Branches of this organization. Rev. Dr. Blagrave took the opening devotional exercises, after which Mrs. J. L. Hughes (Deanery officer), presided. Reports of the season's work were read from St John's, St. Luke's and All Saints', Peterborough, and also from Campbellford. The reports showed increased membership, as well as increased devotion and enthusiasm and a wonderful amount of good work had been done during the past season.

Miss K. Halson, of Toronto, who for thirty-two years held the position of Dominion Dorcas Secretary of the W. A. was the special speaker. She gave an interesting account of the work of the Auxiliary in its early stages and referred to the first 'bale' sent out, this being from St. Mark's church, Parkdale, Toronto. Miss Halson spoke at length of the work in the Indian schools, particularly at the Blackfoot school.

At the close of the meeting the members of St. John's Evening Branch served dainty refreshments, this being much appreciated by the visitors.

Votes of thanks were tendered to Miss Halson, to Dr. Blagrave and the ladies of St. John's for their kind hospitality, and to Mrs. Hughes, Deanery Officer. This is the first time a Deanery meeting has been arranged for Girls' and Evening Branches of the Woman's Auxiliary, but a strong desire was expressed among the members for it to become an anuual affair.

Her husband, William Ward, and Miss Hazel Thompson of Toronto, are progressing favorably. Five year old Geraldine Ward is recovering from slight hurts she sustained Lines of Canadian National have been cleared.

FIRE PREVENTION WEEK NEXT WEEK

Government Issues Proclamation Recommending Cleaning Up.

Fire Prevention Week — with its campaign to decrease the loss of life and property by fire, has this year been declared by the Dominion Government to commence on Sunday, October 7 and end on Saturday, October 13. The proclamation, reaching the office of Fire Chief George Gimblett, among other things, recommends—

1. That all dwellings and their surroundings be carefully inspected by their occupants and all conditions likely to cause or promote the spread of fires removed.

2. All public buildings, stores, warehouses and factories be inspected and cleaned of rubbish in order to reduce fire hazards and maintain health and safety.

3. All hotels, theatres, asylums, hospitals and other institutional buildings be inspected and provision made for all changes necessary to protect the occupants from danger in the event of fire.

4. Fire drills to be held for the children in all schools, for the inmates of all institutions and for the employees in all large stores and factories in order that a greater degree of safety may be ensured by acquainting the occupants with the best and most expeditious mode of exit in time of danger.

5. Special instruction on the subject of fire prevention be given by the teachers and by municipal officials in the school and that such appropriate literature as may be made available be distributed to the pupils.

6. Boy Scout leaders give instructions to the troops under their control as to the best means of co-operating with municipal fire departments in the prevention and extinguishment of fires and especially as to the desirability of qualifying for the Fireman's badge.

7. All legislation and regulations enacted or issued by Dominion, provincial or municipal authorities dealing with fire prevention be given publicity by the municipal officials and that by public meetings or otherwise as may to them seem most fit, they endeavor to impress upon the citizens the national importance of safeguarding life and property from loss by fire.

STICK KILLS BOY

PRAIRIE DU CHIEN, Wis., Oct. 5.—A 9-year-old boy was killed here when a pointed stick he was carrying punctured his side in a fall while playing. Playmates said he ran into a building and in throwing out his hands the pointed end of the stick he was carrying came in contact with his side. The subsequent fall caused it to enter his right side.

MRS. B. R. PURDY GIVES ADDRESS

Speaks Before Members at Opening Meeting of St. John's W. A.

DESCRIBES WORK.

LAKEFIELD, Oct. 5.—Mrs. B. R. Purdy, who for the past two years, has been in Labrador as a nurse in Dr. Grenfell's hospital at Harrington, gave a very interesting address on the subject of her work at the opening meeting of St. John's W. A. on Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Mahood, the president of the W. A. opened the meeting and occupied the chaid and introduced Mrs. Purdy, and Mrs. Tood played the piano for the hymns.

Mrs. Purdy went down to Labrador six years ago and enjoyed the trip very much but for the first two days at Harrington she suffered from land sickness. The hospital at Harrington has room for twelve patients besides two baby cots and there are usuall four or five patients all winter. During the summer (July and August) the staff is augmented by a dentist, an extra doctor and a couple of young men, sons of wealthy parents, who pay their own expense and help in every way to aid the work of Dr. Grenfell's hospital.

The people in Harrington, which is a village of about 300 souls, are fisher folk of English, Irish, Scotch and French origin, they are honest and peace loving and there is neither gaol nor magistrate. Cod fishing is the summer occupation and is a well organized industry, the fish are brought ashore, salted and dried. There is no waste as the non-marketable parts are salted for dog food. In December there is the seal fishing, the hide is used for shoes which are made to come up to the knee, the carcass is used for dog food and the thick layer of fat between the flesh and hide is rendered and sold to schooners for crude oil. This work is done in seal foundaries. There are two churches in Harrington, the Anglican church and a United Church. Mrs. Purdy was secretary of the W.A. which holds a sale of work and a supper just before Lent. This is prepared by a sports' day with a snappy program consisting of dog team racing, snow shoe racing, jumping etc., and followed by a supper and concert.

This is arranged jointly by the Guild and W.A. and last year they sent for their proceeds, a sum of money to a former clergyman, now a Missionary in Japan.

There is always a Christmas treat at the festive season and a bag of candy and a toy are sent to children at outposts further up the coast and inland, and the children, parents and hospital staff also have a celebration in the village.

The resident physician at the hospital is Dr. Hodd of Hamilton, a graduate of Toronto University who, with two nurses, a nurses' aid and a cook and maid make up the permanent staff of the hospital. The nurses each took a holiday, Mrs. Purdy had a thirty-five mile trip east by dog team which gave her much enjoyment and lots of thrills, she visited a nurse at an outpost nursing station who had been in Labrador for twelve years. Then last fall she went eighty-five miles west by boat to a wedding.

The great excitement of the year is the arrival of the first boat in June, this year the arrival was delayed by northern ice so the pleasure was considerably deferred. The mail is supposed to arrive fortnightly throughout the year but sometimes fails in stormy weather. In the summer the boat arrives fortnightly, also with mail so that in the normal course of events there is a weekly mail in July and August.

Indian Stilements

There are two settlements of Indians and the doctor is the Indian agent. Tuberculosis is the most common ailment and mal nutrition in the children. There are schools at Harrington and very good teachers.

The headquarters of the work is at St. Anthony, Newfoundland and there is the headquarters also of the industrial work, mat weaving and pen knife ivory carvings.

Asked if the weather was very cold Mrs. Purdy said that sometimes the thermometer fell to 50 degrees below zerow, there was an abundance of snow, there were blinding storms with the snow drifting very much. These drifts fill in the gullies and often stay till June.

A hearty vote of thanks was proposed to Mrs. Purdy by Mrs. Creighton and Miss Atwood and endorsed by all present. Tea was served and a social hour was spent and Mrs. Purdy enjoyed informal intercourse with the individual members of the W.A. She expects to return to her post in a couple of weeks after a seven weeks' vacation and will be followed by the prayers and good wishes of St. John's Church and the W.A.

RIVETLESS BOAT CUTS PATH THROUGH ICE FIELD.

That the cutter "Northland," the successor to the veteran coastguard boat "Bear," is well constructed for its duties in the north was shown by its recent victory over an ice field off Point Barrow. It came through unscathed after ripping and plowing its way through ice six inches thick. The test was considered a point for the special type of construction of the vessel. There are not rivets in the hull, the body being electrically welded throughout. Some engineers predicted that this form of hull would not stand the strain of the ice, but would buckle. No such trouble occurred. On the other hand, the "Bear" once suffered a couple of cracked timbers while breaking through ice but three inches thick.

The railway that runs beneath London, a distance of six and a half miles and conveys letters and parcels between Whitechapel and Paddington, gives a service of about 850 journeys a day at an average of 20 miles an hour.

Peterborough Male Voice Choir inaugurated its season of practice on Tuesday evening by holding a social in the Canadian Legion Hall. On account of other attractions there was not as large a number present as was anticipated, about eighty ladies and gentlemen being on hand. A short musical program was carried through, with Boorman's Orchestra, Frank Clark (banjo), C. S. Thompson (harmonica, bandmaster), Miss Arleen Rose, A.T.C.M. (piano), and John Anderson (vocal) taking part. At intervals dancing was enjoyed, and the president, Mr. A. White, put forward the aims of the choir this year—a splendid group of part songs for the male section, and, with the aid of a ladies' chorus, the rendering of "Hiawatha's Wedding Feast" early in the New Year. He urged co-operation and the attendance of all singers of both sexes in the city, and invited them for practice next Tuesday. Refreshments were an enjoyable part of the evening's program.

ACIDS IN STOMACH CAUSE INDIGESTION

Create Sourness, Gas and Pain. How To Treat.

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenth of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas, bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestants are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist some Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful of powder or four tablets in water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meal with no more fear of indigestion.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

By MARION

IN A HOUSE in the centre of the city the other day I had the good fortune to see some old cookery books preserved in the family for generations. These make good reading, not only because of their associations, but because they indicate that, in this art at least, not so much advancement has been made as we are apt to look for.

• • •

And this is, of course, natural. Every mother in Peterborough had favorite recipes passed on to her by her mother, and she will, in turn, hand them down to her daughter. New dishes may be introduced, but the old dishes, to which generation after generation has become accustomed in youth, cannot die.

• • •

And now, through the medium of our page, many families are exchanging recipes, so that the influence of these proved and well-liked dishes will be more widespread. Instead of the writer of fifty years hence finding an isolated recipe for ginger snaps, for instance, she will find scores of different recipes in hundreds of different homes.

• • •

• • •

But to get back to these old cookery books I was graciously permitted to read. To-day I just wish to lead you through one, and let you disport yourself in some of the contents. Perhaps some other day I may be in a moreserious mood, and then we shall discuss the recipes that are more likely to be of service to us. Just for to-day, let's have some fun!

• • •

In the first place let me tell you this book was printed in 1788—ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY YEARS AGO! In it, of course, "f" is used for "s," and in quoting the author direct I shall follow the same style, so that you may get practice in that lisping which is considered by some so attractive. I heard a girl on George street the other night—but that is digressing. . . .

• • •

It will tickle our friends from Scotland to know that "The Art of Cookery Made Plain and Easy," by Mrs. H. Glasse, was printed in Edinburgh. The author opens her book with a note to the reader starting: "I believe I have attempted a branch of Cookery which nobody has yet thought worth their while to write upon: but as I have both feen and found by experience, that the generality of fervants are greatly wanting in that point, therefore I have taken upon me to inftruct them in the beft manner I am capable; and I dare fay, that every fervant who can but read will be capable of making a tolerable good cook, and thofe who have the leaft notion of cookery cannot mifs of being very good ones."

• • •

Our cook, very obviously, did not believe in letting her light burn under a bushel. She is not backward about telling how good she is. I have wondered how many servants in the Peterborough families through which this book circulated profited by her hints.

• • •

That her book was not intended for the all-knowing mistresses of the family (though what kind of insult that would be is difficult to imagine) is made clear by the next paragraph: "If I have not wrote in the high polite ftile, I hope I fhall be forgiven; for my intention is to inftruct the lower fort, and therefore muft treat them in their own way." So you neighbors who have been sending me recipes for the page mustn't think Mrs. Classe is lecturing you; her treatise is for the "lower sort."

• • •

There is, however, a hint farther on in her preface that may still be of use. Perhaps when your cook fails to understand your instructions it is because you use too-good language! Mrs. Classe suggests: "The great cooks have fuch a high way of expreffing themfelves, that the poor girls are at a lofs to know what they mean."

• • •

And then, Mrs. Glasse had so great patriotism that we must admire her for it, if for nothing else. She says: "So much is the blind folly of this age that it would rather be impofed on by a French booby than give encouragement to a good Englifh cook!" This is language the Chamber of Commerce might use sometime in a "Buy in Peterborough" campaign!

• • •

Only in two instances does Mrs. Glasse wander from the path of cookery to give advice on other subjects. I have on my book shelf a huge volume entitled "Mrs. So-and-So's Cook Book" which is half full of hints on what to do with old shoes, how to make soap and boot blacking and half a hundred other things that one would never think of making. So I admire our present author's restraint when she tells only what to do in case of being on the receiving end of the bite of a mad dog, and something whereby "if a man fhould be near where the plague is, he fhall be in no danger"—possibly one of the first recipes for such protections as we used during the flu epidemic of a few years ago.

• • •

Let's hurry on to the end of the preface, which concludes like this: "I fhall fay no more, only hope my book will anfwer the ends I intend it for; which is to improve the fervants, and fave the ladies a great deal of trouble."

• • •

Poor Mrs. Glasse, at whose writings we have been poking a little innocent fun, probably did not anticipate that her volume would, 140 years after its being printed, afford amusement for we modern women in a city not even thought of in that age.

• • •

And now, I have run on so far that I have room for only one of Mrs. Glasse's recipes to-day—but I hope it may be of real service to you neighbors! It is an economical little dish, requiring only an old hen and a young chicken, besides some odds and ends of veal, mutton, and so on.

"To make white barley-pottage, with a large chicken in the middle. First make your ftock with an old hen, a knuckle of veal, a fcraig end of mutton, fome fpice, fweet herbs, and onions; boil all together till it be ftrong enough; then have your barley ready boiled very tender and white, and ftrain fome of it through a cullendar; have your bread ready toafted in your difh, with fome fine green herbs, minched chervil, fpinage, forrel, and put into your difh fome of the broth to your bread, herbs, and chicken, then barley ftrained and re-ftrained, ftew all together in your difh a little while; garnifh your difh with boiled lettuces, fpinage, and lemon."

• • •

I expect to hear of this dish being served in many Peterborough district homes at Thanksgiving. Please write and tell me how it turns out. . . .

• • •

If you recover!

• • •

Don't forget the contest on "After Five years," for which I am offering a prize of a box of stationery. Write a letter telling how the husband and how the wife (or either) can most help to make married life as happy five years after as it was five months after the wedding day. And please hurry your contribution as I wish to judge the contest over the week-end.

MARION'S MAIL

Address correspondence to Marion, at The Examiner Office.

"Dear Marion:

I am enclosing a coupon for the Camiknicker. I hope you will have one to spare me, if so I will thank you in advance for it.

Here is a cake suggestion, which is a nice change and is also nice to serve with a hot drink to guests in the evening. Make a plain cake and bake in a square or oblong pan. After it is a day old, cut it in slices of about a quarter of an inch and put two together with an icing, and ice on top. I find lemon or chocolate are both nice, of course, these slices may be cut in any nice shape after they are iced and one may have such a nice variety of flavors by doing some of one flavoring and some of another.

Here is a real good recipe for boiled cabbage. After removing the outer soiled leaves of a firm head of cabbage shred fine with a sharp knife or shredder. Have ready a kettle of furiously boiling water, which has been salted (a dessert spoonful of salt to about two quarts of water). This will cook about a quarter of a head of cabbage.

Drop the shredded cabbage into the boiling water and cook rapidly for not more than ten minutes; then drain through a colander. Return to the kettle and add about a teaspoon of butter, 3 tablespoons of rich milk or cream and a teaspoon of vinegar, also pepper if desired. Turn into a hot serving dish. A variation of this is to beat up two eggs; add 3 tablespoons of cream and beat. Mix this with the cooked cabbage; put into a buttered baking dish and slip into the oven until nicely browned and cooked.

Hoping I have not taken up too much of your valuable time, Marion, I remain,

Sincerely,
Mrs. R. W."

Your hints are indeed appreciated, Mrs. R. W., and I hope that you will write an equally interesting letter soon again.

• • •

"Dear Marion:

Very many thanks for the lovely box of correspondence cards which came last evening. I did not dream of any such thing. The question rather appealed to me and amused me, as I do send some of my effusions to your editor. I thought you might have one. You were sent another later because the question of why men noticed things about other women. It was the editor who put "Mrs. Warsaw" to the very first which appeared on your page. Of course, "Quid Est" an old school name, is my very own.

You do not need to tremble and surely never did, about your page. Your own column is so good, and touches on so many homey things.

Perhaps it is Victorian, or my Hugenot, Quaker and other combination blood, but I do like to see girls ladylike. It does not seem right for them to sit sprawled out, or to show undergarments up above the knees, or smoke, or use much slang, or swear. All the same, it would seem that bobbed hair, short skirts, free movements, athletics and a proper good comradeship are a splendid outcome of the age.

Sincerely yours,
Mrs. Warsaw.

GINGER SNAPS WITHOUT EGGS

(Like We Buy)

(Contributed by B. A. R., Harold.)

1 cup molasses
1 cup sugar
1 cup shortening (lard or butter) or mixed
1 heaping teaspoon soda
1 level teaspoon ginger
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup boiling water
Flour enough to stiffen.

Do not roll out. Pinch off pieces size of marbles and roll with hands. Place about 1 inch apart in pans. Bake in moderate oven until right shade is obtained. If this recipe is let stand over night in a cool place it can be handled much easier.

Attendance Falls Below Expectations

PITCHERS STAGE HURLING DUEL IN FIRST GAME

Hoyt Holds Cards to Three Hits, While Sherdel Gives Seven.

TWO CIRCUIT CLOUTS

Babe Ruth Figures in Every Sortie of Yankee Crew.

(By Alan J. Gould, Associated Press Editor.)

YANKEE STADIUM, New York, Oct. 5 (A.P.).—For a crew of cripples and invalids, there's still quite a kick in the old Yankees' boat load.

Opening fire where they left off last year, the World's Champion New York American, behind the brilliant sharpshooting of Waite Hoyt, shelled the St. Louis Cardinals into submission by a score of 4 to 1 in the opening game of the 1928 World Series.

Before a crowd of 61,425 that fell far short of record-breaking expectations, Hoyt held the Cardinals to three hits, one of them a home run by Jim Bottomley, while the big guns of the Yankees' man-o'-war, Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig and Bob Meusel, fired the shots that routed Willie Sherdel, clever St. Louis southpaw, and the National League champions.

They may be limping a trifle on the field these Yankees, while more severely injured mates are on the sidelines, but there is nothing the matter with their batting eyes when hits count. The pitching staff may be shot to pieces but with Hoyt around to do a full day's work, there's at least one mighty right arm left to repel most any boarding party in sight or spike the enemy's guns.

With one of the best World Series games he has ever pitched, and he has turned in a number of sparkling performances, Hoyt spiked all the Cardinal Big Berthas yesterday with the exception of Bottomley.

Sunny Jim's homer into the right centre section of the outfield bleachers was a robust clout, in the seventh inning. He also punched out a line single in the ninth as a farewell shot but otherwise the only Cardinal to hit safely was George Washington Harper, who singled in the fifth for the first enemy blow.

Not a Cardinal foot trod as far as second base, except for Bottomley, as Hoyt turned back every other thrust. The Yankee ace was a trifle wild, especially in the last few innings when he seemed to tire, but he was masterful in such few pinches as he experienced, including the eighth, when the Cards rushed in reserves but got nothing more than a base on balls for their exertion.

Has Six Strikeouts

Altogether, Hoyt faced only 32 batsmen and struck out six, twice fanning the slugging outfielder star, Chick Hafey.

The Yanks, for their part in the skirmish did not do a great deal with the southpaw slants of Sherdel. In fact they connected for only four safe blows in the seven innings that Willie toiled on the mound, but they made these pay heavy dividends.

Three doubles and a home run comprised the net hitting results off Sherdel, to demonstrate that there were no half measures about the Yankees' attack, which concluded with a short but snappy onslaught upon the right-handed offerings of Sylvester Johnson.

Stars in First

Babe Ruth, favoring a lame left knee, but otherwise sound and healthy, figured in every sortie of the Yankee crew. The Bambino got the attack under way in the first inning with a rousing double to right centre, scoring the first run of the series a moment later on Gehrig's two-bagger up against the bleacher wall near the right field foul line.

Again, in the fourth, Ruth looped a double to centre field and tallied along with Bob Meusel on the latter's home run smash into the right field bleacher section. This was all the damage suffered by Sherdel, who held the Yankees hitless in five other innings, but it was sufficient to clinch the game.

Sherdel, replaced by a pinch-hitter, yielded the mound to Johnson in the eighth and the Yankees, with two out, put over their final run on successive singles by Koenig, Ruth and Gehrig, who thus divided the day's clean-up laurels with Meusel, each drove in two runs.

With a lead that loomed continually larger as Hoyt continued to hold the Cards in check, Manager Miller Huggins effected a brace of replacements in the final few innings, designed to strengthen the defense as well as to give one of his cripples, Tony Lazzeri, as much rest as possible. Lazzeri, still bothered by a lame right shoulder and arm, gave way to the more sprightly Leo Durocher in the seventh, while Ben Paschal was replaced in centre field by Cedric Durst in the ninth. This gave employment for the day to the two men who are taking over the responsibilities of Earle Combs, regular centre fielder, who is probably out of the series entirely with an injured wrist.

Have Stone-wall Defense

Crippled or not, regular or substitutes, the Yankees put up a stone-wall defense behind Hoyt's cool curving. There was not a weak link anywhere in the Yankee chain as Benny Bengough, the agile mask man, and Mark Koenig, turned in plays that sparkled above the rest.

Bengough, in the third, raced to the edge of the Cardinals' dugout to bag Douthit's pop foul, while Koenig, in the ninth, made a fine stop of Frisch's sharp hit to deep short and a remarkable throw to nip the Cardinal star at first.

The Cardinals also gave Sherdel splendid support. Rabbit Maranville, the old warhorse, playing his first World's series since 1914, when he was a youngster with the Braves, experienced two extremes. He ran to the edge of the left field boxes in the third inning to spear Hoyt's foul fly with one hand at full speed, for one of the greatest plays of the game; but he messed up Dugan's poke in the seventh for the only error of the game.

Falls Short of Expectations

The size of the crowd in falling short of record proportions was almost as a big a surprise as was the dashing, brilliant play of the world champions, who were supposed to be reeling and groggy, ready to go down for a long count with the first solid punch.

The advance ballyhoo pictured a jam of some 80,000, based on officially announced figures of 85,265 for the memorable double header between the Yanks and Athletics here nearly a month ago. Even with some vacancy space in the corners of the bleachers and upper tier of the grandstand it was figured during the game that close to 75,000 were on hand.

The officials' count of 61,425 therefore was something of a shock to the experts, besides falling below the World's Series' record of 63,600 made in the Stadium in 1926. It cast considerable doubt, in the minds of most observers, as to the accuracy of the 85,000 figure, despite the fact that standing room was sold that day, and recalled the instance of substantial over-statement of attendance figures when the Stadium was opened several years ago.

The gate receipts, however, shattered all previous marks by totaling $224,130, due to the existence of more and higher-priced reserved seats. This figure surpassed the mark of $209,665 for a single series game, set in the Stadium last year.

PUBLIC SCHOOL FIELD DAY IS A BIG SUCCESS

EVENTS ARE WELL CONTESTED ON THE ANNUAL SPORTS DAY OF LAKEFIELD PUBLIC SCHOOL

Variety of Races Adds Special Interest to Program.

LARGE ATTENDANCE

Jumping and Pole Vaulting Among Events That Were Contested.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, Oct. 5.—The annual Sports Day of the Lakefield Public school was held on Wednesday afternoon on the Exhibition grounds, and was attended by a fair number of parents and citizens, although the number fell far below what might have been expected as the accommodation was greater than on the school playground where these events have been formerly held. The staff of the Public school, assisted by Dr. F. H. Lingwood and J. W. Ridpath, of the Public School Board, were the managing directors. T. W. Chaplin, the principal, acted as starter, with Misses Kennedy, Payne and Kidd as judges, Miss Hill as referee and Mr. Wannamaker as clerk. Dr. Lingwood and Mr. Ridpath measured for the jumping which was an innovation in the Public school sports and enormously popular. The program was of generous length and every event was well contested, the children were eager, interested and well behaved and the jumping, pole vaulting and other events brought out promising material in every class.

In order to set a standard in the events the pupils were divided into three classes, senior 13 to 16 years, intermediate 10 to 12 and all under nine years in the junior class. By this means a great deal of confusion was saved. Several races gave a special interest to the program, although it never fagged and at the very last when the events were concluded, voices were raised to ask "are there no more races?" The coat race afforded plenty of amusement, as it was run by a team, a boy and a girl. The boy ran the course, took off his coat, put it on his partner, back to the front and buttoned it and she ran back to the starting point. As the afternoon was warm, a good many boys had not burdened themselves with coats and so only a wholesale campaign of borrowing enabled most of the contestants to enter. Five teams of boys and three teams of girls entered the relay races, which were run on the half mile track. The old-fashioned girl had her innings, as the maiden in trim knee length skirts, almost invariably now races over those in knickers, breeks and boyish apparel. The day of girl's clothes for sport is fortunately not over in spite of the boyish vogue.

An impromptu teachers' race as a grand finale to the afternoon's events, brought out five entries and a close finish with Miss Kidd in the lead and was much appreciated by the children who were present as well as the adult spectators.

Mr. J. W. Ridpath, chairman of the board, toured the grounds during the afternoon with two generous sized boxes of caramels and achieved instant fame and almost overwhelming popularity. This interlude was much enjoyed and conversation rather languished as everyone was busily consuming the delectable sweets.

The following is the program and the results of the various events:

Wheelbarrow race, intermediate boys — 1, Eugene Giannini and Roy Crapp; 2, Rollie Kennedy and Walter Spence; 3, Sherman Hill and Beverley Graham Wheelbarrow race, junior boys—1, Douglas Dench and George Tanner; 2, James Riel and Carmen Abrams; 3, Alexander Sutton and Jack Chappell.

Red ribbons were given as first prize, blue ribbons as second prize, and white ribbons as third prize. The points will be made up and the highest boy and highest girl will receive prizes at a later date.

The program was run off quickly and with no delays as event followed event in quick succession, and good management and ideal weather conditions made the day a memorable one and a very happy one for everybody concerned.

STRONG TEAM COMING FROM COPPER CLIFF

Outfit Which Won 1925 Senior Title Practically Intact.

HEAVY HITTERS

Northern Boys Will Give Raybestos Real Opposition on Saturday.

The Raybestos when they meet the Copper Cliff baseball team in the finals of the Intermediate O.B.A.A. at Exhibition Park on Saturday afternoon will clash with one of the best intermediate outfits in the Province of Ontario. The Copper Cliff boys are a real team and are with the exception of one player the championship team of 1925 which put Niagara Falls out in the senior finals. In 1926 the same team was defeated by the Oslers in the playoff and in 1927 a lot of the players were allotted to the Creighton Mine ball team, which weakened the Copper Cliff outfit considerably and they reverted to Intermediate ball, losing out to Leamington in the finals. This year most of the 1925 team are back again with the exception of Catcher Walmsley who is with the Toronto Maple Leafs.

A glance at the team proves them a strong outfit. Manager Bert Flynn plays shortstop and is one of the best in the game to-day. He is a Toronto boy and has been up in the north country since 1915. In Toronto he played with the Wellingtons and the Park Nine and without doubt is the smartest man on the team. The first pitcher is Art Cloutier, a former St. Michael's and Varsity athlete, playing hockey with the latter. He is a southpaw and a real one at that, along with being a good batter, and has been with the Copper Cliff team for five years. H. Archibald, a recent graduate from junior ranks, is the catcher. He bats and throws right hand and has an average of .357 for the season.

C. O'Reilly plays first base and is the slugger of the team batting .418 this season. He is a product of the Copper Cliff city league and with the exception of two seasons with Cobalt has played all his ball in Copper Cliff. He is the only ball player to have nicked Joe Spring for two home runs in one game. The second base is looked after by Charlie Drennan who used to play for Cobourg. He hits around .380 and is a real smart ball player.

Alex Derrick plays third base and is the second pitcher. He is another product of the Copper Cliff City League and has played most of his ball in his home town with the exception of two years with Cobalt. The outfielders are D. O'Reilly, Strong, Sleaver, Hyland and Deacon. Sleaver and Strong are also utility infielders and there is not a stronger arm in amateur baseball than that of Sleaver. All are .300 hitters and fine fielders.

VIEWS ON SPORTS

P.C.I. first team will travel to Oshawa to-morrow to meet the Motor City school crew in inter-scholastic fixture.

An ever-increasing sale of tickets and promises of support from all points of the district, will give Raybestos a great throng of rooters when they go into action against Copper Cliff, champions of Northern Ontario, at Exhibition Park tomorrow afternoon. The contest will start promptly at three o'clock, with Len Colling of Belleville, umpire-in-chief, and Walter Gerow, manager of the O.B.A.A. senior champions working at the bases. The winner of this very important game will be crowned Intermediate champions of Ontario.

* * * * * * *

A perusal of the personnel of the invading champions, shows the team to be som pumpkins. Fence-busting, being among the achievements of the miners, it will take plenty of good pitching to keep the visitors in check. The Rays are quietly confident that they have the flingers to do the trick.

* * * * * * *

Forthe first time in their O.B.A.A. tour, the Raybestos club will face portside heaving, from Cloutier, the pitching ace of the Northern titleholders, and it is a matter for concern that six of the home clouters bat from the west side of the plate. It is equally true that these same batters have drawn an unusually large number of passes to first base this season, so that Cloutier will have to possess mighty fine control to get the spaulding through.

* * * * * * *

Cripples or not the Yankees started back where they left off last year to defeat the Cardinals in the opening game of the 1928 world series. They may have had kinks in their legs and were not so fast on the bases but there was nothing wrong with their batting eyes when it came to smacking the sphere. The American league champions found Sherdel no wizard on the mound and clouted him for seven hits, two of which were homers. Sunny Jim Bottomley was the only player on the opposing side to clout a circuit.

* * * * * * *

Hoyt as a pitching ace was a star at his work. In one of the best world series games he has ever pitched, and he has been in a number the Yankee twirler allowed only three hits. He was a trifle wild in spots but again he was masterful in the pinches in which he fell into towards the last of the game when it looked like as if he was getting tired. Altogether of the 32 batsmen to face him he had six strikeouts.

* * * * * * *

The smallness of the crowd in attendance was almost as big a surprise as the outcome of the game. Officials figured that an attendance close to 75,000 would be in the stands but the count showed only 61,425, a mark far below the record of 63,600 made in the stadium on 1926.

BIG GUNS OF WORLD SERIES

(By the Associated Press)

The Ruth-Gehrig firm of heavy hitters out-distanced Bottomley and Hafey, the big St. Louis guns, by five hits to two in the opening game of the World Series. The Babe scored two runs and Gehrig batted in two to aid the Yankee victory, while Bottomley got a harmless home run and a still more harmless single to have the Cardinals from a shut-out.

Here is what they did:

RUTH

First inning—Double to right, and scored on Gehrig's double.
Fourth inning—Doubled to centre, and scored on Meusel's homer.
Sixth inning—Called out on strikes.
Eighth inning—Singled to left.

GEHRIG

First inning—Doubled to right, scoring Ruth.
Third inning—Rolled to Sherdel.
Sixth inning—Rolled to Frisch.
Eighth inning—Singled to right, scoring Koenig.

BOTTOMLEY

Second inning—Walked.
Fourth inning—Rolled to Gehrig.
Seventh inning—Hit a home run into right field bleachers.
Ninth inning—Singled to right.

HAFEY

Second inning—Called out on strikes.
Fifth inning—Struck out.
Seventh inning—Filed to Meusel.
Ninth inning—Filed to Ruth.

THEATRES

AT THE REGENT.

Because of his sensational performance in King Vidor's "The Crowd," in which he played the leading male role, James Murray was given the featured male role opposite Joan Crawford in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's film version of the famous musical play, "Rose-Marie." The picture will be shown at the Regent Theatre, and will be presented with the full musical score of the sensational stage hit.

FAMOUS HE-MAN ACTOR PORTRAYS LUMBER BARON IN THRILLING PICTURIZATION OF PETER B. KYNE NOVEL—DORIS KENYON FEATURED.

Milton Sills, First National Pictures, star, has added another remarkable performance to his already long list of screen successes.

Playing Bryce Cardigan, in Peter B. Kyne's great story of the Redwoods, "The Valley of the Giants" at the Regent Theatre this week, Sills surpasses any of his past performances, and gives a remarkable characterization.

"The Valley of the Giants" is a story of the lumber industry on the Pacific Coast, and of a romance that grows out of rivalry between two rival lumber barons. The story by Kyne was an interesting and enthralling one, and in bringing it to the screen First National Pictures has lost none of the beauty and romance of the original.

In beautiful settings amid the giant trees of the Pacific Northwest, this graphic story is unfolded in a manner that holds interest from start to finish. There is conflict, struggle and action throughout, and one of the most thrilling scenes ever shown on the screen is provided in the wreck of the logging train, which plunges down a mountainside, breaking away from the engine, running into a sharp curve, and over a sixty foot cliff into a river. The scene has never been duplicated for the motion picture camera, and is thrilling in the extreme.

Sills is supported by a fine cast, including Doris Kenyon, the charming and talented featured player who plays opposite him. Paul Hurst gives a good performance as the "heavy" and the cast includes Arthur Stone, Phil Brady, Yola d'Avril, Charles Sellon, and many others. Much of the picture was photographed in the Big Trees country of California, and the scenes are particularly beautiful. The direction by Charles Brabin is excellent.

"The Valley of the Giants," is superb entertainment, and another great picture from Milton Sills.

AT THE CAPITOL.

Capacity Audience Greeted Pat Rafferty and Colleen Moore at the Capitol Last Night—Popular Dumbell Comedian Received Curtain Call After Curtain Call— "Happiness Ahead" One of Colleen's Best.

An audience that taxed the capacity of the Capitol Theatre, greeted Pat Rafferty, late comedian of the Dumbells Co. upon his appearance at that popular theatre last night. Pat treated the packed house to some of his old as well as new successes, and each number was roundly applauded. At the close of his act he received curtain call after curtain call; the audience could not get enough of him. Mr. Rafferty will appear again tonight and at three performances on Saturday, at the matinee and at both shows in the evening.

Far surpassing in emotional drama her previous work as a comedienne, Colleen Moore has given a performance in the stellar role of "Happiness Ahead" that unquestionably should be considered the finest of her career.

Elements of comedy, romance and pathos have been well blended in this picture, endowing it with every quality of entertainment from humor to tragedy. Through it all the convincing work of Miss Moore dominates, whether the action be serious or cosmic, revealing in her a breadth of dramatic ability rarely found.

It is significant that of the two outstanding scenes, in the opinion of the writer, one was humorous, and the other forcefully dramatic. Miss Moore gave a delightful performance in an episode in which she enacted a bride from the country, contending with the mystifying mechanical devices of a city apartment, and flying about to the tune of door-bell, telephone, and speaking-tube whistle while the dinner burns. In striking contrast to this enjoyable scene, is the final scene of the picture—emotional and dramatic in the extreme, which provides a rapid and well-rounded ending for the plot. It is without doubt one of the most unusual finishes ever presented in a screen story, and in it Miss Moore proves herself an exceptional actress.

PRINCE OF WALES WON TWO POINTS

Defeated King Edward School in Hard Fought Game at King Edward Park Last Night.

After a gruelling battle on the soccer field last evening, the Prince of Wales won a hard fought game from the King Edward eleven by one goal to nothing. There was no difference in the teams except in the half back line. The winners' centre half was the star of the game. He repeatedly broke up the losers' attacks and his anticipation of attacking play always brought him success.

FIRST HALF.

Prince of Wales school won the toss and set the ball arolling against the King Edward boys, who repulsed a desperate raid by the opposing forwards. Quick as a flash the south-end forwards carried the ball to the other end and kept the full-backs busy for the next three minutes defending their charge until Jim Menzies at centre half cleared upfield. Play was confined to mid-field for a while with the half-backs tackling very closely, in which illegal tactics were practiced to perfection. It is strange, that no matter what sport the youth takes up, he seems to grasp the opportunity to learn the minor tricks of the specified game. Free kicks for infringements of the code dominated the play thereafter. Time and again the ruling official had to caution the boys for taking the man instead of playing the ball, also for clicking the heels. It was from a free foul kick that the Prince of Wales scored from twenty-five yards out. This award was given because the full-back deliberately stood on the toes of the forward who was endeavouring to head the ball in the air. (*) Law 9. Encouraged by their success the winners returned with greater vim than ever, while the losers put up a brilliant defence against a fast-moving front rank. Half-time—Prince of Wales 1, King Edward 0.

HALF TIME.

The second moiety started with more keenness than the previous half. King Edward boys bombarded the winners' goal from all angles to find that there was a good custodian betwen the sticks; in fact, he repeatedly saved his team from defeat by picking the ball up with his hands from the toe of the attacking forwards. The ball went from end to end at a fast pace, with each goalkeeper being called upon to save his charge. The losers' half-back line lost through the lack of playing the position allotted to them. No doubt this was caused through the action of the forwards not passing the ball at the opportune time. In the last ten minutes of the game the referee had to chase two players for violent conduct—Law 13. No matter what the King Edward team tried they never became dangerous, although three foul kicks given against the full backs for tackling a player while not playing the ball might have caused disaster. On each occasion the King Edward player missed the mark by inches. There was nothing startling thereafter. Near the finish Joe Watkins rallied his front together and tried hard to break through but he never gave up in spite of the fact that he could not penetrate the defense. Full time —Prince of Wales 1, King Edward 0.

Law 9—Neither tripping, kicking, striking or jumping at a player shall be allowed ..... attempting to throw an opponent by the use of the legs.....or play that is likely to cause injury or he may order him off.

Law 13—The duty of the referee is to order a player off for violent conduct or ungentlemanly behaviour. (International Board 1907).

Good looks sometimes wear off and sometimes wash off.

CURLING GROUPS ARE ANNOUNCED

Annual Meeting of Ontario Association Will Be Held Oct. 16.

RULE CHANGE PROPOSED.

TORONTO, Oct. 4.—Secretary-Treasurer George S. Pearcy of the Ontario Curling Association has issued his annual call to the yearly gathering of the club representatives, which will take place in the Victoria Club in this city on Tuesday, October 16, at 10 o'clock in the morning.

The Tankard Banner will be presented at this meeting, the draft of groups for the Tankard, District Cup and Junior Tankard confirmed, and routine business transacted. There are no really contentious matters affecting the association as a whole to be discussed. The following notice of motion has been given by D. A. Macnab of Orillia:

"That on page 8, in clause three, strike out the words from 'when the umpire receives' to the end of sentence 'eligible to compete', and replace it with the following: 'When the umpire considers it beneficial to any club or clubs and after getting advice from the different clubs that they intend to compete in the Tankard or District groups or both, that the draw can be made four days ahead of date to be played, and the said clubs advised by the umpire as to the time only they play, and, further no club or clubs having bye to play at the same time as primary.'"

Groups No. 1—Kingston, Napanee, Ontario Hospital, Brockville and Rockwood play at Kingston; umpire, P. D. Lymam.

Group No. 2—Belleville, Cobourg, Colborne, Oshawa; play at Oshawa; umpire, T. H. McMurty.

Group No. 3—Bobcaygeon, Campbellford, Dunsford, Fenelon Falls, Hastings, Lindsay, Millbrook, Norwood, Peterborough; play at Peterborough; umpire, George Morrow.

Official plan of grouping for District Cup competition:

District No. 1—Agincourt Heather, Locust Hill, Markham, Newmarket, Scarboro, Stouffville, Unionville, Wexford. Play at Markham. Umpire—James Malcolm.

District No. 2—Group A—Bobcaygeon, Dunsford, Fenelon Falls, Lindsay. Play at Lindsay. Umpire—W. E. Reesor. Group B—Hastings, Keene, Lakefield, Millbrook, Norwood, Peterborough. Play at Peterborough. Umpire—R. M. Waddell. Final to be played at time and place named by Secretary O.C.A.

District No. 3—Belleville, Campbellford, Cobourg, Colborne, Oshawa. Play at Cobourg. Umpire—F. M. Field, K.C.

Five Golfers Are Accorded Handicaps

MONTREAL, Que., Oct. 5 (Canadian Press).—Five golfers of the Province of Quebec have been given handicaps of three according to the official list announced by the Province of Quebec Golf Association yesterday. The provincial list is a new departure this year, and was introduced chiefly to establish a uniform system of handicapping.

The five players who have been accorded handicaps of three are: W. M. Hodgson and N. M. Scott, of Royal Montreal; C. C. Fraser and William McLuckie of Kanawaki, and Jack Cameron, of Rivermead, Ottawa.

The handicaps of other Ottawa players are: Four handicap, Carol Stuart, Fairmount; Melville Rogers, Rivermead. Seven handicap —Joel Cameron, Rivermead. Eight handicap—Dr. R. Larmour and P. J. Wood, Rivermead. Nine handicap — J. L. Williams, J. M. Skead and H. Blade, Rivermead. Ten handicap—G. R. Snelling, Rivermead. Eleven handicap—J. W. Thomas and A. K. Cameron, Rivermead.

If you want your dreams to come true, don't oversleep.

Mrs. B. M. Purdy Gives Address On Work of Grenfell Hospital.

DISTRICT NEWS.

BRIDGENORTH, Oct. 5 (Examiner Correspondence).—The regular meeting of the Gilmour Memorial Mission Band was held Sunday afternoon, September 30. The meeting was opened by singing a hymn, after which everyone repeated the 23rd Psalm as the scripture. Mrs. Edward Archer then led in prayer. Mrs. Proudlove, who was in charge of the parcel that was to go to the foreign land had such a numerous amount of gifts come in that she thought there would have to be two parcels sent to India.

After the business part of the meeting finished, Mrs. B. M. Purdy of Grenfell Hospital, Labrador, who is home on furlough, told all about her work. Mrs. Purdy's address was enjoyed by all present. After which the meeting was closed with prayer by Mrs. T. B. Mann.

Long years ago, when hostelries were all the vogue, and were boasted of their "coach and four" the inns of little old New York were famous for their comfort and good cheer. The Victoria, today, is proud to follow that same tradition of true hospitality.

THERE'S a FAMOUS Tradition BEHIND the NEW VICTORIA!

NOW OPEN

It's a smart hotel, of course—you're proud to say, "I stopped at the Victoria!" It's convenient, certainly—you're in the very heart of the theatrical and business and shopping districts! But above everything else, you'll remember your stay at the Victoria for its old-fashioned courtesy, its warm hospitality!

Rooms with Bath, Shower, Sunlight, Running Ice Water, Servidor $3.00 a day.

Single Rooms, $3.00, $3.50, $4.00.
Double Rooms for two persons—$4.50, $5.00, with twin beds $6.00.

CLOUDY SKIES GREET TEAMS

Rain Not Expected Until Tonight, However—Pitchers Not Chosen.

VETERANS LIKELY.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Oct. 5 (Canadian Press).—Cloudy skies carrying the threat of rain which the weather bureau, however, does not believe will come before evening, this morning greeted baseball fans who hope to see the second game of the World Series. The temperature was about the same as yesterday, when it reached the high mark of 76 degrees.

The St. Louis Cards found themselves just where they were at this stage of the 1926 series, and although the Red Birds have a new manager now, the tactics adopted will be the same as in 1926. Grover Cleveland Alexander has been summoned to do something about it, if it doesn't rain. Manager McKechnie decided to follow Hornsby's idea of sending old Pete in to wave his magic wand at the Yankees to prevent them extending their lead. If the day grows darker, with poor visibility, however, McKechnie planned to send in Jess Haines, whose fast ball with a hop on it and knuckle ball, hard to see even on a clear day, promised to give the Yanks some trouble at the plate.

Manager Huggins also had not made a final decision on pitchers this morning, but he proposed sending in Zachary, rejuvenated left hander, who can throw balls as slow as the slowest.

WHEN THE CATS COME INTO THEIR OWN

Entries for the Cat Show Close Next Wednesday—Peterborough Fanciers Urged to Make Exhibits.

Peterborough owners of fancy cats are reminded that entries for the cat show, to be held in connection with the Made-in-Canada Exhibition next week, will close on Wednesday, Oct. 10th in accordance with the rules of the Cat Fanciers' Association. The show will be staged on Thursday and Friday, Oct. 18 and 19, the two best days of the big show.

It's a Peterborough cat show, for Peterborough cats, and the management are looking for loyal support from the local owners. As a person who owns only the one cat has a much better chance to keep it in good condition than has the owner of a large number of cats, that gives the Peterborough pets a considerable edge on the visiting cats.

Remembering this fact, it is to be hoped that our local end of the show will be well filled and carry off a good share of the honors. A phone call to the store of W. S. Merrell will bring a prize list and entry blank at once, or call and get them. Proceeds go to the Kiwanis fund for underfed children, a movement that surely merits the heartiest support.

TENDERS FOR REMOVAL OF SNOW AND SLUSH.

SEALED TENDERS, addressed "CITY CLERK," and endorsed "TENDERS FOR SNOW PLOWING," will be received at the Office of the City Clerk up to 5 o'clock p.m., on

Double Shooting Believed Solved

New Facts Found By Police

New Evidence Believed To Point to Murder and Suicide.

NOT MADE PUBLIC.

Jury Views Bodies Preparatory To Inquest—Funeral Held This Afternoon.

Police believe that they have solved the mystery of the fatal shooting which took place yesterday morning at 585 Aylmer street, when Mrs. Thomas Pacey and George Frederick Knox weer both found dead on the bed in Mrs. Pacey's bedroom. Chief Newhall, since arriving in the city last night, has been conducting a thorough inquiry into the shooting and he was able to announce to The Examiner at noon to-day that he believed a solution of the whole thing has been arrived at.

There is evidence that has not been made public, but which will come out at the inquest, on which, it is understood, the whole tragedy hinges. The Chief Constable had a very busy morning, being closeted with those who have helped in solving the mystery. Coroner Dr. T. W. H. Young was also in conference with the Chief this morning, and it is believed that at the inquest the evidence submitted will point directly to murder and suicide.

Jury Views Bodies

A preliminary inquest was held last night in the Comstock Funeral Parlors over the bodies of Mrs. Thomas Pacey and George Frederick Knox, found dead at noon yesterday at 585 Aylmer street by Thomas Pacey when he returned home for lunch. Crown Attorney G W Hatton, K.C., conducted the short hearing before Coroner Dr. T. W. H. Young. Thomas Pacey identified the remains of his wife, and Rupert E. Knox those of his son.

The jurymen subpoenaed by Detective Sergeant William Meagher were Herbert McCannan, foreman, M. J. Duffus, Harold Freeman, Reginald Fox, John Kylie, Frank Gray, Keith Lech, Frank Dawson, Ray Best, Frank Jobbitt, William G. Howden and Ernest Warne. These men will act in both inquiries. After the jurymen had viewed the remains and taken particular notice of the bullet marks and blood stains, the inquest was adjourned until Wednesday night, October 17, when it will re-open in the police court.

Whei the jury had been sworn it was taken into the room where the bodies lay and Coroner Dr. Young pointed to the bullet hole in the centre of the forehead of the young man and the smoke coloring around the wound, proving that the revolver must h been held very close to the forehead. On the woman he also showed bullet wound in the centre of the forehead and the same kind of smoke marks around this wound. The left eye was also noticed to be very black. Mrs. Pacey had bled considerably from the mouth, and the front of her dress and stockings were stained with blood.

R. E. Knox was the first called and he immediately said that the body was that of his son and the last time he had seen him alive was on Thursday night. Thomas Pacey was next called and identified the dead woman as his wife.

The body of Knox will be forwarded to Lynn, Massachusetts, for burial.

MRS. PACEY BURIED

The funeral of Mrs. Thomas Pacey was held this afternoon at her home, 558 Aylmer street. The service was conducted by the Rev. J. E. Todd of George street United Church and only friends and relative were allowed into the house. The service was short and interment too place in the Little Lake cemetery. There were many floral tributes showing the high esteem in which the deceased was held in by her neighbors and friends.

The only jarring note in the whole proceeding was when a reporter from an outside newspaper attempted to take some pictures of the funeral and the funeral directors endeavored to stop him.

Body Taken to Boston

The 3.25 Canadian Pacific passenger train for Toronto carried away this afternoon the mortal remains of George Knox to their last resting place in Boston. The body will be transferred this evening at the Toronto Union Station to the Boston train and will arrive in that city late to-morrow morning. Shortly before train time and after the last rites had been paid to Mrs. Pacey, the body was taken from the Comstock Funeral Home to the Canadian Pacific station. Groups of Collegiate boys and girls went to the Home this morning to pay their last respects to one they had come to like, both as a

Extended Fast Fatal To Woman

TORONTO, Oct. 6 (Canadian Press).—Following a long experiment in scientific living and an extended fast, a middle-aged woman, known as "Miss Mills," died at the Women's Cottage Hospital in the night. Penniless and starving, she presented herself on Saturday at the headquarters of the International Scientific Living Society and asked for assistance, and when admitted to the hospital, stated she had been fasting for some time.

CUPS AWARDED FOR BEST DOGS

Trophies For Best of All Breeds Presented Last Night.

MANY ATTEND.

The Peterborough Kennel Association's Dog Sohw, held during the past two days in Brock street rink, wound up in blaze of glory on Friday night when Judge Charles G. Hopton declared the winners of many special classes. Present during the evening were hundreds of Peterborough admirers of "man's best friend" and all were un nimous in their approval of the final selections for competition for the Herbert Routley trophy. It was emblematic of the best of all breeds.

Throughout the evening, and for that matter the afternoon as well, Peterborough folk and visitors from many surrounding centres, gathered at the show to inspect the two hundred and thirty-five or more dogs entered and to watch the interesting process of judging. Elimination of the various groups required possibly an hour of the evening and hearty applause greeted the presentation of the Roland Denne trophy, emblematic of the best local male, to H. Routley for his imported winning British Field trial winner, "Yoredale Pat." The corresponding trophy, the Harold Morrow silver cup for the best local female, went to Mrs. Loescher's Pekinese "Pagan's Summe Tsek."

Then came the general trophies open to all. The Chevrolet silver cup for the best Canadian Bred Sporting Brace went to the Russian wolf hounds of F. E. Upton of Toronto, a beautifully matched pair of this ancient Caucasion breed.

The Stock's Bread Company cup for the best brace of any breed, was also keenly contested, William Thompson of Peterborough, winning a clean victory with his beagles, though opposed by the champion fox terriers shown by Ted Ward of Clarkson Ontario. Mr. Hopton particularly pointed out that in judging braces or pairs, it is not so much the record made by the dogs individually as their evenness of type and size, coupled with color and markings. As he so pertinently puts it, "They should be as peas in a pod."

An imposing trophy donated by the Canadian Kennel Club for the best Canadian bred dog in the show developed splendid competition and it was only after a lengthy try-out that the tiny orange sable Pomeranian "Champion Arndale Firelight" which had beaten everything in its breed, was placed over a remarkably good-headed bulldog "Queen of Challenger" owned by Herbert C. Stuart of Augusta, Michigan.

King of the Show.

Then came the "piece de resistance," the choosing of the champion of all breeds in the show—to whom would be awarded the cup donated by Herbert S. Routley, president of the show. In the choosing, local Fox Hound breeders were gratified to see one of their favorites, "Edward's Sallie" finish a very close fourth to the Halifax Reserve champion of all breeds—the Scottish terrier "Bassetlaw Rosiera." "Edward's Sallie" had won the Johnston silver cup as breed champion. The world famous Tri-International champion bulldog "Sessue" was just beaten on action by the dog which is possibly the greatest Canadian bred of all breeds ever shown namely the wire-haired terrier "Champion Albany Matchless." The terrier has won no less than nine all-breed championships before reaching a second birthday, which is a remarkable achievement, reflecting genuine credit upon her handler, Ted Ward, of the famous Albany Kennels at Clarkson. During the past three months, he has been successful in having his dogs win no less than two breed championships and repeatedly best of all breeds in shows both in the United States and Canada.

In a closing interview, The Examiner asked Mr. Hopton his impressions of the show. He declared that it was quite the most "classy" show he has judged in the Dominion since 1925 when the great Interna-

TEACHERS HEAR FINE ADDRESSES AT CONVENTION

Officers Elected at Final Session of Annual Gathering.

BANQUET HELD.

Dr. M. A. Kirkconnell, of Lindsay, Is Special Speaker of Evening.

The president, Mr. Stacey, reopened the convention by reading Acts 20, followed by the Lord's Prayer.

Mr. Bryson, general secretary for the O.E.A. spoke a few words on the benefits of the organization. He told of the progress made along teacher's superanuation and other matters dealt with by the organization. The different departments were mentioned but fuller particulars given in regard to the elementary department, as this was of greater interest to teachers.

Mr. Bryson's purpose of attending this convention was to encourage the teacher's attendance at the O.E.A.

Cards were distributed for the teachers to sign entitling them to become members of the organization.

Mr Lees next spoke on arithmetic. He said arithmetic was not as well taught as it should be. It was better taught in olden days but as time has gone on the appreciation of arithmetic seems to have decreased.

He said arithmetic is taught in the public school and pupils pass an examination at entrance, then they receive a little more in High School, pass another examination very little more difficult than the entrance. Then the student has a year at Normal going out to teach with little more arithmetic than he knew when he passed the entrance.

Mr. Lees went on to say that for thirty years the entrance arithmetic has gone along in rut. The papers for thirty years have been practically the same, except it was as little more difficult thirty years ago.

He also stated that it has been customary for several years to ask for a note. This year a receipt was asked for and over half pupils of County of Peterborough wrote a note. This shows they don't use reason.

He then gave suggestions to teachers to give to pupils to get away from hide bound arithmetic.

Mr. Lees showed answers to an arithmetic paper of a pupil who failed and paper was repealed. He had teachers estimate the answers.

This was a great help to the teachers in valuing anwer papers.

Mr. Scarrow gave a very interesting address on the worker and his work.

Mr. Scarrow.

"I am glad I saw this paper for the Inspector was certainly trying to make something out of a bad job," he said.

"We as teachers have a pretty big job. Anyone who is not doing his best, his very best, is not enjoying his work. We must think more of the work than the worker. Man does not live by bread alone. We get better salaries now than we used to, but that is not the best thing. It is what we get back from our pupils. It is to see them grow. Have the attitude to have the children come and eat out of my hand.

"It is only by losing our life that we gain it. It is only by giving our best that we get the best results. We need a measuring stick. Let us measure ourselves. If we have added something to our inspirations, we have gained.

"We have inherited the ages. The tools of this age are perfect to-day. They fit the job. By hard work the tools have beome fitted to the hand. On the farm each man wants to use his own fork.

"Money is made faster than in the old days. In the west men don't take care of their tools as they did in the old days. Teachers think back of the days when man was a fugitive and was without tools He gave his thought to the development of tools to help him at his work. So all along.

"Our tools are our methods, polished to the point. Let us take a joy in them as the mechanics do and make them as perfect as we can. Men have been so careful in their buildings through the ages that they have put the best in public buildings.

"I wonder if we are putting the best into the boys and girls of to-day. It is only when put in all we have we get anything adequate or worth while out of it.

"We owe it to our fellow-teachers, to those who sit before us, to ourselves, to do our best. We speak of being self-made. are. The best result are those get when we it

Politics Taken Seriously By Austrians; Troops Needed To Prevent Disorders

WIENER NEWESTADT, Austria, Oct. 6.—Canadian Press.—The rattle of musketry and the tread of marching troops were heard today in this industrial centre as it prepared for possible disorders and bloodshed when two rival political organizations meet tomorrow. Last minute preparations were being made for separate propaganda meetings of the social Democrats, who rule Vienna, and the home defence league of the Christian Socialists, who control the Austrian Government. Thousands of the inhabitants temporarily abandoned the city. The Austrian Government has sent twelve thousand armed troops. One casualty occurred when a Social Democrat shot the former Burgomaster of Wessenbach.

FARM PRODUCE PRICES RISING

EGGS 50 CENTS.

Favorable weather brought out a large crowd to the Saturday morning market, with a supply of farm produce quite equal to a good demand. Nevertheless, there was a general tendency toward higher prices, particularly in eggs and butter, the price of the former commodity rising from 43 to 50 cents a dozen, while butter advanced from 43 to 48 cents a pound. Cream was about the same as last week, selling at 25 cents and 30 cents a pint.

Those who brought chickens to market realized a price of from 30 cents to 35 cents a pound, while the supply of ducks, not so large, sold at 35 cents There were several buyers seeking turkeys and the probability is that by next week there will be a few, selling at around 45 cents a pound Outside, potatoes sold at 90 cents a bag, as compared with $1.00 last Saturday. Cabbages held their price of 10 cents, while the larger peppers sold at 5 cents a piece and were smaller at 3 for 10 cents. Cooking apples at 35 cents a basket and eating apples at 50 cents a basket, sold well, while other garden produce remained about the same as a week ago.

LESS DEMAND FOR WORKMEN

70 NAMES ON LIST.

The employment, or rather the unemployment situation locally again shows a slight tendency to become a problem, due, according to officials at the local employment bureau, to the fact that road work has "slowed up" and the demand for harvesters has become less insistent. At the present time there are about seventy names on the unemployed list.

However, the bulletin which is kept well up to date at the employment office, holds out offers to those qualified for the following positions:

Polisher and tool room lathe hands; houseman and wife, the woman to do cooking; laundry assistant superintendent, a forewoman, a maker and a sorter; a spotter and a finisher for a dry cleaning establishment, and a brick layer.

NEW CHAIN RUMORED.

Kresge Company Said To Have Acquired Interest in City Property.

It is definitely rumored that the S. S. Kresge Company has acquired an interest in property on George Street with a view to locating a branch of its international chain stores here. The date of the proposed opening is not divulged.

This company, a United States organization, is an immense one, well financed, and operating a chain of stores throughout the larger cities of the Republic. There are two classes of stores, the "red" and the "green," the former being of the well-known "Five-and-ten" class, while in the green stores there is sold merchandise of all destriptions from five cents to five dollars.

The Canadian development is evidently planned on a large scale, since properties have been secured in Belleville, Brantford and Kingston, while acquisitions are rumored in other cities. No information is being given out by the company, and the owners of acquired property are equally reticent.

Tariff Is Principal Issue

Chang Chung Returns To China After Favorable Talk With Tanaka.

NEED CO-OPERATION.

Would Establish New System On Anniversary of Resolution.

TOKIO, Oct. 6.—The new efforts of the Chinese Nationalists to reach an agreement with Japan are making good progress. Following a visit from an unofficial envoy of the Nationalist right wing, who explained Nanking's tariff policy, General Chang Chun yesterday interviewed Premier Tanaka with such favorable results that he has canceled his other engagements and will return to Nanking immediately to convey the Premier's reply to his Government.

General Chang Chun, who arrived ostensibly to attend the Japanese manoeuvres, called on Premier Tanaka instead with a message from the Nanking Government that authorized him to promote the re-opening of negotiations. He stressed the progress being made toward stabilization and assured Premier Tanaka that Oct. 10, anniversary of the revolution, would see a new system definitely established. He also explained Nanking's wishes regarding the so-called seven-grade tariff.

Premier Tanaka told him that Japan desired to see the Nationalists firmly established and was willing to co-operate with them, but he pointed out that Nanking's abrogation of the commercial treaty had not yet been withdrawn. Premier Tanaka went on to explain Japan's position in terms that justify General Chang Chun in hoping that negotiations soon will be reopened.

Nanking's overtures, which have been almost entirely concerned with the tariff, are explained by the new regime's urgent need of money. The present revenue of China is entirely absorbed by the armies, leaving no margin for the Government. If the tariff question can be settled neither the Tsinan incident nor Manchuria's status will cause insuperable difficulty.

Tsinan comes in the same category as Nanking and remains unsettled only because it is part of a larger problem. Manchuria also, from Nanking's present standpoint, is more of a talking point than a real obstacle. All the Nationalist politicians and generals know that whatever happens Japan will not permit Manchuria to be taxed and exploited for civil war. Nanking realizes that even if Mukden hoists the Nationalist flag years must pass before their union becomes effective in a financial sense.

BEAUTIFUL SCENES SHOWN

Fred L. Roy Brings Colored Photos From Europe.

What promises to be one of the most interesting events of next week October 8th to 12th, is the special exhibit of over 300 photographs in color at the Roy Studio.

The originals of all these photographs were made by Mr. Roy last summer while on a tour of the British Isles and Europe.

The Examiner has been favored with a pre-exhibition view of these beautiful pictures, and an without it any hesitancy say the collection is one of the most interesting displays of the kind that has ever been in Peterborough.

The subjects embrace a very wide field: The Giants' Causeway in North Ireland; the heather-covered hillsides and the beautiful Lochs of Bonnie Scotland; the rugged mountains and peaceful valleys of North Wales; Old England with its ancient ruins; quaint scenes from Holland, showing the old city of Bruges, Volendam, and the Island of Marchen, are tinted in such colors that they will appear lifelike to those who know them.

THANKSGIVING IS EXPRESSED AT ST. JOHN'S

Congregation Holds Harvest Festival Service in Beautifully Decorated Church.

HELPFUL SERMON.

Rev. W. H. White, Formerly of St. Luke's, Is Special Preacher.

There was a spirit of harvest festival and thanksgiving in evidence from the very entrance to the chancel arch of St. John's Church, which was beautifully decorated throughout with many varieties of fruits, vegetables, flowers and grains, tokens of a bountiful harvest.

The service of musical praise commenced with the entrance of the choir, continuing through the form of thanksgiving for harvest blessings.

After the reading of the opening lessons, the Rev. Dr. Blagrave expressed his thanks to his congregation for their constancy in keeping up this annual Harvest Festival, and especially those who so kindly took a part in the decoration of the church for this occasion.

It was with great pleasure that he introduced the Rev. W. H. White, of St. Mark's Markdale, Toronto; formerly of St. Luke's, this city, who was the special speaker of the evening.

Rev. Mr. White, in his opening words, congratulated St. John's upon their manifest spirit of Thanksgiving, and voiced his great appreciation of being invited to Peterborough.

His sermon was based upon St. Paul's farewell message to the Elders at Miletus, found in the Acts of the Apostles, 20, 35. "I have shewed you all things, how that so laboring ye ought to support the weak, and to remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how He said. It is more blessed to give than to receive." The central thought of Christ's life was its blessedness, which was gained by giving, rather than receiving.

Many students are deterred from entering the ministry of the Church by the fear that their material gains would be few. They should think rather of the opportunity this service would mean for them to give This is true too, in other professions.

Referring to the beautiful cross which hangs in the centre of the chancel of St. Mark's, at Parkdale, in memory of their fallen soldiers, attention was called to the inscription, which says not that they "lost" their live: but that they "gave" them. He hoped that these brave young heroes had found now that it was truly more blessed to give than to receive.

Beneath this cross many of the more common relationships of life are consummated, marriage, confirmation..... In these, too, are felt the blessedness of "giving."

In giving of material riches, one often impoverishes the recipient of spiritual gifts, the speaker adding that he, personally felt that when he gave with his right hand, he was also taking away gifts with his left, spiritually. The missionaries are coming to recognize this too, especially in China. They now realize that their converts must feel the call to sacrifice, and that their religion would mean more to them if it cost them something.

"In our land, we too, should feel the need of giving of ourselves in our attendance at the House of God. We are often too easily persuaded to listen comfortably to a radio service in our own home, but in so doing we are receiving but not giving. Material contributions were not spoken of at all. If self were given, this would follow in natural thanksgiving."

At this time of Harvest Festival, which is one of the most ancient of customs, having been observed in the Jewish church, and probably going back to the time of Abel, the spirit of giving is stronger in the heart of the Christian than at most other times. There is no worth in the offering of lip service, and to say "I love you," if we stop there, and do nothing to show our love for God. "Do something for someone," is the object in God's kingdom.

In his closing words, Rev. Mr. White wished for the continuance of blessings for St. John's congregation, both materially and spiritually, and asked for their prayers for his own work. "My parting words," he said, "are those of Paul, 'Remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how he said, It is more blessed to give than to receive.'"

During the singing of a beautiful thanksgiving anthem by the choir, the offering was received, and the service was closed with prayer.

Domestic Troubles Resulted in Separation of Parents and Knox Was Ordered To Provide For Maintenance of Family—Mother Self-Supporting.

(Special to the Examiner)

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 6.—Across the bier of George Frederick Knox, 19 year old Lynn student, may be effected the re-union of his estranged parents when the body arrives in Lynn for burial. Mrs. Josephine Knox, his mother, and Rupert Knox, the father, separated a year ago last June in Pittsfield, Mass., she to go to Lynn and support herself as a nurse and he to go to Canada as an efficiency engineer with the Canadian General Electric Company.

Attorney William Cusick, counsel for Mrs. Knox in her recent suit for separate maintainence against the father on the grounds of desertion, will seek a warrant for his arrest when he brings the dead boy back to Lynn, although the heart-broken mother attempted to-day to deter him from that course. Mrs. Knox, shocked by the tragic news, is confined at present to the home of her sister, Mrs. Cora A. Green, who is matron of the Lynn Home for Aged Women on Breed street.

According to Mrs. Green, the youth's parents were married in Lynn twenty years ago, and after the ceremony moved to Watertown, where Knox was employed at the Government arsenal. Pittsfield was their next residence and the scene, according to Mrs. Green, of the commencement of domestic trouble in the Knox household. As the result of court proceedings in the Berkshire city, Mrs. Green declared, Knox was ordered to pay $75 a month to the support of his wife and boy, and on promise to pay that amount regularly, left for Canada to take the position he now holds there.

News of the tragedy did not reach Mrs. Knox direct from the boy's father in Canada. He broke the news by telegram to Mrs. Green, who in turn, informed the mother of its occurrence.

Mrs. Green stated the youth had written several times about the happiness he had found in being a boarder in the Pacey home, and these communication led both mother and aunt to believe she was a mother to him in his lonesome hours in Canada.

FINE HOLSTEINS SHIPPED TO U.S.

World's Champion "Idylwilde Korndyke" Among Those Sold.

GOING TO ILLINOIS.

The best shipment of cattle from Central Ontario in many years, was that made from Peterborough recently when three of the finest cows in the district, including a world's champion, were sent to one of the leading show herds in the United States owned by R. V. Rasmussen of Deerfield, Illinois.

The personnel of the shipment included Idylwilde Korndyke, world's champion butter producer in the 305-day division, owned by James Seymour and Sons, of Ida.

"Pontiac Segis Nancy," pride of the Stella-Oriens herd owned by McConkey and McColl of Peterborough, and

"Echo Johannah Dekol," outstanding cow of the herd from Rowancroft Farm, Lindsay, owned by D. Murphy and Sons. Though the prices paid were withheld, it is understood that they reached a high figure, in view of the splendid records of the cattle purchased.

Sale of the animals resulted from a visit paid to Peterborough Industrial Exhibition of R. V. Rasmussen, proprietor of Elmwood Farms, Deerfield, Ill., accompanied by his herd manager, Wilford Lynn, and R. M. Holtby, field man for the Holstein-Friesian Association of Canada. These men have been travelling over the province for some time, and it is understood that the Peterborough animals are but three of about eighteen head purchased.

CONTRACT GOES TO COMSTOCKS

Will Furnish Window Shades For P.C.I. and Vocational Building.

That Peterborough has one of the finest and most completely equipped furniture emporiums in Ontario — Toronto not excepted—is pretty generally recognized by all who visit A. Comstock & Sons' handsome premises on George Street and make a tour of inspection through the three exceedingly spacious display flats filled with Canada's best products in the furniture and home furnishing lines. And that this old-established and four-square dealing house has been successful in bidding for the contract to equip the new wing of the Collegiate Institute and Vocational School with all the window shades required should make pleasant reading. For, notwithstanding the so widely broadcasting these days of the consistent slogan, "Buy in your own town" in the community's interests generally, too much business is still going out of the city that should be left here.

This contract secured by A. Comstock & Sons is a sizeable one in its line, including material, making and hanging complete of shades complete.

HARVEST FESTIVAL SERVICES OBSERVED AT LAKEFIELD

Rev. R. C. Blagrave, D.D., of Peterborough, Special Speaker For Occasion.

AT ST. JOHN'S CHURCH.

(Examiner Correspondence).

LAKEFIELD, Oct. 6.—Rev. R. C. Blagrave, D.D. of St. John's Church, Peterboro, was the special preacher at the Harvest Festival services in St. John's Church on Thursday evening. Dr. Blagrave took his text from the 14th verse of the 4th chapter of the Gospel according to St. John: "But whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life."

Our Lord went to Samaria with His disciples and stopped near Sychar, where there was a well, while His disciples went into the village to buy food. As He sat there our Lord reflected on the diversions between the Jews and the Samaritans, both descendants of Israel, for, while both worshipped the same God, each felt that the place where one worshipped made all the difference in the world. The Jews worshipped at Jerusalem and the Samaritans at Gerigim, and this difference caused a bitter feud. The Jews had forgotten the character of God in separating themselves from the Samaritans for to truly worship God, we worship in spirit and in truth, and God makes no distinction between Jerusalem and Gerigim, for it is the spiritual worship which counts. To worship in spirit and in truth does not mean only hymns and prayers, but a life which is of a piece with our worship. It is a characteristic of the present day to feel great satisfaction with what we are doing without feeling the need of more spiritual uplift. Religion must not be a dividing but a uniting thing, and our Lord looked on things as He saw them. When the woman came down to the well, which for a thousand years had helped to nourish the people through their vicissitudes, He told her of the other kind of thirst and of the water of life. It was simple language but symbolic, and she did not comprehend His meaning. Our Lord wanted to manifest to the world that it was not by antagonism and dissension but by truth and units bound by a community of spiritual life which would bring us close to God.

There is a soul language in all of us which we must all have if we are to interpret our Lord and act as His messengers. We can all realize tangible things, but spiritual things are harder and we must strive faithfully to attain them. The Church helps us to exercise our spiritual life, and in offering thanksgiving to God for material benefits, let us not forget thanks for the spiritual blessings, also for all we have is borrowed from God and we should dedicate a portion of what God gives us back to His service. Let us cultivate a spiritual thirst which is lasting and permanent, and which God only can satisfy.

Church Decorated.

The church was prettily decorated for the occasion with grain, flowers, fruit and vegetables, tastefully arranged. A special feature of the service was the presence of St. John's organist and choir of Peterborough, who furnished the music for the service, which was fully choral. Rev. W. J. Creighton, M.A., took charge of the service, Mr. R. N. Stuart of Peterborough read the first lesson and Rev. R. C. Blagrave the second lesson. The offertory was devoted to the Diocesan Mission Fund.

Following the service the visitors were entertained in the Parish Hall by the choir of St John's, Lakefield, and a social hour was spent. Rev. W. J. Creighton thanked Dr. Blagrave, Mr. Mann and the visiting choir for their kindness in coming to the Harvest Festival, and Dr. Blagrave and Mr. Mann made suitable and gracefully worded replies.

The members of St. John's Choir present were: Mr. F. G. Mann, organist and choirmaster; Mrs. Howden (the choir mother), Mrs. Burrows, Mrs. Groombridge, Mrs. McWilliams, Mrs. Eldred, Mrs. Wesley, Misses Quartermaine, Bennett, Groom bridge, Copperthwaite, Price, Hutchinson, L. Bacon, Iverson, P. Mann, Echobichon, Guthrie, M. Bacon, Messrs. R. N. Stuart, Crowe, Gray, Hayter, Selby, Spencer, Massey-Cooke, Roberts, Lacey, Pitchford, Rush, R. Pitchford and A. Pink.

HUNDREDS VISIT PERCY FAIR AS CLOUDS RECEDE

Rain Fails To Stop Large Crowd From Attending at Warkworth.

THREE BAD YEARS

Entry List Largest in History —Exhibits of High Class.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

WARKWORTH, Oct. 6—Wind, rain and weather all united to conspire against the County Fair at Warkworth yesterday afternoon. Until almost three o'clock the rain fell with dismal monotony and there seemed little chance that there would be anything more than a few exhibitors on the grounds. But the weather changed to a little fairer degree and for about two hours, many hundreds of people hurried about the wet grounds. This is the third consecutive season that weather conditions have seriously interfered with the fair which is generally conceded to be the leading fair of the district. Last year a cold rain and a little wet snow were the order of the day and the weather of 1926 was not much better. There was some mention of postponing the event, but the directors decided to make the best of adverse circumstances and hold the fair as advertised. Their tenacity of purpose was rewarded much more handsomely than was generally expected.

In spite of the weather, the entry list this year was the largest in the history of Percy Township Agricultural Society. The judges spoke in glowing terms of the high standard of the exhibits. Inside the exhibition building, the best in the land was to be seen by any who cared to enter. The livestock entries were better than ever before, both on quality and quantity. An official cattle judge who was present as a spectator only, was greatly elated over the fine beasts that were puzzling the judges. He has for several years been judge at fall fairs in a district further east and expressed the hope that another year would find him appointed to attend Warkworth fair. It would be a pleasure, he thought, to judge such fine specimens.

School Fair Held

The county championship school fair was an added attraction. Some idea of the standard of the exhibits shown may be arrived at when it is explained that in order to exhibit at the championship fair, the exhibitor must first win at the rural school township fair. There was no school parade this afternoon. In former years this has been one of the features of the afternoon of the second day. Headed by the band, the pupils march from a point in the village to the exhibition grounds, where they are admitted free of charge. This year there was no band either.

No Horse Races.

Perhaps the greatest disappointment of all to the average fair goer was the absence of horse races. This headline attraction was absolutely out of the question since the track was, as a whole, slippery, and in places a sea of mud. To attempt racing under such conditions would have been to court disaster. Realizing this fact, the directors were able to notify several of the owners of the fast horses by telephone. But some were already on the grounds and others were on the road. There were plenty of horses on the grounds even under the conditions and first class racing was assured had the track been in the proper condition. As it was, horse owners and attendants paddled about in waterproof footwear, packing their "bikes" and other equipment for transport back to their stables.

There was a rumour about that the racing program would be run off on Tuesday, October 16th, but this was not confirmed. Interviews with officials brought forth no further information. They deeply regretted that so many fine horses had been

TIRED HORSE GETS BRACER, AND LO' THAT DOBBIN DANCE

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Staid old burghers of Williamsburgh were startled yesterday by the sight of a skate on a skate.

The inebriated equine was driven in front of a wagon owned by Joseph Lichocky, a junkman. The aged animal swayed gayly between the shafts, oscillated his anatomy as if attempting to writhe through the intricacies of the Black Bottom, and kicked up his heels with nonchalance and abandon.

At the reins, Lichocky found it impossible to control the antics of the horse. Bystanders on streets wondered whether old Dobbin was the beneficiary of glandular regeneration or a circus steed gone wrong.

Horse and cart pursued a path of weaving spirals until John P. Miller, S. P. C. A. agent, seized the bridle. In the interim, motorists and pedestrians had given the Lichocky equipage the entire thoroughfare.

Spectators on the sidewalks gave him a big hand and Dobbin took a bow. The embarrassed driver explained:

"I can't understand it all. I just gave him a nip or two to brace him up.

In the police court the driver was fined $10 for cruelty and Magistrate Dale warned Lichocky to keep Dobbin away from the bottle, and vice versa.

Police Find Arsenal Is Made Of Church

LOWELL Mass., Oct. 6. —(Associated Press)—Holy Trinity Greek Church, its interior resembling a fort, yesterday passed out of the control of a faction which has been holding it by force for several months, but not until the police had battered down the door. This accomplished, they served on the defenders a court writ of possession granted to the opposing faction.

When the police demanded entrance, one of the men inside threatened that he would shoot but they proceeded to wield sledgehammers. Two men ran out of another door and two others who remained inside toiled the church bell.

A crowd gathered. When the door had been broken down, the police found the men at the bell rope and served the writ. Taking account of things in the church they found and confiscated rifles, shotguns, automatic pistols, revolvers and knives, with a large quantity of ammunition.

In the struggle between the factions, owning allegiance to Bishop Rodostolou of the Greek Orthodox Church, took forcible possession of the church and locked the doors. On July 28 the police, accompanied by a lawyer representing the faction headed by the Rev. Joaquin Malahais, pastor, tried to serve the writ which had been granted by Judge Lummus in Boston the day before. Those within the edifice refused to open the doors and the police were called off.

On Aug. 15 and again on Aug. 23 the pastor was set upon by crowds and severely beaten.

Wedding Bells

KELLY—TIMLIN

(Examiner Correspondence)

ROSENEATH, Oct. 6.—At 4 p.m. on Wednesday afternoon, a very pretty wedding was solemnized at the parsonage by Rev. R. M. Brown, when Edna Mary Timlin, adopted daughter of Nixon and Catharine Timlin, became the bride of Mr. Eric Thomas Kelly, son of Mr. Thomas and Lotile Kelly.

The bride was lovely in a gown of white satin-faced crepe trimmed with deep silver lace and veil of tulle arranged Juliet style, with coronet of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of asters and fern.

Her attendants were Mrs. Bessie as maid-of-honor and Miss Una Thackeray, as bridesmaid, who wore exquisite gowns with black hats.

The bridegroom was supported by Mr. Bruce Timlin.

The happy couple left amid showers of good wishes, for a short drive and in the evening were given a miscellaneous shower at the home of Mr. Timlin, when the bride received many beautiful and useful gifts.

They leave shortly to reside in Toronto.

Magna Charta Grant To Be Celebrated

BURY ST. EDMUNDS, Eng., Oct. 6.—(Canadian Press).—Bury St. Edmunds is to celebrate the grant of Magna Charta on October 9, the celebrations being held in conjunction with the completion of the first part of the work on the ruins of the Abbey of St. Edmund, which has been undertaken by the corporation in association with the Office of Works. It was at the high altar of the Abbey that the barons in 1214 pledged themselves to secure the charter from King John and the site is marked by a suitable table on which the fact and names of the barons are recorded.

The Bishop of Durham will conduct a special service of commemoration to the Cathedral Church, followed by a procession to the high altar for an address by a speaker or patron saint.

TWO MONTHS IN JAIL FOR "BOSSY" GILLIS

SALEM, Mass., Oct. 6.—(A.P.)—Mayor Andrew J. "Boss" Gillis of Newburyport, yesterday was sentenced to two months in jail, one to be served as hard labor, and to pay fines aggregating $585 for operating a gasoline filling station in Newburyport without a permit. He was remanded to the Salem jail to begin his sentence at once.

Sentence was passed by Judge Brown before whom Gillis had pleaded guilty.

"Boss" opened a gasoline station on a corner regarded as residential. He cut down shade trees deemed essential to the beauty of the street.

District Attorney Clark in court described the Mayor as "a wilful, empty-headed boy who has never grown up."

"Fruit-a-tives" Stopped Pain and Terrible Dizziness

Mme. GODIN

It seems almost a miracle—the way "Fruit-a-tives" benefits women suffering at the change of life. "I was obliged to go to bed because of the terrible dizziness, pain and weakness," writes Mme. Onesime Godin of Paquetville, N.B. "During this trying time 'Fruit-a-tives' proved a godsend to me, and now I am in perfect health. Every woman should follow my example and take 'Fruit-a-tives,' and they would surely get the wonderful relief that I did." Try it. Your dealer has this wonderful fruit medicine—25c and 50c a box.

French experts have recently introduced a camera that takes pictures of the inside of pearls so that the genuine may be told from the imitation. Detailed views of the interior structure, and other points that are impossible to detect with the unaided eye, are said to be clearly revealed so that successful passing of the false for the genuine is not likely to occur after an examination with the instrument.

Correct Answer Unknown

To guarantee to every one taking part in this contest that no one holds the correct answer to the puzzle, several figures were erased after the original drawing was made and before the puzzle form was printed. These figures were removed by Messrs. Jerry J. Gillen, Toronto Star Weekly; William Houston, Regina Leader-Post, and T. H. Godfrey, chartered accountant, who kindly consented to act as judges of the contest. The figures were removed from the chart at different times, and the judges held the total of the numbers which they erased. No one knows what numbers were erased. Notes of the missing numbers were made and are now under lock and seal. When the contest is over, the numbers erased from the puzzle chart will be added together and subtracted from the original total. The contest department knew the correct answer before the figures were taken out, but now nobody knows the correct answer. The answer now will be the sum total of the figures appearing in the chart above.

There are no tricks to this contest. It is merely a matter of skill in finding all the numbers shown and then adding correctly. We wish it clearly understood that there are no hidden figures. Every number can be plainly seen. The degree of your care and skill will determine the prize which you will win.

The ONLY requirements for entry to contest are those listed here. You will note their extreme simplicity, and a careful reading now will avoid any possible confusion later.

Secure Correct or Nearest Correct Total of Numbers Above to Win La Salle Car

The problem is to add together all of the numbers shown above. Each figure is clearly indicated, and they run from two to nine; the sixes have a curved stem; the nines a straight stem; all are single numbers, there are no combinations; add them as if each figure stood one above the other in a single column. Every figure in the picture is complete. If in doubt about any of the Figures, send in the chart with a figure marked, to the contest department, who will gladly tell you what it is.

This new 1929 model 5-passenger McLaughlin-Buick Sedan is free either if the winning contestant for second or 3rd subscription or any other subscriptions named in Prize List found in this Advert.

Goblin is the most strikingly original publication in Canada. Its humor is native and spontaneous. The drawings interpret, with kindly wit and whimsy, the more amusing episodes of our daily life. It is thoroughly Canadian in its entire viewpoint. It is wide-awake in its outlook, penetrating, yet always fair in its criticisms, and the most entertaining and amusing publication in the Dominion. Goblin reflects in humorous perspective the life and thought of this country, as seen through the vigorous pens and brushes of many gifted Canadians.

Through this Great Contest you will secure the most brilliant of Canadian publications at the regular subscription price, and at the same time, if you are accurate, win one of the major prizes absolutely without cost.

In this, Goblin's Fourth Great Puzzle Contest, the value of the awards has been increased to over $16,000.00; this is the greatest Prize List ever offered in Canada. In a few weeks the division of these prizes will be made. Someone will win this luxurious, magnificently appointed La Salle Car. Will it be you? Your decision NOW will determine whether you will be that fortunate person! The first prize represents a modest fortune in itself. Someone will win it. You alone must decide whether you will be that person!

Where Are The Nine

BY VERY REV. C. J. VAUGHAN, D.D.,
Dean of Llandoff.

Luke xvii., 17.—'And Jesus answering said, Were there not ten cleansed? but where are the nine?"

* * *

IN ORDER to do justice to the act of mercy which is recorded of our Lord here, and to the subsequent conduct of the lepers, it is necessary, my brethren, to remind ourselves of the physical, of the religious, and of the social misery which leprosy involved. The leprosy of the Bible belonged to the class of skin diseases which are esp cially provoked by the dry, hot atmosphere of Egypt and the East acting upon a large, exposed surfac of the human body. These diseases are aggravated, as of old in Egypt, when large numbers of men work together in kilns, or among dry and powdery substances, or when they are neglectful of personal cleanliness. The leprosy of the Bible is not, it would seem, the disease which goes by that name in modern Europe, and which is still not uncommon in Spain and in Norway. The two diseases may have been always distinct; but, on the other hand it is well known that, in the course of years, a disease will exhaust its type, disappear, and then reappear in modified form. The leprosy of the Bible is what is now known as the Mosaic or white leprosy. Its symptoms are enumerated in the 15th of Leviticus. It was the leprosy of Miriam, of Naaman, of Gehazi, of King Uzziah. It was little better than a living death. Beginning on the surface of the body, it poisoned all the springs of life. One by one, the limbs of the sufferer decayed and fell away. The leper, in Scripture language, was "as one dead, of whom the flesh is half consumed when he cometh forth from his mother's womb." This loathsome appearance, which must have inspired the patient and all around him with a sense of extreme humiliation and disgust, was aggravated, it is needless to say, by very considerable suffering. And, to crown all, no cure was possible, except by Divine interposition. No skill of man in that age could cope with this foul disease. "Am I a god?" exclaimed the king of Israel, on receiving the Syrian ambassadors on behalf of Naaman—"Am I a god, that this man doth send unto me to recover a man of his leprosy?"

And leprosy was not merely physical misery. It had in Jewish eyes, and on Divine authority, a religious significance. It was viewed, not so much as a punishment of sin, but as a symbol of the expression of sin's presence and triumph. Beyond other, or alone among, diseases, leprosy was the chosen symbol of moral defilement. It was a visible manifestation of sin. The spiritual eye of a wilful or degenerate race was too dull to discover the stain and wound which moral evil leaves upon a spiritual being; but a loathsome disease might inflict this lesson in moral truth upon man's sluggish or reluctant senses. From physical evil which man did see, he might learn something about moral evil which he did not see. And this leprosy was the outward sign of an inward curse. It was, so to put it, a sacrament of moral death; and, accordingly, the leper was bidden by the ancient law to bear about on him the emblems of the dead. His garments were rent, as if in mourning for his dead self. His head was bare, as was the wont of those who held converse with the dead. His lip was covered. He could only be legally cleansed with the cedar wood, the hyssop, and the scarlet, as those who had been defiled by contact with a corpse.

To this physical and religious misery there was added another—a social one. The leper was banished from the companionship which might have soothed, if it could not cure, his pain. He was put out of the camp, or city, or village, which had been his home, even when the disease was not yet proved, and when the suspected mark might turn out to be purely innocent. A seclusion of seven days, and, under certain circumstances, of seven days more, from the communion of the confederate people, was sternly prescribed by the ancient law; and, when leprosy had been proved, influence and station, however exalted, could do nothing to avert or to mitigate the sentence. Miriam, the sister of the great lawgiver himself, was thrust without the camp. Uzziah, king though he was, must dwell in a separate house till the day of his death. And this was in part, no doubt, a sanitary precaution. Whether based upon popular apprehensions, or on an accurate estimate of the contagious nature of the disease, I do not now inquire; but it was much more due to the religious estimate of leprosy which was current in ancient Israel. The leper was a living emblem of that sin which no mere human healer can cure or expel—of that sin which excludes from the camp or city of God—that everlasting city into which, as we know, "there shall in no wise enter anything that defileth."

It was in our Lord's last journey towards Jerusalem, on the frontier of Galilee and Samaria, that He saw, on the road towards a village which is not named, ten lepers. They might not come near the gates, as being tainted with the fatal disease—as lying under the ban of God. They kept together in a band, endeavouring, no doubt, to find in each other's company some solace for their sufferings, for their sense of humiliation and disgust, for their exclusion—their forced exclusion—from the civil and religious life of their countrymen.

Misfortune makes strange associates, and of these lepers one was a Samaritan. Illness, too, will make men think of God who have never thought of Him before; and as our Lord passed along the way, He drew the attention of these poor outcasts to Him. Conscious of their misery, they stood afar off, and yet, even if nothing came of it, they must appeal to Him. They might—it was possible—they might have heard that one of the distinctive features of His work among men was that the lepers were cleansed. They might have heard that He had commissioned His representatives not merely to heal the sick, but specifically to cleanse the lepers. They had, no doubt, an indistinct idea that He was, in some sense, the Healer of mankind; and so, as He passed, they lifted up their voices in agony, and said, "Jesus, Master, have mercy on us."

This prayer was, in itself, an act of faith; and, as such, our Lord at once tested it. There they were, all the ten, covered with leprosy, but He bade them do that which already implied that they were perfectly cleansed. They were to take a long journey, which would have been a waste of labour unless they could believe that He could make it worth their while to take it. "Go," He said, "show yourselves to the priests." To go to the priests for inspection, unless they were healed, would only have led to a repetition of their sentence as proved lepers; and, therefore, after His sermon on the mount, our Lord had first healed a single leper, and then had sent him to undergo the prescribed inspection. Here it must have perplexed them sorely. Here He does nothing for them at the moment. He bids them go in their uncleanliness, as if they were already cleansed. Could they trust Him? That was the question. Could they trust Him sufficiently to make the venture—to obey when obedience, for the moment, seemed irrational, in firm persuasion that obedience would be justified by the event? Yes, they took Him at His word They set out for Jerusalem, a distant journey along an unwelcome road: but, lo, as they went, and, as it would seem, before they could have gone far, a change was already upon them. They looked around, each one at the other—each at himself. They saw that an unseen power was there, cleansing them—they knew not how—of the foul disease, restoring to them the freshness and purity of their childish years. "As they went, they were cleansed." It was in the act of obedience that they obtained the blessing. It was by assuming that our Lord could not fail, that they found Him faithful.

They were all of them cleansed—all the ten; but, like Naaman, the Syrian leper, returning with his blessing for the man of God, one of them thought that something was due to the Author of so signal a deliverance. He left the others to pursue their onward course. He left them to claim, at the hands of the priests, their restoration to the civil and religious life of Israel. He left them: he could not do otherwise. He left them. He turned back, and with a loud voice glorified God, and then he threw himself at the feet of his Deliverer, to thank Him for this act of mercy and of power. And our Lord blessed him once more in another and a higher way. A greater possession far than that even of freedom from leprosy was assured to this poor Samaritan in the parting words. "Thy faith hath made thee whole." But ere He did this, our Lord uttered the exclamation, "Were there not ten cleansed? but where are the nine? There are not found that returned to give glory to God, save this stranger."

My brethren, He who knew what was in man, and who had already tasted so much of human ingratitude, could not have been surprised at the conduct of the nine lepers. But He calls attention to it as having, like His own merciful act itself, a typical value. The averages of gratitude and ingratitude among men do not vary much from age to age; and what here took place on a small scale would reappear, he knew full well, again and again, in the history of Christendom and of the world. Of Christians, it is probably true at this moment—literally true—that about ten per cent. are grateful to God for His mercies in nature and in grace, and ninety per cent. are more or less conspicuously wanting in anything that can be properly termed gratitude. And if this, or anything like it, be the true state of the case, it is a fact which certainly deserves attentive consideration; for want of gratitude towards Jesus Christ on the part of a Christian seems, at first sight, quite inexplicable, for gratitude is a natural virtue. Man is capable of gratitude, even in some of its highest forms, without the grace of Christ at all. Plato could thank the gods that he was a man first, then a Greek, then an Athenian: last, that he had been born in the age of Socrates. Seneca could write to his benefactor—"I know that I cannot adequately thank you, but I shall not cease to say that I cannot." Not merely civilized, but barbarous, human nature is capable of the courtesies and of the self-sacrifice of true gratitude. Nay; there have been remarkable traces of it among the lower creatures. Every one has heard of the lion who refused to touch a Christian when the latter was exposed to the beasts in the amphitheatre, because he recognised the friend who had once tended his wound in the cavern of the desert. And for us Christians, how overwhelming are the motives to gratitude! The number, the magnificence, the practical value of the blessings which we receive from God, through Jesus Christ our Lord, conspire, with our sense of His love and His generosity, to make gratitude, one would think, strictly inevitable. And yet, as if anticipating what would be the real state of the case, Scripture insists, with great copiousness and fervour, upon what might have been, we should have thought, taken for granted. "When ye have eaten and are full," says Moses, "ye shall bless the Lord your God." "What shall I render to the Lord," says David, "for all the benefits that He hath done unto me? I will receive the cup of salvation, and will call upon the name of the Lord." "In everything give thanks," says St. Paul, "for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you." "Whatsoever ye Colossians do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by Him." "Be careful, you Philippians, for nothing; but in everything, by prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving, let your requests be made known unto God." "Let the peace of God dwell in your hearts, and be ye thankful." "I exhort, therefore, that first of all," he writes t Timothy, "supplications, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks, be made for all men." These are but a few of the passages which might be quoted, and their number shows how much, in the mind and judgment of the Holy Spirit, such precepts would be needed in the days to come. Whether they are needed or not, my brethren, is a question for your consciences and for mine—a question on which it does not seem necessary to enter at v ry great length.

Of the unthankfulness which so seriously depresses and blights our whole modern Christian life, one reason, in many cases, is that we do not see our great Benefactor. I do not forget that some of us may feel true gratitude to those human friends who have been kind to us in past years and who are now out of sight. But take men in the mass, and it is quite otherwise. Little by little, as the years pass, too many of us forget the benefits that we owe to the dead. The pressure, the importunity, of the present and of the seen makes us overlook the great debt of thought and love which we owe to the past and the unseen. There is a cynical proverb—one of those proverbs in which our poor human nature passes such stern judgment upon itself—"Out of sight, out of mind."

In the miracle before us, you will remember, the lepers were still uncleansed when they left our Lord that, in obedience to His command, they might show themselves to the priests. When the miracle was wrought upon them, the Worker was out of sight. He would have walked on towards the village: and they, avoiding the village in obedience to the law, were pursuing their way towards Jerusalem. Yes, at that moment of awe and blessing they did not see Him. No shadowy form hovered around them to remind them that He was present in power to bless and heal them. No word like the "I will: be thou clean," which had heal'ed the leper at Capernaum two years before, now fell upon their ears. No hand was raised over them in felt benediction; and yet, minute by minute, the foul disease upon them was disappearing—when, or how, they could not exactly tell—and at last they saw—they could not doubt it—they saw that they were healed, but the Healer Himself they did not see. As now in His Church, so then He was out of sight, even when His action was most felt and energetic. His words still lingered in their ears; but it was not impossible, amid the distractions of a new scene, to forget their import; and thus, out of the ten men, nine actually did forget it.

Now what is this but a sample of what passes in our daily life? Numbers know what it is to have recovered from illness, perhaps very serious illness God, by His providence, has directed us to use means which might assist—which could not insure—recovery. We have recovered, and now we proceed to account for our recovery. "It was a good constitution," we say, "that carried us through;" or, "It was a skilful change of treatment just at the crisis of the illness;" or, "It was a change in the weather;" or, "It was a change of air." Now, if this were not intended to be a complete account of the matter—if it was remembered that weather, clime, medical skill, strength of constitution, are all instruments in the hands of a supreme Agent, and that, ever mindful of His agency, we are merely describing the particular instrument which He has selected to carry out His purpose, then no harm would be done, but do we not too often stop short at the secondary or immediate cause of our recovery, and altogether forget the first cause? We see the secondary cause: the first, or real, cause we do not see, and we are so largely the slaves of sense that the horizon of our view becomes the measure of our gratitude. Alas! brethren, how do we thus turn God's loving generosity against Himself. Unlike those vulgar benefactors who insist upon being recognised while they dispense their bounties, God, generally speaking, hides His hand. He acts through laws which seem to operate spontaneously. He acts through agents who are, at the moment, perfectly free and self-determining. He conceals Himself behind the vast processes of nature, behind the slow movements of history, behind the clouds of heaven, till, at last, we conceive of the world, of the universe, as going on without Him—without Him, its sole Author, its absolute Lord. His generous self-concealment is taken for a forced inactivity, and, of those who still believe Him to have been the Author of all that is not Himself, too many think of Him as men now-a-days think of those old builders of schools and colleges, who have left their great foundations to later ages, and are powerless to exert any control over their handiwork. Thus God's very generosity only provokes our thanklessness. He keeps out of sight, and we take it for granted that He would show Himself if He could—that His agency is only invisible, because it is shadowy or unreal. Oh, singular perversity of our fallen nature, which is thus bound down and enslaved in its captivity to sense that we forget God our Saviour, chiefly because He is too loving to overwhelm us at once with the sense of what we owe to Him!

And a second cause of unthankfulness is our imperfect appreciation of God's gifts. No doubt, while the nine lepers were covered with their foul disease, placed under a social and religious ban, excluded from the society of their countrymen, they would have thought that no blessing in life could possibly compare with that of being cured of leprosy. But what did they think after the cure had been wrought? Too probably, something like this—that health was no such peculiar blessing, after all, since health, when they looked around, was shared by multitudes. In being free from leprosy, they were, after all, only like the great majority of their countrymen. Why should they become enthusiastic over a condition of things which was not the exception, but the rule? And is not this the temper of many Christians now-a-days? We are not—I admit it—we are not incapable of gratitude. We can rouse ourselves to acknowledge signal and extraordinary blessings. The one survivor from a wreck or in a railway catastrophe, can still say, "Thank God!" with unaffected sincerity. But why should he thank God for benefits which he shares with all the world?—for existence, for preservation, for life, for food, for strength, for the use of reason, for friends, for home, and the like? He does not say that he ought not to be thankful for these things: he secretly thinks to himself that his gratitude will be somehow vulgarized, if it is lavished upon these every-day gifts. Had God given less, or had He given what He gives less indiscriminately, He would, it appears, have been thanked more warmly and more frequently than He is.

And this same feeling is sometimes applied even to the blessings of grace and redemption. All our lives we have heard of God's "inestimable love in the redemption of the world through our Lord Jesus Christ," of "the means of grace," and of "the hope of glory" beyond this world. We think so little of it, it may be, because this blessing is in its scope so vast and so inclusive. If the eternal Son of God had redeemed us and none others,—if, instead of willing all men to be saved and to come to the knowledge of the truth, He had made a very select few—ourselves among the rest—objects of His exceptional love, then, we think, it had been otherwise; but when His love is as diffused as the rays of the sun in heaven—when He opens His arms upon the cross to all the families of mankind, and bids any who will to drink of the water of life freely, men ask, "Why should we individually dissolve into ecstasies of gratitude in acknowledgment of blessings which are the portion, confessedly, of countless multitudes?"

This estimate of a blessing which takes little account of it, unless it be a rarity, like hot-house fruit or flowers in mid-winter, or in the early spring, is not—believe me, brethren—is not really due to a high ideal of excellence which will see the great only in the unwonted. Its true source is that dulness, that harshness, of spiritual perception which health and prosperity too often inflict upon the soul. We cannot see clearly through the thick film which has thus been formed over the spiritual eye. If we did, how impossible it would be to forget that God could not, without being untrue to His own glorious perfections, mete out His love and sympathy in the narrow measure which, it seems, would earn our gratitude. If we did see, we should own, with full and thankful hearts, that love is love, blessings are blessings, salvation is salvation, whether we share them with the many or with the few. The deliverance of the lepers was not the less signal because the health to which they were restored was the portion of the great majority of their countrymen; nor was their gratitude less due because, in another form, it was due from thousands of Israelites.

And a third reason in many minds against cultivating and expressing thankfulness to God—(men do not mention it)—is the utilitarian one. Men do not see—if they said out what they think—do not see the good of thankfulness. The value of prayer, of course, in Christian eyes is plain enough. Christians believe that certain blessings are to be obtained from God by the instrumentality of prayer; and not to pray is to forfeit the blessings which prayer obtains. "But thankfulness," men say to themselves—"what does it win for us that is not already ours without it? Man already enjoys that for which he gives thanks, and God surely does not want our thanks as if they were a sort of equivalent for His bounty. He blesses us out of the joy of doing so; and whether we thank Him or not must be of small concern to such a being as He is." Certainly, my brethren, God does not expect to be repaid for His benevolence by any equivalent in the way of thanksgiving that you or I can possibly offer Him. And yet He will have us thank Him, not for His own sake, but for ours. He, enthroned in His uncreated perfections, He loses—can lose—nothing, though we, to our loss, should forget Him altogether. But we cannot be wanting to the great duty of thankfulness without being untrue to the very fundamental law of our existence—without the worst results upon ourselves. For what is thankfulness, such as God demands? What is it but that which is at the bottom of all real human excellence—the frank acknowledgment of truth? Just as prayer is the recognition of our dependence upon God amid the darkness and uncertainties of the future, so thankfulness is the recognition of our indebtedness to God for the blessings of the past. And to acknowledge truth like this is always moral strength: to refuse to acknowledge truth like this is always moral weakness. Accordingly, the worst excesses of the heathen world are traced by St. Paul up to the ingratitude of the Gentile nations for the light of nature and of conscience. "When they knew God, they glorified Him not as God, neither were thankful, but became vain in their imaginations, and their foolish heart was darkened." And, in the same strain, all the later apostasy and misery of Israel is referred, in the prophetic song of Moses, to the original vice of forgetting what God had done for that favoured people. "God had found Israel," says the lawgiver, "in a desert and in the waste howling wilderness. He led him about; He instructed him; He kept him as the apple of His eye. As an eagle stirreth up her nest, fluttereth over her young, spreadeth abroad her wings, taketh them, beareth them on her wings, so the Lord alone did lead him, and there was no strange god with him. He made him ride on the high places of the earth, that he might eat the increase of the fields; and He make him to suck honey out of the rock, and oil out of the flinty rock." But, then, after all, looking across the centuries, Moses thus addresses the degenerate race: "Of the Rock that begat thee thou art unmindful, and hast forgotten God that formed thee." And then he utters, in the Divine name, the prophetical sentence, "And he said, I will hide my face from them. I will heap mischiefs upon them; I will spend mine arrows upon them." And then he adds, in yearning love, "Oh, that they were wise, that they understood this, that they would consider their latter end!"

And this law is not the less true of individual Christians and of Christendom. Nations, Churches, men, who forget their one great Benefactor, are in a sure way to ruin, temporally and eternally. God cannot be forgotten with impunity. Thankfulness, like the rivers which flow into the ocean, and which are again replenished from it—thankfulness is the source of new blessings to the soul. Only in thankful hearts is the Christian life securely maintained, and to that life it contributes three important results.

It first of all stimulates us most powerfully to active well-doing. A man will do, out of gratitude, more—much more—than he will do out of fear or out of hope of reward. Thankfulness for redemption was the motive power of a life like that of St. Paul, as it has been the motive power of all the greatest and most fruitful lives that have been lived in Christendom. "He died for all, that they which live should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto Him that died for them and rose again"—this is the motto of all such lives. Gratitude, like love, lives not in words, but in deed and in truth. Often those who feel most what has been done for them say least about it; but they do most. Gratitude can work; gratitude can suffer; gratitude can persevere: but one thing gratitude—for the inestimable love of God in the redemption of the world by our Lord Jesus Christ—one thing gratitude cannot do: it cannot bring itself to feel that it has done enough. It cannot in this world lie down with a sense that it has really paid off its debt to the Redeemer.

And again, gratitude makes worship, especially public worship, real, serious, reverent. Praise is the very soul of the Church's worship, and praise is the voice of thankfulness. The first object, we are told twice every day, which makes us Christians assemble and meet together, is that they may render thanks for the great benefits which they have received at the hands of God. And these thanks are expressed in the greater number of the psalms, in the hymns, in the canticles, in the Te Deum beyond, perhaps, other hymns—(Who but the thankful can possibly understand such a psalm as that?)—above all, in the holy sacrament, on that very account named by the first Christians the eucharist, wherein, to use the words of our Prayer-Book, we entirely desire God's Fatherly goodness mercifully to accept this our sacrifice of praise and thanksgiving. It has been said that our public worship would be much less unworthy of Him to whom it is addressed if, before beginning, each Christian would think exactly what he most needs to obtain by prayer at the hands of God. It may be said, with at least equal truth, that this improvement, so much to be desired, would be secured if we all of us had more of the spirit of the one leper in the Gospel, and less of the spirit of the nine,—if each act of worship could be a conscious turning back on the road of life, to fall at the Redeemer's feet and give Him thanks for the incalculable blessings of pardon and of grace which those who know anything about him—anything about themselves—know that He, and He alone, has won for them.

And, lastly, thankfulness here on earth is the best possible preparation for the spirit and for the life of heaven. Heaven is the home of thankful souls. The occupations of heaven would be misery to those who feel not gratitude. "Blessing, and honour, and wisdom, and thanksgiving, and power, and glory, and might, be unto our God for ever and ever." "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power, and wisdom, and riches, and strength, and honour, and glory, and blessing." How shall we sing those songs, or any of the songs of the redeemed, hereafter, if here and now we do not learn their spirit? If the habits which are being formed by us in this life will be carried by each of us into the eternal world, how earnestly should we pray God to give us that "due sense of all His mercies, that our hearts may be unfeignedly thankful, and that we show forth His praise, not only with our lips, but in our lives, by giving ourselves to His service," to whom, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, be ascribed all honour, power, might, majesty, and dominion, henceforth and for ever!

To him give all the prophets witness, that through his name whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins.—Acts x, 43.

There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man: but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it.—1 Cor. x, 13.

But the wicked are like the troubled sea, when it cannot rest, whose waters cast up mire and dirt. There is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked.—Is. lvii, 20, 21.

Simon, Simon, behold, Satan hath desired to have you, that he may sift you as wheat: But I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not, and when thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren. Luke xxii, 31, 32.

THOSE COMPLAINT CARDS.

No announcement has been given out by the Department of Highways as to the extent with which the public is making use of the new complaint cards to report cases of reckless driving, but apparently there is no local demand for the forms.

It is not because there are not frequent opportunities to use them, but evidently because of the reluctance of most people to act in the role of an informer, no matter how much justification there may be for so acting.

The department expected that careful drivers would be willing to co-operate in putting the dangerous motorists out of business, but there are no indications as yet that the desired co-operation is forthcoming.

THE COMMUNITY SHOULD RESPOND.

The Council of Women, in making an appeal for a foundation fund, of which Peterborough is asked to contribute $1,000, has most assuredly given evidence of its value as a public-spirited public service organization.

The citizens of Peterborough have had a chance to watch the work of the Local Council for the past fifteen years, and they know that the organization is responsible for many things that have helped to make Peterborough a better city in which to live.

The Examiner has mentioned some of these in previous articles, but by no means covered the whole record of the Local Council.

For example, the organization originated the Home and School Associations that have done so much to bring parents and teachers closer together and facilitate the work of the schools.

In a score of ways the Local Council has served the community well, and out of sheer gratitude the community should respond by quickly contributing Peterborough's share of the national foundation fund.

THE Y.M.C.A. CAMPAIGN.

The Y.M.C.A. membership campaign deserves to be a complete success, not only because of the enthusiasm and energy displayed by the canvassing teams, but because of the obvious benefits that are to be gained through membership in the association.

The Y.M.C.A. offers much to the boys and men of Peterborough, an opportunity for a three-sided development that should be welcome to many who have not yet allied themselves with the institution.

The facilities of the Y.M.C.A. should be used to a greater degree by more men and boys in the city.

They afford a chance for wholesome recreation, physical training, social contacts, education and other advantages that are much more than full value for the cost of the annual membership fee.

Business men could do much worse than take advantage of the special gymnasium classes arranged for the purpose of keeping them fit physically for the everyday grind.

And fathers should welcome the chance to have their boys benefit through the many advantages offered by the Y.M.C.A.

FIRE PREVENTION WEEK.

In connection with Fire Prevention Week, which is to be observed throughout Canada next week, the proclamation issued by the Governor-General calls upon citizens generally to carry out the following recommendations, which are repeated here because of their importance:

1. All dwellings and their surroundings be carefully inspected by their occupants and all conditions likely to cause or promote the spread of fires removed.

2. All public buildings, stores, warehouses and factories be inspected and cleaned of rubbish in order to reduce fire hazards and maintain health and safety.

3. All hotels, theatres, asylums, hospitals and other institutional buildings be inspected and provision made for all changes necessary to protect the occupants from danger in the event of fire.

4. Fire drills be held for the children in all schools, for the inmates of all institutions and for the employees in all large stores and factories in order that a greater degree of safety may be ensured by acquainting the occupants with the best and most expeditious mode of exit in time of danger.

5. Special instruction on the subject of fire prevention be given by the teachers and by municipal officials in the schools and that such appropriate literature as may be made available be distributed to the pupils.

6. Boy Scout leaders give instructions to the troops under their control as to the best means of co-operating with municipal fire departments in the prevention and extinguishment of fires and especially as to the desirability of qualifying for the fireman's badge.

7. All legislation and regulations enacted or issued by Dominion, provincial or municipal authorities dealing with fire prevention be given publicity by the municipal officials and that by public meetings or otherwise as may to them seem most fit, they endeavour to impress upon the citizens the national importance of safeguarding life and property from loss by fire.

THE DEVIL'S SICKNESS.

George Lansbury, British member of Parliament, and president of the Labor party of Great Britain, made an important avowal in his presidential address at the annual conference of the party at Birmingham, when he repudiated Communism.

Many British Labor M.P.'s have given the Soviet Government the cold shoulder. On the face of things, it would not seem to matter much that one more has been added to the number, but the case of Mr. Lansbury is different.

For years he has been the bad boy of the Labor forces in the House. He defied the Speaker more than once in the days before the wild men from the Clyde turned the Mother of Parliaments into a bear-garden. He has suffered suspension from the House, his views were far in advance of any other man in that assembly since the days of Keir Hardie, he led nearly all the violent scenes that occurred there in the few years preceding the Great War, and after the war he espoused the Communist movement with his whole heart.

He visited Russia in the early days of the Soviet Government when it was murdering its intellectuals by the thousand, and, unlike his fellow Labor friend, the Rt. Hon. Philip Snowden, he came back an enthusiast for the Soviet system.

And now he has publicly recanted. He has swallowed his words, and it is not likely that he runs contrary to the feeling of the branch of the Labor movement with which he has been identified for years.

Mr. Lansbury's pronouncement will reverberate loudly in Moscow. To him and to the Labor party the Soviet looked for the propagation of Soviet principles in England and the subversion of the British workers.

Why this reversal of policy?

No doubt it is due to the recent smashing decision of the larger and much more important labor body, the Independent Labor party, to have no truck with Soviet Russia, a vote confirming with overwhelming force several other decisions of a like kind during the last two or three years.

George Lansbury sees the writing on the wall. He sees that he and his supporters stand for a policy that is alien to the feeling of the vast majority of British workers, and that so long as he stands for such a policy, neither he nor the Labor party will amount to a hill of beans. When the Devil was sick, the Devil a saint would be.

The decision cuts from the Moscow Government the last vestige of any hope they may have cherished of making headway in Great Britain.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

WEATHER STUDENTS CAN WATCH THESE.

Dr. W. J. Humphreys of the Weather Bureau at Washington and one of the most expert meteorologists on the continent, believes in some of the old weather sayings as being relatively true in their forecasts. He does not accept all, but names a few which are fairly reliable guides. In these days many people learn about the next day's weather over the radio, while the newspaper is the common medium and is sought by thousands for the weather reports.

The first of the following rimes might have found verification in the last ten days in our own neighborhood. There was rain last week but there was no dew on the early morning grass. Monday morning there was a very heavy dew, and Monday was an extremely fine day. The verse reads:

"When the grass is dry at morning light,
Look for rain before the night.
When the dew is on the grass,
Rain will never come to pass."

Grass acts as a condenser of the moisture in the air only when the night has been clear and still, a condition likely to be found only during a spell of fine weather. If there is no dew in the morning it is almost certain that the sky was overcast in the night, or that there was a wind, or both. The clouded sky and the rising wind are signs of a rainstorm within a few hours.

Dr. Humphreys finds some value but less certainty in:

"A rainbow in the morning
Is the shepherd's warning;
A rainbow at night
Is the shepherd's delight."

This suggests the better-known doggerel which many observers have found by experience to be a good guide:

"Red sky in the morning—
Sailor's warning;
Red sky at night—
Sailor's delight."

Another rime Dr. Humphreys labels "a fair guess." It is:

"If the sun sets in grey
The next will be a rainy day."

It would be interesting to seek his opinion as to the rime about St. Swithin's Day, the belief being common that if it rains on that day it will rain for forty days, and there are old people who declare it is true, not having kept note of the exceptions from the rule laid down in the doggerel.

What makes people discuss the weather, prognosticate and comment on it? Nothing but the uncertainty of the elements, and we have not yet arrived at the stage where science can tell any length of time ahead what the weather will be like.—St. Catharines Standard.

A Thought

YOU AND YOUR TOWN

If you had a horse that you wanted to sell, you wouldn't go about town talking about its bad points. If you did, you wouldn't be likely to sell it.

What would you think of a merchant who made a practice of standing in front of his store telling all the passers by that his goods were shoddy and not worth much? You would probably say he is a fool, and you would be right.

Now this town in which you live is your town; your business is here, your job is here, your property is here. Do you think that you are going to make your business any better or add to the value of your property by standing around and roaring about what a rotten town it is.

As a matter of fact, every time you run down your town, you are hurting your own property. Even though you have no pride in your community, you ought to have sense enough not to injure your own interests.

If you want your business to be better, if you want your property to increase in value, if you want to live in a better town, forget your grouch, and begin to talk for your town instead of running it down.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

TORONTO, Oct. 6.—Another good sized run of cattle was on the market this week. The quality of Monday's receipts was fair, but only choice finished cattle seemed to have any preference by buyers. Fat cattle remained steady all week, but medium and common were draggy.

A few choice heavy cattle reached $11. The bulk sold between $10.25 and $10.75. Heavy rough steers brought $9.50 to $10.

Choice handyweight steers, $10 to $10.50; heifers of choice type, $10 to $10.50. Most of the market were common cattle and ranged between $8 to $9.25.

Buyers of baby beeves bought choice at $14 to $15. Demand was good for them. Medium sell at $11 to $12.

Choice springers $100 to $125, with an odd fancy higher. Outside buyers were on the market and created a better feeling. Fresh choice milkers $80 to $90. Common hard to sell.

Feeder steers weighing 1,000 lbs. sold $10 cwt. Feeling was decidedly easier. Common type yearling heifers are very slow at $8 to $8.50.

Trade on calves remained steady all week. A large number of heavy calves was received, and buyers were not keen to take them unless at lower prices. Choice veal brought $15 to $15.50. Fancy sold at $16. Heavy calves sell between $8 and $10.

Lambs dropped from $12.50 on Monday to $11.75 which was the closing price for choice. Bucks are now cut $2 per cwt. Cull lambs bring $9 to $10.

Hogs are receiving pressure. Week-end bids are out at $10 f.o.b. selects. This is $1 cwt lower than Monday's sales.

Receipts for week: Cattle, 7,023; calves, 1,563; hogs, 2,500; sheep, 5,889.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Oct. 6 (Canadian Press).—There was a better demand from the Continent for grain here yesterday and sales of Manitoba wheat was fair, while quite a few loads of barley were worked, and some American oats, with the result that the market was more active than for some days past.

A feature of the local cash grain market was the improved demand from exporters, and sales of some round lots of Manitoba feed barley were made at five cents per bushel over the Winnipeg October option, and odd loads of No. 4 barley at 10¼ cents per bushel over, c.i.f. Montreal, while several loads of American No. 2 clipped oats weighing 36 lbs per bushel were sold at 8¼ cents per bushel over the Chicago December option, f.o.b. Montreal. The car lot trade was good and the tone of the market for wheat was stronger at a further advance of one cent per bushel. Sales of Manitoba No. 5 wheat were made at $1.16, No. 6 wheat at $1.07, feed wheat at $1.04, Argentine corn at $1.07, American corn at $1.03, Manitoba feed barley at 80c.

A stronger feeling developed in the market for winter wheat flour and prices were advanced ten cents per barrel. The spring wheat flour trade was active and firm.

Price for all lines of millfeed were advanced $1 per ton. This was attributed for the increasing demand and the small receipts available. There was no change in standard grades of rolled oats.

The demand for fresh and storage eggs was fair and prices were firm. The receipts were 344 cases.

A moderate amount of business was worked in imported beans at unchanged prices.

The butter market was moderately active and the undertone was firm. The receipts were 660 packages.

The trade in cheese showed some improvement, but the undertone continued easy. The receipts were 9,015 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Oct. 6 (Canadian Press).—Corn prices finished at the topmost level which any future delivery has touched since last July. Incidentally, quotations for corn to be delivered March and May next were at a new high record for the 1928 crop. Aggressive buying on the part of commission houses went hand in hand with the advances, current receipts of corn were scanty here and throughout the West, and further export business in corn was in evidence at the seaboard.

Closing figures on oats and rye as well as corn were strong at new high prices for the season, corn showing 1 cent to 1⅜ cents net advance; oats ⅝ to ⅞ cents gain, rye 1⅛ to 1⅜ cents rise, and wheat ⅛ to ¼ cent up. Provisions were unchanged to 90 cents down.

Despite a wave of profit-taking sales in the final hour, the corn market scored a quick rally when buying was renewed on the transient declines which were witnessed. Causes for the late strength included reports that rural offerings of corn to arrive here were being withdrawn, and that corn available for immediate use at Kansas City was in some cases 3½ cents a bushel higher than Thursday. Arrivals of corn in Chicago yesterday totaled but 46 cars, and other important centres were advising of in-

Looks and Acts like a Costly Car

because it's built like a costly car

The only Essex point in common with cars in its price field—is price. There is little in either appearance or performance to distinguish it from many a costlier car.

In size, it possesses the advantage of compactness without sacrifice of passenger quarters or riding comfort. It steers as easily as any car you have ever driven. There is a quickness and nimbleness in its motor action that will make some costlier cars you have driven seem slow and sluggish. These qualities are lasting.

Many exclusive and patented features contribute to these Essex advantages—among them being its high-compression Super-Six motor, which to our belief is the most powerful and efficient automobile motor of its size in the world . . . Won't you examine and drive the Essex, whether as a prospective buyer or as one interested in knowing why it is the choice car in its price field as proved by sales?

In Five Million Homes Tonight

What will happen in your household tonight if Baby can't sleep, and won't stop crying? It may be serious, if you've only medicines meant for grown-ups. You needn't worry, if you have a bottle of Castoria. A few drops, and the little one is comforted; a few moments, and all is serene once more. Yet you have given nothing but a vegetable product which doctors approve for the tiniest babies. Just a gentle, soothing preparation the very taste of which tells you it is harmless.

Castoria is always a boon in the home where there are children of any age; for the little everyday ills, fretful spells, or any upset. And a blessing when a sudden attack of colic or acute constipation demands relief. Never be without Castoria; some mothers keep an extra bottle put away. Buy yours now, and have it always ready. But don't regard it as something you must save for emergencies. It is one thing a mother may use freely, as often as needed. A safe and sensible form of comfort for any baby, or twenty-five million bottles would not have been bought last year!

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 7.
WOR Newark (422.3)

A musical event which will be watched with intense interest will be the performance by the Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Willem Mengelberg, of Bernard Wagenaar's "First Symphony" over WOR at 3 o'clock on Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Wagenaar, a New York composer, worked for six years on the score which is cast in conventional sonata form. Its rendition will be its world premiere.

The composer was born at Arnheim, Holland, in 1894 and has been in New York since 1920. From the time of his arrival here he has played at dances, at the Plaza Motion Picture Theatre, at the Plaza Hotel and with the Philharmonic Orchestra. He is now teaching harmony, counterpoint and composition at the Institute of Musical Art.

This is Mr. Wagenaar's first symphonic composition although his songs and works for the piano and stringed instruments have been heard. The symphony takes about half an hour to perform and is in four movements, a prologue (adagio) followed without pause by an allegro, then a scherzo and epilogue. There is no program and no dominating key.

The Philharmonic program follows:
Overture Coriolanus.....Beethoven
First Symphony ..Bernard Wagenaar
Divertimento (Kochel 205)....Mozart
"Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Prank" Strauss
3.00 p.m.—Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra.

UNCLE WIGGILY

By HOWARD R. GARIS

Five-days Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY'S ROAST APPLES

(Copyright, 1928, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Come on, Daddicums! Come on!" shouted Tingle dancing around the hollow stump bungalow.

"Get up, Daddicums! Get up!" sang Tangle, also dancing around the hollow stump bungalow.

"My goodness! What's all this?" asked Uncle Wiggily, who was sleeping late that morning on account of having been to the movies the night before. "What's the matter?"

"This is Saturday," said Jingle, another little rabbit child.

"And you promised to take us to the woods, build a fire and help us roast apples," said Jangle, who was still another little bunny.

"O, so I did! I had almost forgotten," said Mr. Longears. So he put on his pink, twinkling nose—excuse me, I mean he put on his red, white and blue clothes—slid down the banister railing to breakfast and soon he was ready to take his forty twelve bunny boys and girls to the woods for a little picnic. Baby Bunty was in the party, so that made the forty twelve.

"Do you think we'll find any apples to roast?" asked Bumble, as he hopped along beside his father.

"Oh, yes," said Mr. Longears. "Look out now! Be careful! Oh, there you go!" he cried, and Stumble, who was Bumble's brother, tripped over a shadow on the ground and fell. But luckily he struck his nose in a bunch of soft grass, so he wasn't hurt. Stumble was always falling, it seemed. If a toothpick lay on the ground in front of him he would trip over that. Or even a shadow might make him fall. But he never got hurt.

"Upsie daisy!" cried Uncle Wiggily as Stumble bobbed to his feet.

Pretty soon Uncle Wiggily and his party of rabbit boys and girls came to a farm where there were many apple trees. The apples were just getting ripe now and the kind farmer had left many of them on the ground for the rabbits, squirrels and birds to eat.

"Gather the apples, bring them over here and they will soon be roasting," called Uncle Wiggily, who was building a fire in a little stove he had made out of flat stones.

Tingle, Tangle, Jingle, Jangle and all the other rabbits, as well as Baby Bunty, gathered apples and soon they were sizzling in the hot fire, sending out a most lovely, hungry smell.

"But what are we going to use for plates and knives and forks to eat the apples after they are roasted?" asked Jingle.

"Get some pieces of tree bark for plates," her father said. "For knives and forks use pointed sticks."

So the little bunnies scurried around and soon each one had a bark plate and a stick knife and fork.

"What shall we use for a table after the apples are roasted?" asked Baby Bunty.

"That flat stump will do nicely for a table," said Uncle Wiggily, and he pointed to a stump not far from the roasting apple fire.

Pretty soon the apples were toasted to a lovely brown and were soft and mushy, all ready to eat. Mr. Longears took them out of the fire one by one on the end of a long, pointed stick and laid them on a big piece of white birch bark which was like a platter. As soon as the hot roasted apples cooled a bit he was going to hand them around to the boys and girls.

But all of a sudden a noise was heard and Tingle cried:

"I see a Bear coming!"

"It is only my friend, Mr. Whitewash, the kind Polar Bear," said Uncle Wiggily, and along ambled Mr. Whitewash.

"Oh, ho! A picnic!" roared Mr. Whitewash. 'How lovely!" and he sat down on a stump. And then, pretty soon, Mr. Whitewash said: "Whew! How hot it is getting all of a sudden! I thought winter was coming, but I guess summer hasn't gone yet! My! I'm so warm!" and he fanned himself with one of his big paws.

"Warm! Hot!" cried Uncle Wiggily. "No wonder! You have sat down on the platter of hot, roast apples. Oh, dear me!" and how Uncle Wiggily laughed. So did the bunny boys and girls.

"Oh, I beg your pardon!" roared Mr. Whitewash, jumping off the hot apples. "Ha! Ha! No wonder I felt warm!"

But the apples weren't much harmed by being sat on and they were now cool enough to eat, so everybody had some, even the Polar Bear, and the picnic was jolly good fun.

XLV—"COME BACK TO ME!"

"There's nothing to wait for," Sanderson said again. He came to a standstill beside Sally, and looked down at her quivering face.

"Are you afraid of me, Sally?" he demanded.

"No, no!"

"I swear I'll be good to you."

"You've never been anything else, Philip."

"Why don't you looked pleased, then?"

"Don't I? I'm sorry. I—of course I am pleased."

Sanderson laughed bitterly.

"Delighted, I should think, by the look of you!" Then his mood suddenly changed. "Don't take any notice of what I say. I'm a rough brute. I'm sorry if I startled you, but to-morrow week is as good as any other day. I've fixed it all up. We'll be married in London. I've got a special license."

"Didn't it cost a lot?" Sally asked tremulously, with a sudden exciting recollection of a girl-friend who had danced at the Fawn Cafe and been married by special license to the young son of a nobleman.

Sanderson did not answer. He could not shake off his feeling of disappointment at the way in which Sally had received his news.

"All my fault, I suppose," he thought. "I'm a blundering ox. Any other fellow would have done it a thousand times better."

But presently Sally was smiling and quite herself again, admiring her new watch and the diamond ring.

"I've never had such lovely presents in my life!" she said. She called to Sometimes to come and see her new treasures, and pretended to be highly indignant when Sometimes disrespectfully licked the face of the watch.

"How dare you, sir! How dare you!" Sometimes whacked the chair with his whip-like tail.

"How would you like to go abroad when—afterwards?" Philip inquired suddenly. "You've never seen anything of the world, and I want to show you. We could go by easy stages——"

In his great eagerness he lost sight of the fact that Sally was still very weak, and that it must of necessity be months, perhaps even years, before she was able to live a normal life again.

She looked up at him with startled eyes.

"Go abroad now? Oh, I couldn't! Let us come back here, Philip. Just till I'm quite well and strong. I'll be much happier here with Mrs. Kiff and Sometimes——"

"Just as you like, of course. I don't want to hurry you. I want you to do as you like, always."

"You spoil me."

He stood looking at her with a frown. She was changed. Yes, she was utterly changed, he knew, and the knowledge did not cease to hurt him. He would have been almost glad to see her toss her head again and tell him to go to the devil.

But Sally seemed quite happy and smiling for the rest of the evening. She listened to all his plans for altering and improving the cottage; she was interested in his suggestion for buying an extra plot of land and adding to the garden.

"It will give me something to do," he explained. "And it will stop anyone building next door. What do you think, Sally?"

Sally agreed to everything, and once again Sanderson was conscious of the wish that she would not. If only she had argued with him, even quarrelled with him! He hated her gentle acquiescence.

Presently she asked:

"Did you see anyone you know in London, Philip?"

"No." It was the first lie Sanderson had ever told her, and he got up hurriedly when the word had passed his lips, and went over to the window so that she could not see his face.

"It will be fun to see the shops again," Sally said. "To be able to walk about and see them, I mean."

She was desperately anxious to make him happy; she, too, was conscious of the constraint between them.

When she said good-night she put her arms round his neck unasked and kissed him.

"I do love you for all you've done for me, Philip."

But it was not saying that she loved him! And though Sanderson kissed her many times in return, and tried to persuade himself that the little cloud between them had passed away, he knew that it was still there, and that it was the size and shape of a man's hand.

And in the early hours of the morning he awoke from restless sleep to the sound of stifled sobbing from Sally's room, and when, with his heart in his mouth, he got up and, slipping on his dressing-gown, stole across the narrow passage to her door, a ladder of moonlight through the window showed him Sally sitting up in her bed with its gaudy pink coverlet, with her face hidden in her hands, rocking to and fro as if in grief unbearable, and he heard her saying, in a stifled little voice that sounded almost like a prayer in its desolation:

"Oh, come back to me! Come back to me!"

Sanderson stood there for a long time, not moving, hardly breathing. He knew well enough of whom she was thinking, and to whom that prayer was addressed. He knew well enough that he was living in a fool's paradise, and that he must face the awakening some day in the future if not now, before it was too late. He knew that the only way to secure real happiness for Sally was to give her up—to give her up to a man who was not worthy of her, and yet whom she loved as she would never love him. To give her up after all he had done for her, after all he had suffered for her.

Sanderson crept back to his room, the floorboards of the little cottage creaking beneath his weight at every step.

Sometimes, roused from a delightful dream of rabbits down in the wood, yawned in his master's face and lashed the floor with his tail.

Outside in the silent garden the first grey shadow of dawn was smudging the darkness.

"Give her up!" said a voice in Sanderson's brain.

"She is not for you. The fruit does not always fall to the planter of the tree."

But Sanderson would not listen; the time had not yet come when he was forced to admit that the Guards must retire.

* * * * * *

Garry Nairn and Sanderson had parted abruptly after their meeting in London, with Sanderson bluntly expressing the hope that they might never cross one another's paths again.

He would have boasted that he was no longer afraid of Nairn as a rival, but, all the same, he determined to hurry on his marriage and to take Sally out of England, if she would consent.

It did not occur to him that Garry would go down to Ash Hill.

His chance meeting with Sanderson had aroused Nairn's undoubted love for Sally to fever-heat. He walked about London for hours, remembering everything she had ever said to him, and the many things which he had only read in her eyes.

She had loved him, he was sure, and, that being so, why should her love have died, as his had not?

After hours of irresolute arguing with himself, he caught the last train down to Ash Hill, and arrived at the vicarage just as his father was going to bed.

The vicar showed no surprise; it was not the first time his son had turned up at strange and unexpected hours, so he merely asked how he was and if he had eaten.

"Yes, thanks." Garry looked at his father rather nervously. "I've been back from America a couple of days," he added.

"Is that so? Well, I'm glad to see you."

"Thanks." There was a little pause, then Garry asked jerkily, "How's everyone?"

"Very well."

Garry stuck his foot up on a chair and began to unlace one of his boots.

"Seen anyone up at the cottage?"

"I was there this morning."

"How's Sally?"

"Wonderful. She can walk. It's the most miraculous thing I've ever known." The vicar waited a moment, then added quietly: "She is to marry Philip Sanderson."

"Is she?" There was a note of hard defiance in Garry's voice, and his father's face changed.

"Garry, you're not here to make any further trouble, are you, my boy?" he asked earnestly. "That little girl has suffered enough——"

"I've as much right to go there as Sanderson or any other man," Garry said rapidly. "I behaved like a damned fool, I know, but that's no reason why I'm to go on behaving like a damned fool!"

"Better a fool than a knave, Garry."

"What do you mean?"

"That it will be a dastardly thing to rob Sanderson of the happiness he so richly deserves—or even to try to rob him of it."

Garry's face flushed.

"All's fair in love and war," he protested.

Mr. Nairn shrugged his shoulders.

"But there is such a thing as a clean fight," he said. "And don't forget that you once played the coward and ran away." He did not wait for a reply; he walked out of the room, leaving his son alone with his thoughts.

In the morning, when the two men met at breakfast, Garry said, without raising his eyes from his eggs and bacon, which he was making a fine pretence of enjoying:

"I'm going back to America, guv'nor."

There was a little silence, then the vicar said quietly:

"I'm sorry, and I'm glad. I shall miss you, but I think you are right to go."

"I thought—if I went up to Town to-day, perhaps you'd come with me. We might have some lunch and perhaps do a show——"

The vicar smiled. Garry had such a boyish way of trying to show penitence.

"I shall be very pleased," he said readily. "But I can't go till about twelve—there are several things I must see to first."

"All right. There's a twelve-nine that will get us up in plenty of time."

So that was that!

"The boy's right," Garry's father told himself with pride. "He threw his chance away, and he can't expect another."

"The guv'nor's right," Garry told himself, and tried to believe it. "I've messed up my own life, and it's not playing the game to mess up Sanderson's as well, or even try to."

(To be continued.)

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE ARE SUBJECT TO FADS AND FASHIONS.

(By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph. D.)

If you want a good laugh take up the family album and notice the funny styles that bedeck your serious-looking aunts and uncles.

All fashions, other than the prevailing ones, look ridiculous. They are different. Being different creates a suspicion of inferiority which in turn raises a self-satisfied grin.

Being in style gives a sense of security and solidarity. What everybody is doing appeals to us as the best because we are overwhelmed by the force of numbers. We accept enthusiastically the will of the crowd as though it were our own idea. In a true sense it is our own. For by this very participation we constitute the crowd mind and the crowd will.

We are susceptible to fads and fashion mainly through fear of ridicule. The tortures of silly fads such as tight corsets and choke collars are not to be compared with the agony of mind suffered by one who is out of style and hence ridiculous in the eyes of his fellows.

No one wants to be out of style unless this oddity is a means to recognition which cannot be had in any other way. Sometimes people purposely dress in outlandish ways to attract attention.

Those who refuse to follow fashion and those who go fashion one better merely seize upon this excuse to display an oddity of temperament and character calculated to call attention to themselves.

The great majority of us who are never the first or the last to take on the new are careful to avoid being conspicuous. We get more satisfaction from the sense of security that comes in being one of the crowd than in running the risk of ridicule for being queer.

Falling Tree Limbs Break Phone Wires

(Examiner Correspondence).

HALL'S BRIDGE, Oct. 5. — When some trees were being trimmed in front of Samuel Wood's property, Hall's Bridge, the limbs in falling pulled down the wires of the Harvey Municipal Telephone Company on Tuesday, which resulted in all the telephones south of the break being temporarily put out of commission. Jack Coones, of Lakehurst, in charge of the repair department, was busily engaged in making the necessary repairs on Wednesday.

DE FOREST CROSLEY

'BATTERYLESS' RADIO now INCREASES the range of reception—TWO FULL OCTAVES

UNTIL the FIDELITY SERIES was created by De Forest Crosley engineers, radio failed to reproduce the full musical scale. It was practically mute on the high and low notes. It missed from one to two octaves!

The marvellous new fidelity of tone now obtained in the FIDELITY SERIES is the world's greatest advance in "batteryless" engineering.

It gives the word new meaning. "Batteryless" as developed by De Forest Crosley makes of radio a musical instrument of the highest type.

This sparkling tone, with its two-octave increase in range, comes in amazing volume and without distortion, due to the NEW Dynamic Speaker.

Any of the Fidelity Series may be purchased on the monthly payment plan.

Miss Alice Johnston, 303 Pearl Avenue, entertained last evening at a kitchen shower in honor of Miss Gertrude Middleton, whose marriage takes place next week. A mock wedding, which caused much hilarity, was held during the evening. Miss Elizabeth Webber as bride and Mrs. Driscoll as bridegroom. The ceremony was read by Miss Margaret Eastwood, attired in the customary official gown, under beautiful bridal decorations. The bride-to-be received many useful kitchen utensils and thanked the girls in her usual pleasing manner.

• • •

Miss Maud McKinnon, of South Africa, who will address the W.M.S. service at George Street United Church on Sunday morning, will be the guest of Mrs. E. W. Coon, 589 Aylmer Street during her stay in the city.

• • •

The friends of Mrs. D. H. Maconomy, 195 Park Street, will be pleased to learn of her return to the city after a four months' holiday in the Old Land. She returned on the C.P.R. liner "Duchess of Bedford," which arrived in Montreal last Friday.

• • •

Miss Winnifred Cadd was hostess last evening at a miscellaneous shower in honor of Miss Verna Fell, of The Examiner staff, whose marriage takes place in the near future. The gifts, which were many in number, were presented in a unique and very appropriate manner from under the layers of a huge wedding cake, of white cardboard, topped by a charming miniature bride. Miss Fell thanked the girls and expressed her regret at severing her business connections with The Peterborough Examiner. The remainder of the evening was spent in games, after which dainty refreshments were served.

• • •

Miss E. Dix, 226 Brock Street, entertained the girls of her Sunday School class of George Street United Church last evening in honor of Miss Lexa Allison and Miss Mildred Young, whose marriages take place next week. During the evening Miss Allison was presented with a pair of silver vases, and Miss Young a pair of silver candlesticks.

Miss Alice Staples, of Regina, Sask., is the guest of her cousin, Mrs. Gordon Hill, during the month of October.

A miscellaneous shower was held at the home of Miss Hilda M. Taylor, of Harvey Street, Friday evening in honor of Mrs. R. J. Runnett (nee Ila Agnes Storey). The rooms were prettily decorated with autumn leaves and flowers. The gifts were wheeled in by the Misses Lily Taylor and Florence Weese, acting as bride and groom. The evening was spent in games, with dainty refreshments served at the closing.

Proposals!

A glance at her blonde loveliness tells better than words why this beautiful New York City girl has received such flattering proposals from kings of movie and stage land. She's Collette Francis, of 225 East 25th St., Brooklyn; now one of the charmers in the Broadway hit, "Rio Rita."

Miss Francis says: "Since I've been on the stage, so many people have asked me what I do to get the beautiful golden gleam and sparkle in my hair that I am beginning to think I'm really taking wonderful care of it. I really never thought much about it. What I do is so simple. Like so many of my girl friends here in New York, I just put a little Danderine on my brush each time I use it. That keeps my hair silky and gleaming, makes it easy to dress and holds it like I arrange it, for hours. My scalp was very dry and I had a lot of dandruff when I first started on it, but all of that trouble stopped quickly. And Danderine keeps my hair so clean I don't need to shampoo half as often, now."

Danderine removes the oily film from your hair and gives it new life and lustre. It isn't oily and doesn't show. It gives tone and vigor to the scalp. The generous bottles are just 35c at any drug or toilet counter. A delicately fragrant necessity for the well-groomed girl.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

This suit of heavy tweed in tones of brown has a flat collar of beaver fur.

Much was said six or eight months ago about the return of the furless coat. But one of the most pronounced impressions received by those who attended the exhibitions of new clothes for autumn in Paris was the lavish use of fur. Dresses are trimmed with fur as they have not been for many seasons. A metallic lace evening frock, for instance, has narrow border trimming of black broadtail and an afternoon frock of light brown of the new woolen lace has trimming of natural-toned beaver.

And the way in which fur is used ought to delight the most conservative of furriers for there is little tendency to disguise and distort furs this season. Often the furs are used in their natural colors, or else in the conventional tones of brown, black, gray. Fashion no longer seems to be amused with blue moleskin or purple rabbit.

Some of the dressmakers here follow the rule of using furs of the same tone as the material of the coat or frock. Thus, black broadtail or Persian lamb seems to them the smartest thing for black broadcloth. The new grayish tones of blue are best emphasized by gray krimmer or sometimes gray squirrel and beige krimmer or brown beaver goes with the warm autumn tones of brown.

This return to the appreciation of fine furs may be considered as part of the present reaction against shams and artifices and distortions in dress generally, one phase of which is to be observed in the revived interest in precious stones. Mere effectiveness is no longer enough for the woman who aspires to the new "elegance." For informal occasions she may be content with inexpensive costume jewelry, but for important occasions she wears diamonds, rubies and emeralds if she can afford them. Real laces are appreciated now as they have not been for years, and the woman of fashion is no longer as content to wear dyed coney as genuine sable, Persian lamb or beaver.

Fashion writers make much of what they call the new note of femininity—they have failed to sense the real state of fashion affairs if they have not also noted a decided increase of what may be called "discrimination."

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

By MARION

THE easiest thing, in Peterborough nowadays, seems to be to get into an argument. There are arguments on religion, politics, club affairs, morals, newspaper ethics—and smoking among women. And the easiest to get into is the last-named.

• • •

We are generally agreed, in this enlightened city, that every person has the right to decide his own denominational preference and political leaning. Most of us concede the right to every woman to choose her own clubs. Many believe that the Mosaic law is still good enough as a moral guide, while conceding to others the liberty of building thereon new rules. Everybody knows he can run a newspaper better than the person who is doing it, so everyone is happy on this score. But when it comes to smoking among women. . . .

• • •

There are real battles, besides rumors of war, on the question. We have prominent women on both sides in the city, and I dare say the odds are as evenly divided in the district. There are no "for and against" factions—there are anti's and anti-anti's.

• • •

To The Examiner office the other day came an article from the pen of Jack Miner, naturalist extraordinary. I would not think of meeting Mr. Miner in an argument on wild geese, which is his natural battleground, but when he poaches on MY reserves—starts talking about women going to the dogs through smoking—I think it is up to me to represent the neighbors in protest.

• • •

In order to present the case properly, it will be necessary to present a paragraph of Mr. Miner's "Argument" in full. I hope the neighbors will excuse this wholesale copying for this occasion. Here is what he says:

• • •

"The other morning, while on the train, a morning newspaper was handed me which, on the front page in capital letters, read these words: "Henry Ford Hospital Nurses Discharged for Smoking Cigarets." I then thought of several requests I have had to put in print the impressions I had of Mr. Ford. I say this alone shows you the caliber of Mr. Henry Ford and his interest in the moral side of life and in the born and unborn generations and this fact, connected with the character of Mr. Henry Ford, will go down in history.

• • •

"If more men will take Mr. Ford's example and have a backbone instead of a wishbone, it will help slow this world up a bit and children a century from now will have healthy reasons to thank him. So many men ask me why I am so opposed to women smoking, and in reply will say: The biggest asset the world has is its babies, and the hope of the world for permanent peace is more love and education among its babies and who will profit by the mistakes of their foreparents, but what a pitiful thing if these babies' growth, intellectually and morally, is going to be stunted through the motherhood of the land smoking cigarets months before they are born.

• • •

"Right here let me say to the world, I will give more for any child's nine months' health and education before he is born than I will any nine years after. I think every human being wants to see the world take a step forward and not backward, and who in the name of God can say by women smoking it makes this world better."

• • •

Outside the strong language altogether, on which one might comment, what service has Mr. Miner rendered the cause of unborn babies? He suggests that their lives are to be stunted intellectually and morally because their mothers smoke. Let us examine the cases separately.

• • •

So much is said nowadays about protection from this and that, I really believe if there were any danger of having the intellects of unborn generations hurt by smoking among the mothers of to-day, some organization would have been formed to combat it.

• • •

As for the moral side—Mr. Miner follows in a path hollowed by the tread of many erring feet. He is confusing, as I have pointed out previously in this regard, manners and morals. He is saying that because a thing LOOKS different from something to which he has become accustomed therefore it is WRONG.

• • •

We may expect him to say, any day now, that short skirts are immoral.

• • •

All I can say is that I would not like to see women walking down George street smoking cigarettes; I would not like to do it myself. The reason is not, however, that such smoking would be an infringement of the moral code, but it most certainly would be contrary to the dictates of good manners. Just in the same way, the woman who paraded George street fifty years ago in the costume of to-day would have had a big following.

• • •

It is not imagination, but common fact, that when the first mannequin appeared on George street in a harem skirt she was mobbed, and had to take refuge in a store until a cab could be summoned to take her to a place of safety. And the harem skirt to-day would be as out-of-date as the hoop skirt.

• • •

I am not arguing, at all, for smoking among women. I do not, for a moment, suggest that it would serve any good purpose, any more than smoking among men. It is a habit; a diversion; a nerve sedative; it is neither health-giving nor edifying. But I do say that smoking is not, per se, immoral. There is no question of morals involved.

• • •

And let these men who would reform us stick to facts, not fancies. Let them, before endeavouring to break into print with their quasi-expert opinions, verify the statements by reference to qualified medical men. Let Mr. Miner, for instance, ascertain just what ill effect it will have on our yet-unborn children if we smoke a cigarette to-night, or two or three cigarettes every night.

• • •

Methinks such writers will, after gleaning authentic information, decide thereafter to "stick to their lasts."

• • •

The fashion diagram offered this week shows precisely how to cut an make a charming little baby jacket which has been requested by a number of our readers. On the same sheet are instructions and sketches for French drawers for a little girl. If you are interested, and would like a copy, with sketches of the finished garments and directions for making, please send in the coupon promptly.

• • •

A few days ago I gave the dates of the Kiwanis better baby competition as October 18 and 19. I am now informed that the competition will take only one day, the eighteenth, and that at one o'clock on that day Dr. Edmund King, of Toronto, will address the mothers on matters affecting child welfare.

• • •

I was talking last week with a girl just returned from a trip to Hollywood, and in the course of our conversation I brought up the subject of hairdressing. This young lady had the privilege of meeting many of the screen celebrities, and her quick eye pictured the styles of their coiffures as accurately as it did the style of their dress.

• • •

"I didn't see an actress with slicked hair," she told me. And this, mind you, in spite of the fact that here in Peterborough we are supposed to be well up with fashion's dictates—and just take a look at us in a mirror! "George Westmore, who cuts Mary Pickford's hair, has declared 'slick' cuts decidedly out, and I heard it said that the girl with a boyish bob had a hard time getting engagements. Mary has curls arranged about her head, and her hair is parted slightly to the right and loosely waved back into a mass of very loose curls that fall on her neck."

• • •

It almost seems as if they WILL have us back to long hair soon, willy-nilly. But it will be a hard struggle—and really, I think this is one opportunity for women to show their independence.

• • •

Short hair is SO comfortable—and easy to manage—and comely!

• • •

Which doesn't remind me, but I don't care anyhow—I want some more entries in the "After Five Years" contest. I have a fair number now, but not enough to satisfy ME. Please read last Saturday's Whatnot, and rush in your ideas on how men and women can best help to make married life as happy five years after as five months after the wedding day. There's a box of correspondence paper waiting for the winner.

GREEN TOMATO MINCEMEAT

(Contributed by A.M.L.)

½ peck green tomatoes
½ peck apples
1 tablespoon salt
1½ tablespoons each of cloves, cinnamon and nutmeg.
1 teaspoon mace
2½ lbs. raisins
4 lbs. brown sugar
1 cup vinegar

Peel and core the apples. Chop fine and mix apples and tomatoes, cover and let stand over night. Next morning strain off the juice. Don't use the juice but measure and add as much water as juice. Boil the water, vinegar, sugar and raisins, together for 1 hour. Then add the spices, tomatoes and apples, which have been thoroughly mixed, boil 1 hour, stirring frequently. This recipe makes about 4 quarts of mincemeat.

RHEUMATIC MISERY.

Relief Can Only Come Through Better Blood—Liniments of No Use.

In no other disease does the blood become thin so rapidly as in rheumatism. Not only does it become thin but it is loaded with impurities—rheumatic poisons. Without the proper treatment these poisons increase, the inflamed joints swell and the patient becomes a cripple. Most treatments simply aim to keep down the pain, hence with every unfavorable condition a renewed attack follows.

To cast out rheumatism the blood must be enriched and the rheumatic points driven out with the natural secretions of the body. This can best be done through a course of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which have a specific action on the blood, giving it new richness and redness. Thousands have tried this treatment with beneficial results. That every sufferer from rheumatism who does not try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is neglecting the most hopeful means of recovery is shown by the statement of Mr. David Carroll, Pictou, N.S., who says:—"For years I was troubled with rheumatism. The pains were not continuous, but they were always returned, and kept getting worse. I tried so-called electric belts and many medicines, but did not get more than temporary relief. Only those who have suffered from this trouble will realize what I suffered at times. I had begun to despair of getting better when a friend urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. In a short time I could feel this medicine helping me so I gladly continued taking the pills and soon found every trace of the trouble had disappeared and there was a great improvement in my general health. It is now two years since I took Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and have not had the least twinge of the trouble in that time. That is why I confidently recommend the pills to other sufferers."

You can get these Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Brockville, Ont.

Simple Way to Be Rid of Gas

PEOPLE who belch after eating may not realize that the cause is excessive gastric acid. Or may not have been told how easily this may be remedied. Quick and complete relief can be obtained by taking a little "Pape's Diapepsin" after eating or when pain is felt. Remember this for your comfort, and lest that constant gas on the stomach does not drift into gastritis!

"Pape's Diapepsin" instantly neutralizes the excess stomach acid and soothes, heals and strengthens the inflamed stomach lining, thus promoting normal, painless digestion and helping to prevent future trouble.

For many years millions have used and recommended "Pape's Diapepsin" for the speedy and sure relief of indigestion and allied stomach troubles. Follow their example! Get a 60-cent package of "Pape's Diapepsin" from any druggist; no matter how severe your stomach troubles you will get relief.

LITTLE SONGS OF LOVE

"AFTER FIVE YEARS"
(A reply to Dorothy Aldis.)

The man in the moon
That spoons with the maid,
Might lend you his spoon
If request should be made.

Then do not forget
To a recipe take
From the man in the moon
So his cake you can make.

A spoon God has given,
So let the sun shine
On the face you show
That husband of thine.

When both are so tired
And patience gets low
Each help stir the cake
And spice it just so.

For worries will come,
To each as you go;
To use that old spoon
My man don't be slow.

Should five years or ten years,
Go slip sliding by,
Use the spoon in the moon
Then your cake won't get dry.

HARVEST HOME AND RALLY DAY

Sunday will mark once again the annual Harvest Festival and Rally Day services for the Young People of the Salvation Army Temple. One of the features this year will be the display of baskets of fruit and vegetables brought by the children, and in this connection there will be awards for the best baskets of fruit, one for the boys and one for the girls. The same also applies to those bringing vegetables. The prizes will be given on three points: 1, originality of design, 2 color and 3 quality. An award will also be given to the highest boy and girl collector for the Harvest Festival effort.

The names of those successful will be announced on Monday night at the sale of fruit and flowers. All members of the Sunday school have been asked by Young People's Sergeant Major R. C. Braund to secure the interest of all absentees and bring them to the rally day service to-morrow.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE WEEKLY COLUMN

A goodly thing it is to meet
In Friendship's circle bright,
Where nothing stains the pleasure sweet,
Or dims the radiant light.
No unkind word our lips shall pass,
No envy sour the mind,
But each shall seek the common weal,
The good of all mankind.

MOUNT PLEASANT

"For Home and Country"—It's the humblest motto. God gave us homes and country, and it's the highest motto in the world to-day to live up to. Think how much we owe to Mrs. Adelaide Hoodless, for her vision for rural women, that we needed this organization. Let us pay that debt by developing to the limit our powers of usefulness through our branch institutes. We emphasize our past efforts because they were of the best, but another thirty years will record even greater interest and progress in the part our Institutes will play in the prosperity of rural Ontario.

The Women's Institutes have been a contributing factor in the progress of rural Ontario. Many remember our province without Women's Institues, without this monthly meeting of women, that could round up interest for everyone in the community. Today, with 1,070 centres of meeting and 38,000 members, surely we are aware of our power and responsibility in shaping the destiny of our province and our beloved "Canada."

Our organization has a status second to none, because our wholehearted co-operation made difficulties disappear, and our endeavor has touched every phase of life in rural Ontario, the old, the young, the babies, the schools, citizenship for all—this meant home——and homes meant country.

Let rural women put a correct estimate on their value in our fair province and remember that the rural home is the backbone of this province.

Does any woman say to-day, "I live my own life"? Think this over, analyse and find out, what are you putting in your own life, and in the lives of those about you? This is forming character, and character rounds out to citizenship, interested and anxious to be a part of the human machinery that keeps communities humming.

Loyalty: We are building to-day a nation of nations in the commonwealth of nations. We have a wonderful heritage here and we plead in our organizations for loyalty to our leaders, to our district leaders, our branch leaders and to those who are trying to do and give their best effort in our work.

Co-operation: Co-operation is just adjusting yourself so that others can work with you. That is, change your ideas sometimes, and change yourself a little at other times, so that you will get co-operation from the council, and boards of education, and boards of health in your various communities as well as co-operation with the departments of the government service.

Leadership: You stand for leadership in your community, to create public opinion for good projects and necessary improvements.

Tolerance: There came to Canada years ago two great civilizations, and as the years advanced many others came, so that we now have many nationalities. The Canadian type is not English, Irish, Scotch or French, but is a type in which we are all merged together. Let us be broadly tolerant Canadian.

Faith: Keep Faith with the basic principals of our organization. Have Faith in the harmony they will surely promote. Have Faith in a peace policy for each and every nation, and that one united effort through our Institutes, can go a long way in moulding the opinion of rural Ontario, and aiding the League of Nations Society in Canada in its noble effort. Our credit is built upon things we do;our debit, in things we shirk and the women who total the biggest plus, are the women who complete their work.

Wider and even wider does the vision of our possibilities become. No understanding is too great or too difficult for the splendid women who fill the ranks of the Women's Institutes the world over. Hopefully and prayerfully do we look forward to still greater achievements.

Let us encourage better education, high moral standards, home industries, better health measures, everything that will promote better citizenship and last but not least, let us not forget our historical research work We must never lose sight of our country, of our Province, and our Dominion.

With the poet let us say:
It is not the thing you do, dear,
But the thing you leave undone,
That gives a bit of heartache,
At the setting of the sun.

For the coming year, let us take these words of Hon. Stanley Baldwin to help us build our Institutes strong and enduring.

"There is only one thing which I feel is worth giving one's whole strength to, and that is the binding together of all classes of our people, in an effort to make life in this country better in every senes of the word."

"Long may our Institute stand
To bless the home and native land.
I stand undaunted in its might,
For Home and Country, God and right."

MILLBROOK

Mrs. J. W. Stone of Bond Head, Provincial President, speaking recently at a largely-attended convention of the Women's Institute in a Northern Ontario town, offered some advice which it has been suggested should be passed on to workers in other parts of the province: "Remember our slogan is, 'For Home and Country'; not 'For Country and Home'—nor yet finances. Keep first things first, and the rest will follow. Choose your officers wisely, and send wise, capable, rural women to represent your branch at the provincial convention, and other gatherings, where executive business is likely to be transacted."

A suggestion of Mrs. Stone's, that has not as yet been taken very seriously by many of the Institutes, is that each branch should join the League of Nations, "and work for peace in your neighborhood, and internationally. Bring this matter up at practically every regular meeting of you local Institutes, and see that you have the literature which will enable you to present interesting items of information relative to the league in connection with every program. Remember that the Women's Institutes are really a university for rural women, therefore do not neglect the educational features. Every woman can do something better than any other woman in the branch; let everyone do something. Do not pass resolutions lightly, but when you undertake some essential thing, stay with it until it is achieved before taking up any other matter."

In planning the program for the year's meetings, Miss Emily Guest, widely known as an Institute worker, mentions as necessary, Co-operation, seasonableness, balancing the cultural, practical, and social features; the getting out of local talent, and finding out the problems of the homemakers in the home district, then making a place for helpfulness along these specific lines, in the study plan of the year for each branch.

The girls who recently took up the work, under capable instructors, in connection with the girls' judging competitions, learned the value of well-arranged and propely equipped kitchens; of planning comfortable and livable living-rooms; of correct clothing even though it might be on a restricted allowance; and of cooking meals high in food value, health value, and attractiveness, school lunches being a distinctive feature.

As the membership of the local Institutes must be recruited from these girls, would not each branch be well advised to give one or other of these subjects a place on its program each month, thus continuing to hold the interest of the girls, adding to what they have already learned, and extending the educational advantages to the older members as well? ?

Mr. G. A. Putnam, superintendent of Institutes, says the organization owes its permanency and efficiency to its great educational value, its high social standards, and to the spirit of service which has been an outstanding characteristic in all countries.

WARSAW

Mrs. Thomas Cooper, member of the confederate board of the Women's Institute, received word to-day of the death of Mrs. Banks of Sherbourne, Ontario. Mrs. Banks was a very active member of the board for six years, and was much interested in temperance and in the Tobermory Hospital. She will be much missed by the other members of the board.

Warsaw Women's Institute held a banquet on Wednesday evening to celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the organization of the Institute in Warsaw by some ladies from Lakefield, in the Town Hall. One hundred and twenty people were seated for supper. They were pretty well crowded, and the waiters could serve the two side tables from one side only, as the seats were close to the wall.

The hall looked quite pretty. Green draperies covered the front of the hall. Warsaw Woman's Institute was in large letters across the front. "For Home and Country" was in the centre, and 1903-1928, on either side. Flags and flowers completed the decorations.

The three long tables, each seating forty guests, looked pretty, with silver crepe paper runners and flowers.

The place cards were hand-made, edged with silver, and silver lettering, with W.W.I., 1903-1928, For Home and Country. A program for the year was placed with each lady's card.

Mrs. Herrington led in singing grace. Some young boys made excellent waiters.

The Town Hall again showed its inadequacy, the tables had to seat forty, but they are supposed to seat thirty-six, and with three tables set, there was necessary the inconvenience of passing across the table.

In gathing the men, had to stand on the sidewalk as well as many of the ladies, some of whom found seats on the platform, but everyone know that all that could be done for comfort had been done, and it was a very happy crowd. In arranging the hall, thanks are due to William Dunford and Theodore Douglas. These gentlemen came willingly and helped with advice, as well as did all the heavy work.

The Institute's dishes and cutlery were far from enough, and the Presbyterian and United chuches lent theirs. The Anglican and Baptist also offered theirs. Tables were kindly lent by the Presbyterian and United churches.

Owing to lack of space only the present members, the members, who could come, of the first year, and the presidents and secretary-treasurers could be accommodated. Nearly all the present members were on hand. The first president, Mrs. A. F. Choate, was unable to be present. Mrs. Arthur Edwards, president for two years during the war, could not attend; Mrs. (Dr.) Meacham, the second president, and Mrs. (Dr.)

FAVORITE RECIPE

ANGEL CAKE

(Contributed by Miss F. Moncrief, East Emily

1 cup of bread flour
1 cup granulated sugar
3 teaspoons baking powder, sift together 5 times with a pinch of salt.
1 cup sweet milk, set in water and let come to scald.

Beat all together and then beat whites of 2 eggs, and beat in with other ingredients and neither flavor nor grease pan.

COMBINATION PIE.

(Contributed by Mrs. R.J.T., of Ida.)

One cup of corn-syrup; 1 cup of brown sugar; 2 eggs; 1 teaspoon of vanilla; butter, size of an egg. Beat all together real well and bake in a raw pieshell.

TOMATO BUTTER.

(Contributed by Miss F. Moncrief, East Emily.)

Ten pounds ripe, peeled, sliced tomatoes; 1 pint of vinegar—let stand over night, drain and take half pint of the liquid drained off with one quart vinegar, three pounds sugar, boil ten minutes; add tomatoes, one tablespoon salt, one teaspoon red pepper and mixed spice, put spice in a bag and boil all to four hours.

IX.—ECONOMIC DIET PLANNING.

In order to know the real economy practised in making a purchase we must give consideration to two matters: (a) Its usefulness, (b) Its cost. In food, first consider its requisites in order that it may be of most use to our bodies. It must supply us with material that is body-building, energy-producing, regulating, and health-maintaining.

As to its cost-factors which determine this are, in many cases, quite independent of food value. Among them are:

(1) Source.—Is it home-grown or imported from a distance.
(2) Perishability.
(3) Relation of supply to demand.
(4) Proportion of waste.

Those planning the dietary of a normal family must be interested not only in securing necessary food constituents, but in securing them at a cost in keeping with the family income. Twenty-five to thirty-five per cent of the income is usually considered a large enough proportion to spend on food.

It is well that the cost of food does not determine its value to the body. Often a comparatively small expenditure of money will procure just as much real food value as larger sums. The trouble is—often those who have direst need of training along the line of making wise and economical selection haven't had it.

As a whole, animal foods supply protein and fat, vegetable foods are our source of carbohydrates and mineral salts, while vitamines are obtained from both. Per stated amount of food value, animal foods are dearer than plant foods. The reasons for this are:

(1) Animal foods are developed at the expense of vegetable foods.
(2) There is much risk in their production.
(3) Their transportation is not easy.
(4) They are perishable.
(5) They are difficult of preservation.

In the case of meat, the demand for special cuts (such as tenderloin and sweetbreads), of which there are but a few in each carcass, results in prices which are out of proportion to the food value of these cuts. These unnatural prices react favorably upon the less desirable cuts, for they are sold at somewhat lower rates.

Vegetables which are difficult or expensive to cultivate (as mushrooms) or are rare or transported long distances when out of season bring prices that are high and often out of all proportion to their food value.

A third economic mistake is made when much money is spent on cakes, pastry, jellies, jams, candy, and high-priced, ready-to-serve foods.

Poor Man's Pudding.

Two cups cold boiled rice; 1 tablespoon butter; 1 cup hot milk; ¼ cup raisins; 1 teaspoon salt; ½ teaspoon nutmeg; ¼ cup molasses.

1—Combine boiled rice with hot milk.
2—Add the other ingredients.
3—Pour into greased baking dish and bake at 350° F. for one hour.
4—Stir once or twice during first half hour.

MARION'S MAIL

Address correspondence to Marion at The Examiner Office.

I RECEIVED your little note with the greatest of pleasure. I only wish I could know you better.

You know, Marion,

"The poets sing of old friends,
But I would praise the new,
Because it's only lately
I've had a friend like you.

"And if old friends are better,
There's only this to say—
I'm hoping most sincerely
We'll be old friends some day."

I'm pretty sure it's right, Marion, for you are a great friend to us all. Your letter paper is just wonderful, and thanks very much for the information you gave me in the paper.

Well, I am very sorry I adopted someone else's pen name. I didn't know there was another "Jenny Wren." But, Marion, could I not be "Jenny Wren II.," or shall I choose another pen name?

The recipes, etc., are sure a great help. I cut the recipes out, and keep them. I have tried some, and find them real good. I must say that the Women's Page is the best yet.

Well, Marion, don't you think my letter is pretty long? I should say so.

Wishing the page every sucess, and more with it,

I remain,

Yours truly,

JENNY WREN II.

Indeed, indeed, Jenny Wren II., you embarrass me! But it is nice to be embarrassed with praise! I appreciate all the nice things you say, and only hope you will continue to write so that the page may be even better. It will be quite all right, of course, for you to use the pen name you suggest. My reason for bringing up the subject was my desire to get in touch again with the writer of the poem, to ask for more. Apparently, though I have lost one Jenny Wren poet, I have found another.

Your idea of clipping the recipes is good. I have a very extensive recipe cabinet, of course, for reference purposes. I clip the recipes and paste them on little cards, which are then indexed by subjects. The cards are filed in steel drawers.

Please write again soon.

"Dear Marion,

I wonder if any of the readers of our page keep a scrap book in which they paste the helps as they come along? I find it very handy to punch a hole through the back of a firm-covered scribbler and paste in one section helps on cooking, in another section helps on dress, and so on. The book could be hung in a convenient place and referred to as needed."

Wishing you every success,

A WELL WISHER."

Thanks very much, Well Wisher, for your hint. I am sure that such a scrap book as you suggest would be of great service to nearly every housewife, and would save her many hours' worry in a year. Please don't wait too long before writing more of your ideas.

"Dear Marion,

I want to let you know I enjoy reading your column very much. I noticed there was a call for a ginger snap recipe. I am sending mine, hoping some of the readers will try it. I like it because it does not take so much time as ordinary recipes.

B.A.R."

Harold, Ont.

Thanks for your recipe, B.A.R., which is indeed valuable because of the saving in time. Doesn't work seem to pile up, and doesn't the clock seem to simply fly when one is in a hurry cooking something for a meal?

* * * * * *

"Dear Marion,

I'm writing again, this time to remind you of your promise to let me nkow if there is to be a class by correspondence for studying Esperanto. You wrote me about a month ago, and told me to write again when the cool studying weather had come. Well, I guess it's here, it feels like it to me.

Thanks very much for the recipes; I didn't use them all, but the ones I did use were a success. I'm enclosing my recipe for tomato mincemeat. There is no suet in it. We like it better than the others on that account. It doesn't seem so strong, or should I say "so rich."

Hope some of the readers will like it, too!

Have just finished reading your page. I enjoy it very much, and some nights it's the only news I read. You surely deserve the praise you get, it's a help to most every woman, I'm sure, the writing covers so many subjects. I enjoy the tips, especially the patterns.

I'm glad to know that you have a few more patterns for the camiknickers. I was too slow in sending before, and so thought I had missed that one. I am enclosing the coupon for patterns, also the stamp.

Thanks again for previous help, and I hope my little contribution will help you and the readers, too.

Sincerely,

A.M.L."

Indeed yes, A.M.L., your recipe is well appreciated! I am so glad to have the neighbors help out in this way. And what a fine lot of cooking the men of this district will be treated to this winter, with all the hints and recipes passing back and forth through our page!

About the Esperanto; apparently no one is interested but yourself, and I could hardly conduct a class for one! It is just a little difficult, you know, for many to arrange their work so that they will have studying time—but what a lot better world it would be if we all could!

* * * * * *

"Dear Marion,

So many have written to say 'I enjoy your sermonettes the best,' so do I, although in imagination I taste nearly all the cakes and pickles.

I want to say I like your thoughts on Friendship.

How can friendship be engendered? Shall we look at it from a negative or another standpoint and say 'How can ill-will be vanquished? Did any of you ever know a neighbor (Who is he?) who had something to enjoy a little different see everybody ready to say, May you live long to enjoy it?

Did any of your readers ever see a neighbor make a friend and then see another make a sly cut with envy? Do we all rejoice with those who do rejoice?

I hate a fuss, and I would rather get one flash of understanding from a pair of honest eyes, than flattery from one who spreadeth a net for your feet.

A clever man has said, Speak like a living man to a living man. What do I suggest? Speak like a living neighbor and sharply rebuke all insincerity. If that does not work, open the door and order it out.

Come on, neighbors, and scourge me if I'm too hard. Will anyone cheer me for being honest?

Yours truly,

CONSTANCE."

Your sentiments are very lofty, Constance, and I don't think anyone will quarrel with your idea of friendship. I think insincerity is the greatest evil of our world—whether in religion, friendship, or love. I'm always glad to receive a letter from you.

* * * * * *

"Dear Marion,

Enclosed please find coupon and stamp and would like you to send me whatever helps you have on hand. I am particularly interested in the pleated skirt, but I am handy at sewing, etc, and can often use a help like you have. I am, like your other readers, very much in love with your page, and I don't know how we did without it so long. Thank you,

MRS. O'S."

I'm very glad that you like the page, Mrs. O'S. The helps you requested have been sent to you, and I hope they really do HELP.

Write me a longer letter soon.

* * * * * *

"Dear Marion,

Many thanks for the beautiful correspondence cards. They are lovely. Thanks also for the kind words regarding my answer. We all enjoy your column very much.

Yours,

NELLYBLY."

"Dear Marion,

I am glad to help by passing on the following: In a sick room where a single bed is used, an ironing board makes a splendid meal table. Place a chair either side of the bed, with the back of the chair to the bed, and place the ironing board across. The patient is able to eat in comfort if able to sit up at all.

E.M.P."

Thanks very much for the fine idea, E.M.P. I am sure it will make many patients comfortable, and save a lot of trouble for those who attend.

Polly: All you can do, if you are really sincere, is write to the man and explain the situation. There's no rule to follow when you have rejected a man's advances and now desire to pick him up again. I gave some hints a few weeks ago, in response to another inquiry, on how to write letters of this kind. If you send more particulars and your name and address, I shall be glad to draft a note for you, and send it privately to you.

* * * * * *

H.Y.: Thanks for the splendid recipes, which I shall print just as soon as I can find space.

* * * * * *

J.E.: I'm holding your letter out for a few days, as I am not just sure whether I should publish it. Perhaps I could help more in a private reply?

Marion.

ENTERTAINING GUESTS

A Series Giving Hints on Arranging Parties.
By LAURA.

THE LEATHER WEDDING.

The Leather Wedding is a little harder to plan for than other anniversaries as leather is not as easily used for decorations, but one woman who gave this celebration solved the difficulties very cleverly by making it a book party.

For invitations she used tiny, red leather-bound memorandum books, which may be bought at the ten-cent store, and on the first page she wrote: "Please come and represent your favorite book at our Library Party. Bring this memorandum with you—you will need it." This was signed, with the address, date, and hour underneath.

The hostess appeared as a white-bound book entitled "Our Wedding Record." As she really had such a book, she copied it as nearly as possible in her costume. The various pages of the original book—containing the signature of witnesses, the marriage certificate, a register of guests at the ceremony, and a piece of her wedding dress pasted on another page—were all reproduced with great fidelity.

The host dressed as a "Record of Our Third Anniversary." He wore over his ordinary business suit, a straight long apron of brown imitation, with the title in gold-paper letters pasted at the top. Blank pages, entitled "Those Present," and "Remarks by Guests," were scattered all down the front of the apron, and he carried a huge fountain pen in one hand, which he offered the guests during the evening to sign the register, the guests wrote the names of the books they represented, and the remarks were, in most cases, extracts from the books.

During the evening a number of contests having books in the foreground were held, such as the literary version of the old game, "Twenty Questions," where one of the guests left the room, while the others decided upon some book—a well-known one—which he must guess by asking foolish questions.

A three-minute contest was held during which every guest was to write a telegram of exactly ten words, introducing the word "Three" as often as it could be done consistently with a message that made sense. Another three-minute contest gave all the uses to which leather may be put.

For lunch the host brought in leather-topped card tables and on each was placed a leather brief case and nothing else. Camp chairs were brought in and the hostess distributed from a leather handbag little red leather change purses to the ladies. At the same time the host gave to the men fresh memorandum books. On the first page was written a number, corresponding to cards in each of the leather purses. This provided favors for the guests and at the same time partners were matched for supper.

All the lunch was found in the case—first came a linen square, and four tea napkins; sandwiches in a book-like parcel; deviled eggs in another parcel, and slices of cake in a third. A tiny bottle of stuffed olives and a supply of loaf sugar wrapped in a paper napkin. Plates and cups were passed.

LOCAL SPEAKER.

MRS. CHARLES MACOUN

of Campbellford, secretary-treasurer of the Federated Women's Institutes of Ontario, who will speak at the Women's Section of the Produced-in-Canada Exhibition.

Her subjects will be "A Woman's Responsibilities of To-day" and "The Two Great Professions."

THE SATURDAY MARKET BASKET

The season is advancing rather quickly now, and fruit and vegetables are not so plentiful and there is not such a variety.

Merchants are now advertising the last call for peaches. Apples, pears and plums still remain on the market. Apples sell for 30 and 40 cents a peck; peaches, free stone, sell from 85 cents to $1.15 a basket and plums at 65 cents a basket. Pears range in price from 65 cents for a small basket to 85 cents for an 11-quart basket. Grapes are 50 cents a basket. Crabapples are 25 cents a peck. Eating pears still remain at 5 cents each or 6 for 25 cents.

Bananas vary in price, but are mostly selling at 3 pounds for 25 cents or 30 cents a dozen. Oranges range in price from 40 to 75 cents a dozen, and lemons 30 to 40 cents a dozen. California grapes are 2 pounds for 25 cents.

Potatoes are 15 cents a peck and sweet potatoes are 5 pounds for 25 cents. Carrots and beets are plentiful, selling at 30 and 40 cents a peck. Turnips may be bought at 5 cents each and cabbages are 5 and 10 cents a head. Large white heads of cauliflower are 15 and 20 cents.

Head lettuce is 10 and 15 cents a head; green and red peppers 3 for 10 cents. Tomatoes are very scarce, at 45 cents a basket. Celery is priced at 15 and 20 cents a bunch. Spinach is 15 cents a pound.

Melons still remain on the market. Honeydew melons are 30 and 40 cents each; cantaloupes 25 cents, and home-grown watermelons 15, 30 and 25 cents each.

A PROBLEM FOR YOUNG MOTHERS

Stomach troubles cause most of the distress of babyhood and childhood, and are the greatest problem that a young mother has to solve. The treatment for these digestive disturbances that make baby cry continually and disturb his sleep must be quick and effective, and above all, perfectly safe.

The absolutely safe treatment for disturbances of the stomach and bowels is found in Baby's Own Tablets. Thousands of mothers have had their problem solved through them. They are guaranteed to be free from all injurious drugs and cannot possibly do harm to even the youngest babe—they always do good.

Baby's Own Tablets regulate the stomach and bowels; banish constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fevers and promote that health-giving sleep which is so necessary to the welfare of the baby or growing child. The Tablets are sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

BOW PUMPS

One of the season's smartest shoes is a russet calfskin pump, intricately stitched, with a chic little bow of the calfskin instead of a buckle.

LOVELY COLOR

Delectable is a smoking pajama set of Nile green satin tuck-in blouse, gold trimmed, with peacock blue sleeveless long jacket and wide pajamas, with gold embroidery, lined by Nile green touches.

What a Joy Is Good Health

Mother and baby are healthy and happy. But they were not always so. There were many months of run-down health, of sleepless nights, excited nerves, worry and discouragement. Baby reflected mother's weakness and was cross and fretful.

But a friend recommended Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and by the regular use of this great restorative treatment the richness of the blood was restored, nervous vigor was increased, sleep came naturally, digestion improved, and mother was herself again. This is just what is happening in many thousands of homes.

It is a fine idea to keep Dr. Chase's Ointment with baby's bath soap so that it can be used after the bath to relieve chafing and skin irritations.

GET RID OF YOUR FAT

Thousands of others have gotten rid of theirs by my simple and efficient method of fat reduction without starvation diet or burdensome exercise, often at a very rapid rate and WITHOUT PAYMENT until reduction has taken place.

I am a licensed practicing physician and have made a careful study of the physiological requirements of the human body. This has enabled me to select such ingredients and in such proportion as in my opinion will produce not only a loss of weight without harm and an improvement in health, but with it an alleviation of all of the troublesome symptoms which frequently accompany and often are a direct result of overstoutness, such as shortness of breath on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, etc., not to speak of the relief from the embarrassment of being too stout. Stout persons suffering from such diseases as Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Eczema, Asthma and high blood pressure are greatly relieved by a reduction of their superfluous fat.

My treatment will relieve that depressed, tired, sleepy feeling, giving you the renewed energy and vigor which come as a result of the loss of superfluous fat.

If you are overstout do not postpone but sit down right now and send for my FREE TRIAL TREATMENT and my plan whereby I am to be PAID ONLY AFTER REDUCTION HAS TAKEN PLACE if you so desire.

TEACHERS HEAR FINE ADDRESSES

down and feel encouraged that we can improve to-morrow on to-day's work. We must put in the artist's touch, the heart behind it. It is the heart and not the brain that matters. We want the best that is in us.

"We have types of workmen. Some we call laborers, some craftsmen, some artists. In the olden day all the laborers brought up their masterpieces before they were accepted. We are invited upwards if we have given our best. There is a difference in ploughing. I like to see a man stop and examine his furrow and to not be satisfied until he succeeds in straight furrows. Teachers, encourage children to do their work so as to be ploughing the furrows straight. Go at your work cheerfully. While we are doing it we are revealing to others what we are. To go into the school in this way, we will.

Mr. Scarrow's address was followed by an excellent address given by J. B. Nelson, agricultural representative.

"The majority of what I have to say will interest the teachers in the country schools. Co-operation is a thing I suppose built right into rural life. Farmers started out in the beginning by clearing the land and building their homes. It seems to be born into rural people to work together.

"Though you are teaching possibly along intellectual lines, our work is to bring better economical conditions. So teachers work to make a better citizenship.

"We started out on demonstration work but have somewhat switched to teaching. We are giving short courses in winter. We are now working together, teachers with the younger ones, agriculture with the older ones. The chief working of the two together is the school fair. To-day it is the rare school which does not take part in a school fair.

"The school fairs are coming along better all the time because teachers, parents and school boards are taking more interest. By giving their constructive criticism in preparing the prize lists the work will be gradually fitting in with school work.

"There is not as much encouragement given to pupils as there should be. If every pupil took as much interest as the few do our fairs would be larger than they are in our country.

"Another thing where teachers might help out is to see that pupils bring exhibits in accordance with the prize list. Teachers too, should see that pupils bring work done at home certified by the parent not the teacher.

"When questions are sent out it is not for our own information but for some scheme being carried out by the county or Department. Teachers are asked to co-operate in this as well as in the short courses for the winter months. These short courses are worth while.

"I believe if the teachers would they could assist in the formation of the U.F.O. Clubs. We ask for co-operation in the formation of these clubs.

"Co-operation means working along similar lines so let us have this co-operation.

"If at any time you require a speaker we will be only too glad to assist for we possibly have a better opportunity of securing same than you have.

Friday Afternoon Session.

After the last session of the Institute was called to order, the president introduced Miss Walker, president of the Woman Teachers' Federation.

Miss Walker spoke a few words in the interests of the Women Teachers' Federation. She said that the Canadian Teachers' Federation was begun in the city of Winnipeg, the idea being conceived in a lumber shack by the meeting of four or five men. This year C. T. F. met in Winnipeg in the beautiful Parliament Buildings.

Miss Walker then gave a most interesting but brief description of the time spent at Winnipeg this summer attending C.T.F. An outline of the progress of the Canadian Teachers' Federation was given and a plea made for membership in the organization as the voice of the teachers. zation as the department recognizes the organization as the department recognizes the organi- The practical aims of the Federation were given in a most impressive way.

The following officers for this district were then elected for the ensuing year:

President—Miss Nellie Davidson

Vice-President— Miss Clara Dobbin.

Sec.-Treas.—Miss Beatrice Wilson.

The report of the committee dealing with the resolutions was then read by Mr. Downey. The following resolutions were read and adopted:

1. That the Department of Education be asked to provide a more interesting and attractive third reader as soon as possible.

2. That the re-opening date in September be the same for Public, Separate and High schools and Collegiates.

3. That the course of study in geography be made more definite and limited.

4. That we repeat the resolution of last year that the Department be asked to authorize, or permit to be used, a suitable collection of problems in arithmetic for use in second, third and fourth book grades.

5. That this Institute request the Department of Education to request that the Conservatory of Music discontinue the practice of holding music examinations on the same days as entrance to High school examinations.

6 In view of the fact that pupils frequently come from other schools with no evidence or record of their class standing, and since this presents a difficult problem in the new school which they attend, the members and teachers of this association urgently request that the Department of Education give this matter due consideration, and if possible prepare a printed form which will be filled out and sent with the pupil so that he may present it when seeking admission to another school. Such report should be uniform all over the province

The convention passed a resolution moved by Inspector Downey, seconded by Inspector Lees, that the section of this Institute send a letter of appreciation to Miss Duff, a former teacher in the Lakefield school.

In seconding Mr. Downey's motion, Mr. Lees spoke in the highest terms of Miss Duff's wonderful work; the great influence she has had on so many pupils, on the community and her exceptional qualities as a teacher.

It was moved that 'thank you' letters be sent to Dr. Kirkconnell, Miss Blanchard, Miss Cox, Mr. Spencer and Mr. Maurice Park for their services which made the evening's meeting such a huge success.

Mr. Lees reported on the Nominating committee, the following officers being elected for the ensuing year:

President—Miss Clara Dobbin.

Vice-President—Mr. J. H. Breckenridge.

Sec.-Treas.—Mrs. H. B. Jackson.

Corresponding Sec.— Mr. Richard Lees.

Executive—Anna Fitzgerald, W. J. Stacey, R. F. Downey.

Auditors — Misses Garbutt and Squire.

Miss Davidson gave a very practical paper on the School Library.

The books that must be in the library were given and then other books were suggested. At the first of the year go over the library and discard books that are of no use, then catalogue the books in a proper way.

Keep the library tidy. Keep track of the books taken out of the library and stroke off the books loaned when returned to the library.

The methods of raising money for securing library books was dealt with and they were reminded of the grants made by the Department for helping to secure books.

Splendid suggestions of the titles of books was given for the different grades.

Children should be led to use books so they will get a habit of reading. In the primer, tell the children that they may have a picture book to look at when they finish the number work. Let children read when they finish their this way you secure better work, and the children cultivate the habit of reading.

The Rev. Mr. McLean of St. Andrews Church gave a very inspiring and much appreciated address.

Mr. McLean said he believed work in church and in school were the same. A temple was used as a school for over a thousand years.

He said there were always some red letter days in his school life as Thanksgiving day and when the inspector came, because he gave them a half holiday. Another day was when teachers' convention came.

Mr. McLean said he came to congratulate the teachers of to-day. He said they were very fortunate with the books of the present day. In olden days the books of Babylon were made of clay and weighed ten pounds. We have only twenty-six leters to teach while the ancient teacher had three thousand, but in arithmetic they were hampered, as a small wedge was used for one and a large wedge for nine. Thus ninety nine consisted of nine large wedges and nine small ones.

He also stated that the modern teacher was at a disadvantage because the child's mind is filled with such things as ice cream and baseball. Teachers are asked to go on with the mind that is all ready full. It is filled with unessentials and it is hard to fill it with what society calls essentials. At birth, the mind is blank, but soon becomes as a page scribbled up.

In olden days teachers were expected to be a magician, but now the teacher is expected to take little minds and drive out so many of these unessentials and drive in the essentials.

He then told of a boy in Massachusetts who labored with old plum trees for five years and produced the beautiful Purple October plum. He also mentioned other things that Luther Burbank had done.

Teachers had to take some ordinary little life like the old plum tree and bring out of it something that is good.

Society is calling for leading out of certain qualities in minds and hearts of boys and girls. Are we making the most possible use of the memory. Too often memory is left undeveloped.

In Germany, Mr. McLean said, boys and girls are taught to remember correctly, but boys and girls in America were taught to reason but not to remember correctly. There should be selective memory, so boys and girls can go out and remember the things he should. The child should be taught to the leading out of reason, to select good and discard evil. No one man has all the truth and no one man has all the faults. Teach children what is best and what is good.

At the present time there is a great conflict in science. Some say all the truth was written before 1860 and some claim that all the truth has been written since 1860, but Mr. McLean said nothing is true, because it is old or new.

The child should have power to develop and select.

Appreciation should be taught to the child. After all, if we do not succeed in making the pupils appreciate facts, they will drop them at the school door. If there is no appreciation of literature, the child will drop his books at the school.

He told of one man who wanted two hundred and fifty feet of space on library shelves filled with books. To him literature was space. He had no appreciation. Poetry should be repeated aloud to appreciate it.

Mr. McLean mentioned the appreciation of art. It is one thing to get pupils to draw a picture and another to appreciate a picture.

American tourists speak of "I did the National Gallery of London," or "I did the Louvre," but they do not appreciate the pictures.

Music hath charms, and pupils should be taught appreciation of music. Some time should be spent each day in listening to good music.

Good, true and beautiful should be taught to pupils. Appreciation will lead to advancement.

Mr. McLean then said if there was no element of worship in work, it is not what it should be.

He then expressed his wish for the success of the teacher with his pupils.

At six o'clock a hundred or more sat down to a dinner in the artistically decorated Downyflake Tea Room.

Mr. Arnold Spencer, Miss Alma Blanchard, and Mr. Maurice Park presented a musical program. Each artist was accompanied by Miss Cox.

Dr. Kirkconnell, principal of the Lindsay Collegiate, gave a most interesting address on "Behaviorism."

"A gathering of teachers shouldn't get altogether away from teaching," he said.

"I try to give ten minutes a day to some book bearing on education. J. D. Watson's "Behaviorism" and "Mentality of Apes" are two recent books I have read.

"A very scientific experiment performed in one laboratory can be performed in all others and the same results reached.

"The two most divergent schools of psychology differ irreconcilably on the question of mind. Those who are here to-night probably all belong to that preponderant group the members of which believe that man has a mind which controls or should control his body; that he can will to do or not to do certain things; that he can make up his mind regarding this or that course of action.

"The mind, if man really has one, must be immaterial; it cannot have mass or weight or volume, or any of the qualities we associate with matter. The brain, of course, is matter and is part of the body. The problem, then, arises: How can that which is immaterial get hold of and influence that which is material? A hammer can mould iron, a paddle can use water as a level to propel a boat, because they are all of the same order of material things. But how can the intangible, immaterial so-called mental qualities of willing or desiring lift my arm?

"The behaviorist, true to his method, decides to experiment. He learns all that psychology has to teach him and then attacks this problem.

"The behaviorist sees no need for the presence and action of mind. To him the action is as automatic as putting a nickel in the slot and pulling out a package of gum, or, perhaps better, as automatic as the motion of the water in a system of hot water heating. The part in contact is heated in the furnace, becomes lighter, rises, and the cooler water takes its place. It is difficult to see how, on this view, a man could keep hold of the wheel of his car if his hand was stung by a bee.

"As a rule its are the poorest of material for the experiments of the psychologist, and infants are not available except in rare cases, the psychologists the world over have made the freest use of animals, chiefly dogs, rats and apes."

Several splendid examples to prove these statements were given to the teachers.

A hearty vote of thanks was moved by Inspector Lees and seconded by Inspector Downey to the speaker and other artists of the evening.

The meeting adjourned until 9 a.m. on Friday.

65 and Independent

To this couple, growing old together, the twilight of life has been made a time of happiness, of mellow comfort.

"How few are independent!" they thought—and so they planned. Now comes the reward, for, as long as they live, their Dominion Life policy assures them a regular income.

Among the equipment on two German liners, recently launched is an apparatus for projecting an invisible ray that penetrates fogs. The beam is said to increase by twenty times the distance through which the human eye can see, is as efficient by night as it is by day and retains its power even in fogs. It is expected to play an important part in promoting greater safety at sea.

Plymouth 2-Door Sedan, $995

. . . The Secret of this Car's Amazing Popularity

—Plymouth's Greater Dollar Value looms up when compared with the few other cars in the lowest-priced field . .

The important difference which people at once recognize when comparing the new Plymouth with the few other cars of its price-class is its greater dollar-for-dollar value.

To place any of these cars beside the Plymouth is to become conscious immediately of contrasts which merely begin with its full-size and style.

Riding in the Plymouth, you sense at once the Plymouth's fundamental strength and durability, as well as the abundant power and speed of its new "Silver-Dome" high-compression engine; and the safety of its internal hydraulic 4-wheel brakes.

We are confident you will declare it as unapproachable in performance as it is unapproached in dollar-for-dollar value-giving. 1425

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1928.

This is a day of mingled good and evil planetary influences, according to astrology. It is a first-rate sway for churchgoing and for kindly deeds that keep persons out of mischief.

Although there is a sign making for disorder of thought and action, the mind to-day should be receptive to religious suggestion.

The sway is fairly favorable to the clergy, who are warned to avoid political controversy, which appears to be forecast in the aspect of Mars.

New leaders of thought again are prognosticated, and among them will be several who gain immense followings. Extreme eastern and extreme western cities will become fields for reform work of tremendous scope, astrologers foretell.

Interest in the building of new churches and cathedrals is to be keen in the coming months when there is to be a great spiritual awakening among the people.

The seers declare that tremendous upheavals of public opinion will take place along lines not generally expected. Again they predict many surprises in the progress of the American people, who are to enjoy continued prosperity and to experience immense changes.

A London astrologer predicts that the position of Uranus and Mars will cause sudden revolutions and changes of government on the continent. Military dictatorships again are prognosticated.

Wind-storms that will do damage in northeastern states are foretold. Alaska also will suffer from severe storms.

The moon now is well placed for the comfort and advancement of workers who are to have added influence in government affairs in all parts of the world.

Preachers and actors are warned that there is a planetary aspect which will cause the public to be critical regarding the use of the human voice. The next fashionable fad will concern speech, which will be cultivated as assiduously as leanness has been in the past, astrologers foretell.

In the first few months, aggregations of capital greater than any previously mobilized will be represented in combinations of business interests, it is forecast.

There is an aspect strong to-day that is read as favoring the wearing of new clothing, especially if it is of rich material.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of pleasure journeys in the next year of their lives. These subjects of Virgo who are in the second or fourth decade may expect romance.

Children born on this day probably will be keen and sensitive. They are likely to manifest unusual talents and to be able to reach supreme success through them. Both boys and girls have many friends and admirers.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 8, 1928.

Benefic aspects dominate to-day, according to astrology, but there are certain strong adverse influences to be taken into account.

Women appear to be subject to the unfavorable sway of the stars and for that reason they should keep in beaten paths, domestic and professional.

This is not a very lucky wedding day for the reason that hard work appears to be associated with the marriages under this rule of the planets.

Theatres come under this sinister sway, which seems to be unlucky for the introduction of new plays or players.

Uncertainty in the attitude of industry toward politics or business may be expected while this configuration prevails. Quick changes of sentiment are indicated.

This is read as an auspicious rule for those who exercise authority. While it prevails they should benefit, although they are likely to be unfairly and severely criticized.

Under this planetary government there may be a disposition to tear down instead of building. This applies alike to persons in the public eye and members of families.

Warning is given that divorces in cities will continue to multiply because, the seers say, there is opportunity to choose successors in the severed domestic partnerships.

If the stars are rightly interpreted, there is to be a new era of sentiment and true love. All the signs appear to promise the return of the old-fashioned ideals in marriage.

Children are to be welcomed with a new enthusiasm and families will be larger than they have been in the last quarter century, the seers prophesy.

According to the ancient lore, this should be an auspicious day for hiring women employees.

Banks are to give great opportunities to prove their talents as financiers, it is foretold, and there will be developed several women who make international fame.

Persons whose birthdate it is may have a year of many unusual experiences. They should not expect too much from friends, for they may be disappointed. These subjects of Virgo often are too popular for their own good.

Children born on this day may be inclined to venture in financial matters. The subjects of this sign often speculate and risk fortune. The women frequently are leaders in society.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

Contributing to the upward swing of the corn market was announcement of vessel quarters yesterday for 160,000 bushels of corn to go from Chicago to Georgian Bay in Canada. Another bullish influence was trade gossip saying the fact is firmly fixed in the minds of producers that the country is entering the new crop year with corn supplies near the exhaustion point, with present price levels netting the farmer little more than a cent per pound on the farm.

Wheat, rye and oats sympathized with corn strength, but at times the wheat market was bearishly affected by word of beneficial rains in domestic winter wheat territory and by hedging sales from the northwest; there were also rain reports from India giving some relief from drought.

Provisions averaged lower, influenced by downturns in the value of hogs.

STERLING EXCHANGE

MONTREAL, Que., Oct. 6 (Canadian Press).—Sterling exchange rates were quoted here yesterday as follows:

Demand $4.84⅝ to ½.
Cables $4.84 13-16 to ⅞.

BUTTER AND EGGS.

TORONTO, Oct. 6.—Quotations on the Toronto egg market continued steady yesterday at the prevailing prices. It was declared that new advances in prices, especially in respect to "firsts," were being impeded by the weakness of the American market, and it was declared, further, that the United States market would, generally speaking, be the governing factor during the next few months in determining the market trend in Toronto both for fresh and storage eggs.

The butter market is reported a little improved during the week. The Toronto and Montreal stocks became less and that resulted in more forward buying during the present week than during the three or four weeks preceding.

FOURTH AUTOMATIC EXCHANGE OPENED

London Will Have Twenty by End of 1930—120 in England.

LONDON, Oct. 2. —(By the Canadian Press).—London's fourth automatic telephone exchange has just been opened at Bermondsey the first three having been Holborn, Bishopsgate and Sloane. Two more will be completed this year and fourteen in 1929 and 1930.

In different parts of the country there are now a hundred and twenty automatic exchanges, and several are to be opened shortly.

Is Constipation Coming Back?

It's only natural that your liver slows up these days. Soups replace salads; canned things are served instead of fresh vegetables. You are eating more meats and hearty dishes, but taking less exercise. And you feel it. Your liver is getting lazy, bowels are irregular. Perhaps the head feels heavy, and you don't get up in the morning with the pep you had in July.

ABBEY'S will help your system adjust itself to heavier foods, heavier clothes and lack of exercise. ABBEY'S will quickly arouse the sluggish liver—sweeten the stomach—regulate the bowels and kidneys.

A sparkling glass of ABBEY'S in the morning will make you feel as bright and snappy as October sunshine.

The Aviator

Absolute dependability is aviation's first law and that is why I use dependable Champion Spark Plugs.

Champion is the better spark plug because it has an exclusive silli-manite insulator specially treated to withstand the much higher temperatures of the modern high-compression engine. Also a new patented solid copper gasket-seal that remains absolutely gas-tight under high compression. Special analysis electrodes which assure a fixed spark-gap under all driving conditions.

Beginning October 4th and every Thursday thereafter the Champion Sparkers will broadcast over the Blue Network of the National Broadcasting Company from 8:30 to 9:00 P. M. Eastern Standard Time.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE WEEKLY COLUMN

A goodly thing it is to meet
In Friendship's circle bright,
Where nothing stains the pleasure sweet,
Or dims the radiant light.
No unkind word our lips shall pass,
No envy sour the mind,
But each shall seek the common weal,
The good of all mankind.

Douglas, the third, were too far away to come; the other two, Mrs. Thomas Cooper and Mrs. David Miller, were present

Of the charter members Mesdames Ellen Brown, W. Wasson and R. Matthews were present.

Among the secretaries and treasurers, or those who held both offices combined, were the first secretary, Mrs. William Wasson, Mrs. Matthews, Mrs. John Payne, Mrs. George Clements, Mrs. George Taylor, Mrs. Wallace Anderson, Mrs. John Sargent, Mrs. Henry Clements, Mrs. Adamson, Mrs. J. A. Crowe.

Among those of the first year who were present were Mrs. W. Wasson, Mrs. R. Matthews, Mrs. Ellen Brown, Mrs. Henry Clements, Mrs. W. Dunford, Mrs. R. Somers, Miss Sarah Miller, Miss Margaret Miller, Mrs. Thomas Miller, Mrs. Nathan Payne, Mrs. S. J. White, Mrs. R. Bullock, Mrs. W. Forsythe, Mrs. W. Davis, Miss Clara Kidd, Mrs. Thomas Clements, Mrs. George Clements.

Two sisters, Mrs. William Davis and Mrs. Ellen Brown, were present. Mrs. Donald McIntosh, a third sister, who is now in Warsaw, but was an early member, was unable to be present.

A few who had been steadily members for over twenty years were present.

Three elderly gentlemen who have always helped the Institute a great deal, Messrs. E. Hawthorne, John Rose and Uriah Payne, were among the guests.

On September 12-13 the Women's Institute Convention of the three Temiskamings was held at Swastika.

A southern visitor to that convention, tells us that one thing which was particularly interesting to her, was the stories of pioneer life, told by the delegates at that convention in the north.

"One of the pioneers was put off the train because he had no money to go farther, walked to Kirkland Lake, found gold, and is now a millionaire."

One delegate told of coming from England to farm, she being a bride with a London trousseau and neither herself or husband knowing anything about stock or farming. Another told that their house was the only one that escaped when fire devastated their section of the north, and how they managed to make a place for thirteen others who had lost their homes.

These were but a few of the instances related of the joys, sorrows and hardships of their pioneer life.

The magnificent pioneering spirit was shown in the telling of these stories which gave glimpses with casualness even humor, of what it means to lay the foundations of a nation.

These delegates represented an area 500 miles long by 100 miles wide, clay belts, gold and silver mines, pulpwoods, lake and river country and the reports of what the Institutes are doing were worthy of such women.

It is wonderful the Institute work which is being done in the north.

Miss Smith, public health nurse, New Liskeard, spoke appreciatively of the co-operation with health work as regards school posters and clinics.

Many branches reported health activities. Some supplied eye glasses, others helped with dental and baby clinics and supplied milk for the undernourished in schools.

The Institute workers told of the remodelling of bales of clothing, sent up from Old Ontario, for motherless and needy families.

Miss Jessie Bass of Thornloe gave a crisp description of what the girls were learning, through their judging courses, in correct clothing, house-planning and foods.

She suggested that some of these things would be most profitable on the Institute monthly programmes and made out a list for the use of the delegates in the program corner of the convention. The travelling library, short courses, literature and lecture services are useful and appreciated in the Temiskamings where distances are great and the country in the making.

So, too, are the the bales sent from the south, for many are the fire sufferers and the needy where the houses are wooden and the winters long, but the women capable, neighborly and brave.

A discussion on program planning led by Miss E. J. Guest, brought out this abundantly, as the delegates emphasized the underlying principles of co-operation, seasonableness, balancing the cultural, practical and social; getting out local talent and finding the problems of the homemakers in making the study plan for the year in each branch.

As we read of this convention in a more isolated and primitive part of our own Ontario, should it not encourage and inspire the Institute workers of Cavan and the other districts of southern Ontario, to still greater effort to assist these pioneers in the more sparsely settled parts of the north.

The winter season is approaching, bringing more leisure to us, and greater hardships to them.

Their winters are long and severe, hence the need for warm and adequate clothing.

Last winter Cavan Institute sent several bales of good clothing to clothe school children in a northern district. This was sent in answer to an appeal from a public school inspector in the north.

Doubtless this winter, work will be done along the same line. Always when a call comes, the Institutes quickly respond, and thus show that they remember their motto "For Home and Country."

Quebec Harvest Is Seriously Damaged

QUEBEC, Que., Oct. 5—(Canadian Press)—The Quebec harvest was seriously damaged as a result of unfavorable weather during the month of September, according to the latest report issued by the bureau of statistics of the province. In the Montreal district alone the cereal yield will be 25 per cent. less than last year, while potatoes are inclined to decay. The harvest has not been finished in that district the report states, and the crops have been harmed by frost, rain and cold weather in general.

The north of the province seems to be hardest hit of all, for the report states that in the Lake St. John district cereals have been considerably damaged by frost.

In Temiscamingue the potato yield will be so small that potatoes will have to be imported. While cereals are also reported as considerably damaged by frost.

Promram committee for November meeting, Misses Irene Brown and Pessie Johnston.

Dr. Hershey was then asked to address the meeting which was greatly appreciated and most interesting, speaking upon "Health in the Home"—first aid work, how to dress cuts, burns, fractures, sprains, etc., without the aid of a doctor. He also gave instructions how to treat appendicites, pregnancy, children's diseases, such as whooping cough, measles, mumps, etc., also dwelled upon contagious diseases such as diphtheria, typhoid, smallpox telling how infection spreads and the use of inoculation, vaccination and the uses of antitoxin and vaccine. His talk was very beneficial and a lesson given for each one to remember.

The remainder of the program consisted of a reading "The horse has something on the auto yet" by Mrs. C. W. Varcoe. Reading by Mrs. Lily Turner, Johnnie's History lesson. Verses on the Woman's Institute, read by the president Mrs. Lottie Nichol.

A vote of thanks was given to Dr. Hershey and Mrs. Waldie which brought the meeting to a close by singing the National anthem.

A delicious lunch was served by the hostess and a delightful half hour was spent in social chat.

Army chemists report the successful use of a chemical to purify water when boiling is not practical. It is prepared in the form of a small tube about the size of a cigaret, and one tablet is sufficient to treat thirty-six gallons of water. Chemicals have been used for some time to purify water, but the chief advantage of this preparation is that it is said not to deteriorate and affects the taste of the water but little.

Any Woman Can Look Stylish

By MAE MARTIN

Most stylish looking women know simple ways to make last season's things conform to this season's styles. Thousands of them have learned how easily they can transform a dress or blouse, or coat, by the quick magic of home tinting or dyeing. With true, fadeless Diamond Dyes, anyone can do this successfully. The "knowhow" is in the dyes Diamond Dyes don't streak or spot like inferior dyes. New, fashionable tints appear like magic over the out-of-style or faded colors. Tinting with Diamond Dyes is easy as bluing and dyeing takes just a little more time. Only Diamond Dyes produce perfect results. They have been perfected by over 50 years' experience. Insist on them and save disappointment.

THORNTON IBEY WINS CUP AGAIN

Is Senior Champion of Campbellford High School For Fourth Year.

HOLDS ONE TROPHY.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 6.— For the fourth consecutive year, Thornton Ibey distinguished himself on Thursday afternoon as the senior champion of High school athletics. His total of thirty-five points wins for him the right to retain the warden Davidson cup for the first year of its competition. Last year, Ibey won the silver trophy which had been running down the field days for the past fourteen years. Among the names inscribed on this venerable trophy is that of Douglas Frederick, who after graduating from high school here, made a splendid showing at the R.M.C. sports in Kingston. His prowess there, won for him the silver bugle, which is the trophy so keenly contested by the gentlemen cadets.

Bernard Blute collected twenty-eight points during the afternoon and the intermediate championship cup. Blute came into prominence this season through the medium of softball. He was largely responsible for the long line of victories which the Clerks won and in several of the games, his "salary wins" saved the day. He has counted as many as twelve strikeouts in a seven innings game.

W. Malhoit won the junior boys championship with thirty one points. William Brennan was runner up with a score of twenty-two. Stuart Anderson was second to Bernard Blute with nineteen points and George Sloggett was the runner up for the senior championship with twenty-one points.

For the girls events, Mary Phillips won the senior championship with twenty one points and Jean Nelson was second with twelve. Zeta Wilson of Keene won the junior championship with fifteen points with Susan Atkinson a close second, three points behind the winner.

During the afternoon E. H. Greig, B.A., principal of the school acted in the capacity of grounds official and scorer. Earl Stephens, B.A., was the official starter. The judging was left in the hands of Dr. H. O. Richardson, chairman of the board of school trustees George O'Sullivan, school trustee and Charles Palliser.

In the long list of events this afternoon, three new records were established. Malhoit extended the length for the junior boys broad jump by ten inches. The new mark now stands at fourteen feet five inches. Five and one half inches were added to the senior girls broad jump, setting the record at eleven feet eleven inches. A matter worthy of note is that the junior girls broad jump record was also increase to twelve and one half feet and is ahead of the senior record. This has been the case for several years.

Cups and individual prizes will be presented on Friday evening of next week. The occasion will be the official school party given in honor of the new students and the champions of Field Day. The social function will take place in the auditorium of the school at eight o'clock.

This year the weather was ideal for outdoor sports, and the events were run off with a minimum of delay, a matter of much appreciation by the large number of friends and athletic fans who attended.

When Pain Comes

Two hours after eating

What many people call indigestion very often means excess acid in the stomach. The stomach nerves have been over-stimulated, and food sours. The corrective is an alkali, which neutralizes acids instantly. And the best alkali known to medical science is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. It has remained the standard with physicians in the 80 years since its invention.

One spoonful of this harmless, tasteless alkali in water will neutralize instantly many times as much acid, and the symptoms disappear at once. You will never use crude methods when once you learn the efficiency of this. Go get a small bottle to try.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. Each bottle contains full directions—any drugstore.

The Oil of a Million Tests

The Shack in The Hollow

We boys were glad to get rid of th ose three wild west fellows. They promised to leave town if we would not turn them over to the Sheriff, so we set them free, after we had captured them, mind you. And we watched them as they started off, headed for the west as fast as they could go.

But we gave them credit for too much. We forgot they had been chumming with Briggen and his Pelham gang, and not one of the fellows in that gang could ever be trusted to keep his word. I talked it over with Jerry Moore that night, and Jerry said he didn't think they had gone. "Those fellows aren't afraid of anything," says Jerry, "and we should have had more sense than to think they would walk all the way back to the wild west. And what's more, we took their rifles away from them—you know they're not going to leave until they get a chance to get those guns back." I said I thought Jerry was right about that, and the more I thought about it, the more I believed it myself.

So I wasn't much surprised when I bumped into one of the three wild west fellows on Monday after school. I was on my way down to the river, and I just turned a corner off the main road and wow! there he was—he nearly scared the wits out of me. He laughed at me—he was the one who owned the raven which was found dead in our clubhouse, and for which we gave him a dollar—the same fellow who wrote the poetry stuff and left it in our clubhouse.

"You're Seckatary Hawkins, aren't you?" he asked.

"Yeah, that's me," I answered. And he took his big, wide hat off and made a low bow. I hurried past him and ran down to our clubhouse, not looking back once. The boys were holding a meeting when I came in. I told them what I had seen.

"Those three kids aren't hanging around here for nothing," spoke up Jerry Moore; "they want those rifles we took away from them for safe-keeping, and they will give us plenty of trouble—you can bet your sweet life on that!"

Our captain got up and told us all to keep quiet about it, if those boys were still here, it was up to us to find out where they were staying, and he ordered us to scout around in twos. Bill Darby and I went together, over to Pelham, to see if Briggen's gang knew anything about them, but the Pelham side was deserted. It seemed as though they were steering clear of us lately. Jerry and Johnny had gone up to Cave River, but they came back and reported that they had not seen hide nor hair of the three fellows. Soon all came back with the same report, and we adjourned till the next day.

* * *

On Tuesday we all met after school and started down to the river. We could hear some shooting going on, and I said to Bill Darby: "Come on, let's see where the shooting is." But Bill shook his head and said he wasn't going prowling around any more until those three wild west fellows were gone for good. I got mad and went by myself. I shoved on up the bank, under the willows, and I must have walked a mile, I guess—every time I thought I was near the shooting, the sound seemed to come from farther away. I didn't know what to think about it. And I was just going to turn back when I heard a voice call out: "Hey! What's your hurry?"

I turned quickly, and there up the bank a piece, standing beside a tree was that wild west fellow who tried to be a poet. He was cutting his initials in the bark of the tree. He had them almost finished—they were "R. R." I tried to look as if I wasn't interested much, and said to him: "Oh, I'm not in any hurry," and I walked up to where he stood. "Where's your two pals?" I asked.

"Oh," he said, smiling at me, "they went to get something to eat."

"What do you fellows live on, out here in the woods?" I asked.

He winked at me. "Anything," he says. "Just now we are going to have ducks—wild ducks—the boys will bring back two or three, and that farm house over yonder gave us some biscuits and butter."

"You've got to shoot ducks," I said.

"I know it!" he says. "What you think we do—put salt on their tails?" He laughed then, but I didn't like the joke.

"No," I answered, "but you need guns to shoot ducks."

"Sure!" he says, "and pretty good guns, at that."

I didn't say anything for a while—I was wondering if these fellows had got into Doc Waters's office and taken their guns, which we had left with Doc to keep.

"Rifles are hard things to shoot ducks with," I said.

"Yep!" he says, "that's why we use our shotguns."

I nearly fell over. "What!" I says. "You mean you've got shotguns, too?"

"Sure!" he said. "You don't think we'd come up here with just a couple of rifles, do you?"

"I should say not!" I answered, and I tried to laugh a little, but the laugh sounded cracked. Then we didn't say any more for a while, and I watched him finish the "R. R." he was cutting in the tree bark. Then I said: "You three fellows promised you would go back west where you came from."

He didn't seem in any hurry to answer me. He slowly closed his big knife—golly! it was some frogsticker!—and he put it away in his pocket. "Well," he says, "you boys got a lot to learn yet. You can make a fellow promise anything when you got him in a corner; but after we got away from you and begun to think it over, why, we just couldn't leave a fine bunch of boys like you. We thought we'd just like to pay you back for the way you treated us."

"Well," I says, "I've got to be going—"

"Wait a minute!" he broke in. "You said you weren't in a hurry—"

"Yeah, I know," I says, quickly, "but that was before I knew you had shotguns. So long!"

And I didn't wait to hear any more—I ran back to the clubhouse to tell the fellows what I had seen and heard.

* * *

As I was going to school on Wednesday morning, I met Doc Waters and told him all about the three wild west fellows. Doc laughed. "Say, Hawkins," he says, "you ought to tell the Sheriff—you know he can pinch those boys for carrying guns, and what's more, you remember they stole the brass door-knobs off Judge Granbery's house."

"Yes, I know," I said, "but the Judge got 'em back, and what's more, one of those fellows is a pretty nice boy—he thinks he is a poet—but what we don't like is that they've got too many knives and guns."

"Well," says Doc, "I thought we had put an end to the danger when we had their rifles, but I'll see if the Sheriff can't get those shotguns away from them too."

"Well, you'd better hurry," I says, "and be quick about it—first thing you know they will be shooting one of us kids; you know they got it in for us because we took their rifles."

"Don't worry," said Doc, "they're not going to shoot anybody."

I let it go at that, but as I walked along I didn't feel so sure about it. If Doc had known those three fellows like we did, he might have changed his tune.

Nothing happened until Thursday, and then it happened good. And I happened to be the goat too. That poor boob, Clarence Wilks, ought to be fired out of our club by rights. The poor kid hasn't got much sense, and I always let him get by with anything, but I'll be switched if I can stand him much longer. He and I were the only ones in our clubhouse on Thursday, after school, the other boys having gone fishing in the back-water pool. Clarence and I were fixing things up in the meeting room, when Bloom! I heard a gun go off, and the next second all the glass in the back window was broken with a crash. I ducked and Clarence went under the table. I ran to the door and shut it and drew the bolt. Hardly had I done so when there came a pounding on the door. "Open!" yelled a voice. I knew the voice—it was one of the three wild west fellows. "Not on your life!" I yelled back. 'All right!" said the voice; "stick your gun in the window, Rufe."

I peeped through a crack in the door. I saw three figures go around the side of the clubhouse. The next second I opened the door and struck out for the river as fast as my legs would go. They didn't see me. I don't know what else happened while I was gone. I ran down to where the boys were fishing and told them all to come up, quick. They jumped up quick enough, but when I told them about the shotguns the three new fellows had, they all crawled under the bushes—all except Jerry Moore—he came along with me and we ran on. When I looked back once or twice, I could see the heads of our fellows sticking up out of the bushes, but they always ducked back pretty quick again. "Come on, Hawkins," called Jerry, "you and me—we ain't afraid of shotguns. Let those cowards stay where they are."

We hustled on up to the clubhouse. Not a sound. Not a soul in sight.

"Where's Clarence?" asked Jerry.

"Look under the table," I told him. We both looked, but he wasn't there. He wasn't anywhere. "Gone!" I says. "They've got him, Jerry! We've got to save that poor kid—they'll give him an awful beating."

"Yes," says Jerry, "or maybe something worse. But where will we look for 'em?"

"Follow me," I said; "I think I know." I started down the bank, under the willows, to the place where I was talking to the fellow a couple of days ago. I told Jerry to watch for a tree with "R. R." on it. We scouted around for a few minutes, then I heard Jerry yell: "Here it is!" I ran up to him, where he stood, looking at the initials on the tree. "What does that stand for?"

I told him it must be one of the fellows' initials—as I had heard one of 'em called Rufe. Jerry thought it meant "railroad," or something like that. I said it might mean "raggedy runaways," or "rough road," those fellows being tramps, but I was most sure it stood for a name of one of the boys.

"Listen!" said Jerry, all of a sudden. We heard a scream. "It's Clarence! Come on, hurry!"

* * *

We ran as fast as we could down the grassy hill, cutting through the trees and jumping over the bushes till all of a sudden we saw them—down in the hollow—they had a shack down there, made of boards and logs which they had swiped from Dobel's farm, and up against the side of the shack stood Clarence, his back up against the boards, his arms stretched out and his hands tied with ropes to round spikes in the shack. There was a big knife sticking in the boards right alongside of him, and just as we came up we saw one of the fellows, standing at a distance, throw another knife—it sailed through the air and Clarence screamed again, but the knife missed him an inch and stuck in the side of the shack. My heart leaped into my throat—oh, boy! I never felt so sick in my life. The fellow was just going to throw another knife, but he happened to look around and saw us standing on the side of the slope. "Come on, Jerry," I said, and together we walked down into the hollow. Clarence saw us and yelled: "Hurry up, Hawkins! Get me out of this."

We walked up to the other two fellows who stood with their shotguns over to one side. The poet fellow smiled at me, but I didn't smile back. I said: "What's our boy been doing that you should punish him like that—scaring him to death?"

"Oh, he was sassy," said the poet fellow, still smiling; "he doesn't talk nice to callers, and when we came in your clubhouse he said we were outlaws, so we just took him down here to show him what a fine and fancy knife-thrower Homer is—his pappy taught him how, you know."

"You fellows might hurt somebody throwing those knives that-a-way." I said. All three of the fellows laughed.

"Say!" said the poet fellow, "if Homer ever missed a throw, he would die of shame—he ain't missed once, yet."

"And I never will," said the knife-thrower they called Homer, coming up to me and poking his finger in my face, "unless I miss on you, and just because you think I'm such a bum knife-thrower, I'm goin' to let you take your pal's place up there against the shack."

Clarence grinned and yelled: "Yes, that's it, show Hawkins how good you can throw knives, Homer." Two of them grabbed my arms, while the knife-thrower went up to untie Clarence. Jerry bellowed like a bull when he saw them grab me. "Let go my pal!" he shouted, "or by Jingo! I'll make you sorry."

But one of the fellows just turned his shotgun around and said: "Now, don't get excited, you might do something foolish that you will be sorry for." Jerry backed away. They got me over to the shack, and Clarence was so glad to be free, he sat down on a stone and said: "Hurry up, I want to see this show.' They had me strung up against the shack in less time than it takes to tell. Jerry would have liked to help me out of it, but he couldn't do anything. The fellow who was called Homer picked out a nice shiny knife from the bunch lying in the grass. Clarence was just aching to see him throw it at me, but Homer winked at the poet fellow, and the next thing we knew the knife was sticking in the ground alongside Clarence's legs. With a yell Clarence jumped up and ran in back of Jerry. That made me laugh, too, but only for a second—for a knife came flashing through the sunlight right at me—I closed my eyes and heard it strike the boards right above my head, so close that I could feel it in my hair, which was standing straight up by this time. Oh, boy! they had me scared. The poet fellow came over and stood by my side. Another knife came whizzing right between us and stuck in the boards above my shoulder, and I caught my breath—but the poet fellow didn't seem afraid at all, he just grinned and said: "Isn't Homer a wonder?" I said: "Listen, Rufus, we'd better tsop this monkey business before somebody gets hurt."

"Ah!" he says, "now you're talkin' business that isn't monkey business at all. If you'll tell us where our rifles are, I'll stop the knives."

Bang! Another knife struck, right by my leg. I could feel it against my stocking. "All right!" I yelled. "It's a bargain." Rufus held up his hand. Homer was just about to sail another knife at me, and who knows, if that knife had ever sailed, I might not be here to be writing this, because Homer's hand might have slipped—well, I guess I looked pretty badly scared, and they all laughed at me, but I didn't care. They untied my hands quickly and then the poet fellow stepped up and held out his hand. "Shake!" he says. "You're a game sport, and I like kids like that. Rufus Rogers—that's me and I never go back on my word, even if you do say so. Now, tell us where are our rifles."

I told him, and then I squeezed out from that bunch of knives, and Clarence sawme getting out, and he knew it was time for him to beat it, which he did, as fast as he could go. The three fellows held me or I would have caught Clarence. But they wanted to know where Doc Waters's house was, and where he kept the rifles, and I had to tell them. Jerry and I got away from that place as quickly as we could, and beat it back to the clubhouse.

"I'm sorry I snitched, Jerry," I said, as we walked along.

"You couldn't help it, Hawkins," he said; "they had us where they wanted us that time."

* * *

The next day was Friday, and Jerry was waiting for me alone at the clubhouse after school. Ever since the window was shot out of our clubhouse, the other boys have been afraid to go in it. I told Jerry I was worried ever since I told the three wild west fellows that Doc Waters had the rifles. He says he was, too. So we went down to Doc's office together. Of course he was glad to see us, but we didn't feel like laughing, and he said: "Why, you're positively gloomy, you two—what's up?"

So we told him what had happened the day before, and how the three wild west fellows knew where their rifles were, and that it was a sure thing they would try to break in Doc's house and get them back. "And we don't want to see you get hurt, Doc," I said.

"Oh," said Doc, laughing, "don't be afraid of that—"

"You don't know those fellows like we do," I broke in. "Doc, I'm goin' to ask you a favor—it's for your own sake—will you let me take care of those rifles?"

"But, Hawkins, if I do that—"

"It will be best, if you do that," I said, quickly. "Doc, you know me, you've been around our old clubhouse enough to know that I've got it figured out—I'm only trying to steer clear of trouble, now and maybe save your life—"

"All right!" he said, shortly, and pressed his lips tightly together. "I could do worse than trust you, Hawkins." He opened a cupboard beside his desk. "Here are the rifles. Take them."

Jerry and I took the guns back to our clubhouse. "Now," I said, "go down and tell those three wild west fellows we have their rifles—they won't have to break in Doc Waters's house to get them."

* * *

But Jerry did not deliver the message. The shack was empty. Nobody home. We hunted high and low for the three strange fellows, but could not get on their trail. And the next day being Saturday and no school, we spent the whole day trying to find one at least of the three to deliver that message. All in vain. And in the evening Jerry came to my house and knocked on the window—it was a good thing Mother had company, or I might not have got out—but I sneaked around the side door and met Jerry. "Listen," he says, "I've found the three wild west fellows—they're on their way down to Doc Waters's house."

"Oh, golly!" I exclaimed. "Come on, let's catch up with them before they get there."

We ran. As we turned into Doc's street, I saw three shapes dodge into an alley. I ran faster. The alley was dark. I stumbled. The next thing I knew I felt somebody picking me up. I gave one look and saw it was the poet fellow. "I've got your guns!" I yelled at him.

"As I live and breathe!" says the poet fellow. "It's Seckatary Hawkins!"

"Yeah, it's me," I said, quickly; "what were you fellows going to do—where were you going?"

The other two wild west fellows came up. The boy called Homer held up his finger—it had a rag around it and there was blood on it, too.

"Homer cut his finger bad," says the poet fellow; "he grabbed hold of one of his knives too quick today—"

"So you were goin' in to have Doc Waters fix it up, weren't you?" I asked, beginning to smile, now.

"Sure!" says the poet fellow. "And while we were in there, we were going to take a peep around for our rifles—"

"Well," I says, "let's go in and have Doc fix up that cut finger first, and after that, if it doesn't hurt too much, we can go right down to our clubhouse and get the rifles."

Which we did.

"ONE GOOD TURN"

Prizes announced each Saturday for Best Letter, Story, Drawing or Poem.

READ THE RULES CAREFULLY

In our next contest the title must contain the words "ONE GOOD TURN." You must write a letter or a verse or draw a picture.

Write on one side of paper only.

Your composition must be original. You must write it without assistance from older persons.

Manuscripts or drawings will not be returned unless accompanied by self-addressed and stamped envelope.

All contributions must bear the writer's full name, address, and age. Don't forget to give your age.

The contest is open now. It will close next Saturday at midnight; all contributions must be received by that time.

Prize-winners will be announced on Saturday, October 20.

The Prize will be a Seckatary Hawkins Adventure Book.

Address all submissions in this contest to Seckatary Hawkins, care The Examiner Peterborough.

THANKS FOR THE PASSWORD

Those who made up their minds to keep at it until it was solved found the password to be just that very thing—"Determination."

It was somewhat difficult for some, so this week we are going to have an easier one. Here it is:

D U I T G R E A T

Sounds like "Do it great," but that isn't it. The letters are all jumbled up, and it's only one word. Take your pencil and paper and begin changing the letters around and keep at it until you have a word that means heartfelt thanks. It's easy. Try it.

A Letter From The 'Seckatary'

Dear Club Members:

We often hear the old saying, "One Good Turn Deserves Another." It is a lesson in gratitude. If somebody does us a kindness, we say, "Thank You." That is a way of expressing our gratitude. We say "Thank You" because at the moment there may be no other way for us to show that we appreciate the kindness. But when the time comes with an opportunity to show our thanks in a more material away, we are quick to step in and do fo that friend what once was done for us.

I don't think there is anything more beautiful in the world than true gratitude. Anybody who lacks that virtue is poor indeed. Happily there are not many boys and girls in this world who fail in being grateful. We should always remember that we owe gratitude to our parents, our teachers, our true friends. And we should ever be ready to do "One Good Turn" to anybody who needs our help. We must not wait until somebody does us a good turn before we do them a service. No matter what we do in this world, we are paid back some day, some way, somehow.

Now, then, our contest this week will be entitled "One Good Turn." You can write a beautiful story or verse under that title. Or, failing in any of these qualifications, just sit down and write me a letter telling me all about some good turn that you have done, or that somebody has done for you.

Our Weekly Meeting.

The winner of the prize this week is Keith Ross, R.R. 1, Norwood, who wrote a very fine description of the Fall Fair.

This was so simple a competition I thought every member would enter, and I am disappointed because there were so few.

But everyone knows about a good turn, and if you members wish me to think well of the Peterborough branch of the Club you will rush in your entries at once.

Watch For This—

Next week I will announce a competition in which the first prize will be a wrist watch given by the father of two of our members. We'll have to decide, of course, whether a member who never entered any other competition can enter this one. So get in your "Good Turn" entry now.

Here are today's letters:

Keith Ross, of Norwood, tells so well about what he saw at the Fair that he wins the prize this week. Here is his letter:

"Dear Seck:

I am trying your competition this week and hope I win a prize.

Fall Fair.

We are spending a day at a Fall Fair. We enter the grounds and see the midway in full swing; everything from throwing balls to spinning wheels. Then there was a little sideshow that had the biggest man in the world and the other side was a show with the smallest man in the world. There was everything from sword-swallowers to merry-go-rounds, ferris-wheel and crack-the-whip.

Now for the cattle building which had a lot of entries of Durhams, Holsteins, Aberdeen Angus, Jerseys and a lot of other kinds, some with red, blue, yellow, white and green ribbons denoting the prize in each class.

Now we are in the horse barn and hear the whinnying of the horses and little colts. The kinds of horses in here are Percherons, Clydesdale bloods and a lot of other kinds. There was a ribbon on whichever one got the prize.

The next is the sheep and swine. As we walk through them and hear the bleating of the sheep and the grunting of pigs we see their owners feeding them.

The poultry building is next, which we are standing right in front of. The one we enter first is the rabbit section. Here we saw many varieties such as Angoras and Chinchillas. There were many varieties of hens, Rhode Island Reds, Langshangs, Orpingtons, and many other kinds, also geese and ducks.

Now the Manufacturer's Building is next where they are illustrating a lot of things.

The flowers, vegetables and other things are in a building by themselves, which are very nice.

If you are out for a good time, go to a Fall Fair.

Yours fair and square,
Keith Ross."

Norwood, Ontario.

Robert Spence tells about the fair at Lakefield. I think he must have had a nice time, don't you?

"Dear Seck: I hope this letter will be in time for your contest on 'Fall Fair.'

'Fall Fair'

"Our Fair was on the 25th and 26th of September. On the first day the exhibits were placed and judged. On the second day the fair was open to the public. The first things I went to see after getting my ticket were the exhibits in the big building. At one end of the building was the exhibit of the Public and High Schools. The rest of the building was filled with many exhibits of vegetables, fruit, cakes, bread and fancy work. After going all through this building I went out and went through the midway where there were a number of games of chance, a weight guesser, but no sideshows or rides. There were a number of races for horses on the race track and after this was a dog race and foot races. Another race was the slow car race in which the object was to see which car would take the longest to go around the race track. The weather was quite cold so I did not stay much longer after this was over. At night there was a concert in the town hall.

"I am sending a member's name and I will be waiting for your picture in the mail.

"Yours fair and square,
Lakefield, Ont. "Robert Spence."

Adolphe LeClair sends in this little essay about the Fall Fair, which I think is a very good boost for the fair.

"Dear Seck:

As I did not win a book last time, I am going to try to win one this time.

Fall Fair.

The Fair has gone a while ago, but sorry to see it go. And I hope next time it will be just as good, so everybody can enjoy it just as good.

Yours fair and square,
Adolphe LeClair."

490 Gilmour Street,
Peterborough, Ont.

I fixed up your list, William, and the pictures have been sent to you.

"Dear Seck:

I mailed to The Examiner the names and addresses of six new members for the Seckatary Hawkins Club. I forgot to put my name and address with same.

Yours fair and square,
William Calladine."

332 Burnham Street,
Peterborough, Ont.

I, too, hope Beatrice O'Grady wins some prizes in our competitions. The way to win is by keeping on trying. Enter every week's contest till you win.

"Dear Seck:

I have been reading all your stories and letters since the club started, and now I have decided to join. I am now sending in my membership application. I hope I will win some prizes after a while. I will close for now.

Yours fair and square,
Beatrice O'Grady."

138 Perry street,
Peterborough, Ont.

Here's a real member! Claude Shewen forgot to enclose the stamp when first writing, so just to be FAIR AND SQUARE he sent it along later. Thanks, Claude.

"Dear Seck:

I got my badge and card. I liked it fine. Daddy forgot to put the stamp in my letter for them so I will send it now to be fair and square. I am sending my drawing for the contest.

Yours fair and square,
Claude Shewen."

R.R. No. 9,
Peterborough, Ont.

Good work, Phyllis! Both pictures have been sent to you and I hope you like them.

"Dear Seck:

I am sending in these names and I hope I get another picture. I sent in seven as I thought maybe I could get a picture of you alone too. I am just sending in one stamp as I want them all sent to me.

Yours fair and square,
Phyllis Watson."

182½ Hunter street, w.,
Peterborough, Ont.

Teresa Torpey found out what the password was. We are glad to have her as a member of the club, and hope she tries some of the competitions soon.

"Dear Seck:

I have been reading your stories and I am very interested in your club. I wish to join your club, so I am sending in my application. I hope I win a prize. I have worked out your password for this week and I found it was 'Blue Ribbon.'

Yours fair and square,
Teresa Torpey."

R.R. No. 7,
Peterborough, Ont.

Here is a splendid little letter from Isidore Black, who is trying to get a lot of new members:

Dear Seck:

I received your welcome letter and was glad to hear you haven't forgotten me.

I'm sending you the name of a new member which I hope will be satisfactory

I enjoy your stories and letters in the paper and can't wait until I see the evening paper. I'm looking forward to receiving a picture from you soon.

Yours fair and square,
Isidore Black.

476 Charlotte street,
Peterborough, Ontario.

P.S. I'm trying hard to get six new members so I can be honored by a picture of the gang.

We're all glad to have this letter from Phyllis Watson, who won a book. I'm sure many other members would like a book too—the competitions are open to all.

"Dear Seck:

I was awfully pleased with the book. I have read it already. I just love it, and as you see I am trying for another.

Yours fair and square,
Phyllis Watson."

They Keep Him in Best of Condition

"My husband had a very heavy job, far too heavy, in fact, but we found that by using Dodd's Kidney Pills regularly that he kept in fine condition," writes Mrs. F. Waters, 93 Winnette Street, Woodstock, Ont. "I could mention several cases that I know of, particularly one of a blacksmith, where Dodd's Kidney Pills saved him from an operation. We wouldn't be without a box in the house." Rest may give temporary relief, but Dodd's help remove the cause of the pain.

Gehrig Clouts Only Homer of Second Game

YANKS STAGE EARLY ATTACK TO WIN SECOND

New York Club Now Favorites For Another Baseball Championship.

FIELDING WEAK.

Will Play Third Game of the Series at St. Louis On Sunday.

A rousing home run smash into the right field bleachers by Lou Gehrig in the first inning, with Cedric Durst and Babe Ruth on base, started the downfall of Alexander. The chutes were still greased for him in the second, when the Yankees put over another run, and he slid out of the picture entirely in the third, yielding the mound to the veteran, Southpaw Clarence Mitchell as the Yankees scored four runs with an attack led by Babe Ruth.

Had No Control.

Old Pete didn't have a thing. The marvelous control that has always been his forte and the stuff that had enabled him to baffle the entire Yankee array two years ago were gone. Forty-one years, it seemed, had finally taken their toll. The weather-beaten Nebraskan, fidgeting and fumbling with his ill-fitting cap, shifting his chew of tobacco, was a somewhat pathetic figure on the same mound from which he walked off, acclaimed one of the greatest of the world's series heroes two years ago at the end of the deciding game of the 1926 series.

The first man to face Alexander, young Durst, slashed out a single that Frankie Frisch jumped for and barely missed with his gloved hand. The third man, Babe Ruth, walked on four pitched balls, and the fourth, Gehrig, drove the first ball pitched deep into the right field bleachers. The end for Old Pete was in sight right there. In the pinch, his control had failed him and the crack of Gehrig's bat sounded the impending doom for the veteran

Alexander weathered the second inning with no more than a run produced by a pass to Bengough, a sacrifice by Pipgras and Durst's second single, but the climax came in the third. Facing Old Pete was the Babe. It was a situation that had all of the well-known elements of drama. These two had been the last to match wits in the final game of the 1926 series, in which Ruth failed to get a hit of any sort off Alexander's delivery in the three games the latter pitched.

Alexander worked the count to two strikes and one ball, but Ruth caught the next pitch on the end of his bat and punched it to centre for a single. It was revenge for Ruth and the beginning of the end for Alexander. Gehrig was walked and Bob Meusel, again holding up his end of the heavy Yankee firing, drove a long fly down the left field line that bounded into the boxes, off the foul line, for a two-bagger under the ground rules. Ruth trotted home. Lazzeri was retired on a nice play by Andy High, but Robertson walked. Bengough singled to right, scoring Gehrig, and Alexander's work for the day was over.

There was anything but a pleasant situation facing Mitchell when the southpaw spit-ball artist took the hill with the bases full. He did not improve it by hitting the first man to face him, Pipgras. This forced in Meusel. Ben Paschal, taking the place of Durst because of the shift in pitchers, smashed a single to centre that scored Robertson, but Bengough was caught at the plate on the throw-in and Koenig retired to end the inning.

Mitchell put an abrupt check to the Yankee attack after that, allowing only one safe hit and one run for the remaining five innings.

He toiled, but sufficient damage had been done to decide the game, and the southpaw's fine relief efforts were wasted, so far as any effort on the outcome was concerned. The only other run he permitted came in the seventh when Meusel walked, stole second and came in on successive sacrifices by Lazzeri and Joe Dugan.

The Cardinals, aided by the wildness of Pipgras as well as loopholes in the Yankee defence, collected all their runs in the second inning. They missed other opportunities to take advantage of their rivals' mistakes in the first and third. Their big guns, Bottomley and Chick Hafey, didn't have a solid shot to fire all afternoon, whether there were men on bases or not. After the third inning, only four men got to base and the opportunities to score were correspondingly scarce.

With one out in the first, Pipgras walked High and Frisch in succession, but Bottomley fouled out weakly and Hafey struck out

The Yankee pitcher was constantly in the hole, and it looked as though his stay on the mound would be brief when he walked Harper to start the second frame. In succession, Wilson doubled, Maranville singled and Lazzeri threw wild on Alexander's grounder, letting in two runs. Maranville scored the third when Douthit hit into a double play, engineered by Koenig, and High popped out to end the inning.

VIEWS ON SPORT

The third game of the 1928 World Series will be played in St. Louis on Sunday.

The Yankees destroyed another myth of baseball fandom yesterday (the notion that they couldn't beat Pete Alexander) when they won the second game of the 1928 world series by a 9 to 3 count. The victors staged a batting attack against the Cardinals on the first three frames and drove 'Old Alec' from the mound in the third with a barrage of base hits.

The New York club are now regarded as favorites to win their sixth world's championship and unless the Red Birds take a brace on themselves the series may be brought to a close in the Hugmen's favor on Sunday when the play will be resumed at St. Louis.

* * * * * * *

Pipgrass had rather a close call from suffering the same fate as that of Alexander. He got off to rather a bad start, yielding three runs in the second inning while his support was getting rather wobbly. Bolstered up by his own team's attack in the fore part of the game, he showed a reversal of form after his first stage of wildness and held the St. Louis clubmen hitless till the final strike was called.

Five-pin bowling will undoubtedly be the predominating form of recreation for the G. E. employees this year as the number of teams that have made application for accommodation on the schedule now number eighty, approximately five hundred players, an increase of six teams over last year.

* * * * * * *

The ladies section is made up of sixteen teams this year, and will probably bowl as a separate division, having valuable prizes for high average, high three and high single. The prizes for the men will be very substantial and should work up keen competition in all groups and for the works championship which will be rolled off at the end of the schedule.

With cold weather and rain bringing the tennis season to a close, badminton enthusiasts are commencing to think of the winter's play. Prospects are for a better year than ever before in this popular winter's sport. All last year's clubs will be in operation again and it is expected that two or three more will also be added.

HUNDREDS VISIT PERCY FAIR

brought in for the day, but they could not promise that the racing would take place another day. Generally they spoke in favor of it, but explained that there would have to be a meeting of the board of directors before the date could be officially set.

Harness racing at Warkworth has for many years been a favorite drawing card. This has been the case both for owners and spectators. The generous treatment afforded the out of town horses and the fat purses offered for the different classes have done much to make the town a favorite with the owners of the harness horses. They were more than a little disappointed as they left the grounds.

Determination was one of the essential qualities for attending the fair yesterday. The ground was rain soaked everywhere and in places the mud made the footing extremely precarious. But in spite of these conditions the merry throng surged hither and yon from one place of amusement to another and the delighted screams of the ladies as they were whirled merrily around in the chair plane or rode in the vertical circle of the ferris wheel must have done much to elevate the drooping spirits of the directors. Every courtesy was shown those who attended. Vehicles of an appreciable weight were constantly being mired in the soft, slippery ground. In most cases it was merely that the wheels could not get traction in the slippery ruts that had been worn in the sod. Teams were brought into play to assist in the congestion. One after the other, cars and trucks were drawn along the slippery way by the horses especially procured for the purpose.

In the evening there were many forms of entertainment to suit the taste of even the most fastidious. The midway of Joyland Shows was in full swing at the exhibition grounds. In the town hall, Arlie Marks and her players staged "The Family Upstairs." They played to a capacity house. Following the performance, dancing became the order of the night, with music by the Excelsior orchestra of Hastings.

SENATORS HOLD SIGNAL DRILL

Ottawa Squad Open Big Four Schedule at Home To-day.

PLAYERS ON SICK LIST.

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 6 (Canadian Press).—A fully attended signal drill last night terminated the preparations of the Ottawa Rugby team for the local opening of the Big Four schedule here this afternoon against Montreal. Coach Gilhooly led the Senators through their formations for an hour at top speed.

Injuries continue to play havoc with the coach's task of settling on a definite line-up. Connell has been away for two days with a sore side, and Coulson is also shelved with a knee injury. Radley has been limping on an ankle injured in the Camp Borden game, and aggravated in practice this week, but it is expected that he will be used to-day.

Frankie Pinkey, whose tackling all week has been of high order, is slated to start at right outside, pairing with Captain Harold Starr on the other flank. The middle of the line is presenting the biggest problem, but Radley and Stanyar will likely be paired off there when the teams line up. If they are, Ketchum and James will do inside wing work, on either side of Bruce, who is taking over his old assignment at snap. Bruce was out of the Borden game with a bruised shoulder. Lynch is slated for quarter, as usual, with Connell, Tubman and Brassington on the half line and Emerson at flying wing.

The team is in good condition and ready to do battle. There is an air of confidence around the camp, although the men realize that the Wheelers will give them just about as hard an argument as they will be called upon to face this season.

HARLTON FOUND IN COUNTY JAIL

Escaped Murder Suspect Now Serving Four Months at Ottawa.

IDENTIFIED BY PRINTS.

OTTAWA, Oct. 6.—George Edward Harlton, fugitive from Middlesex jail since last September and wanted to face trial for the murder of County Constable Waddell in 1925, was yesterday discovered under lock and key in Carleton County jail.

Identification was made by fingerprints received by the criminal identification department of the Royal Canadan Mounted Police. Harlton was sentenced on Sept. 4 to four months at hard labor, after being convicted of placing a barricade across the tracks of the Hull Electric Railway and the C.P.R. He was calmly sitting on the bank waiting to see what would happen, when the arrest took place. He gave the name of George Henderson.

It was only on Thursday that Harlton's fingerprints reached the criminal identification department of the R.C.M.P., submitted in customary police routine. Inspector Foster announced yesterday that a check-up showed that the fingerprints of "Henderson" were undoubtedly those of Harlton.

Chief Inspector of Detectives Emile Joliat at once communicated the full facts to the Attorney-General's Department at Toronto, and also to the London police, and is at present awaiting word as to what disposition will be made with the prisoner.

Inside Sportin' Dope—By a Wise Cracker

Mister Sporting Editor:

Well, Mac, me and the Belleville Nationals sure did our stuff in the Ontario final serious. Them Walkerville birds never did have a chance after I picked them to cop the title, and while Mister Hoot Gibson is getting the bulk of the credit, the customers knows what it means when I step in and call a winner. Anyway I'm due to kiss Manager Walter Gerow the 1st time I see him. Serious though, Mac, I guess everybody up this way was just tickled to death to see Belleville come through and knock off them Walkerville high-hatters. It just goes to prove what I've always claimed, that the quality of ball played in the Central loop is as good as anywhere in Premier Ferguson's territory, if it ain't better. And it also serves to call attention to the fact that the only team in Ontario which was able to take a serious from the Nationals was our own Petes, which beat Belleville 4 games out of 6 and trimmed the mighty Mister Gibson twice in the 3 times the Nationals' ace faced them. Seeing that nobody else either in the Central League or the playoffs could do the trick, it naturally shows the Petes as a pretty fair ball club after all, though the way they performed against Kingston and Oshawa didn't look like it.

We're in the midst of the world serious, Mac, but as only 1 game has been played when this is wrote they ain't a great deal to be said yet. The 1st battle gave Mister Babe Ruth a better start on 1 leg than he usually has had in a big money serious with 2 props under him. 3 hits outa 4 times up there ain't bad for a bird with a busted ankle. The Babe, as I call him, along with Mister Gehrig and Mister Meusel, just naturally battered a win for the Yanks, while this Mister Waite Hoyt, still billed as the schoolboy pitcher, had too much stuff for the Cards, except Mister Jim Bottomley, and that's about all they was to that 1st game. How the rest'll go you ain't going to get me to say, Mac, although I don't mind admitting that if the Cards win out it ain't going to make me feel awful sore. No matter which of them gangs win, Mac, ain't going to make no difference much to you or me—we don't get none of the gravy, so why should we worry?

A bird asked me the other day, What about hockey? Now, there's a nice question, seeing they don't seem to be nobody thinking about it at all. Mebbe this guy's query may start something. Anyway the season ain't so very far away, and they ought to be a start made to get organized. We got to get in there somewhere. We can't put in a winter on the movies alone, and the best cure for a long cold season is a winning hockey team.

Well, Mac, next week we'll know all about the world serious, the Rays-Copper Cliff bout and other big events, so I'll ease outa the picture until then.

Sportfully yours,

A. WISE CRACKER.

BALMY BEACH IN EXHIBITION GAME

Matched Against McGill For Inauguration of Senior Rugby at Molson Stadium.

MONTREAL, Que., Oct. 6.—(Canadian Press.)—Balmy Beach and McGill go into to-day's exhibition game, inaugurating Senior Rugby at Molson Stadium, each minus the services of one of their star half-backs. The Beaches will be without Red Foster, the star running half, and McGill will go into the game without Bill Lovering, whose injured back will keep him out of the contest. Orville Kritswiser, Regina recruit to the red team, will take Lovering's place on the backfield.

Indications are that the two squads will go into the game equal favorites despite the fact the Dominion champions are rated almost as strong a squad as last year. Yesterday's rain has tossed in the element of uncertainty into the struggle and errors may turn the tide in favor of either squad. The Beaches, however, with four weeks' drill and two practice games behind them, should be in a better position to profit by conditions than the so-far untried McGill team.

To-day's contest will be much in the way of an experiment with McGill, particularly at the line positions. Two weeks' drill has as yet failed to bring out the strength and weaknesses of the various candidates for line positions and the McGill coaches will have a better opportunity to-day of judging their players' abilities when they see them under fire.

SOX WIN THIRD GAME

Clash With Cubs in Chicago City Baseball Title Series.

NINE PITCHERS USED.

CHICAGO, October 6 (Canadian Press).—Baseball at its best and worst was on exhibition yesterday as the White Sox defeated the Cubs, 13 to 11, in the third game of the series for the city baseball title before a crowd of 20,000 at Wrigley Field.

Nine pitchers, four Sox and five Cubs, paraded from the ballpen to the mound and back again. Young Ed. Walsh finally received credit for the victory. Percy Lee Jones, the third Cub hurler, was the loser. The Cubs outslugged the Sox 18 to 18, but they also outerrored them at the critical moments. Included in the features of the game was a double steal in the seventh by the Sox, in which Reynolds stole home.

The Cubs have won two of the three games played.

WEDDING BELLS

DOWNE—SHERWIN

(Examiner Correspondence)

ROSENEATH, Oct. 6.—On Wednesday afternoon, at 2 p.m., the United Church parsonage was the scene of a very pretty wedding, when Laura Mae, daughter of Frederick and the late Ann Sherwin, became the bride of Leslie Emmerett Downe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Downe. Rev. R. M. Brown officiated.

The bride looked charming in a frock of powder blue satin crepe trimmed with ribbon pleating to match.

She wore a beautiful necklace of pearls and carried a bouquet of kordes roses.

The bride was attended by Miss Jessie Waldie, who wore a gown of maize georgette and carried a bouquet of pink asters.

Mr. Clarence Sherwin, brother of the bride, acted as best man.

The happy couple left for motor trip to Toronto and other points west. On their return they will reside in the village.

WHAT'LL THE ANSWER BE

To-day old man rugby is being crowned king of the sporting pages throughout the country and especially in Eastern Canada, where the season goes into full swing. More than once have the sporting writers tried to dope out the gridiron and have missed their count by a mile but there is nothink like trying, so here goes.

There is one thing certain and that is, that the old game of push and shove is in for the greatest season it has had in a good many years. And according to the ballyhoo in circulation, the old Toronto Blue and White chances are not so hot. They don't seem to have grabbed any stellar lights to build the team around and certainly don't impress one as having a very heavy line. However, rugby is a game of miracles and upsets, so the old U. of T. may still show the boys how.

In Montreal it is the general opinion that "Flin" Flanagan, the new McGill coach, will not march out a very strong squad on the field this year, but at Kingston there if a different story to tell. The tri-color are putting together one woosey team and look as if they had the inside track to start the season.

In the "Big Four" Argonauts, Montreal, Ottawa and the Hamilton Tigers are preparing for a titanic struggle. The Tigers have remained together and have the services of the former Delta star Huck Welch, and seem to be the team to trim, even if the Winged Wheelers of Montreal have secured the services of Red Moore, the former Balmy Beach star, who played such a remarkable brand of rugby last fall.

The Balmy Beach squad under the direction of Dr. Harry Hobbs, will line up what looks like a new team built around the snappy backfield star, Ross Robertson.

Let us figure on your new furnace

The Findlay furnace built on scientific B.T.U principles

The Findlay Warm Air Heating System leaves no room for faulty heating. It begins with a flawless furnace—one of the very first to be built on scientific B.T.U. principles—the only absolutely correct method of measuring furnace heat and heat losses.

The Findlay Furnace has leak-proof joints, a big oversize water pan that assures moist, healthful air at all times—in all rooms . . . a dozen features of merit . . . from ash pit to radiator dome.

Installed by Experts

The Findlay Warm Air Heating System is installed under the guidance of heating and engineering experts. Heating difficulties are therefore met and overcome at the outset—not in the dead of winter. When the installation is made, simply fuel up, light up—and every room in your house is heated properly.

Guaranteed

Findlay Installations are guaranteed. Two things make this guarantee possible: the Findlay Furnace itself; and scientific installation. They are the only real bonded systems offered today.

Write for our book, "Heat and Health with WARM AIR." Ask also for the Findlay Service Chart, which makes it easy for you to draw up an exact plan of your house. From this we will give you—without charge or obligation—an estimate of cost for installing the Findlay.

YANKS STAGE EARLY ATTACK TO WIN SECOND

New York Club Men Favorites For Another World's Championship.

FIELDING POOR.

Will Play Third Game of the Series at St. Louis on Sunday.

(By Alan J. Gould, Associated Press Sports Editor.)

YANKEE STADIUM, New York, Oct. 6—(Canadian Press.)— Having shattered the illusion that they were not able bodied enough to go through a ball game and win, the New York Yankees staggered out yesterday and destroyed another myth—the notion that they couldn't beat Old Pete Alexander.

With an attack that was short but cruelly savage, the rapidly recuperating champions of the American League leaped upon Old Pete, drove him from the box in the third inning with a barrage of base hits and trounced the St. Louis Cardinals for the second successive day.

The final score was 9 to 3, the margin of the Yanks' superiority even greater than in the opening game and the prospects, as a result, point to another world's championship for the men of Miller Huggins. Unless the Cardinals take a sudden and decided brace, it may not take long to end the battle that will be resumed, in the third game, at St. Louis Sunday.

Another colorful crowd, totalling 60,714 in paid admissions and numbering slightly less than the opening day throng, saw the Yanks capture their sixth straight world's series game in decisive fashion. They saw the New Yorkers jump upon Alexander from the start, driving him to cover in short order, but they also saw George Pipgras, the youthful Yankee right hander, emerge spectacularly from a close call in the early innings that nearly forced him to share the same fate as Old Pete.

Pipgras Wild at First.

Pipgras not only got off to as wild and woolly a start as he has ever experienced, yielding three runs in the second inning, but his support by the crippled cast also was shaky. Whether it was the bolstering effect of his own team's attack, the fate of Old Alex or just a sudden return to form, Pipgras turned over a new leaf and blanked the National League champions for the rest of the game.

Pipgras let the slugging Cardinals down with four hits altogether. In spite of his bad get-away, but for the last seven innings, he yielded only two safe blows and permitted no one bit Frankie Frisch to get beyond first base. Where he had been as wild as a hawk to begin with, Pipgras had wonderful control through the last seven innings. Where he had been unsteady and obviously nervous he was as cool as a Mathewson or Hoyt, with monotonous regularity he turned back the invaders, featuring one of the best pitching come-backs the series has ever known by striking out eight men, including the slugging Jim Bottomley no less than three times.

Perhaps the only thing that saved the Yankees, as well as Pipgras, in the early stages of this melee, was the fact that Alexander was even less effective than his young rival. Certainly opportunity beckoned to the Cardinals in the first two innings, without being capitalized as much as it might have been, but meanwhile Old Pete was meeting his doom in unceremonious, if also somewhat tragic fashion.

A DELIGHTFUL PRESENTATION.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

McNABB'S LADIES' WEAR SHOPPE WILL PRESENT THEIR FALL FASHION REVUE AT THE CAPITOL THEATRE ON MONDAY, TUESDAY, AND WEDNESDAY EVENINGS OF NEXT WEEK — BEAUTIFUL FLORENCE VIDOR IN "THE MAGNIFICENT FLIRT," THE FEATURE SCREEN ATTRACTION.

On Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday evenings of next week, McNabb's Ladies' Wear Shoppe will present their annual fall fashion revue at the Capitol Theatre. The newest creations in ladies' wear, gowns, sport costumes, wraps, and coats will be displayed by eight beautiful mannequins, all members of the Peter Robinson Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire. Miss Margaret Dickson, silver medallist at the Toronto Exhibition, and known as the girl with the bird voice, will sing each evening during the fashion revue.

"Magnificent Flirt,' 'with Florence Vidor, the Screen Feature.

Once again beautiful Florence Vidor blossoms out as a comedienne of the first water in "The Magnificent Flirt," the feature screen attraction, which will be shown in conjunction with the fashion revue.

"The Magnificent Flirt" presents the fascinating star as an out-and-out flirt, a resident of Paris, a lover of the gaieties and frivolities that mark high life in the French capital.

She becomes interested in a count, whose nephew is, by the way, in love with her daughter. The count gets a false impression of Miss Vidor, and then things start to happen. He accuses her of infidelity and reckless loving, helping to build the story up to a dramatic climax, a climax which turns out to be a hearty laugh.

Beautiful settings mark "The Magnificent Flirt." The French modernistic type of architecture and interior design has been used throughout and, undoubtedly, when this production's run is over, many homes in the United States will have adopted this treatment.

Miss Vidor's gowns are more striking than any shown in her previous vehicles, and her acting excels that of "Honeymoon Hate," "Doomsday," or others of her pictures of the past.

Added to this is the unusual supporting cast that has been given the star, the names including Loretta Young, Lon Chaney's leading woman in "Laugh, Clown, Laugh"; Albert Conti, of "The Legion of the Condemned" fame; Marietta Millner, formerly Thomas Meighan's lead; Matty Kemp, juvenile in "The Good-bye Kiss"; and Ned Sparks, the poker-faced comedian of Richard Dix's "Sporting Goods."

AT THE REGENT.

"ROSE-MARIE" IS A CHARMING ROMANCE

Recounts a Thrilling Yet Tender Love Story Against a Pictoral Background of Great Beauty; Cast One of Season's Best

Lovers of thrilling, yet tender, screen romance against a pictorial background, will find something to satiate their appetities next week at the Regent Theatre.

It is Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's screen version of the famous musical play, "Rose-Marie," in which Joan Crawford has the title role, and James Murray is seen as the romantic and mysterious young man who descends from the north woods into a fur trading post, starting trouble for everybody, including himself.

Before saying anything about the human actors I want to speak a word in behalf of pictorial backgrounds, scenic grandeur and one of the best musical scores that any motion picture has ever had the good fortune to possess.

"Rose-Marie" has been filmed against the beauty spots of the West—the Feather and Merced Rivers, Yellowstone National Park, Canadian and American Rockies and Las Turas Lake, which lies high in the lap of the Santa Monica Mountains in Southern California. Better scenery than that could not have been secured anywhere for a logical picture story. From a photographic standpoint I want to say that the cameramen have taken the full advantage of a great opportunity.

The musical score is largely from the compositions of Rudolph Friml and Herbert Stothart, whose music did so much to make "Rose-Marie" a success on the speaking stage and whose "Indian Love Call," "Rose-Marie" and other numbers are known throughout the English-speaking (or singing) world.

Joan Crawford, whose screen work during the last two years can be described best as "marvelous," outdoes her other performances in the title role of this production. I can think of no other young woman who could have done better on the screen as this naive little French-Canadian backwoods heroine.

James Murray, rather new to the screen, gives a remarkable performance as Jim Kenyon, the romantic young murder suspect. The remainder of the large cast also do good work.

AT THE GRAND.

THE DUMBELLS IN "WHY WORRY"

Captain Plunkett made no mistake when he took the daring step of adding girls to his tenth annual Dumbells Revue, "Why Worry?" which comes to the Grand Theatre October 19th and 20th.

The remarkable showmanship that has kept The Dumbells at the top for nine years is still in evidence in this latest production, for while the chorus of dainty misses add materially to the charm and beauty of the presentation, it is the "old reliables" like Al. Plunkett, "Red" Newman, Fred Emney, Harry Binns, Morley Plunkett, Cameron Geddes and Charlie Jeeves, that carry on the traditions that have made this organization the most successful combination in the theatrical world today.

Jessie Butt and Aileen Parker, prima donna and dansuese, respectively, are two notable additions to the acting, singing and dancing strength of the company. Cameron Geddes, another old favorite is credited with the biggest song hit of the present season, a negro melody that will live for generations.

The musical act brings out the finest display of real music. Howard Fogg with his violin, Louis Crerar and Fred Emney in piano duets, The Dumbells Quartette, Plunkett Brothers Trio, Cameron Geddes and Harry Binns in solos, Fred Emney and Al. Plunkett in sentimental fooling and the male chorus singing "The Flag," are highlights of the most enjoyable half-hour ever dropped into the middle of a girl and music revue.

"Why Worry?" opened in Toronto as usual, running concurrently with the National Exhibition, and the tour will follow the usual trail blazed by The Dumbells many years ago and followed each successive season.

Dragoons Honor Two Former Commanding Officers and Other Comrades.

The presentation of a beautiful shield bearing regimental crest of silver was made to retiring officers of the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons at a dinner which was held in the Officers' Mess at the Armories last night. The presence of commanding officers from all Peterborough units was a feature of the dinner following which a brief toast list was run off with appropriate proposals and responses.

The retiring officers honored were Lieut.-Colonels T. J. and Dalton T. Johnston, Major Hills and Captain Abraham, all of whom made fitting acknowledgment of the shields. Among the visiting officers were Major Dodds, Major Stevenson, Captain Doug. Fletcher and Lieut. H. Stewart.

YANKEES HOPE FOR FOUR WINS

Look Forward To Duplicating Last Year's Showing in This Series.

PLAY AGAIN TO-MORROW.

ABOARD THE YANKEES' SPECIAL EN ROUTE TO ST. LOUIS, October 6 (Canadian Press). — Flushed with two clear victories over the St. Louis Cardinals in the World Series, the New York Yankees were riding the rails to-day in high hopes of capturing four straight from the National League champions and duplicating their performance against the Pirates last year. Miller Huggins figured on starting Zachery in Sunday's game against the Cards. If the day is dark, however, young Bobby Johnson may be given the chance, as his fast ball and tricky curves would be baffling on a gloomy diamond. The Yankees expect Jess Haines, Cards' fast ball pitcher, to take the pitching assignment on Sunday.

The Yanks had eight hits to four yesterday, while they had seven to three in the first game. Yesterday's nine to three score, however, was greater than the run margin in the first game, four to one.

Bill McKechnie, Cards manager, figures Haines' speed ball might succeed where the tricky but comparatively slow deliveries of Sherdel and Alexander failed in stemming the Yankee attack. McKechnie however, is travelling home faced with the certainty that something has to be done quickly. The Cardinals at least have a fighting chance yet.

Joe Dugan, Yankee third baseman, says the Cardinals are better than they seem.

"One is apt to forget that St. Louis has faced seventeen innings of faultless pitching, which no team could beat," said sage Joe. "Any club looks bad making seven hits in two games."

Young People Have Narrow Escape When They Miss Turn and Upset.

DRIVING DIFFICULT.

With every road leading into Peterborough cloaked with fog which blanketed headlights and cut down the driver's vision to a few feet traffic the last three nights has been forced to a mere snail's pace. Even in the city it has been found most difficult to drive. Motorists have missed turns and have even been known to drive up on lawns thinking that the turn was there.

Driving on the Chemong Road and the Provincial Highway has been most difficult. Several cars have been turned over on the highway and on Wednesday night a group of young people had a narrow escape from injury when returning from the dance at the pavilion. Mistaking the detour light for the light of a car, they drove their automobile over the embankment and it upset in the ditch.

News From the Mines

Through

Selloway, Mills & Company

ALDERMAC

Our field man in Rouyn reports that there seems to be no foundation for the rumor that they have to date encountered the ore body at the 1,150 foot horizon, and that the newspaper report to the effect that they have is premature.

NORANDA

At present Noranda are handling a maximum tonnage of about 985 tons per day, and turning out in the neighborhood of sixty tons of blister copper per day. The grade of copper ore varies from day to day from 4.75 per cent to 6.5 per cent. Teh gold content is quite variable, but the blister copper runs from $42 to $60 per ton in gold. Costs above found are averaging at the present time underground, costs are estimated at $9 per ton, but this figure should be greatly reduced when the larger ore bodies, such as the "H" are brought into production, and eventually underground mining costs should not exceed $3 a ton, making a gross cost for mining, concentrating and smelting of about $5 per ton. A new shaft has just been commenced and it is anticipated by those close to development that a new ore body may be encountered.

PAWNEE KIRKLAND

A meeting of the directors of Pawnee Kirkland will be held tomorrow in Buffalo for the purpose of arriving at some decision for the refinancing of the treasury of the company.

TOUGH OAKES-BURNSIDE

The inactivity of the mill at Tough Oakes has been due to the fact that the vein pinched out at the 16th level. It is now reported, however, that at the 1,575 foot level ore has been encountered running $23 to the ton over six feet. On account of this new discovery, it is stated that the mill will again be opened in the course of the next few days. Market traders looking for a cheap stock of early market possibilities should watch this stock closely.

Mining Briefs

A Special Service to The Examiner

A report from Sudbury is to the effect that Mond Nickel will build a new smelter, thereby doubling their present capacity. The present smelter will then be operated as a separate unit. Another report states that the United States Steel Corporation is out to acquire control of Mond. Then still another report was that United States Steel had already acquired some choice ground in the Basin, and that Sudbury Basin and the Longyear interests had acted as agents in acquiring this ground. The American company was then to start a smelter for treatment of copper-nickel ores in direct competition to International and Mond. The above is a collection of some of the choicer rumors which are at present prevalent on the street. About the only thig the street can agree upon to that there is something doing in Mond.

The only official news regarding Mond is merely some important details regarding the transfer of shares. In response to a request for information, Mr. Owen Evans, secretary of Mond, cabled the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange the following: "Transfer of Mond Nickel shares to give good title to transferee must be made by instrument of transfer, accompanied by relative certificate, followed by registration.

It is reported that a diamond drilling campaign will be started on the Goodfish for the purpose of expediting lateral work. Work is now being carried on at the 600-foot horizon and it is thought that drilling will eliminate a lot of this that is unnecessary.

Montbec Mining Syndicate, which owns property in Montbray Township, Quebec, north of the St. Anthony and east of the Oriol is now converting its capital structure to company form. The syndicate has 50,000 units and these were practically all taken up. These are to be exchanged for stock in the company which will have 3,000,000 no par value shares. Surface work has been proceeding on the property since June, and the heads of the syndicate say that results have been moderately encouraging. The company has negotiated a deal for the placing of a block of stock at a price which should provide substantial working capital.

It is expected that an official statement will sometime to-day be issued by the Jackson Manion. It is expected that this statement will show a substantial increase in proven ore and an announcement to continue shaft sinking to 300 feet. The shaft is at present down to 275 feet where lateral work is underway.

Difficulties in Securing Delivery of Mond Nickel Shares Might Be Ironed Out in Time

Certain difficulties have been encountered in connection with the transfer of Mond Nickel Company shares from British to Canadian hands. One of these is the British government tax of 1 per cent of the price on transfer of all stocks, which charge, apparently, the buyer has to pay. The other difficulty is the delay entailed in getting delivery of certificates purchased by Canadians in the British market.

When a Toronto brokerage house buys, say, 100 shares of Mond Nickel common in England for a Canadian client, the client has, at to-day's price, to pay a tax to the British Government of $33 to $34. At the same time it takes three to four weeks, or even more, before delivery can be made. During that period, the tying up of considerable funds is involved and this costs money.

Delay in delivery could in most cases be eliminated if a transfer agent for Mond Nickel Company were appointed here. Lord Melchett has this matter under consideration now, and it is expected that an agent will be appointed in Toronto in the near future.

The appointment of a transfer agent, however would overcome the difficulty of the one per cent tax only in part. In the past year or so Canadians have been considerable buyers of Mond Nickel shares and in many cases delivery of certificates has been duly made. Once in Canada these certificates could be transferred between Canadians without any tax. Mond stock, however, would become much more popular if the British government tax could be eliminated.

It has been suggested that an arrangement might be made between the London and prospective Toronto transfer agents whereby certificates would not have to be conveyed from one centre to the other, but records of transfers might be exchanged. Mond certificates, however, call for the actual certificates in a transfer and an accompanying power of attorney, giving broker the right to make the transaction. This involves a good deal of red tape. It is felt, however, that such provisions could be altered in order to facilitate the acquisition of Mond shares by Canadians. Transfer of stock even through a Toronto agent will be limited, until holdings of Mond stock in Canada become more general.

MANY LETTERS ABOUT PROGRAM

United States Fans Write About Peterborough Radio Hour.

RECALL VACATIONS.

Letters as follows have just been received from Satin Finish Hardwood Flooring Limited with reference to "All Peterborough Night," September 26th:

"With reference to the concert put on last Wednesday evening, we are now receiving letters of appreciation from different parts of the country.

"This morning's mail brings us letters from H. L. Tomkinson, 49 Main street, Mount Holly, N.J., and from Charles D. Boyer, of Livingstone Heights, Virginia, and one from the Rev. Robert Gay, Rector of St. Mark's Episcopal church, Waterville, Maine.

"We are giving you a copy of this letter for you will see that he has not forgotten the Kawartha Lakes. Undoubtedly last Wednesday's program brought to the attention of the public on the American continent that Peterborough is still a live going city and would no doubt bring back to memory many pleasant hours spent by citizens of the United States and Canada, in the vicinity of your Kawartha Lakes.

"Mr. T. Fredenburg has written us to-day in connection with the Kiwanis Club Exhibition. We are writing him instructing him to pick a suitable booth and we will be with you during the Exhibition October 15th to 20th.

"As we will have a program on the 17th of October we trust that you will be in a position to induce some of the radio exhibitors to tune in our concert and give it to the public, that is providing your exhibition is open after 10 p.m.

"Yours very truly."

The letter from the Rev. Mr. Gay reads as follows:

"We have just heard very distinctly your program over a home made radio set by our boy Godwin who is 14 years old. We were much interested in the talk on Peterborough, Ontario inasmuch as we are well acquainted with that district around the Kawartha Lakes and particularly Chemong and Peterborough."

HAND BADLY CUT BY CIRCULAR SAW

Deep Gash Made Across Back of Stephen Costello's Hand.

Stephen Costello, a brother of Rev. Father Paul Costello of this city, had one of his hands badly cut by a circular saw on Thursday afternoon while at a threshing in the Township of [illegible] At the time of the accident Costello was cutting engine wood and his hand slipped and the saw cut a deep gash [illegible] back of the fingers. He was rushed to St. Joseph's Hospital, where Dr. F. P. McNulty and Dr. J. M. O'Brien attempted to re-unite the cut carpals and metacarpals. The cut was half an inch deep and three-eighths of an inch wide, and stretched from the thumb across the back of the hand. In most cases the hand would have been amputated, but the doctors believed they could save Mr. Costello's hand in this case.

Wedding Bells

KANE—COLLINS

The Church of the Sacred Heart was the scene of a very pretty wedding at 6 a.m. to-day, when Kenneth Joseph, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Kane, Montreal, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Ann Florence, daughter of Mr. John Collins and the late Mrs. John Collins of this city. Rev. Father Maloney performed the ceremony.

The bride, who was given away by her father, was charmingly attired in orchid georgette with hat to match, a silver fox fur, and carried a shower bouquet of ophelia roses and lilies of the valley.

The bridesmaid, Miss Gerry Foley, wore yellow georgette, a small black hat, an isobel fox fur, and carried a bouquet of sweetheart roses.

The bridegroom was attended by Mr. Ed. Foley.

During the nuptial mass, Gounod's "Ave Maria" was rendered very beautifully by Miss Margaret McCarthy.

The bridegroom's gift to the bride was a diamond-studded wrist watch; to the bridesmaid, a crystal necklet; to the best man, a cigarette lighter, and to Miss McCarthy, topaz earrings.

After the ceremony a buffet luncheon was served at the home of Mrs. John Huggins, Perry street.

The happy couple left on the 12.02 p.m. C.N.R. for Toronto, Niagara Falls, Buffalo and points west. The bride's going-away costume was an ensemble of claret shade kitten's ear crepe dress, and bolivia coat with seal trimmings and chic hat to match. On their return they will reside in Toronto.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Kane, Montreal; Mrs. William Ganter and daughter, Josephine, of New York; and Miss Eileen Foley of Toronto.

GRIFFIN—SCULLY.

A quiet wedding took place Monday evening, September 1st, in All Saints' Church, when Mildred Gladys, third daughter of Mrs. Annie Scully and the late William E. Scully, became the bride of Edward Joseph Griffin, son of Mr. James Griffin. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. D. Paterson. They will reside in the city.

OTONABEE I.O.D.E. PLANS FOR SEASON

Will Give Two Children of Returned Men Higher Education.

The monthly meeting of the Otonabee Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire was held in the Green Room of the Y.W.C.A. on Thursday afternoon with a splendid attendance. The Regent, Mrs. F. L. Robinson, presided.

After the secretary, Mrs. Cameron, and the treasurer, Mrs. J. Robinson, had given their reports, Miss Archer was asked to explain the work the Chapter would like to carry on, of giving two children an opportunity of getting a higher education. The fathers of the children are returned soldiers who are at present unable to give their children a chance. It was decided to take up the work.

A resolution was passed that the Chapter hold a sale and tea at the home of Mrs. J. A. Aylmer, Weller street, on Nov. 14. Mrs. Robinson spoke of the sale of tickets for the Hope Chest, which will be drawn for on November 16 and urged the ladies to keep up the work of selling tickets for it. The chest when completed will contain a large number of useful and dainty articles and there will be about tenprizes for the Hope Chest.

It was also decided to hold a community bridge on October 12, with tea at Mrs. R. Harstone's, 565 Water street.

The Chapter had been asked to unite with the 57th Chapter and take charge of a booth at the Kiwanis' Fair. A motion was passed that the Regent appoint a number for each afternoon and evening.

Mrs. Robinson gave a splendid report of the 36th annual National Convention held in Toronto.

Mrs. C. H. Edwards was present and spoke on the Foundation Fund which the National Council is trying to raise this month. She reminded the ladies of the numerous acts benefit to women and children which the National Council had sponsored and urged the members to assist in canvassing Peterborough in aid of this good cause.

tion was held in Toronto. Though that was a much larger show, it lacked the remarkable quality of stock that appeared in the final competition here, he stated.

As for the officials, he was profuse in his praise of all, and in a jocular manner bestowed a special prize—no one knows what—upon his right hand man during the two days—Secretary-Treasurer Bill Jackson.

Brock Street Rink, the scene of the Peterborough Kennel Association's dog show during Thursday and Friday, presented a deserted appearance this morning with all the dogs gone. Many of the exhibitors put their dogs in their crates immediately after the show last night, and when the light were finally turned off, the plaintiff yapping of a few puppies far down toward the south end, echoed and re-echoed about the big building.

student and as a pal. They only knew him as one that was always willing to help any who might be behind in their studies and a great reader of magazines and books. Rupert E. Knox, the boy's father, went with the remains to Boston.

Well Liked at Camp

George Knox first came to this city in the summer of 1926 when he spent a month at the Rotary-Y.M.C.A. boys' camp on Clear Lake. There he was only known as a real fine fellow, liked by everyone and most highly respected. That fall he returned to school in the States, but was back again the next summer to the boys' camp. That summer he was not so fortunate and one day he slipped on a rock, hurting himself, with the result that he spent six weeks in the hospital. When he got out he started to school in the Peterborough Collegiate. He remained in the city this summer and when school opened this fall he entered fifth form.

KNOX W.M.S. PLANS SPECIAL SERVICE

Missionary Sunday Will Be Observed Oct. 14—New Book To Be Studied.

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of Knox United Church was held on Thursday, Oct. 4, with a good attendance. The president, Mrs. Watt presided.

The meeting opened with singing the Doxology and all repeating the Lord's Prayer.

The W.M.S. Sunday service will be held on October 14 at the evening service.

After the singing of "From Greenland's Icy Mountains" the devotional leaflet on God's Possessions was given by Mrs. Benson who also led in prayer.

Mrs. McCurdy gave an introduction to the new text book "Drums in the Darkness" and Mrs. Morrison, Mrs. Bradbury and Mrs. Denoon gave papers on this book. These were all very interesting and instructive.

A beautiful solo was given by Mrs Curvin.

Mrs. McCurdy called attention to the renewal of the missionary monthly magazine and the meeting closed with prayer by Mrs. McDonald.

AID ENTERTAINS HELPERS AT FAIR

St. James' Sunday School Hall Scene of Happy Social Event.

St. James' Sunday School Hall was the scene of a jolly gathering on Thursday afternoon when about sixty ladies were present to enjoy the splendid program and bountiful refreshments tendered by the Ladies' Aid to those who helped in serving meals at the Exhibition. The room was bright with autumn flowers and a silver basket filled with pink and white bloom graced the tea table. Tea and coffee were poured by Mrs Wilson and Mrs. Fry and Mrs. Fife served the ices. Those taking part in the program were Mrs. G. Rowe, Miss A. Rose, Mrs. E. Kitney, Miss G. Sedgwick, Mrs. Cutmore, Mrs. Monk. Mrs. Fry gave a report of all moneys received and expended during the Exhibition, and was heartily applauded. Mrs. Sargent in a few words thanked all the helpers for work done during Exhibition Week, and was seconded by Mrs. Fife.

Those in charge of general arrangements ere the table committee, Mrs. Sargent, Mrs. Fife, Mrs. Swanger, and Mrs. Elliott, assisted by the social committee, of which Mrs. Plunkett is convener. The ladies who helped to serve were Mrs. Pratt, Mrs. Rowe, Mrs. Beatty, Mrs. McCullough and Mrs. Hogan.

Wheat Prices Go Up As Deliveries Are Scarce

CHICAGO, Oct. 6 (Canadian Press).—The unexpected dearth of future delivery offerings led to a decided early advance in wheat prices to-day. Talk was current that in proportion to the cost of production, wheat in Kansas and in the states north-west is bringing less than during 1893. Opening ¼ to ¼ cent higher, Chicago wheat quickly scored further general gains. Corn was relatively easy, starting unchanged to 5-8 cent up, and afterward keeping near to the initial figures. Oats were firm.

Opening prices were: Wheat, December, 119¾; March, 123 7-8. Corn, December, 83 3-8; March, 86. Oats, December, 43 7-8; March, 45.

TORONTO, Oct. 6.— (Canadian Press).—Making a new high for all time, International Nickel touched 141 on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day and closed with a gain for the day of 1¼ at 140½. The rest of the list showed little change. Massey was up a fraction at 48¾. Brazilian was fractionally lower at 58¼. Apart from Walkers, up ¾ at 62¾, and British Columbia Packers, up a point at 19, curb prices showed little

BUICK OUTPUT 26,800 CARS IN SEPTEMBER

DETROIT, Oct. 6. — The Buick Motor Company shipped 26,800 cars in September, compared with 27,476 in August and 23,971 in September, 1927. Of the 26,800 cars shipped last month, 15,000 were built during the last 11 days, when production averaged approximately 1,370 cars daily. Buick dealers have approximately 20,000 unfilled orders on hand, the largest in Buick's history.

IN MEMORIAM.

SAUNDERS.—In loving memory of our dear Winnie, who passed away Oct. 7th, 1925:

Safe in the harbor, life's storm is past,
Safe in her father's home at last.
Free from all pain, sorrow and care
We, who love her, would leave her there,
We know that our loss is our dear one's gain
So we'll try to be brave till we meet again
We will not forget our loved one so kind

is a scientific, natural method of keeping the spinal nerves free of constriction so that all parts of the body will receive the nerve energy necessary to enable them to function correctly. The nervous system controls the motive power of the whole body. Impinged nerves means weakened tissues. Spinal adjustments turn on the currents of nerve energy which give you strength and vitality to guard against ill-health and loss of time.

HUGE CROWD MEETS BODY OF GEORGE KNOX

HIT-AND-RUN DRIVER INJURES WOMEN

Number of Car Given Police

Mrs. E. W. Davies and Daughter Inez Have Skulls Fractured.

BOTH IN HOSPITAL.

Accident Occurs at Rubidge and Park Streets Early Saturday Evening.

Mrs. Ewart W. Davies and her daughter Inez, aged 13, are both in the hospital to-day suffering from fractured skulls the result of being knocked down on Saturday night in front of the Canadan General Electric factory by a hit and run motorist. The mother and daughter, returning to their home at 33 Lafayette avenue early in the evening, were crossing the intersection at the south end of Rubidge street where it joins Park. A car driven by a man and having several women occupants knocked both women down, and paused for an instant, but without making any attempt to render assistance to the two women lying on the pavement the driver hurried away from the scene.

Other motorists stopped and rendered first aid. Dr. W. D. Scott and Dr. G. R. Scott were summoned to render medical aid and they had both patients removed to the hospital where they found that both were suffering from fractured skulls.

Number Taken

Two men near the scene of the accident took the number of the fleeing car and have handed it to the police. On investigation it was found to be an outside car.

The driver will be given a couple of days to report the accident to the police station and if he fails to do so application will be made to the Department of Highways for the name of the owner of the car and immediate action will be taken. This offence is provided for under the criminal code, with a heavy penalty for the offending driver.

Dr. G. R. Scott told The Examiner at noon to-day that both patients were progressing most favorably. This is the first case of a hit and run motorist which has been brought to the attention of the police for some time and Chief Newhall declared to The Examiner this morning that the coward who flees leaving his victim to his fate will get no consideration from him.

Two Collisions

Two other accidents were reported to the police during the week-end. A buggy and a car collided at the corner of Aylmer and King streets last night. William Brownlee was driving his horse west on King. When he was part way across the street a car driven by Carl Smith of Walkerfield avenue came along and a collision followed. Smith was unable to see the light on the buggy as it was on the left side and he was coming from the north.

Last night a car driven by C. Bibee collided with a car owned by E. Riley on Reid street. Mr. Riley's car was parked on the side of the street above McDonnell and Mr. Bibee, who was coming down the Reid street hill, claimed he did not see it.

ITALY FAVORS BROADER BASIS

Thinks Disarmament Conference Should Include Armies and Air Forces.

REPLIES TO ACCORD.

LONDON, Oct. 8. — (Canadian Press.—Official circles state that a brief summary of the Italian reply to the French-British Naval compromise indicates the Italian Government believes the whole question of disarmament should be viewed on a broader basis and should include military and air armaments as well as naval armament.

PARALYZED BY FLASH.

Aberdeen, Oct. 6.—Four men were burned and paralyzed when lightning struck the scorers' shed at Stoneywood, during a cricket match. The metal ventilator was knocked off the roof of the structure and the scoring board scorched by the flame.

Fire Desolates Prairie Fields

INDUSTRY DOES NOT THINK ONLY OF ITS PROFITS

Rotarian P. P. Westbye Tells How It Has Contributed To Human Progress.

A SPLENDID PAPER.

Rotarians Are Urged To Co-operate in Fire Prevention Work.

"Industry is not a thing of stone or steel, massive and material, gross and only thinking of profit," Rotarian P. P. Westbye told the Peterborough Rotary Club to-day in the course of a splendid paper delivered at the weekly luncheon in which the speaker dealt with the subject of the place occupied in the progress of the human race by the man engaged in industry.

"Industry," Rotarian Westbye added, "is a thing of living, throbbing man working that humanity may have the greatest volume of God's blessing with the fewest drops of man's sweat."

The speaker in beginning quoted the words of Dr. Hugo Munsterburg, that only in the development of thought along scientific lines and in the organization of industry itself do we show any advancement over ancient times.

He then proceeded to show how industry had contributed to the betterment of humanity and to discuss some of the principles underlying our industrial civilization.

Society he declared, had so organized herself that profit could be made only by providing something that society wanted on terms which she was willing to accept.

The second great principle was that the possibility of advancing one's own interest and that of the loved ones depending upon one was the greatest known spur of the human mind, and the third was that the world was still a spiritual world, for it was the mind of man that controlled all the great mass of things upon which welfare depended.

"I cannot believe," said Mr Westbye, "that the men who have crystallized their dreams of human flight in the airplane which soars above our heads are no less artists than the ancient sculptor who chiseled a "winged foot" to represent that flight. I cannot believe that the men who have enabled us to throw our voices around the world have contributed less to the progress of the human race than those who as artists or poets dreamed of the day when this might be."

Rotarian Rev. Father Costello expressed the thanks of the club to Rotarian Westbye.

Fire Chief Gimblett was a visitor to-day and asked the co-operation of Rotarians in making not noly this week but every week in the year a Fire Prevention week. He especially urged assistance in ridding dwelling houses of fire hazards, pointing out that 85 per cent. of our fires originated in the home.

Rotarian J. H. Seels reminded the members that a ladies' night would be held at the end of this month, on which occasion Rotarian Fred L. Roy would show moving pictures taken on his European trip and also reels taken at the Rotary camp during the past summer.

REQUEST FOR PET

London, Oct. 8.—The will of Col. Herbert Davies-Evans, one time High Sheriff of Cardiganshire, provides $75 per year for the care of a pet. "I desire my executor to provide her with a warm and comfortable home and good food during the term of her natural life."

SCENES OF DOUBLE TRAGEDY

Soon after writing a note to his father in which he stated his intentions, George F. Knox, 19-year-old Peterborough student, shot and killed Mrs. Thomas Pacey, 35, at whose home he lived. He then killed himself with the second bullet from a gun his father had loaned him for "target practice." Photographs above show (1) the Pacey home on Aylmer Street; (2) Peterborough Collegiate Institute, which young Knox attended; (3) the house on Bethune Street, where the father, Rupert Knox, lived; (4) hole in the woodshed at the rear of the Pacey home, through which Pacey gained admittance when he found doors of the house locked. Knox and his son came from Lynn, Mass.

PLOWMEN PLAN ANNUAL MATCH

Many Entries Expected For Competitions At Allan Payne's Farm.

NEW CLASS OPENED.

The Peterborough County Plowing match, which yearly attracts a great deal of attention, particularly in the rural districts, has been set for Wednesday, October 17, according, to an announcement from the local agricultural representative, J. B. Nelson, whose department co-operats with the Plowmen's association in staging the annual event. The farm of Allan Payne, at Warsaw, has been chosen as being well suited to be the scene of the competitions and further arrangements are being made for a fine quality match.

Between thirty and forty entries in the various classes are expected and a new class, an open class in stubble for men, is likely to boast a large entry list, along with the regular competitions in sod and stubble for single and double plows and tractors.

This year, J. J. Duffus of Peterborough is the energetic president and he, along with his executive, has succeeded in arousing an even greater interest than last year. The general response of Peterborough merchants and manufacturers, as well as the county and township councils, has been particularly gratifying and as a result, the prize list it is expected, will be well in excess of $400.00.

Another local committee, of which Alex Carlow is convenor, has chosen a good field and has arranged for teams for plowmen who come from a distance too great for the bringing of a team to be practical.

HORSESHOE MEN TO HOLD TOURNEY

Three Day Competition Being Arranged For End of Week.

A three-day tournament, which is certain to attract attention from all adherents of the game of horseshoes, has been planned for Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week. The tournament, which will be held in Peterborough, and in which many outside teams are expected to enter, may be played in King Edward Park, though details are still lacking. Tuesday's issue of The Examiner will carry a more detailed account of the tournament, as plans will have been completed by then.

UNKNOWN MAN KILLED BY TRAIN

Inquest Into Death of Man Who Failed To Heed Warnings Adjourned.

AT BROCKVILLE.

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Oct. 8 (Canadian Press).—The inquest opened upon the death of an unknown man struck by a Canadian National train on Saturday has been postponed to Thursday. Despite warning blasts of the whistle the victim stepped into path of the train and was instantly killed.

FOURTH GAME IS POSTPONED

Rain Forces Calling Off of To-day's World Series Game.

UNTIL TO-MORROW.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 8. — (Canadian Press.) — Judge Landis to-day postponed the fourth game of the world series between the New York Yankees and the St. Louis Cardinals to-morrow afternoon on account of rain.

Hoyt and Sherdel, the hurlers of th opening game, were picked to pitch to-day and will probably perform to-morrow.

The Weather

The temperature was down to 29 degrees last night. This is three degrees below the freezing point, and is the first occasion this season when the thermometer has gone below freezing. Last year the first time was on October 9th, and there were six other times that month. Sunday's highest point was 70 degrees, and the day was an ideal Canadian Autumn day. The trees are assuming their varied colorings, and with a few frosty nights the countryside will soon be a blaze of color. Those who have travelled extensively say that in no other country but Canada does the landscape assume the brilliant hues that it does here in the Fall, especially when the frost comes early. Should frost be delayed and the trees become domant naturally, the leaves lack the variegated hues that the frost gives.—W. P.

17 CONVICTS DIE IN PRISON FIRE

Three Make Escape When Blaze Sweeps Huge Dormitory.

WIRING DEFECTIVE.

JUNCTION CITY, Ohio, Oct. 8 (Canadian Press). — Seventeen convicts employed in the state-owned brick plant here are believed to have perished in a fire which swept a dormitory in which 225 prisoners were sleeping early to-day. Eight prisoners are in the penitentiary hospital seriously burned. Panic seized the terrified convicts as they were awakened and there was a wild rush to escape when two of the three exits were opened. Officials believe that three of the convicts managed to escape in the confusion.

Defective wiring was thought the probable cause of the fire. The door of the kitchen commissary was opened by a suspicious convict, who found the room filled with flame and smoke. The alarm was given and a terrible scene of confusion followed, as close to three hundred panic-striken prisoners fought to escape.

William O'Malley and another convict succeeded in breaking down the huge door separating the domintory from the bakery, opening an avenue of escape through which at least one hundred and sixty prisoners made their way to safety. The prisoners have been confined to the penitentiary in Columbus.

Chester Welch, serving a sentence for forgery, assumed charge of the situation until prison officials arrived on the scene.

The rescue workers found a gruesome scene. The dormitory was of iron sheeting over a wooden frame, erected on a brick foundation about six to ten feet high. Flooring, sheeting and frame had fallen into the shallow cellar made by the foundation walls and the searchers saw a tangle of steel cots, sheet iron, charred timbers and dark masses of charred bodies here and there.

Prisoners Help Friends

One prisoner after several vain attempts to carry a crippled friend to safety was forced to flee for his own life. Another man who escaped from the flames rushed back when he saw his buddy trapped and both lost their lives, so far as was learned.

Some of the prisoners asesrted the guards refused to let the convicts through the doors when the flames were discovered, until ordered to do so by Captain Howel, the superintendent.

CANADIAN BOYS WILL BE HELPED

Hon. Robert Forke Says He Is Working Out Scheme of Farm Aid.

SAME AS IMMIGRANTS.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 8. —Canadian Press.—Hon. Robert Forke, Minister of Immigration, who reached here yesterday, announced he is working out a scheme whereby Canadian boys will be aided in locating on farms and in that way receive the same privileges as those granted British boys being brought out under the present government scheme.

A NEW RACKET.

London, Oct. 6.—Old street Police Court started a new racket recently when it ussued a summons charging desertion against a man whose wife complained that he would not work to support his family. "I cannot make him work," said the magistrate, "but you can summon him for desertion if you think that will do any good."

50,000 ACRES LAID WASTE; NO LIVES LOST

Hundred Thousand Bushels of Grain in Bins is Destroyed.

FARMERS FIGHT GAMELY.

Have Narrow Escapes As the Flames Rush On, Borne By 40 Mile Wind.

(Special to The Examiner)

LETHBRIDGE, Alta., Oct. 8. — South western Alberta is to-day Checking the losses sustained in Friday's prairie fire, the worst this country has experienced in many years. Some describe it as the most destructive on record, for it left in its wake a pasture of desolation covering probably 50,000 acres over an area approximately 10 miles wide and 22 miles in length.

It is difficult to compute the losses, but estimates indicate that 100,000 bushels of binned grain as well as much in the stook fell a prey to the flames. There was no loss of life.

The flames were visible for 18 miles across the prairie.

William Savage of Grassy Lake who was in the thick of the fight for hours, said the fire burned with "terrible fierceness."

"I never saw anything to equal it. It travelled at a rate of about forty miles on hour and was a veritable furnace. Many of the fighters barely escaped being surrounded by the flames for tongues of fire would leap for 70 to 100 yards ahead of us, catching on to straw stracks ahead of the main blaze."

"The stiff wind from the southwest made the odds the heavier against us ut it was a wonderful fight the men put up.

And it was likewise mighty touching to see tears come to the eyes of strong men as they saw their crops laid waste by the flames.

THREE KILLED BY EXPLOSION

Eight Others Hurt When Bomb Bursts On Indian Train.

CARRIED BY ANARCHISTS.

BOMBAY, Oct. 8. — (Canadian Press).—Three passengers were killed and eight injured to-day at Mammad when a bomb shattered a car of a train. It was believed the bomb was brought here by Anarchists in readiness for the arrival of the Simon Commission on Indian reform, due here shortly.

HUNTER KILLED.

New York Man Fatally Shot By Companion in Woods.

NEWCASTLE, N.B., Oct. 8 (Canadian Press).—Clarence Reid, 64 years old, prominent New York real estate man, was fatally shot when mistaken for a bear by one of a party of New York sportsment with him when he entered the New Brunswick woods for hunting yesterday. Companions, who returned with the body, refused to say anything about the fatality.

LOVAT SAYS REPORT ENTIRELY WRONG

Declares Rumor of Settlement of 20,000 Families in Canada Inaccurate.

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, Oct. 8.—(Canadian Press).—Lord Lovat, chairman of the empire settlement board, stated on arrival from Canada that the report it was proposed to settle twenty thousand British families in Canada was all wrong and inaccurate. He declined to comment as the matter is still under consideration.

Seven Under Arrest For Recent Robbery

TORONTO, Oct. 8 (Canadian Press).—Seven men are now in custody facing charges in connection with the recent robbery of the Gordon Mackay Company. Frank Enning, aged 20, said to be the last man wanted, was arrested to-day at noon. Six others, Edward Nelson, Arthur Morgan, Samuel Barnes, Herbert Reid, Lazarus Black and Norman Stein, appeared in police court to-day and were remanded for eight days, with bail fixed at $15,000 each.

SCHOOL FINALS ON WEDNESDAY

Winners at Township Fairs Will Compete at Norwood.

LARGE PRIZE LIST.

Norwood, during the next two days, will be the scene of events of great interest to the surrounding district, for, in addition to being the days of the Norwood Fair, Tuesday and Wednesday have been chosen as the dates of the Championship School Fair. The two will be held jointly, with the executive of the village fair rendering valuable assistance in making the students' exhibition a success.

Boasting a $250.00 prize list, the Championship School Fair will bring into competition the prize-winners in all the classes of exhibits at the school fiar, while the first prize winners in the contests, such as judging, will be allowed to enter. Thus the winners in their own school competitions will be rewarded—by being allowed to enter the championship events.

The County Council and the Norwood Fair Board will supply the prizes, while free tickets have been given the school children who will visit the fair. Some of the schools are declaring a holiday. A collecting arrangement will enable pupils to send their exhibits though unable to attend in person.

CANADIAN DRAGGED OVER BORDER LINE

Complaint Lodged With U. S. Over Arrest Made On This Side.

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 8 (Canadian Press).—The case of Edward King, of Glen Elm, Que., who was arrested by United States immigration officials at least ten feet inside the Canadian border near Malone, N.Y., and dragged over the border, then jailed on a charge of alien smuggling, is being looked into by the Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian Minister at Washington. The complaint was received several days ago and a report by Mr. Massey is expected shortly.

LITTLE BUILDING BEGUN LAST WEEK

Permits Taken Out Total $1,320—Four Garages Are Authorized.

Building started in this city showed a decided decrease last week over the past three or four. Nine permits were issued during the week, but none of them involved a very large amount. The estimated cost of the new construction was put at $1,320, and the nine permits included four private garages, a stable, a storehouse, and the shingling and renovating of several buildings.

MISTAKE BRINGS DEATH

Galion, O., Oct. 8.—"It was my mistake," said Christian J. Eichhorn, 68, and fell over dead. It was found that he had swallowed a dose of poison which he mistook for quinine in his farm home, near here.

Burial In Family Plot

Mother Cannot Believe Son Either Murderer or Suicide Victim.

TOO CLEAN AND MANLY.

Regrets Allowing Him To Attend Schools Here—Sermons On Subject.

LYNN, Mass., October 8 (Special to The Examiner). — The body of George Knox, 19-year-old student, who last Friday was found dead beside the body of his landlady, Mrs. Thomas Pacey, both shot through the head in the latter's home at Peterborough, arrived in Lynn last night, and this afternoon was buried in the Knox family lot in Swampscott Cemetery. Two ministers officiated, Rev. John C. Shepley, former pastor of the South Street Methodist Episcopal Church, and Rev. John F. Hoon, the present pastor of the same church.

Accompanying the body to this city was Rupert Knox, father of the boy, and who for two years had been estranged from his wife, Mrs. Josephine Knox, a nurse at the Lynn Home for Aged Women on Breed Street. The body was met in Boston by Alonzo B. Quick, Lynn mortician, and Mrs. Cora A. Green, matron of the House for Aged Couples, and an aunt of the dead student.

Warrant Refused.

While the body was being brought to Lynn, an attorney representing Mrs. Knox, called upon Joseph L. Barry, Clerk of the District Court of Southern Essex, and sought a warrant for the arrest of Rupert Knox, but the warrant was refused.

Clerk Barry was told that Knox had been ordered by the Probate Court of Berkshire County, to pay Mrs. Knox $75.00 a month, and that he is behind in his payments. Mr. Barry was unable to find that a complaint warrant had been received from the police at Pittsfield, which is the Berkshire County seat.

Later they said there was a possibility of reconciliation between Mr. Knox and his wife, but that could not be contirmed. Mr. Knox went to the home of his mother, Mrs. Martha Boynton, 36 Sewell Street, where later it was said he was in a state of collapse. Mrs. Knox also was under the care of a physician, and denied herself to all callers except very intimate friends. It was said, however, that while the father and mother would attend the funeral of their son, this afternoon, there was little or no possibility of the parents talking with each other. The father refused to receive newspaper reporters, and those with whom he talked decline to give any information concerning the double tragedy.

Knox Well-Known.

Young Knox was born in Lynn. He had lived his short life in this city, where he was very popular and well-known throughout the section. He had been keeping company with a very prominent young Lynn lady. The announcement of their engagement had been expected up to the time of his departure for Ontario.

The meeting between the grief-stricken mother and father at the Breed Street Home last evening was indeed a most pathetic one. Neither of the parents, who last faced each other in the divorce court, was able to speak for some moments. Those who were present wept openly and unashamed. It was too much for one with a heart to witness without emotion.

A great crowd met the heart-broken father and the body at the Lynn station of the D. and M. Railroad late yesterday afternoon. In addition to the prominence of young Knox here, there were hundreds of the usual curiosity seekers. It was perhaps the greatest assemblage and demonstration ever given a private individual in the history of the city. The murder and suicide at Peterborough is the major topic of conversation in every part of this city to-day.

Won't Believe Story.

Mrs. Knox, a kindly motherly woman, will not believe that her son killed Mrs. Pacey or himself. She is firm in the belief that there is a mystery behind the unfortunate affair that must be cleared up. It is not the raving of a grief-stricken mother, it is the opinion of a woman bred to common-sense with a mind of her own. "I do not believe that George killed either Mrs. Pacey or himself," she sobbed out, discussing the case with a representative of The Peterborough Examiner.

"George was a good boy as boys go. He did not chase around, and he was not the type to become involved in any way with a married woman. He deplored such things, he was too wholesome. I do not believe that he wrote the note that Mr. Pacey found. I should like to see that note. I could soon tell whether he wrote it or whether someone forged it and left

Promised $2,000 If He Married Girl Husband Sues Father-in-Law's Estate

TORONTO, Oct. 8.—(Canadian Press).—Irving Morrison of Buffalo was declared in a judgement by Justice Fisher to-day to be entitled to claim two thousand dollars from the bankrupt estate of David Pick, of Hamilton, his father-in-law, because the latter had agreed to pay him that amount if he married his daughter. The trustee of the estate disallowed his claim and Morrison took a successful appeal.

"It is a cold blooded proposition," Justice Fisher commented. "To me it is almost incredible that a young, vigorous man would make such a proposition."

HOOVER INVADES SOUTHERN U. S.

Carries Campaign Into Territory Counted Democrat For Half Century.

WANTS HIGH TARIFF.

WASHINGTON, October 8 (Canadian Press).—At Elizabethton, Tenn., basing his claim to election on high tariff and prosperity, Herbert Hoover carried his campaign into the Democratic south on Saturday. He spoke in a district which is said to be largely Republican in sentiment by radio and carried his address throughout the south where the Democrats have had everything their own way for half a century.

It was the first time a Republican candidate has campaigned directly in the south for many elections, and the occasion is regarded as one of the most important in the campaign. Mr. Hoover avoided the religious issue but touched on practically every other point. In fact his speech was to a large extent a repetition of his acceptance speech in California.

Traditionally low tariff in sentiment, the southern states heard Mr. Hoover declare for continued high tariff in industry and on products of soil. The increased prosperity in the south he attributed directly to a Republican tariff policy and declared that cotton and other industries of the south could not prosper unless a high tariff policy was maintained unimpaired. He favored strengthening the tariff to give the farmer complete control of the home market. Reminding the south that prosperity had come under the present administration, Mr. Hoover avoided reference to "Republican" and used the phrase, "national government."

Foreign Policy And Armament.

Discussing foreign policy and armament, he said: "We have earnestly wished for limitation of armament throughout the world as a definite contribution to peace." But peace must be founded on respect. We must be prepared for defence. This does not imply aggression. It is a contribution to peace."

Later, in a brief address at the Soldiers' Home at Johnson, Tenn., Mr. Hoover repeated this doctrine and added:

"We must maintain our navy and our army in such fashion that we shall have complete defence of our homes from even the fear of foreign invasion. Our foreign policies must ever be directed to the cause of peace that we need never again sacrifice our sons on the field of battle."

On prohibition Mr. Hoover said:

"The purpose of the Eighteenth Amendment is to protect the American home. A sacred obligation is imposed on the President to secure its honest enforcement and to eliminate the abuses which have grown up about it.

"I wish it to succeed. Abolition of the liquor traffic has become a part of our fundamental law. Great problems of enforcement and obedience to the law have arisen from it."

Much of his speech was devoted to tariff matters and farm problems.

"The great expansion of agricultural production in Canada and the Southern Hemisphere combined with the increasing efficiency and increased production by our own farmers have rendered unstable those branches of our agriculture which are dependent on foreign markets," said Mr. Hoover. His solution of the marketing problem would be the appointment of a farm board clothed with powers and resources to assist the farmer in solving his own problems through co-operatives controlled by the farmer himself, "to protect the farmer from depressions and demoralization and periodic surpluses."

Scion Of Italian Royal Family Vindicates His Honor In Rapier Duel

ROME, October 8 (Associated Press). — Prince Spada Potenziana, retired Governor of Rome, vindicated his honor in a rapier duel yesterday, wounding Prince Lancelotti, who is alleged to have declared the reason for the former Governor's displacement by Premier Mussolini was graft.

This is the second duel caused by Lancelotti's alleged remark. It was revealed yesterday that Count Di Sambuy, in whose presence Prince Lancelotti is said to have uttered the remark immediately challenged him. They fought with rapiers, Di Sambuy being three times wounded. He explained later that he was suffering from lumbago.

Prince Potenziana, upon hearing that his voluntary defender was wounded in avenging his honor, immediately challenged Lancelotti. The encounter occurred yesterday forenoon in the garden of a villa on the outskirts of Rome. When the former Governor succeeded in nicking his adversary, the referee stopped the fight.

While many in Roman society are rejoicing at Prince Potenziana's spirited defence of his administration, others are wondering what the legal outcome may be. Duelling has long been prohibited in Italy and prison terms for duellists were increased when the Fascists came into power. Mussolini was said to frown upon these meetings and to have said that they no longer should be employed by Italians who had fought shoulder to shoulder against a common enemy in the Great War.

TUXIS BOYS HOLD INITIAL MEETING

Union Victory Branch Members Plan Gymnasium Sports For Winter.

BAILIEBORO, Oct. 8 (Examiner Correspondence).—The Union Victor Tuxis Square held their initial meeting of this season on Friday evening in Mr. Bateson's Hall.

There was a goodly turnout of members present, and a great edal of business was transacted.

The question of running a member for the boys' parliament was discussed and the boys unanimously decided to hold a nomination meeting sometime within the near future.

The boys also planned to arrange for gymnasium sports and games to afford pleasure during the winter months.

The Mentor, Herb. Dean, has not yet returned from the West, and Archie Deyell, the Pretor, is taking the Mentor's place.

Last year was the first year the local organization has been holding meetings, and the boys had such excellent success, they are planning an active season this year.

Personals

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Thompson were visitors to Port Hope on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Barnard, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Thompson and son, Billie, of Peterborough, motored to Niagara Falls, Allenburg and New York this week.

Miss Jean Dawson is attending a business college in Toronto.

Misses V. Nurse, M. Earl, L. Ball, E. Deyell, and E. Falls attended the teachers' convention at Cobourg on Thursday and Friday.

Mrs. C. Dawson of Toronto was the guest last week of her son, Mr. F. Dawson.

Quite a number of the villagers attended the anniversary services at Bensfort United Church on Sunday. Rev. McNeeley of Keene conducted both services.

The members of the Anglican Church held their anniversary services on Sunday morning and evening.

POTATO DIGGING DELAYED BY RAIN

Farmers Working Hard in Warsaw District To Get Crop In.

WARSAW, Oct. 8 (Examiner Correspondence). — Many potatoes are still out. Where the land was at all low, they were just nicely dry, and several were working hard to get them out before the rain on Friday, but it came down with a pour and caught them. Matthew McMurray had three men digging his. The later matured ones do not seem to have so much rot.

The crop is abundant where there is not rot, if they can be harvested. Gordon Payne is putting a new roof on one of his barns. There was about two feet stripped, when the downpour came.

Those who are filling their silos find the corn very wet to handle and progress is slow. Corn is still growing, and some who thought theirs would not be cobbed, find it is coming on splendidly. Those who cut with binders hope for drier weather, as machines would sink as the land is.

John Moore has opened a meat market in Roland McCauley's shop. He put in his first supplies of meat on Friday.

Y. W. A. MEETS.

Norwood Presbyterian Society Holds First Meeting of Season.

(Examiner Correspondent.)

NORWOOD, Oct. 8.—The Y. W. A. of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church held the first meeting of the season at the home of Mrs. John Rogers, with the president, Miss Rhoda Frost, in charge.

The Scriptural reading was taken by Miss Lottie Rogers and the chapter "Wayfarers" from the study book was taken by Miss Mary Roxburgh. The "Glad Tidings" reading, entitled "Indian Boarding Schools," was given by Mrs J. Rogers. During the meeting a solo was sung by Miss Lottie Slater.

At the close of the meeting refreshments were served and a social half hour spent.

HE NEVER COULD DIGEST HIS FOOD

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" Brought Perfect Health.

What miserable years Mr. Leo Godin spent when his stomach was all upset and he was deathly sick with bilious attacks. As he writes from Montreal, "It seemed to me that I was always bilious and never digested my food. Finally, an old friend told me to try "Fruit-a-tives." Since taking them, I have been so well that I want to congratulate you on this wonderful medicine." This is the way it goes. People suffer for years with Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, Pain in the Back, Bladder Trouble, Rheumatism, Headaches and never realize that the CAUSE of these troubles is weakness or poor action of the bowels, kidneys and skin. "Fruit-a-tives" restores these three great blood purifying agents of the body to normal, healthy action, sweetens the stomach, makes digestion sound, enables you to eat and sleep and enjoy life.

SECTIONAL RALLY IS WELL ATTENDED

United Church Women of East Peterborough, Meet in Norwood.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

NORWOOD, October 8. — On Tuesday afternoon of this week the sectional rally of the East Peterborough section of the Peterborough Presbyterial of the United Church was held in Norwood, with a splendid attendance.

There were two sessions, a morning and an afternoon, each of which was presided over by Mrs. Moyer, the president of the section.

The opening devotional exercises of the morning were conducted by Mrs. Bonny of Havelock. An address of welcome was then extended to the visiting delegates by Mrs. A. McNeil, Norwood, to which Mrs. Cameron of Westwood responded. Following the roll-call of Auxiliaries, Circles, and Bands, there was a very interesting discussion of methods of work. Reports from the secretaries of the various departments were then given, namely, Supply Department, Mrs. Hugh Robb, Norwood; Strangers' Secretary Department, Mrs. Denike, of Havelock; Missionary Monthly Department, Mrs. Herrington, Warsaw. This session was brought to a close by the quiet half-hour led by Mrs. Hoar and Mrs. Sargent.

The ladies of the local Auxiliary served dinner in the basement of the church, and during this time the delegates and visitors had a better opportunity of becoming acquainted.

The afternoon session opened at 2 o'clock w. the Hastings Auxiliary in charge of the devotional exercises. An excellent report of the branch meeting held at Lindsay in May was given by Mrs. Moyer. Mrs. McIntyre, of Toronto, who for eight years has been engaged in work among the non-English immigrants of Canada, was the speaker for the afternoon. In a very interesting manner she outlined the work of the Women's Missionary Society from the time these people arrive in our country until they are linked up where possible with some section of our church.

It was decided that the next rally be held in October, 1929.

A vote of thanks was extended to the local society by Mrs. Forsythe, of Cottesloe. This session was closed with prayer by Mrs. Ferguson, of South Dummer.

LONDON TAILORS HORRIFIED AT AMERICAN GOLF CLOTHES

LONDON, Oct. 8.—British golfers may bear with equanimity their defeats at the hands of Bobby Jones et al. But reported American criticisms of the clothes of the British Walker Cup team promise to strain Anglo-American golfing relations.

The Outfitter, the official journal of London's tailors, fires this broadside in reply to the criticisms:

"The weird-looking garments worn by Walter Hagen, Bobby Jones and other Americans when they last competed in British competitions completely outshone, in a lurid sense, the dress of the British golfers.

"Without exaggerating in the slightest degree, we feel that the shrinking pullovers, the gaudy golf hose and the shoes worn by the visiting Americans were such as to cause British golfers to go to the other extreme—softly, for the purpose of showing it is not necessary to dress like peacocks or musical comedy comedians to play golf."

W.M.S. ARRANGES ANNUAL BAZAAR

Omemee United Church Women Hold Regular Meeting.

OMEMEE, Oct. 8. — (Examiner Correspondence)—The regular meeting of the Women's Missionary Society was held in the basement of Trinity United Church on Thursday afternoon. There were forty present including visitors and children, with Mrs. H. Lamb, the first vice-president, in the chair.

Reports were given by the secretary, Mrs. E. Bradburn and the treasurer, Mrs. J. Shield, followed by a communication of thanks from a member for flowers during illness and an acknowledgement with thanks from the Fred Victor Mission and Deaconess Home, Toronto, for three crates of fruit sent recently by the society.

Miss L. Race gave the report of the systematic giving and being the secretary for the Missionary monthly asked that all subscriptions for same be brought in next month in order that no copies will be missed for the coming year.

Mrs. J. Bushnell, reported on the bale which was packed at the parsonage last week, which took four packing boxes to hold. It was valued at $150.05.

Mrs. William Earle and Mrs. Charles Ivory kindly consented to be responsible for two single quilts which are ready for quilting.

It was decided to send for the new study book on Africa.

Much time was given to the selecting and appointing of committees for the various booths for the annual bazaar on November 22.

The devotional part of the meeting followed. After the singing of a rousing hymn, prayer was offered by Mrs. Blanchard, followed by the scriptural reading by Mrs. Weir from Psalm 50 and St. John 17. The devotional leaflet entitled, "God's Possessions" was read by Mrs. F. G. Sandy. Miss Lila Parson proved the gathering with a pleasing solo "Thy Will Be Done".

Literature on Africa dealing with the geography and people was read by the leader assisted by Mrs. R. H. Williamson.

A hearty welcome was extended to all present by Mrs. Lamb, after which the offering was received and Mrs. Bushnell closed the meeting with the Benediction.

The hostesses for the month were Mrs. C. Ivory, Mrs. Poast and Mrs. L. A. Mallood but owing to illness, Mrs. Poast was unable to be present. Mrs. Earle and Mrs. Bushnell kindly acted in her place, and a social time was enjoyed.

YOUNG PEOPLE BADLY SHAKEN

Pontypool Resident's Car Smashed in Collision Near Enterprise.

ON MISTY NIGHT.

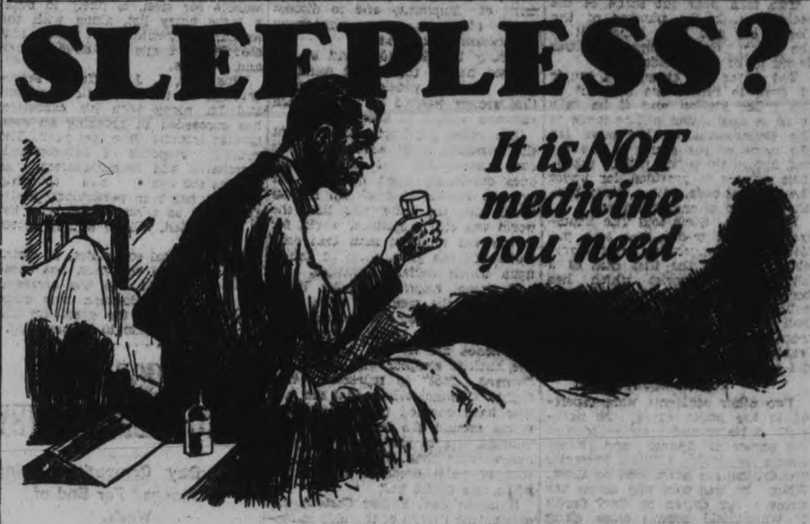
(Examiner Correspondence.)

PONTYPOOL, October 8. — While on their way to attend the concert held in connection with the Orono Fair, two local young people escaped serious injuries from rather a bad motor accident. A roadster which was driven by Lloyd Ramsberry was turned over when it collided with a touring car coming north. The accident occurred near Enterprise, five miles south of here, where the road is winding and narrow.

The night was very foggy and several motorists experienced great difficulty in driving and these conditions probably had much to do with the accident. The touring car, driven by two Clarke Township men, had one wheel and axle smashed, while the roadster was a complete wreck.

Miss Olive Gray, the other occupant of the roadster escaped with minor injuries.

SLEEPLESS?



It is NOT medicine you need

MANY know the bitterness of sleepless nights because they drink beverages which contain tannin and caffeine. These drug-stimulants seem to deaden fatigue. They actually spur tired nerves to sleeplessness. Many of you sleepless ones need nothing from the medicine chest. You should banish beverages containing tannin and caffeine.

Tannin and caffeine are harmful. With you these agents may work fast or slow. But sooner or later their poisonous effects are certain, sure!

Drink Postum. This delicious hot drink cannot irritate the nerves because Postum contains no trace of any harmful drugs. Instantly made in the cup at a cost of about half-a-cent. Or there's Postum Cereal made by boiling or percolating twenty minutes. At all grocers', restaurants, your club or on the train. Read Carrie Blanchard's splendid free offer. Mail the coupon today.

Carrie Blanchard's Offer

"I want you to try Postum for thirty days. I want to start you out on your test by giving you your first week's supply (sufficient for 21 cups).

"It seems to me that it would be a wise plan for mothers, particularly, to think of this test in connection with the health of their families.

"Will you send me your name and address? Tell me which kind you prefer—Instant Postum, made instantly in the cup, or Postum Cereal (the kind you boil). I'll see that you get the first week's supply right away."

A TEMPTING DELIGHT

BAKER'S COCONUT

FREIGHT CARS TO ADVERTISE

British Firm Makes Proposition to Railway Companies of Country.

WOULD BE SIGHTLY

LONDON, Oct. 8. (Canadian Press.)—The railways companies have been approached by a firm of advertising contractors with a view to using the sides of railway wagons for advertising, but no decision has yet been made.

A railway official stated that the companies would probably start the scheme by using the sides of covered trucks for the advertisements. This would mean that over 90,400 trucks would be painted with advertisements. If this proved satisfactory the scheme would probably be extended to the 720,860 open trucks in use on the railways.

Railway wagons provided good space for advertising. They were constantly moving about the country and were often prominently before the public eye. Great care would be taken in the selection of advertisements, and none would be accepted that was in any way unsightly. Railway advertising, he said, was, at the present time, in the forefront of commercial advertising, especially from the artistic point of view. If it was decided to use the side of wagons for advertising spaces, they would be divided into panels, and standardized in size. The present tonnage figures, identification marks, and company's name which were painted on the sides of the trucks would be standardized and placed in a special panel. He considered that, with careful choice of advertisements, such a scheme would result in the improvement in appearance of most of the wagons. Contractors would bear the cost of painting the advertisements on the trucks and would also be responsible for maintaining them in good condition. The railway companies purchased 9,280 tons of paint every year at the present time, so that an advertising scheme of this nature would effect a large saving to the railway companies in this respect alone.

French railroads are now operating more fast trains than can be found in any other continental European country.

CHURCH SOCIETIES MEET TOGETHER

Arrangements Made For Annual Fowl Dinner at Cavan Church.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAVAN, Oct. 8.—A joint meeting of the Cavan Ladies' Aid and W.M.S. was held at Mrs. J. W. Perrin's home on Thursday afternoon, with fifteen present.

The president of the Ladies' Aid, Mrs. A. B. Kennedy, conducted the opening devotional period and the business session. The work was chiefly finishing the plans for the Thanksgiving fowl dinner. The menu will be the same as in previous years, fowl with dressing and hot gravy, mashed potatoes, pickles, jellies, salads, bread and butter, pies and cakes.

The different persons were assigned to the different tasks in serving the dinner. Two ladies were appointed to take charge of each of the two long tables, with instructions to choose their own waiters. It was decided to buy 21 geese in addition to the fowl donated by the members and adherents of the church. It was also decided to purchase one dozen new knives, three dozen tea spoons and two dozen large spoons. A committee was appointed to look after this. It was decided to withdraw the November meeting of the Ladies' Aid.

The singing of Greenland's Icy Mountains" closed the Ladies' Aid session.

In the absence of the president and vice-president of the W. M. S., Mrs. R. Matchett took charge of the missionary meeting. An invitation from Mrs. Carpenter to the W.M.S. to meet at the parsonage in November was accepted.

The new study book is on Africa and is entitled "Drums in the Darkness." It is advised that the societies in studying it, have a map, so that the program of study with its location may be followed and traced on the map.

Leaflets were read, "Where is Africa" by Miss Frances Hunter; "The Shape of Africa," by Mrs. Rowen; "Africa Viewed from an Airplane," by Mrs. Perrin; "Who are the Africans," Mrs. Staples; "Another phase of Africa," Mrs. Hunter, and a longer leaflet, beautifully illustrating the fact that everything we have is God's entitled "God's Possessions," was read by Mrs. Rowen.

The singing of "The Morning Light is Breaking," sentence prayers and the benediction brought the meeting to a close.

The lunch committee served lunch and the guests lingered for a short time for social converse.

TWO INSTITUTES MEET SOCIALLY

Cavan Women Guests of Mount Pleasant Branch. Recently.

PRESENT PROGRAM.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MOUNT PLEASANT, Oct 6.— A very interesting meeting of the Mount Pleasant Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Norman Fee on Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 3, when Cavan Women's Institute motored out and enjoyed a social afternoon spent with the ladies of the local branch of Women's Institute.

The weather was all that could be desired and hence a large number were present from both Institutes. This particularly busy period of the season being a hindrance to some of the members.

The president of the Mount Pleasant Institute was in the chair and conducted the business part of the meeting. The roll call topic was 'Hallowe'en' legends. A number of the ladies dwelt with the subject of Hallow'en as it was spent in their younger days.

Mrs. R. M. Howden, the president of Cavan Women's Institute, was asked to take the chair, and took charge of the program, which was as follows: An opening chorus by the Cavan members; reading by Mrs. R. Matchett, "Woman's Career"; reading by Mrs. J. W. Perrin, "Wet Weather Talk" by J. Whitcombe Riley; chorus, "When You and I Were Young Maggie" by the Cavan Institute; reading, "Department Store Ditty" by Mrs. F. M. Staples.

The entertainment then took the form of a game. Two captains were chosen, Mrs. R. M. Howden and Mrs. T. Graham, who chose the different members on their alternate sides. When they were invited to the lawn where the game had been arranged, the throwing of sacks of beans through three holes in a board placed triangular; the holes in which the sacks were to be thrown in scored 5, 10 and 15 points. However, some of the ladies were successful in getting most of the sacks in the holes, while some were content with hitting the bottom of the board so that they might roll in, and a few of the ladies were quite pleased to be able to even hit the board. The secretary, Miss Eileen Hunter, scored the game and announced that Mrs. Howden's side won by a majority of 105 points.

The winners were asked to run a race to the road and back, much to their disapproval, they thinking that the losers were surely entitled to run the race. However, a number of the ladies who were good sports entered. Mrs. T. C. Morden was the lady who triumphed in the race.

The ladies returned to their former place indoors, where their fortunes were told by Miss Eileen Hunter by each individual shaking lucky numbered sticks from a container, the number indicating their fortune. Mrs. G. Shield, Mrs. S. Paragreen, Mrs. T. C. Morden, Mrs. R. Graham, Mrs. H. Best, Mrs. H. Lowes, Mrs. G. Jamieson and Mrs. D. Lowe assisted Mrs. Fee in serving lunch.

Mrs. Thomas Graham and Mrs. Garnet Shield moved a hearty vote of thanks and appreciation to the visiting Institute members for the splendid program and entertainment which they had provided.

The Cavan ladies responded by thanking the Mount Pleasant ladies for the pleasant social time and lunch provided.

Those present included: Mrs. Creighton Carr, Mrs R. Syer, Miss Lilian Syer, Miss Bertha Touchbourne, Mrs. R. M. Howden, Mrs. Leonard McNeil, Mrs. Richard Matchett, Mrs. J. W. Perrin, Mrs. Joseph Swain, Mrs. F. M. Staples, Miss Eileen Hunter, Miss Nettie Sutton, Mrs. H. Breathwaite, Mrs. Geo. Sisson, Mrs. H. Lowes (Millbrook), Mrs. J. I. Matchett, Mrs. F. Carpenter, Mrs. Herb. Seney, Mrs. Peister, Detroit, Mrs. McKeever, Oshawa; Mrs. Staples, Mrs. Hannah Rutherford, Mrs. John Handley, Mrs. Richard Graham, Mrs. Gertrude McLean, Mrs. Hiriam Best, Mrs. Clew Morden, Mrs. George Jamieson, Mrs. Joshua Eggleston, Mrs. Garnet Shield, Miss Lena Finley, Mrs. Henry Lowes, Mrs. Josiah Best, Mrs. Thos. Graham, Mrs. Rosenburg, Mrs. Stephen Paragreen, Mrs. Ira Lowe, and Mrs. Fee.

SUMMER SCHOOL WORK IS REVIEWED

Miss Dorothy West Tells W. M. S. About Week at Knox College.

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 5 (Examiner Staff Correspondence). — The Women's Missionary Society of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church held an open meeting in the Sunday School rooms on Wednesday night for the purpose ofhearing the report of Miss Dorothy West, who attended the summer school at Knox College, Toronto, as the official delegate of this district. The meeting was opened with devotional exercises and after a brief business discussion regarding the advisability of securing a well-known missionary to address a meeting in the near future, the special entertainment for the evening proceeded. Several reports were also received. Solos by Miss Emma Meiklejohn and Miss Jerrine Barnum; a piano solo by Miss Ruby Townsend, and a reading by Miss Lilian Hay constituted the entertainment.

In beginning her report, Miss West expressed her appreciation to the members of the society for having sent her as their delegate, and said it was a wonderful experience. For the benefit of any who may not have seen or become familiar with the college, Miss West entered into a detailed description of the large gray stone building that stands on the west side of the front campus of the University of Toronto. The girl students were quartered in Centre House which with North and West Houses, comprise the college residences. The North House and West House residences were given over to the young men and visiting ministers.

The school day began with the rising bell at half-past seven in the morning. Breakfast followed at eight-fifteen. Before sitting down to the table, there were morning prayers and scripture reading. First lecture was from nine till nine forty-five. The subject was Bible study, The Rev. John MacNabb was the instructor, and dealt with Bible history from the time when the Greek language was the common tongue. He imparted some very concise and at the same time interesting and instructive information, which left his hearers with a much clearer conception of the Bible.

The second lecture of the day was divided into three divisions: Children's division; girls' work and young people. Mrs. Massey, also a delegate to the summer course, chose the girls' work. Miss West elected to enter the young people's classes. This group was supervised by the Rev. Mr. McConnell of Paris, Ontario. He outlined some very definite plans along which young people's societies should be formed and conducted.

Eleven o'clock was the beginning of the third lecture. This was on the subject of home missions and the Rev. W. A. Cameron was the lecturer. Mr. Cameron was formerly superintendent of missions for the province of Saskatchewan, but is now the assistant secretary of the board of missions at the general assembly. Due to this fact, Mr. Cameron was able to give much interesting, first hand information on the conditions in Saskatchewan, and spoke very highly of the work that had been accomplished by the W. M. S. there. One after another, he detailed the work which was being accomplished among each of the various nationalities there, and throughout the Dominion.

Mrs. D. Strachan had charge of the half-hour lecture period beginning at noon. She was a member of the delegation sent to the foreign mission fields and was in a position to describe conditions in the fields of Japan, Formosa and Korea. She stressed the fact that there was a much greater need for workers than for money. On the last day of her lectures, Mrs. Strachan conducted the girls through the Deconess' Training School. Miss McMurchy also spoke of affairs in India, of the development and progress of the Presbyterian Church there. The Rev. Stuart Archer, recently arrived from Melbourne, Australia, spoke on the church affairs there.

The afternoons during the course were spent in rest and recreation. From two till three o'clock was the official rest period, and absolute silence was the rule. For the remainder of the afternoon there were always plans made for interesting trips to places of interest in the city such as the House of Parliament, the Museum, Hart House, and the other University buildings, as well as more remote plabes. There was also some time set aside to allow the delegates to visit friends in the city and to go shopping of they so desired.

At seven each evening, Mr. J. Middleton gave a forty-five minute lecture on boys' work, and made some reasonable suggestions for keeping the older boys interested in the church work. The entire school met at eight each evening. On the first night, this meeting took the form of an official welcome, with the Rev. Mr. Davidson of Galt presiding, assisted by the Rev. John Mustard There was also a lecture on astronomy by Rev. Mr. Marsh. Mr. Marsh expressed the hope that another year he would be able to make arrangements for the use of the observatory for the summer students. Owing to the fact that the Rev. Mr. Skene was unable to speak one evening, Miss Margaret Ramsey, who had just finished her course of training and was about to depart for work in Japan, addressed the girls. She was very enthusiastic over her entry into the foreign mission fields. A most interesting lecture was given one evening by Stuart Thompson on Birds and Bird Life. Mr. Thompson is a nephew of the famous naturalist and writer, Ernest Thompson Seton. The Rev. Mr. Barr also delivered an evening lecture on Life and the Open Door.

Sunday morning the students attended Central Presbyterian Church in a body. The service was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Skinner. Sunday School in the afternoon was presided over by Miss Sinclair. The evening service was held in the common room of the college and took the form of a farewell service. The following morning the students bade farewell to Knox College and their many friends and returned to their homes.

In closing her remarks, Miss West pointed out that three-quarters of the delegates were from points west of Toronto. She hoped that this would not be the case next year. Once more she expressed her sincere appreciation of the opportunity that had been afforded her

HAROLD DUNK HEADS TEACHERS INSTITUTE

East Northumberland Branch Elects Officers For Year.

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 8 (Examiner Staff Correspondence). — Much business was done yesterday at the final session of the convention of the public school teachers of the third inspectorate of the County of Northumberland. The convention this year is regarded as one of the most successful for many years past. The number of teachers registered as being present reached the new high level of one hundred and two. The secretary of this branch of the Teachers' Institute gave the numbers between eighty and ninety as the usual attendance.

The final session this morning was opened by the Rev. N. Clarke Wallace, Rector of Christ Church. Miss Halliday, Toronto, who spoke on practical arithmetic Friday afternoon, delivered a most interesting address on history in the schools, and the problem of the history teacher. Miss Halliday's remarks were scheduled as the third number on the program for the morning, but the illness of Mr. Wilding allowed her extra time and a place nearer the first.

After intermission, Mrs. Charles Macoun delivered a stirring and instructive address on the school and the home. Mrs. Macoun is widely and favorably known as a member and official of the Women's Institute. Her remarks were at once interesting and practical.

Following Mrs. Macoun's address the business of electing officers for Following Mrs. Macoun's address, the business of electing officers for the coming year was proceeded with. Robert Boyes, inspector, was unanimously appointed honorary president. Harold Dunk, Campbellford, teacher at West's School, will be president this year, and Miss L. G. Locke, also of Campbellford, will be the vice-president. C. S. Haig, principal of the Campbellford public schools, was appointed secretary-treasurer for another year. M. E. Smith, Warkworth; E. Lohnes, Hastings, and Miss M. Watson, Campbellford, will constitute the executive for the next twelve months and the place named for the next annual meeting was Brighton. This, however, is not definitely settled, since there has been some mention made favoring another form of meeting next year. This matter will be left largely in the hands of the executive.

This year the Institute Library Grant will go to Brighton, and G. S. Langdon of that village was appointed official representative of the institute on the Brighton Library board. C. S. Haig, Campbellford, was appointed to represent the Campbellford schools on the local library board.

At the conclusion of the meeting, a sincere vote of thanks was tendered those who had assisted in making the meeting a success and to A. D. Bennett and Company for the loan of furniture. The motion was made to include all those who had assisted in any way throughout the two days.

Wedding Bells

COLLARD—GREENBURY.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, October 6. — A very pretty wedding took place in St. John's Anglican Church, Preston, on Saturday, September 30, at half-past two in the afternoon when Charlotte Greenbury, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Greenbury, 440 Waterloo Street, became the bride of Samuel Rex Collard, Preston. The rector, Rev. R. Herbert, being ill, Rev. A. E. W. Ingram, of Hespeler, was the officiating clergyman. The wedding music was played by Mr. A. J. James.

The bride, who was given away by her father, was beautifully gowned in a period frock of white crepe satin, with Russian coronet veil and orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of Sweetheart roses, lily of the valley, and forget-me-nots. Miss Myrtle Greenbury, Toronto, sister of the bride, wore a frock of pale green, with black velvet picture hat. She carried Ophelia roses. Little Miss Gladys Collard, niece of the groom, made a pretty flower girl. She was dressed in shell pink crepe de chine, with poke bonnet to match, and carried a basket of roses and marguerites. The bride's mother wore a silk dress of fawn shade with wide hat and fox fur neckpiece. The groom's mother wore grey crepe romaine trimmed with lavender and with hat to match. Arthur E. Collard, Hamilton, brother of the groom, acted as groomsman. The ushers were J. Clegg and G. Macdonald. During the signing of the register, Miss Emma Pearl Kelly sang "Because." For the ceremony, the church was beautifully decorated with autumn leaves and flowers.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. The living-rooms and dining-room was beautifully decorated with white streamers and cut flowers. Mr. and Mrs. Collard, Sr., received with the bride. For the wedding breakfast covers were laid for thirty guests.

For her honeymoon, which will be by motor, the bride wore an ensemble of fawn shade with blue velvet hat. Upon their return they will reside in Preston.

Among the guests from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. W. Collard and Mr. and Mrs. E. Collard, Campbellford; Mr. and Mrs. Keyse, of Galt; Mr. and Mrs. J. Lunn and Mrs A. E. Collard, of Hamilton; and Miss Myrtle Greenbury, of Toronto.

The groom's gift to the bride was a white gold filigree bracelet, to the bridesmaid a pearl cluster brooch; to the groomsman a masonic tie pin; to the flower girl a finger ring, and to the soloist a pearl bar pin.

HORSESHOE TOURNEY HELD AT LAKEFIELD

Old Game is Returning With Greater Popularity Than Ever.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, Oct. 8.— The horseshoe tournament held under the auspices of the Rink Company on Thursday and Friday nights went over in a way which pleased the company and also the devotees of this old game, which is coming back into greater popularity than ever before. A good clean game with great chances of skill and affording an opportunity for spectators and players to enjoy an evening's diversion, it has done so well that another tourney may be staged before the frost comes. The games were doubles and were keenly contested and in the final game the only sounds aside from the metallic clink of the shoes were the voices of the score keepers calling the scores. It was anyone's game for the first twenty minutes and then the winners drew away steadily till they reached the 47 mark, then the runners-up crept up till one felt it might not be such a certainty and then one by one the remaining three were scored and as one of the spectators said, "It was not such an easy matter to beat the Drum."

Messrs. Drum and W. E. Kidd, of Peterborough, were winners and Messrs. Nicholls and S. Pearson, of Buckhorn, the runners up.

The following are the results:

The first named team in each case is the winner.

First Round.

Crough and Harrington vs. Adamson and Hill.

D. Campbell and P. Reid vs. J. P. Flood and E. Hickson.

J. O'Brien and M. Cleary vs. F. Webster and G. Pearson.

Galbraith and Wise vs. T. Nicholls and W. Stabler.

T. Drumm and W. E. Kidd vs. L. Wingett and H. Abrams.

F. Pearson and W. Elliott vs. J. Rome and J. Reid.

—. Twomey and D. Hickson vs. Blewett and partner.

W. Hawley and B. Barrett vs. S. Osborne and T. Grentzmer.

E. Green and Moracle vs. L. Robertson and L. Doran.

D. Charlton and R. Kemp vs. B. Sullivan and P. Murray.

P. Calvin and W. Harrington vs. W. Hamblin and H. Hamblin.

J. Irwin aid S. Wood vs. Edwards and Mason.

P. Condon and G. Hamblin vs. B. Charlton and S. Charlton.

J. Irwin and S. Wood vs. Edwards and Mason.

W. Fairbairn and P. Darling vs. N. A. Moore and G. Scriver.

F. Doughty and W. Doughty vs. A. Wood and partner.

M. Jackson and Russell Darling vs. E. Miller and F. J. Martin.

J. C. Strickland and G. G. Connell vs. E. Anderson and —. Darling.

Mel Wood and Earnshaw vs. P. Spence and N. Payne.

H. R. Wagar and Nicholls vs. Pearson and Harris.

S. Pearson and Grattan Nicholls vs. G. Fitzgerald and S. Windsor.

Second Round.

D. Campbell and P. Reid vs. Crough and Harrington.

B. F. Fleming and B. Padget vs. J. O'Brien and M. Cleary.

T. Drumm and W. E. Kidd vs. Galbraith and Wise.

Twomey and D. Hickson vs. F. Pearson and W. Elliott.

W. Hawley and B. Barrett vs. E. Green and Moracle.

D. Charlton and R. Kemp vs. G. Galvin and W. Harrington.

J. Irwin and S. Wood vs. W. Fairbairn and P. Darling.

Third Round.

D. Campbell and P. Reid vs. B. F. Fleming and B. Padget.

T. Drumm and W. E. Kidd vs. Twomey and E. Hickson.

W. Hawkey and B. Barrett vs. D. H. Charlton and R. Kemp.

F. and W. Doughty vs. J. Irwin and S. Wood.

S. Pearson and G. Nicholls vs. J. C. Strickland and G. G. Connell.

H. R. Wagar and Nicholls vs. D. Maloney and Sullivan.

Fourth Round.

T. Drumm and W. E. Kidd vs. D. Campbell and P. Reid.

W. Hawkey and B. Barrett vs. F. and W. Doughty.

S. Pearson and G. Nicholls vs. H. R. Wagar and Nicholls.

Semi-Finals.

T. Drumm and W. E. Kidd vs. W. Hawkey and B. Barrett. Scores 21-9, 23-8.

Final game a single of 50 points—T. Drumm and W. E. Kidd vs. Stanley Pearson and Grattan Nicholls. The scores were 50-33.

W. G. Morrison presented the prizes, which were sweater coats to the first two and alarm clocks to the second.

OBITUARY

(Examiner Staff Correspondence.)

MISS LILLY GOVAN.

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 8. — The funeral of the late Lilly Govan was held yesterday afternoon from the residence of William Hume, Booth street, at three o'clock. The service at the home was at two-thirty and the remains were interred in Mount Pleasant cemetery. The Rev. David Thompson, D.D., of Hastings, was the officiating clergyman. The pallbearers were Thomas Campbell, Charles Bonnycastle, Peter McMillan, William Anderson, Fred Dinwoodie, Gilbert McArthur. Many beautiful floral tributes marked the deep regret felt by a wide circle of friends.

The late Miss Govan was in her seventy-sixth year and was the eldest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Walter Govan. She was born in Seymour township and has been resident in Campbellford and vicinity during her entire lifetime. Within the last year Miss Govan, with her sister, Agnes, moved from their home in Seymour West to the residence of their late sister, Mrs. William Hume. Miss Govan's death is the result of a protracted illness of several weeks. A life-long member of the Presbyterian church, she was a member of many of the ladies' societies and a devout church woman. Her passing will be deeply felt by her associates in church work. Until her removal to Campbellford, she was also a member of the Seymour West Women's Institute. Only recently this organization made Miss Govan a handsome presentation as a perpetual remembrance of her much appreciated association with the branch.

The late Miss Govan is survived by three brothers, Jack of Sault Ste. Marie, the Rev. A. Govan of Williamstown, Ont., and Andrew of Seymour West. There also remains one sister, Agnes, of town.

Re-Style the Old Home

WHAT shall I do with my old-style home? I like my neighbors . . my lot is valuable . . . if I sell it means a sacrifice . . . no one wants an old home. It is a simple matter to re-style your old home with

EDGWOOD SHINGLES

Thousands are using this simple, practical and economical method in remodelling with EDGWOOD Red Cedar Shingles. You simply lay them over the old clapboard siding or old shingle roofs in the same manner as over solid sheathing. This saves the labor and expense of removing the old siding, shingles or composition roofing. No littering up the yard . . . no damage to shrubs or plants . . . protection against sudden storms during construction.

No other building material has such flexibility for remodelling as EDGWOOD Shingles. The builder can use them to conform to any design. Whether the alteration is to repair and restore the original; whether the purpose is to transform the old house into a modern home, adding to its size and convenience; EDGWOOD Shingles will enable you to do a better job at a lower cost. The savings on sidewalls is from 9% to 132%, on roofs from 14% to 315%, as compared with other materials.

Sawn edgegrain, EDGWOOD Shingles positively cannot warp, cup or curl. They will last for 40 years and more.

"EDGWOOD HOMES" is an interesting and informative illustrated booklet. We'll gladly send it free on receipt of name and address.

LIGHTENING THE LOAD.

Further evidence of Hon. James Robb's careful financing is afforded by the latest report from Ottawa in regard to the continued reduction of the public debt of the Dominion.

These figures show that Mr. Robb has been doing even better than last year, inasmuch as the reduction for the first six months of the present fiscal year was $73,502,541, as compared with $70,189,814 in the same period last year.

The national debt is still huge; it amounted to $2,223,347,691 at the end of September, while in 1914, at the outbreak of the war, it stood at $335,996,850. The peak was reached in 1923 when Canada's public debt reached the staggering total of $2,453,776,869.

The reduction since that year amounts to $230,429,178, which is a substantial slice off the load and an evidence of a thrifty and careful policy for which the Minister of Finance is to be commended, and from which the citizens of Canada should be able to extract ample reason for satisfaction.

EVERYBODY CAN CONTRIBUTE.

Fire Prevention Week can be made to mean a lot in Peterborough—or nothing at all.

It all depends upon the individual citizen.

If there is a general compliance with the request to have houses, business places and factories cleared of fire hazards the campaign will mark a real step forward.

If, on the other hand, citizens satisfy themselves with merely agreeing that fire prevention is a good thing and do not contribute anything to the campaign but their approval, then the end of the week will find the city no better off in respect to fire hazards.

In this effort there is something for everybody to do.

The householder can, if he wants to, make sure that his chimneys and stove-pipes are in a safe condition, and that there is no accumulation of inflammable rubbish in cellar or attic or under stairways.

The factory executive can insist upon a systematic inspection of his premises with a view to the removal of dangerous conditions.

The merchant can rid his premises of packing boxes, excelsior and other material of a similar nature.

And every one can resolve to be more careful in regard to the use of matches, to the disposal of cigarette ends and to other practices that are dangerous from a fire viewpoint.

THE POLICING OF ONTARIO.

Considerable interest has been aroused by the announcement that General Williams, head of the Ontario Provincial Police, is going to England to study police methods at Scotland Yards, and the assumption that on his return there will be a reorganization in Ontario by which the county police will be brought under provincial control.

It is thought that the policing of the Province, except in urban centres, will, under the new system, be assumed by the Provincial Government.

At the same time, there is a feeling that the highway traffic police, at present under the control of the Department of Highways, should also been absorbed into the Provincial Police Force.

There does not seem any reason why those officials should not be full-fledged Provincial Police with the same authority and power as the Provincial officers and, like them, under the direction of the Attorney-General's Department.

Such a rearrangement would simplify and make more effective the general policing of Ontario, and give the Province more capable protection against the modern criminal.

In the words of the Attorney-General: "While the police of the large cities and towns will always be centres from where good operations can be taken, the Province itself must keep an active, positive and aggressive police force, capable and willing to handle the criminal when he gets beyond the urban centres."

THE HIT-AND-RUN DRIVER.

Two Peterborough women were on Saturday night run down and badly hurt by an automobile, the driver of which failed to stop, but made good his escape, leaving the victims of his carelessness lying on the road.

It is to be hoped this cowardly motorist will be caught and punished with the utmost severity the law provides.

His conduct is almost on a par with that of the London (Ontario) hit-and-run driver who drove into an aged resident of that city and dragged his body several blocks before it was finally shaken off.

In his case a substantial reward has been offered for information that will lead to an arrest, and there will be general satisfaction if somebody collects the reward and helps to put the culprit where he belongs.

While these cases are particularly callous, the offence is becoming too common in the Province.

Almost daily cases are reported where pedestrians have been run down or motorists crowded off the road by drivers who fled from the scene of the accident without any attempt to render assistance to the victims.

Such motorists deserve the most drastic penalties that can be inflicted upon them.

The driver who is involved in an accident and does what he can to aid those who may be injured is at least following a manly course.

The coward who flees from the scene, leaving his victim to his fate is entitled to no consideration from anybody, and the public generally would be delighted to hear of the arrest not only of the brutes responsible for the London outrage and Saturday's accident here, but of the other hit-and-run drivers who infest the Province.

NO QUARTER FOR THESE MEN.

A little girl and a young woman were the victims of hit-and-run motorists on the streets of Toronto the other day. Fortunately neither was killed, but this fact does not mitigate the dastardly deed in any way. For all the motorists knew, the persons they hit might have been dead or desperately in need of assistance. There should not be any "quarter" for callous motorists of this stamp. The man who knocks down another with his car and then flees from the scene of the accident, leaving his victim perhaps to ebb his life away, is little short of a murderer. With conditions on our streets as they are to-day, it is almost inevitable that accidents will happen. To the man who remains at the scene of a mishap and seeks to render such aid as is necessary every consideration is accorded and an opportunity given to explain the facts in the case. But the hit-and-run driver has guilt instantly imputed to him, and consciousness of his culpability is generally interpreted as being responsible for his flight.

The frequency with which such accidents are occurring makes it imperative that the strongest repressive measures should be used against drivers of this nature. The first duty of a motorist is to remain at the scene of an accident for which he is responsible and lend such aid as he can. Where such a plain duty as this is neglected, the severest punishment should be meted out when the culprit is apprehended.—The Globe.

BUT PINS PRICK.

At Halifax, in the final session of the Empire Parliamentary Association's Canadian deliberations, the Hon. Tom Johnson declares that he has found in Canada very considerable hostility to the United States. No honest Canadian familiar with Canadians and with Canada from coast to coast could truthfully deny that charge in its entirety. But it would be a serious mistake to estimate what are the expressions of petty annoyances as the spirit of serious hostility. It is precisely because Canadians and Americans are such true friends at heart that opinions on minor grievances tend to be so freely voiced. We speak plainly and emphatically of and to our neighbor, because no one expects mountains to be made out of molehills. The major differences or injustices are more judicially handled. No one can imagine a war over the Chicago water steal. Can any one imagine a similar situation, say, on the Danube, in Europe, without chronic danger of a disastrous war explosion?

Canadians, like the resident of the United States, are "Americans" in their social habits, ways of thought, and in mode of speech. But Canadians from their earliest history have been staunchly, stubbornly British. What anti-American sentiment there is in Canada is kept alive by the too-popular United States practice of picturing John Bull as the world's bogeyman. In Canada every one pretty well understands the reasons for "Big Bill" Thompson antics or the tail-twisting tactics to which the British lion pays no attention, but which elicit joyful whoops—and votes—from the Americans of alien extraction. Mere understanding does not make the condition any more acceptable.

Canadians are British citizens, residents of territory outside the United States. The repeated suggestion that international affairs concern Washington only when the United States is to condescend to act in the costly and thankless role of Good Samaritan is therefore hardly likely to find favor north of the forty-ninth parallel. Yet there are innumerable examples of just such an attitude. President Coolidge's declaration of Oct. 2 will serve as an example.

As Mr. Tom King puts it in his dispatch from Washington to the Globe:

"United States taxpayers are not going to pay the German reparations. This was the keynote of an emphatic declaration made at the White House this afternoon.

"It was stated that the President did not regard the proposed discussion of debt reduction or debt cancellations as necessary or proper in connection with the evacuation of the Rhineland or the scaling down of German reparations. These subjects, in the President's opinion, are matters of European policy, with which the United States has no direct concern."

It is childish to suggest that the question of war debts can ever be dissociated from that of reparation for war damages. France can never be expected to ratify any debt-funding agreement with the United States which ignores the question of receipts from Germany, upon which France's own capacity to pay depends. Britain long since made it plain, in the Balfour policy, that she would collect from friend and foe alike only a sum sufficient to repay her own indebtedness to the United States. No other nation even attempts to divorce matters which are divisible only as are the wheels of a vehicle—with breakdown as an inevitable consequence. Yet Washington persists in the attitude that reparation payment is no affair of hers—and such persistence precludes the possibility of a general sensible settlement of a complicated series of obligations in which the United States is the only great creditor.

To Canadians such pettiness is amazing because it is so unworthy of the true greatness of their neighbor. They look for the day when great leaders of a great people will no longer find it good politics to regard international affairs with one eye on the local electorate, and when muddling but well-meaning John Bull will no longer be suggested as a Machiavellian monster ceaselessly watching for an opportunity to trip up Uncle Sam.—The Globe.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

This is Fire Prevention Week. It carries a responsibility for the whole community.

The controversy between Hon. P. J. Veniot and the Globe seems to be developing considerable static.

The Raybestos championship aspirations, alas, have been nipped by a cold blast from the North.

At least the provincial baseball championships are well divided. Every section of Ontario can claim one championship team.

The Produced-in-Canada Exhibition looms up as the greatest indoor event of the year. In every department expansion is reported.

It is not only from Canada's athletic circles that the United States obtains recruits. Idylwilde Korndyke, world's champion butter-producing cow, is lost to Ontario as a result of her purchase by an Illinois breeder.

Another chain store is locating in Peterborough. The old boys and girls will think they are in the wrong town when they come back to the reunion here next summer.

It doesn't take the student long to reach the age when he thinks the most important thing to pass is the car ahead.—Brandon Sun.

A Galt golfer says he only plays the game for the sport of the thing. We quite understand; we are not much good at it ourselves.—Galt Reporter.

PROPOSES LAND GRANTS

Lord Melchett, formerly Sir Alfred Mond, who is in Canada. He proposes land grants to settlers by the Dominion and the financing of the undertaking by Great Britain as a solution to the British unemployment problem.

GOD'S MINUTE.

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path. I have sworn, and I will perform it, that I will keep thy righteous judgments. Accept, I beseech Thee, the freewill offerings of my mouth, O Lord, and teach me Thy judgments. Thy testimonies have I taken as an heritage for ever: for they are the rejoicing of my heart.—Ps. 119: 105, 106, 108, 111.

Our dear Heavenly Father, we thank Thee that during the night we could rest and sleep under the shadow of Thy protecting wing. We are grateful for the opportunities for service which come with the new day. We pray for strength to overcome evil and perform our tasks. May we show the spirit of the Master in all we think, say or do.

Bless our absent friends and loved ones, and keep them in Thy Holy will. Remember in mercy the tempted and tried and afflicted ones, and sustain them by Thy grace. Bless those in authority in our State and nation with wisdom to know and strength to do Thy will.

Sustain those who labor for the establishment of Thy Kingdom at home and abroad, and hasten the time when all men may know and obey Thee. For Jesus' sake. Amen.

Cleveland, Ohio.

A Thought

HAVE YOU EVER HEARD?

Have you ever heard of a man making a solid, substantial success—of a man of skill and capacity, ingenuity and imagination, who did not work overtime to accomplish his objective? Answer that one.

If a thoroughly capable man should start out to make a success and begin by measuring his work by his pay, or his reward, that man would always be a few feet behind his opportunity, or several laps behind success.

Outstanding success calls for overtime. Morning, noon, night, and midnight study and preparation is the price we pay for solid, substantial success.

If you are not willing to work overtime, then take your place with the piece-workers where you belong.

When opposed, censured, or misunderstood, keep your poise.

To master a difficult trick, a juggler often tries that trick a thousand times.

NEW SCHOOL CAR ON C.N.R. LINES

WINNIPEG, Man., October 8 (Special to The Examiner). — If the children cannot go to the school the school must go to the children. The latest development in educational institutions is the school car, one of which is to-day roving up and down the lines of the Canadian National Railway in Ontario, completed recently in the Canadian National shops at Fort Rouge, converted from an old coach into a school room and teacher's home. The car is now bringing reading and writing and arithmetic and a few of the other amenities of the twentieth century to the youngsters who live in the wilderness and have never heard the sound of the bell. The car travels a distance of 120 miles in what are known as the Raith and Quorn subdivisions between Port Arthur and Superior Junction. The travelling school was originated by Dr. J. S. MacDougall, assistant Chief Inspector of Schools, Toronto. It brings education to the children of shifting section men and to the other boys and grils handicapped by dwelling in the sparsely settled districts. The car is stationed at one place two or three days and receives pupils from several miles around. Before leaving for the next point the teacher gives the children lessons to be worked over at home ready for his return.

The car is divided into four compartments, the school room, equipped with twelve desks and the teacher's bedroom, living room, and kitchen. Book cases, blackboards, and maps are stowed away conveniently. One of the most interesting features of the car is its compactness. The car and fixtures are supplied by the railways, Dr. MacDougall states, and the teacher and teaching materials by the Government. The pupils are supplied free with all their school room needs.

"We have four cars now operating in Ontario," he said, "and within a few years expect to see many more.

"The scheme is proving decidedly worth while, and it is to the splendid co-operation with Government and the railways that we owe its success."

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 8 (Canadian Press).—Sharp bulges in price for wheat, with much increased buying of future deliveries here resulted Saturday from an unexpected dearth of offerings. Assertions were widely circulated that on the basis of growers' costs domestic wheat both southwest and northwest is netting below 1893 values.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled, ½ cent to 1¼ cent net higher; with corn ¼ cent off to ¼ cent up; oats showing ¼ cent to ¾ cent gain, and provisions varying from 2 cents setback to a rise of 50 cents.

One of the largest growers of wheat in the United States was quoted as authority for statements that in proportion to cost of products wheat in Kansas and in States northwest is at present bringing less than during 1923. It also was reported as saying that thresher returns in Montana and North Dakota have proved to be smaller than was estimated, and that Canadian wheat at Winnipeg plus a carrying charge to December is higher than wheat in the United States. Adding to the bullish influence of such factors were persistent complaints Saturday of dry weather in domestic wheat territory southwest.

Despite profit-taking sales which at times wiped out most of the gains in price, wheat was rallying briskly anew at the finish helped by word of better export demand, Europe having purchased 800,000 bushels of wheat Saturday to be shipped from North America, including some United States hard winter grades. Meanwhile, advices were at hand that farmers northwest continue to show an unusual disposition to retain ownership of wheat, and that many of those who are selling cash wheat have been buying future delivery contracts.

Highest prices of the season paid here Saturday for rye counted also as a strengthening influence on the wheat market, and so likewise did dispatches telling of a renewal of Australian dockworkers strike disturbances likely to delay wheat exports from Australia.

Buying of corn Saturday was less aggressive than has been the rule of late. This was especially the case after March and May corn had reached new high record prices for the season.

It was contended that recent advances have discounted bullish features, and that five States east of Chicago have nearly 85,000,000 bushels more corn this season than a year ago.

Oats sympathized with wheat strength.

For the most part, provisions held about steady.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Oct. 8 (Canadian Press)—A feature of the grain trade here Saturday was the marked improvement in the demand from both United Kingdom and Continental buyers for grain even at the advanced prices asked overnight and a large volume of business was accomplished by local exporters in barley and wheat for October shipment. The sales of barley were estimated at thirty-five loads.

On account of the above there was a good demand for barley in the local market and sales of 100,000 bushels of Manitoba feed grade were made at 75½ cents per bushel, c.i.f. Montreal, and several loads of No. 4 grade at 10¼ cents per bushel over the Winnipeg October option, c.i.f.

The car lot cash grain trade was fair, with a strong undertone, and prices for wheat here one cent per bushel higher and feed barley was marked up two cents per bushel. Manitoba No. 5 wheat sold at $1.05, No. 6 wheat at $1.03, feed wheat at $1.05, while Manitoba feed barley sold at 82 cents per bushel

A moderate amount of business was done in Spring and Winter wheat flour, and values were unchanged.

The demand for all lines of millfeed continued good and the undertone to the market was firm. A fair trade was done in standard grades of rolled oats, and values were steady.

Prices for all grades of eggs were firmly maintained under a good demand. The receipts Saturday were 755 cases.

The inquiry for butter was confined to broken lots to meet immediate wants, but values were unchanged. The receipts were 3,286 packages.

The tone of the cheese market was steadier under an improved demand. The receipts were 8,975 boxes.

Found Them Good For His Backache

"My husband has used Dodd's Kidney Pills for his bad back," writes Mrs. Leonard Simms, Man Point, Gander Bay, Nfld. "He took one box and his back was better. I have also taken them for Backache and found them to be very good." Backache, Urinary Disorders, Dizziness, Swollen Ankles, Rheumatic twinges, are early signs of Kidney trouble. Never neglect such warnings! Keep a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills always in the house. Dodd's Kidney Pills fortify the 98 Kidneys.

BIG POWER PROJECT AUTHORIZED

By the granting of a lease to the North-Western Power Co., a subsidiary of the Winnipeg Electric, for a period of thirty years, one of the largest power developments ever undertaken comes into operation. A new plant will be built at the Seven Sisters Falls and to increase the dependable flow the present flow through Pinawa channel will be diverted to go over the falls. This means the closing of the present Pinawa channel power plant (left, above), which now produces 38,700 horsepower. At the right is shown the city of Winnipeg's 105,000 horsepower plant further up the river. Map shows power plants on the Winnipeg river and the storage basin at Lac Seul and Lake of the Woods.

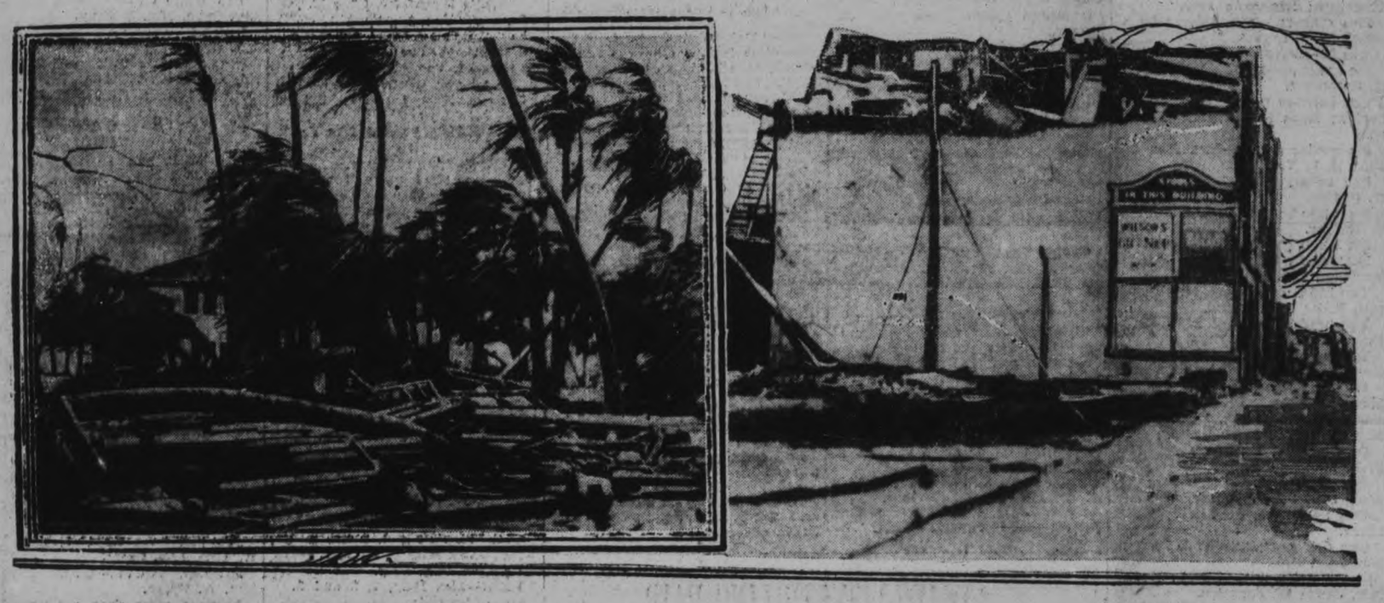
The Arctic patrol of the Royal Canadian Air Force has just returned from a fourteen months' expedition to the territory around Hudson Bay. The patrol consisted of four planes, officers and men of the Air Force and an officer and several men of the corps of signallers in charge of the wireless communications. A careful study of weather and flying conditions made by the members of the patrol has resulted in the gathering of a great deal of information for the scientific study of aviation in the Arctic. The above pictures show: 1. The first picture ever taken of an aeroplane flying over Hudson Straits. One of the giant Fokker planes of the patrol starting out on a day's flight. 2. Flight-Lieut. T. A. Lawrence, commander of the expedition, with a husky pup. 3. One of the collapsible boats to which Flying Officer Lewis owes his life. 5. The officers at Wakehame Bay, left to right, Flying Officers Carr-Harris and Coghill, Flight-Lieut. T. A. Lawrence and W. C. K. Clothier, medical officer. 4. The entire engine of one of the planes being taken out to be repaired. The members of the patrol did all their own repair work.

When a fast west-bound C. N. R. freight train struck another freight train moving more slowly in the same direction, one of the worst wrecks ever known on the Toronto-Kingston section of the C.N.R. occurred. The fast train came around a curve and crashed into the rear of the other train just as it was moving away from the station at Collin's Bay, eight miles west of Kingston. Twelve to fifteen cars were completely demolished and 300 sheep and an unestimated number of cattle were killed. The second train was carrying 20 carloads of livestock. A general picture of the wrecked trains showing how the engine crashed off the tracks is shown here.

Archbishop Matheson of Winnipeg, Archbishop of Rupert's Land and Primate of all Canada, who has just celebrated his 76th birthday, has reconsidered his resignation to the Anglican Synod meeting in Hamilton. Efforts made to have him continue at the office he has held with distinction for so many years succeeded. Photographs above show a number of the prominent Anglican Churchmen attending the Synod. They are: (1) Bishop Grey, Saskatchewan; (2) Archbishop Matheson, primate of all Canada, Winnipeg; (3) Bishop Robins; (4) Bishop Owen of Hamilton, and (5) Archdeacon Snowden, Ottawa.



Death tolls rose steadily as relief forces pushed farther into the areas which were struck by the tropical hurricane which recently swept parts of the United States. From the Lake Okeechobee and West Palm Beach sections in Florida came revised reports which estimated that 800 persons lost their lives from the wind and the flood waters of the lake. Here are the first telephotos of the damage wrought by the hurricane in Florida. The one at the LEFT, telephoned from Atlanta, Ga., shows the city park, West Palm Beach, centre of the city's amusements for winter tourists. The one on the RIGHT, also received via Atlanta, shows a third-storey wall of the Lake Court Hotel, West Palm Beach, carried away by the winds.

A Prime Minister, like everybody else, has to have some sport to keep fit, and this picture shows Premier King chinning the water at Lake Waskesiu, in the new Prince Albert National Park, Saskatchewan, which he opened during his Western tour several weeks ago. With him is the Hon. T. C. Davis, right, Attorney-General of Saskatchewan. Premier King is now in Europe attending to many matters of State.

The wedding took place in Christ Church Cathedral, Montreal, of Miss Gerda Parsons, daughter of the late Allan Parsons and of Mrs. Parsons of Montreal, to Captain A. J. Thomas, son of the Rt. Hon. J. H. Thomas, former Labor Cabinet Minister, and Mrs. Thomas. Mrs. Leonard Reid acted as matron of honor for her sister, while among the bridesmaids was Miss Doris Thomas, sister of the bridegroom. Mr. Charles Hebert acted as best man. Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Thomas arrived on the Duchess of Bedford, will remain till the day after the wedding, when they will return to England. The illustration shows Capt. Thomas and his fiancee.

WON BY CANADIANS

The King's shield, one of the most handsome silver trophies in the Empire, housed just now in the office of the Minister of National Defence at Ottawa, is a tribute to the skill of young Canada with the rifle.

AKRON WRITER ENJOYS HOLIDAY AT RICE LAKE

James W. Schlemmer, Sports Editor of Beacon Journal, Writes of Stay.

DESCRIBES DUCK HUNT.

Fishing, Rice Gathering, and Muskrat Marshes Interested U. S. Party.

Through the courtesy of Mr. H. McLaughlin, Keene, The Examiner has received the following written by James W. Schlemmer, Sports Editor of the Akron (Ohio) Beacon-Journal:

Would that I knew the ways of birds to explain what I saw last Thursday and Friday at Rice lake, Ontario.

Almost without any warning Thursday afternoon swallows began to arrive at Rice lake in numbers which fairly darkened the skies. They came from the east, from the west and from the north.

Thousands of them! They made the noise of a fleet of distant airplanes. They swooped down upon the rice fields of the lake and upon the wilds of Sugar island, and the great muskrat swamp there almost at the same time.

Within an hour there were so many swallows gathered there, every bit as though they had arranged the meeting, that the sight was simply stupefying.

Did these migratory birds, going north last spring, arrange to meet at Rice lake, Sept. 13, to begin their real trip back south?

How does it happen that they came all at once and in such great numbers, from three different directions?

Old Ben Taylor, 67-year-old Indian guide, saw them and shrugged his shoulders. He couldn't answer questions but he did essay that "We have much weather soon." The birds were gone by sunrise.

Friday afternoon there came from out of the northwest skies in the vicinity of Georgian bay, a flock of wild ducks in which there must have been 400 or more.

They flew in V-shaped groups of 200 or more with all but the last group flying high.

Over Rice lake they hovered until the trailing group, acting for all the world like a rear guard, was in position to descend. Then the whole flock swooped into the rice fields and was harbored for the night.

Saturday morning at sunup marked the opening of the duck-hunting season in Ontario.

At midnight Friday night the Indians left their beach at Hiawatha—canoes camouflaged with brush, and by 3 o'clock they were anchored among the rice, waiting for daybreak and the start of festivities.

At 4 o'clock it began to rain hard. At 5 o'clock even before dawn, the shooting began. It sounded like Chicago.

At dawn we looked from behind the folds of a rain-soaked tent across the waters where at dusk the day before there had been only waving rice and parked ducks.

Now there were dozens of brush piles, each hiding a canoe, with at least one alert marksman, Indian or white.

But the ducks which had sought a haven of rest for the night, apparently had departed under cover of the rain or at the first sound of gunfire.

Were they trying to reach safety in the south before the season opened in Ontario?

Did they know there could be no shooting between the hours of sundown and sunup, and would they do all of their remaining travel during the day at a height too great for the range of man's guns and rest at night under the cover of man's laws?

One returning from his first real fishing trip into the Canadian "wilds" wears a pleasant mental headache of thoughts so varied, voluminous, and mayhap so interesting that he scarcely can find a starting place for putting them into form which might be of interest to others than himself.

Once started, there is no stopping.

A week ago today we gazed out over that beautiful 32-mile long body of water in southeastern Ontario known as Rice lake and watched a fleet of canoes from the Indian village of Hiawatha descend upon the fields of black rice which shoots its green stalks above many square miles of the lake's surface.

It was harvesting time. Last Monday marked the first day of rice gathering for this year.

Two Indians to a canoe, the occupants sat facing each other. One paddled slowly, one-handed. In his other hand, and in one hand of the other passenger of the craft, were sticks not quite as long as broom handles.

Guiding the canoes through the rice fields, the Indians beat the rice stalks toward and against their canoes, the greenish black grains falling into the boats.

What we saw was but a simple mean of harvesting one of the Canadian Indians' chief cereals and means of money-making. Back of this first day of rice harvesting was a more romantic story.

In some of the canoes were mothers and sons. In others were sweethearts and lovers.

Indian custom has it that on the first day of the harvest—or at some time before that, the Indian youth asks his sweetheart if she will gather rice with him. If she says yes, the two become betrothed.

If the Indian youth shall ask his mother to the harvest with him it is significant that the boy will not wed during the next year.

At noon the Indians beached not far from the fishing camp of our party of six Akronites. They had fires going in about the length of time it would take to light a cigaret in a closed room and in not much longer than that the smell of frying bacon and eggs killed off any odor which might have come forth from a community kettle in which some of the freshly garnered black rice was being cooked.

Black rice is stronger than white rice which is common food here. Black rice pudding is a delicacy one should not pass up. Indians gather the race in quantities sufficient to allow them to sell some to grocers who retail it at 50 cents a pound, including free a pamphlet of recipes.

So much for the rice, from which Rice lake gathers its name.

* * *

There are fish in Rice lake. Maskinonge, or Muskellunge, as they are more frequently called; pickerel and bass, of the group of larger fish, still abide there in plenty, although so many tons were taken through the ice last winter that the government of Ontario has placed the ban on any more winter fishing lest the summer sport be done away with entirely.

The party returning Sunday from the camp of Ray Garman, owner of the South Akron Awning Co., included Garman, Dale Gandee of the Rutledge Drug Co.; Dwight Hollinger, of the Hollinger Florist Co.; William McDonald, local insurance salesman; Howard Turner, Akron policeman and former vices quad head, and the writer.

With this outfit came 17 muskies ranging from eight to 18½ pounds and many more pickerel and bass running as high as nine pounds in weight.

One successful landing out of four strikes was about the average for the party so far as muskies were concerned.

Sliced as one would slice pork chops, fried in deep and exceedingly hot lard or butter, with French fried potatoes and a side dish of vinegared endive or cabbage, the eater moves back from his meal with the satisfaction that he has never eaten anything better.

Perhaps a mile from Garman's camp—now four years old and busy every week of the muskellunge season—is one of the world's largest muskrat swamps.

If not the world's largest home of the rats there is now said to be no existing doubt that the Rice Lake muskrat furs are the finest in the world.

The swamp covers hundreds of acres and is so treacherous that no person can invade it at any period of the year except winter and early spring time when the ice is beginning to break up.

Indians put runners on their canoes and slide over or paddle through the broken ice floes to kill the rats by the score. Once the ice is gone and the live weeds and bushes of thes wamp begin to grow the rats are safe until the next year.

* * *

One pictures nothing less interesting from such a fishing trip with the guides. Of the six in our camp, five were Indians. One was a Britisher.

The latter is Burt Adams, veteran of the Boer war, globe trotter, with wife and eight children, four and four, living at Hiawatha. Adams pilots a skiff a difference from the short canoes used by the Indian guides.

Of him it is said that no person is known to live in Canada who can row faster or more accurately to a line.

Ben Taylor, veteran personal guide for Ray Garman, is 67 years old, but can make his 12-foot canoe ride like a Pullman car even though the lake is being whipped into a frenzied foam.

Old Uncle Ben's father is 115 and can read without glasses. He guided regularly until 97. Ben's grandfather died just a few years ago at 130.

Ben would like to guide until he is 100, but fears that he will not live that long.

"White man spoil Indian," he says. And how? By introducing sweet stuffs—cookies, cakes, etc.

Soft living....and hard drink both of which the white man took to the Indian, has shortened his span of years.

Dan Muskrat, one of the three brothers guiding on Rice lake, can paddle his canoe for hour after hour without tiring himself, while keeping up a conversation regarding world topics, the baseball races, football prospects and what not, in a manner which does not begin to tire the fisherman in his boat.

He will even sell insurance—and does at various times—but the passenger in his canoe is never made to feel the necessity of increasing the amount of his policies even on the stormiest sea or when an 18 or 20 pound lunge is wrapping a too-loose line over and under the craft and putting it in apparent proximity of being tipped over.

Guides are not allowed to fish, but most of them do. That they will have both hands free to handle their canoe when a lunge strikes the plug cast out by their employer they hold their trolling lines between their teeth.

This way they can distinguish instantly between having their spoon baits caught in weeds or in the innards of a fish and while three out of four get away from the white man the Indians' batting average runs pretty close to perfect.

The white man has spoiled the Indian guide. He has made him lazy and expectant. He wants liquor, in violation to the law which forbids Indians drinking; wants his employer to give him choice articles of clothing; wants to come to shore after helping land a big lunge.

The Indian is honest. He will return a bill fold with much money in it, but he'll help himself to the last drop of gin, and do it on the sly.

It would be cheaper, however, for the guides to swipe all of the stuff than to attempt to bring any of the forbidden fruit across the customs bridges at Niagara Falls.

The current fine per bottle is $2 for ale and beer and $5 for harder stuff. And the officials keep the liquids.

GETTING SKINNIER EVERY DAY

Something Must Be Done and Done Right Now—Quick.

Tens of thousands of thin, rundown men—yes, and women, too—are getting discouraged — are giving up all hope of ever being able to take on flesh and look healthy and strong.

All such people can stop worrying and start to smile and enjoy life right now for McCoy's Cod Liver Extract Tablets are putting flesh on hosts of skinny folks in all parts of the world every day.

One woman, tired, weak and discouraged, gained 15 pounds in five weeks and now feels fine.

And this shows what faith the makers have in McCoy's for they say: if any thin person don't gain at least 5 pounds in 30 days your money will be refunded—and only 60 cents for 60 tablets—Economy Size—$1.00. Ask for them at McDermid & Jury, Bond's Lynch, and Giles, or any drug store.

BATTERY EXPERTS HAVE NEW BUILDING

Aldous and Metcalfe Make Addition To Service Station.

As a supplement to their splendid Red Indian service station, at the corner of Charlotte and Stewart streets, the firm of Aldous and Metcalfe has recently erected a splendid new building immediately to the west of the filling station, in which they have housed their generator, starter and ignition service, as well as a radio showroom and tire sales.

A member of the firm, speaking to The Examiner, stated that the dual business—filling station and tire and battery service—is proving mutually beneficial, as many people who come for the one service, remain to take advantage of the other. The new building is larger than the filling station and is designed so as to present the same color scheme and general appearance.

Aldous and Metcalfe have decided to give a radio service also, and hold the agency for the King radio.

LADIES' AID RALLIES AT GEORGE STREET

Address By A. Mowat Features First Meeting of Season.

The Ladies' Aid of George Street United Church held their annual rally day meeting in the board room of the Sunday school hall on Tuesday afternoon, with a very large attendance.

The president, Mrs. C. E. Smith, occupied the chair and opened the meeting with prayer. Mrs. E. E. Harvey then took charge of the devotional exercises. Mrs. H. Foot read the scripture lesson, followed by prayer led by Mrs. J. Stubbs.

The secretary, Mrs. G. C. Staples, and the treasurer, Mrs. S. Oke, gave excellent reports, which were received and adopted.

A number of the standing committees reported. Mrs. J. Stubbs, sick and visiting; Miss Morrow, flowers; Mrs. P. Hetherington, social; and a number of convenors of booths for the Christmas fair reported that they were making satisfactory progress in their work. Mrs. G. Carruthers of the flower booth, invited all present to a tea at her home, 545 Aylmer street, on Thursday afternoon, October 12, proceeds to assist in buying flowers for the booth.

A couple of beautiful solos were rendered by Miss Davidson accompanied by Miss Batten. A. Mowat, B.A., gave a fine and inspiring address on Canadian national feeling.

Mr. Mowat said the reason he choose this subject was because of an article in The Globe recently which said that in the West there were vast settlements of people who have not been assimilated. "Here in Ontario we are one hundred per cent Canadian, and have the national feeling. Have you ever asked yourself why you are a Canadian. In Ontario and Quebec we are two peoples of different nationality. We are three thousand miles from England and three thousand miles from France. For this reason we have taken root and have become a distinctive people different from the peoples of other lands.

"There are reasons for this difference. First our geographical situation, and secondly our history.

In 1763 America was given to Britain. Then the revolt of the American colonies separated us from them. Then at the time of the French revolution in 1789, the French of Canada were not in sympathy with the French government and this caused them to have more of a national feeling for Canada. The war of 1812 stimulated a national spirit when the Americans invaded Canada, and a national feeling of patriotism and fellowship was developed.

"This feeling received a set-back when MacKenzie and Papineau rebelled, but as a result of this we got our present representative government. The greatest event took place sixty-on years ago when the four provinces were brought together in Confederation, and after the other provinces came in we were linked up with railroads. Sir John Macdonald's national policy was a great stroke of genius and has been very good for Canada.

"Now we think of ourselves as no longer a colony. We have a representative at Geneva, and Vincent Massey is appointed as a representative at Washington. All these thing stimulates a Canadian national feeling.

"Now we have a distinct Canadian literature.

"Canadian Art is a recognized school.

"What is being done to Canadianize the vast numbers who come to our shores? I think the schools are the greatest factors in this work. Here the language is taught and ideals of patriotism and love are instilled. In British Columbia the Orientals are the biggest problem, but in Alberta, Saskatchewan, and Manitoba the schools are well looked after.

"The church is a great factor in uniting these people of so many different nationalities, and making them true Canadians. The United Church is doing a great work in assimilating Canadians. The question is often asked, 'Can we have a united nation with more than one religion?' I think our best statesmen agree that one religion is not necessary; nor necessary to have one tongue to have a united country. We have the possibilities of a great nation if we have a common thought and a common history, and are looking forward to the future."

A vote of thanks was moved to Miss Davidson for her solo and to Mr. Mowat for his interesting and instructive address, by Mrs. B. Shortly, seconded by Mrs. H. M. Yelland.

All were invited to the Sunday school auditorium for afternoon tea. As they went in they drew numbers, and each lady found her group. In this way many became acquainted and a pleasant half-hour was spent.

Mr. Hetherington and the social committee were in charge of arrangements.

LIBRARY NOTES

RELIGIOUS BOOKS.

The Peterborough Library possesses about 900 volumes dealing with religious subjects. Almost every phase of human thought is represented and special care has been taken to procure such books as set forth most ably the teachings of the recognized churches. But, beyond this, the Library possesses most valuable books on teaching in the Sunday school, splendid Biblical dictionaries, encyclopaedias dealing exclusively with religion, and most excellent works on hymnology. Again, we are supplied with volumes dealing with the Northern Sagas, mythologies of various races, and accounts of creeds that antedate Christianity by thousands of years, showing that in the heart of man, in his infancy, there stirred the feeling that an Omnipotent Spirit ruled the universe.

There is a great deal to be learned in our library by those who desire to follow the religious ramifications of the human mind. It is one of the most interesting of studies, and certainly, for all who profess Christianity, one of the most important, because extended research can but show the overwhelming superiority of the Christian faith over all others. It is interesting because we discover, as we read, many features that would be otherwise likely to pass the casual reader. We would learn, for one thing, that the earliest vehicle of religion was poetry, and that it has been through the use of beautiful imagery that the great creeds and teachings of the world have been handed down through the centuries. The Babylonian records of the beginnings of time were hymns in celebration of Pantheism. The Assyrians had their temple psalms, as had the Egyptians, while the Aryans of India chanted their Vedic poems and the Greeks immortalized Zeus in epics and tragedies.

We have a fine collection of hymns and psalms throughout the Christian world to-day, and these are supplemented by most able theses and treatises in many lines of thought, showing that along a thousand by-paths men and women are endeavouring to push their way through the mazes of conjecture to the common goal of humanity.

AGED WOMAN SAVES CHILD

Brings Grandson Out of Burning House as Roof Caves In.

AT WALLACEBURG.

WALLACEBURG, Oct. 8.—Trapped by flames, Mrs. George Murray just managed to stagger to safety with her little grandson in her arms Saturday night. She collapsed as she reached open air.

Alone in the house, Mrs. Murray was wakened about 11 o'clock to find the house ablaze. She was downstairs. Her grandson, Hugh White, was asleep upstairs. Risking her life, she rushed to rescue the child, stopped a moment to secure savings left in the same room, and got outside just before the roof began to fall.

The farm house was completely stroyed. The loss will be approximately $6,000.

LADIES CROSS CANADA BY CAR

Mrs. Bell and Miss McLeod Complete Interesting Journey.

LEISURELY TRIP.

Mrs. J. S. Bell and niece, Miss Deirdre McLeod, have arrived at Vancouver, B.C., after a most interesting motor trip across Canada.

Miss McLeod left London, England, in July and with friends motored from Montreal to Peterborough, as guest of Mrs. H. Bell at 451 Water street.

After considerable time spent in visiting the many points of beauty and charm around Peterborough and buying a car here, Mrs. Bell and Miss McLeod continued the journey leisurely across Ontario, which province appeals very much to them.

The majestic grandeur of the mountains very much impressed the ladies, and much time was spent around Banff, Lake Louise and the Windermere.

The trip concluded without misadventure, notwithstanding the purely feminine auspices, and the two ladies are receiving the sincere congratulations of many friends here.

Mrs. Bell, after a time with her brother, C. H. Fitzgerald and Mrs. Fitzgerald on Vancouver Island, will return to Peterborough.

Miss McLeod will visit New Zealand and Australia, and India, where her brother is in the British government service; finally returning to London via the Suez.

Miss McLeod states that the people of the Old Land know little of Canada, and considers it wonderful and marvellous in development, and Peterborough and district very much impressed her.

She expects to write a book on the impression of her tour.

IN POLICE COURT

A local young man pleaded guilty to being intoxicated in a public place and was fined $10.00 and $4.50 costs.

A boy aged 16 pleaded guilty to stealing the use of an automobile on Saturday and was fined $1 and $24.25 costs. Speaking to the Crown Attorney in this case, Chief Newhall said there should be no sympathy for irresponsible persons who take cars out and endanger the lives and property of citizens. He cited as an example the reckless way oil trucks and many cars are driven across intersections. "Steps will be taken he declared to put a stop to this reckless driving and constables will be put in plain clothes to get the offenders and bring them before the courts. In view of Saturday night's accident opposite the Canadian General Electric factory I am prepared to go the limit from this out to check reckless driving."

She had just pulled the car around in time, and her face was white. "Would you like me to drive?" he asked quietly.

WOMAN CHARGED WITH CONSPIRACY

Accused of Selling Two Half Interests and Then Mortgaging Business.

WINNIPEG, Man., Oct. 3 (Canadian Press).—Kennethe Haig, writing of "Women's Place on the Pay Roll," says:

At the Pacific Women's conference of recent date, Mary Anderson, director of the Federal Women's Bureau of the United States, gave an address in which she surveyed the trend of women into gainful occupations. When the census was taken in 1920 we found, contrary to all expectations, that there had been only a small increase since 1910 in the number of women gainfully employed," she disclosed. "The significance of this period lay, instead, in the trend of women's employment. Women had declined materially in the agricultural pursuits. The decline in domestic and personal service was about 14 per cent; women in professions had increased about 39 per cent, women in trade about 43 per cent, and women in clerical work 140 per cent.

It is perhaps not surprising to note that almost an identical development went on on this side of the line during those years. The Canada Year Book, 1927-28, sets out that in 1921 fifteen per cent of the female population over ten years of age was gainfully employed. It was found that the tendency of women to attach themselves to pay envelopes was increasing, "though the increase in percentage between 1911-1921 is not so great as between 1901-1911." During the last-named decade women in domestic service had decreased from 38 per cent of the total employed, to 27 per cent; and in professions had increased from 13 per cent to 20 per cent. The proportional percentage of those engaged in agriculture had declined from 4 per cent to 3 per cent. and in manufacturing from 36 per to 21 per cent.

Women, the American report showed, spend 85 per cent of the annual pay roll across the line, and influence the spending of 10 per cent more; 85 per cent of all savings accounts are in women's names.

There is no survey of which we know of women as cheque writers in Canada, except that afforded by observation and by the testimony of the stores that the overwhelming majority of their customers are women. But, the statistics tables do indicate that women here are finding their way to the banks and the other financial houses as employees, the proportional percentage thus engaged having increased from 0.75 per cent in 1911, to 3.06 per cent in 1921.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

PAVING WORK NEARLY DONE

Millbrook Will Soon Have Fine Modern Highway System.

TRAFFIC NOT STOPPED.

MILLBROOK, Oct. 5.—(Examiner Correspondence).—Preparations for surfacing in connection with the two miles of paving being done here this season is nearing completion, only the business section of King street having to be finished, when practically the whole distance will be ready for the amesite top. The crushed stone is already spread in the downtown area and the men are starting with the sand mixture and the rolling. The cement curb was all finished last week, and the last piece of ditch-draining along the south side of King street, running down Turner's hill, is being rapidly pushed through.

Starting at the north end of Tupper street between forty and fifty men began work on Monday morning putting on the amesite top, and are now as far as the intersection with Bank street. This work is being done with despatch, and the traffic has not been stopped while it is going on.

Extra labor and expense has been incurred owing to the 'springy' nature of the roadbed in some places, necessitating the putting in of cement bases at these points the longest stretch is probably the one which runs the entire length of the parsonage hill; there is another on the T. G. Kells hill from the Regent street intersection; on the south end of Regent street, and short pieces at one or two other points.

Through the courtesy of the Agricultural Society, the men who are working on the amesite top are housed in the main building on the fair grounds. They have their own cook with them, and use the dining-hall for meals.

The promise is that before the end of the month the paving will be entirely completed, and suggestion has been made that plans for the formal opening should be under consideration.

LONDON NEEDS MORE BRIDGES

New Exits Are Needed at the West End of World's Metropolis.

OLD BRIDGE DOOMED.

LONDON, Eng., Oct. 8.—(Canadian Press).—An indication of how London is constantly changing and growing is given by the necessity of providing three efficient new bridges on the western exits. Traffic on the great new roads, which the motor age have made necessary is too heavy for the present bridge, and about a million pounds is to be spent in the next three years in replacing the Hampton Court Bridge and provide new bridges at Richmond and Chiswick.

Every Londoner, treasuring memories of happy holidays at Hampton Court, will feel a twinge of regret at the old bridge's doom. Built 63 years ago, it sufficed in a sedate age of carriage and pair, but since 1923 it has been necessary to forbid heavy locomotives to cross it, and the speed of motor car and lorry has been restricted.

The ornamental bridgework of the new structure is by Sir Edwin Lutyens and is designed to harmonize with the more modern parts of Hampton Court Palace. Three ferroconcrete arches will carry a face of red brick and Portland stone with small pavilions at each end.

Sir Herbert Baker designed the bridge to join Chiswick and Barnes and Mr. Maxwell Ayrton has designed the Richmond Bridge.

Law's Intricacies Tie Up Chinaman

MONTREAL, Oct. 8 — For ways that are dark and tricks that are vain, commend to Wong Suey the laws of the Dominion of Canada. For 16 months Wong has been in a jail cell because he owed his brother $200 and he is so wound around with the red tape of the law that nobody can undo him.

Wong's brother started proceedings when he sued Wong for the debt. No payment coming, a writ of capias was issued and Wong went to jail. After he had been there several months, he learned that others got freedom by assigning their assets to their creditors. He did that. But he stayed in jail. Recently a lawyer had Wong brought to court from the jail and presented a writ of habeas corpus. It was denied. Wong had assigned under the Bankruptcy Act, when he should have proceeded under the civil code. So Wong went back to jail.

Then the Chinese made another trip to court, and application for bail was made. It was set at $500, the prisoner could not raise the money. So Wong went back to jail.

A second writ of habeas corpus was tried, and for a third time Wong went from jail to court. That writ was denied. Again Wong went back to jail. Yesterday, the lawyer went straight to the Court of Appeals and presented his habeas corpus writ. Wong was there. The writ was denied, the court holding the lower court judgment should have been appealed, and that no writ should have gone directly to the appeal tribunal.

So Wong went back to jail last night, and now his counsel asks the registrar in bankruptcy for a stay of execution.

SEPTEMBER CONSTRUCTION FAR AHEAD OF 1927 RECORD

Totals For First Nine Months of 1928 Also Up On Last Year.

ONTARIO IN LEAD.

Business Buildings Most Numerous, With Residences Coming Second.

The total awards for Canadian construction for the month of September as compiled by MacLean Building Reports, Limited, went 38.5 per cent over September a year ago, totalling $45,438,900. This was the largest total for any September on record.

During September the greatest amount of construction contracts were placed in the Province of Ontario, where $20,063,100 worth of new work was contracted for, being 44.2 per cent of all Canadian construction for the month. Quebec followed with $13,387,100 or 29.5 per cent. The Prairie Provinces accounted for 10.9 per cent on its total of $4,933,000. British Columbia showed $3,516,000 or 7.7 per cent, and the Maritime Provinces $3,520,700 also 7.7 per cent.

By classifications for September business buildings led by a good margin as has been usual this year. In this classification $19,222,700 worth of new work was contracted for or 42.3 per cent of all construction. Residential construction accounted for 29.9 per cent, or a total of $13,586,400. Engineer contracts were awarded to the value of $9,865,400 or 21.7 per cent, while industrial work took care of 6.1 per cent or $2,764,400. The total increase in the estimated value of contracts awarded for the first nine months of this year over the same period of 1927 is made up by increases in every classification. More money is being spent for all kinds of construction. The majority of the work contracted for comes under the business classification which total for the first nine months is $140,786,300 or 37.1 per cent of all construction. Residential has accounted for $109,761,900 or 28.9 per cent, while public works and utilities took care of 21.4 per cent or $81,254,700 and industrial $47,701,400 or 126 per cent.

By geographic divisions Ontario shows the largest amount of construction for the nine months period. 39.9 per cent has been undertaken in that provice, the total being $147,369,000. In Quebec $116,123,000 is shown or 30.6 per cent. Prairie Provinces have accounted for $53,626,400 worth or 14.1 per cent, while the Maritime Provinces show $33,166,800 or 7.7 per cent.

Contemplated construction for all Canada so far this year has been reported in exceptional volume. At the three-quarter mark the estimated value of proposed work reached $597,443,200 corresponding with $488,048,000 for the same period of 1927. More work has been planned an dactually started this year than ever before.

RECKLESS YOUTH

LONDON, Octt. 8.—British auto insurance companies may bar youths under 21 years of age from the range of their insurance. One company has already ceased issuing policies to persons under 21, and a clause in the contract requires the beneficiary to pay the first $25 damage done in an accident.

A new astronomical observatory is to be erected at Saltsjobaden, about ten miles from Stockholm.

For the first time in years a school of whales entered the harbor of Sydney a short time ago, and small harbor craft down to canoes turned out to take part in the hunt.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE
By Mary Marshall.

American women are rapidly becoming adept in the art of wearing evening dress. A generation ago the great majority of women didn't attempt evening dress at all. Young girls before their marriage had a few "party" dresses made with low necks and short sleeves but saving them for special occasions they wore them with an air of restraint and unaccustomedness that was usually apparent, and older women save of the monied classes spoken of as "high society" went to dinners and evening parties feeling appropriately dressed in a more elaborate sort of afternoon gown.

With the younger women at least the evening dress is usually to be considered primarily as a dance dress and evening fashions generally with the idea of dancing in mind. Skirts long all round are less acceptable than those made fairly short in front and long in back because length in front is confusing to the dancer. And bodices cut higher in the front than the back continue in vogue because most women prefer this sort of arrangement for dancing. One does see evening gowns made with drapery and pouffs arranged at the front of the side but these models are less likely to be chosen because the logical place for all trimming in the dance frock is the back.

The sketch shows the back view of a simple but decidedly smart little crepe satin evening gown chosen for a debutante. The decolletage is considerably higher in front than in back and the shoulder and girdle streamers are arranged to hang down at the back.

Lighter flower petal tones are again chosen for evening wear by the younger women despite the fact that stronger hues are often seen in evening gowns for more mature women. Warm light shades of brown in georgette, chiffon or tulle are usually becoming. Yellow of a somewhat pinkish cast is often seen. Among blues the new shade described as robin's egg is likely to be more becoming than the softer gray-blue favored for daytime wear. Pink and rose shades never go out of fashion and there is a renewed interest in the off-white shades in vogue last winter.

VELVET UNDIES

Positively the most feminine looking bits of apparel seen this fall are little brassiere and pantie sets of Nile green, peach and flesh transparent velvet, with Alencon lace. The panties are cut circular, with fitted yokes.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

By MARION

OCTOBER seems to be a most glorious month for weddings doesn't it? Peterborough girls apparently think so anyway and it has been so much nicer weather than in September too. Decorations can be carried out so much more easily with the beautiful autumn leaves. Showers, too, seems to be the 'order of the day,' and the 'altho' taken by surprise' appears quite often in The Examiner. One would think that by this time they should be sort of used to these carryings on Anyway we always have a most wonderful time at these showers, usually at the expense of the bride-to-be. But, of course, she doesn't mind, or at least she can't show thatshe minds for the time being anyway.

* * *

Painted furniture will set a new mark in the homes of October brides and bridegrooms. Those who want to furnish their homes artistically and yet at a low cost will find the use of painted furniture just the thing. If the husband, or husband-to-be is at all handy, he will be able to repair old pieces of furniture and after two or three coats of paint, which will make them look like new, you will have a set as fresh and attractive as new. There are such delightful colorings to be had in paints, just now which make beautiful tones: gray, green, blue, rose, lavendar, yellow and black combinations. It may be necessary to remove the varnish before applying the new, and a good sandpapering will do for this.

* * *

Painted furniture has the advantage of looking more gay than the usual natural finishes and in no other way can a bedroom be made to look as dainty as by the use of painted furniture. One most cheerful room shown to me recently in Peterborough was of a light shade of green—not green in the usual sense of the word, and it looked just lovely. A most artistic dressing stand had been made from a square mirror of rather a large size and had been placed above an open shelf which was covered with a silk fabric and fell to the floor. These had been purchased as old pieces of furniture and charmingly brightened with paint. An odd table, or rather on the shape of a little book stand was also painted the same shade. This surely did look very nice, and I'm sure I've noticed a number of these little stands in some attics in which I have been privileged to look. I wish I had the liberty of going into some attics of old residences which I know and carry out some wonderful articles of furniture long since discarded for more modern pieces.

* * *

Even in the more formal living room, a lacquered piece gives distinction. One often sees a piece such as a secretary or china cupboard painted one color on the outside and a contrasting shade on the inside.

* * *

Another thing which I notice Peterborough's October brides are interested in is dishes as well as furniture. Some are buying sets of four—eight and a dozen pieces—such as sets of eight in the silver. These will prove very useful if one intends only to entertain in a small way. In buying sets of dishes, one may buy either porcelain or semi-porcelain and there is much difference in their cost and beauty. Semi-porcelain is not transparent and not highly glazed; while porcelain is a transparent, highly glazed china. "Hold it to the light and you can see the outline of your fingers through it," our mothers tell us. Semi-porcelain absorbs colors and odors and flavors, as it is less hard, and is spongy and porus. The cracks show a darker, porous surface. It cracks and chips with strong heat and hard wear. It does not make nice dishes for table use, but it is very inexpensive and will do if you cannot afford real porcelains. The decorations on the semi-porcelain is usually poor, corresponding with the quality, since cheap work and lack of artistic skill goes into it. Porcelain has the disadvantage that it breaks more easily than semi-porcelain. It is harder and non-absorbent, being non-porous. If chipped, it will be of the same color throughout.

* * *

In selecting any set of dishes, see the whole set and note the general effect of the design. Small conventional designs which harmonize well are the best choice. Plain white china lacks character and personality; and the bizarre patterns, not in the height of fashion, are not really of refined taste and are probably only a temporary fad. In serving a meal, you may use different patterns for different courses, but each course should have the same kind of china in use during that course.

* * *

Speaking of the setting of tables, a piece of waxed paper or oilcloth placed under the centerpiece of a table prevents the linen from sticking to the polished surface. It will also prevent stains from an overfilled vase or rose-bowl. When paper sticks to a highly polished table, soften it with olive oil and rub with a soft cloth.

* * *

Do you remember last winter, the time some of us had trying to find someone who would show us how to make those wool flowers to put on our sweaters or coats? Everyone we would ask would say, "Why mine came from ——" or, "I got mine for Christmas." And consequently, we never altogether found out, but at last I have secured instructions—just send a stamped envelope and it will be sent to you by return mail.

* * *

One of our readers suggested the other day, how to give a patient a meal in bed without causing him the discomfort of trying to 'lean on one shoulder.' I got another suggestion too, "If a small clock or watch has to be kept by a sick bed, cover it with a plain glass tumbler, or bowl; it can then be seen without being heard by the patient. A broken alarm clock is also very useful in the sick room. Set the hands at the time the patient is to receive the next dose of medicine."

ELBOW RUFFLE

A dark green coat of fine, soft fabric, has a little ruffle of summer ermine let into its sleeve at elbow height. The ermine collar has ruffled ends.

GREY PEARLS

New and very smart with certain fall colors are grey pearls, in three strand necklaces, with each strand a different shade of grey, blending from dark to light.

SCINTILLATING SEASON

Evening accessories predict glittering ballroom scenes. Scarfs, bags, kerchiefs, fans and evening jackets are most stylish when made of gleaming paillettes in colors slightly richer than pastel shades.

PEPLUM THEME

Piquant is a two-piece raisin-colored crepe frock with its jumper fitted to a snug hip-line and edged with a pleated ruffle that flares like a peplum.

FAMILIES WELL JOINED

Miss Arnesta Marie Diemert of Mildmay, Ont., was recently married to Mr. John Lehman of New York city. A rather unusual feature of the event is that two of the groom's brothers are married to two of the bride's sisters.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

DOES YOUR CHILD DISLIKE GOOD FOOD?

Young children, and those who are grown up, sometimes dislike carrots, parsnips, milk, cabbage, spinach or other perfectly good wholesome foods, and can not be persuaded to eat them. In fact, the more these disliked foods are placed before these individuals, the stronger becomes the dislike. If our sense of taste is for our protection, why do we sometimes like foods that are bad for us, and dislike foods that are good for us?

Although at first glance there may seem to be no reason for this dislike, there undoubtedly is. At birth we have not much appreciation of flavors. After a few hours or minutes of teasing the baby, by rubbing milk on its mouth, it acquires a taste for milk—SWEET milk. Try to feed the baby unsweetened milk and see what a howl baby makes!

During the course of the next few weeks an infant may develop a liking for a few other things like water, orange juice or scraped apple. Each new flavor requires a period of getting acquainted. This process continues throughout life, and unless a new flavor reminds us of one that we already like, we are very cautious about using it. This is a wise provision of nature to guard us against poisonous foods. We taste a thing cautiously and if it does not harm us, we will be curious to try it again until finally we acquire a liking for its flavor.

In this way, many people and races acquire appetites for a food that seems queer to us if we do not enjoy its flavor or appearance. One man's tidbit becomes another man's emetic.

It is a wise policy to explain to a child that the vitamins in foods will make him grow big and strong, and that he will be able to beat other boys in games, or to sometime drive an automobile or an aeroplane. It is a very poor policy to say, "If you don't eat your dish of spinach, you can't have any ice cream." Scolding is worse than useless. While it gives the scolder a feeling of superiority, it leaves the scoldee more obstinate than ever.

In training a child, it is far more valuable to bring out the instinctive desire to excel than to say, "This is good for you," or "That is bad for you."

A boy may be indifferent to a shower of facts about health, but suppose he wants to win a mile race at the school track meet? He is willing to go into training, and will simply gulp down the facts about health. Teach him to brag about the amount of vegetables he can eat. Give him helpings that are obviously too small and let him ask for more rather than force large helpings upon him.

It is a good policy to make favorable suggestions about food when talking to some one at the table so that the child can overhear as, "Gene Tunney drinks lots of milk and that makes him a big, strong man."

Many of our dislikes for food are associated with the memory of some sickness of the stomach. I have noted severe cases of dislike for cabbage that originated with vomiting a meal that contained cabbage. It is sometimes hard to trace the origin of a dislike but this can usually be done if one really studies the problem impartially.

One can usually overcome a dislike by mixing a small amount of the unpleasant food with a very large amount of the good food. This can sometimes be done unknown to the person affected, and in this way the dislike will be gradually overcome. A person who dislikes many foods only makes life unpleasant for himself.

Questions and Answers.

Question: C. G. H. writes: "Please tell me what to do for ulcers in the mouth. The tonics from doctors only seem to give temporary relief, and the ulcers return in only a few weeks after getting rid of them."

Answer: Chronic mouth ulcers come from a similar condition which occurs in your stomach, and is due to wrong habits of eating which produce an over-acidity of the gastric juice. The ulcers may be expected to return periodically until you learn to correct the hyper-acidity of your stomach.

Question: Mrs. J. L. asks: "Is it all right to eat cucumbers and ice cream at the same meal?".

Answer: Cucumbers and ice cream make a good combination, providing the cucumbers are not flavored with dressing and the ice cream is made of real cream and does not contain any cornstarch.

Question: H. B. writes: "I have lost confidence in myself and others—also have lost control of my will-power, which causes me to have a nervous fear almost constantly. Will you tell me what causes this, and how to cure myself?"

Answer: You should seek the advice of a good psychologist or psycho-analyst. You can receive much help by reading good books on the subject of mind power and mental control, but personal advice and the encouragement of a mental practitioner are often necessary to help you in effecting a complete cure, after you are conscious of having lost your mental control.

The engagement of Crown Prince Humbert and the Princess Marie Jose of Belgium (above) probably will be announced in about six weeks.

MARIE CORELLI MAKES APPEAL

Tells Need of Soldiers Who Do So Wonderful Work in Painted Fabrics.

"OUR HEROES."

The following is written by Marie Corelli about the famous painted fabrics and the men who make them:

"Are we forgetting? Dare we forget? Are we grown so blind and selfish as to grudge our interest to the uncomplaining heroes of our land who have sacrificed health and the promise of the future to their country's need. We—we, who have escaped from the unimaginable horrors which would have been our lot had the German foe conquered, owe our freedom to such men as these for whom we proudly speak to-day, for whom we should, and must, give of our best, because they have done their best for us. We, who are able to sit peacefully under our own roofs, pleasantly absorbed in our own domestic occupations, may pause and wonder how we should take it, if we had been cruelly maimed and mutilated by shot and shell; if we had been deprived of sight, if our hands had been shot or hacked off, and our bodies altogether so injured as to be unfitted for the business of life, and we felt thrown aside, as it were, like pieces of wreckage on the shore, neglected and worthless. Think of it! Think of these brave fellows who might easily lose heart and courage were they less confident of God and their fellow-man. Think of the patience with which they have taken up work which never before was in their line, work requiring artistic feeling and care, as well as a fine sense of beauty and colour. One might well consider that all beauty had been driven out of their souls by the horror of war and the thunder of the guns; but it is evident that the higher perception of things is the same in them as it was in the soldier poet, Leslie Coulson, who was killed in the Battle of the Somme—

"Poppies and cornflowers grow,
And the corn sways to and fro
In a pattern against the sky.
The gold stalks hide
Bodies of men who died,
Charging at dawn through the dew, to kill or be killed,
And I thank the gods that the flowers are beautiful still"

Our heroes of the "Painted Fabrics" also are thankful "that the flowers are beautiful still," and they are making "a pattern against the sky" of skill and patience, endurance and trust—trust above all things in the powers of good to help them work out a destiny that shall not be empty of all consolation and hope. We must extend our warmest sympathy to them; they do not ask for charity. They want friendship and comprehension. They seek to be included in the lovely labours of life and to be numbered among the Workers. We must see to it that the doors of Art and Trade are opened to their productions, so that they may feel they are earning the right to make use of their own existence."

'NEARLY PERFECT' IS THE VERDICT

Philharmonic Orchestra Conductor Bestows Praise On Singers.

"A few weeks ago I heard a very extraordinary choir of young women from Canada. This choir has been drilled by Mr. Campbell McInnes and I consider the ensemble well nigh perfection. I wish heartily to recommend his company of charming singers."

This is what Henry K. Hadley, formerly conductor of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, says about Canadian Singers, booked for a daily concert at Kiwanis Club Exhibition. His opinion confirms the good judgment of Dr. Craig in arranging the program for Peterborough people.

Other comments are:

". . . If this organization continues the artistic and technical progress shown in the last few months, it will be a creditable addition to the musical assets of the Dominion. Its New York success is gratifying, with a return engagement booked there for next November, to say nothing of the expressed desire of Henry K. Hadley, associate conductor of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, to compose a special opus for them: and they will be featured again at the Quebec Folk Song Festival next May in a program of early French Madrigals."
—Lawrence Mason, 'The Globe,' Toronto.

"The Canadian Singers appeared with conspicuous success in New York on Monday evening in a program of madrigals and part songs, under the direction of J. Campbell McInnes. They were immediately engaged to sing at the Colony Club, New York, on January 27th, and Walter Damrosch, who heard them sing, thought their work beautiful and has invited them to sing at a musicale he is giving in February."

Film discolors teeth and then destroys them

Remove it this special way dentists now are widely urging

IF teeth are not white and gleaming, 9 chances in 10 they are covered with a dingy film.

Film is the great enemy of teeth and gums — a chief cause, according to world's dental authorities, of most tooth and gum disorders. Film absorbs the stains from food and smoking and gives that cloudy look. It clings to teeth, gets into crevices and stays. Germs by the millions breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

Don't expect the same results from old-time dentifrices. Get Pepsodent at any drug counter or write for free 10-day supply to The Pepsodent Co., 191 George St., Toronto 2, Ont., Canada.

Think twice before you risk teeth with cheap dentifrices. Millions would purchase Pepsodent at any price as the highest scientific safeguard known.

XLVI—FATE STEPS IN

It was a fine, sunny morning, and Garry wandered out hatless into the lanes, wishing the time would pass and he could find himself in the train, well on his way out of temptation.

A sharp little walk would bring him to the cottage. His unhappy eyes visualized the low, green-painted gate and the little garden which Sanderson tended with such care, and Sally in her long chair under the apple tree—no, God bless her, there was no longer the need of that chair!

In his preoccupation he had wandered further than he dreamed, and it gave him something of a shock to realize that he was but a few yards from Sally's cottage.

If the tree foliage had not been so thick he could have seen the smoke from her chimneys; if Sometimes had been playing around in the garden he could have heard him barking.

Garry stood for a long time at the bend in the road, looking in the direction where he knew his happiness lay, and suffering all the pangs of remorse.

Slow footsteps sounded along the road, and, afraid of meeting someone who knew him, Garry turned hurriedly to go back to the vicarage, when someone spoke to him in a choking little voice.

"Garry!"

Garry swung slowly round. It was a dream, he told himself wildly; a dream from which he would awaken in a moment to keener pain; a dream that Sally herself stood there leaning on her crutches, staring at him with wide, incredulous blue eyes, her face as white as the frock she wore.

Then she said again "Garry!" and she began to cry like a child, the tears running down her cheeks, her whole body shaken with sobbing.

And all Garry Nairn's fine resolutions went to the winds, and he just stepped forward and took her in his arms, crutches and all.

"I love you. I've always loved you," he said—which, after all, was the only thing she wanted to hear.

And Sally said "Oh, Garry! Garry!" and nothing else mattered. His arms were round her, and her face was pressed to the rough tweed of his coat, and she felt as if the strength of his grasp had taken away all her pain and puzzled wonderment over his desertion, and everything else that had been hard and difficult to understand, and she only knew that the sun was shining, and that, after all, the world was a wonderful place to live in, and that many years of happiness still lay before her.

Then Garry said in alarm:

"You ought not to be standing all this time. And what are you doing out alone?"

Sally laughed through her tears.

"They left me in the cottage. Mrs. Kiff had to go down to the village, and Philip has taken Sometimes for a walk. Philip——" Then she broke off, and raised her head from his shoulder and looked at the ring on her left hand.

"I know," Garry said, and he took her hand and raised it to his lips. "He's a better man than I am, a thousand times," he said hoarsely. "And if you—oh, Sally, which of us do you love best?"

"You—always you!" Sally said.

Then they looked at one another silently, and Sally's tears came again in bitter remembrance.

"You went away and left me. When I was ill—I might have died——"

"I know. I was a brute! I can't hope that you will ever forgive me. Some day, if you'll let me explain everything, perhaps——"

"I've got you back," said Sally. "That's all that matters." It was all that mattered, for people in love are admittedly selfish, and in the first flush of her joy she had no thought for anything but that the man she loved was with her again.

And presently they went back to the cottage, slowly, and with Garry's strong arm to guide her faltering steps, and at the gate Sally suddenly remembered Philip Sanderson.

"Philip?" she faltered.

Garry winced. This was going to be the hardest part of all, he knew.

"We shall have to tell him the truth," he said. "I'm not afraid."

But he was afraid, not of Sanderson himself, but because he knew that between them he and Sally were going to break Sanderson's heart.

But the cottage was still empty, and they went into the little parlor.

Garry tried to begin some sort of an explanation, but Sally checked him.

"Don't tell me anything—not yet," she pleaded. "Whatever it is, it's all forgiven. You've come back; that's all that matters." She was pathetic in her happiness; she kept touching his coat with her slender hand, as if to assure herself that he was real, and not a ghost-man of her imagination. Whenever he moved, her eyes followed him; once when he was near her she said: "Stoop down, Garry, I want to touch your hair."

Garry laughed with rough emotion as he obeyed.

"My red hair!" he said.

"I love your hair," Sally answered.

She rubbed its crinkling waves up the wrong way and laughed.

"I'm so happy. I can't believe it's really you."

"And I can't believe it's really you," Garry said shakily. "Sally—perhaps some day we'll have that race down the meadow hill together."

"Oh, Garry, won't it be Heaven!"

He bent down and kissed her.

"We shall be very poor. I'm not a rich man like Sanderson.

"As if I care!"

"We shall have to go abroad. Australia or somewhere. It won't be much of a life for you."

"It will be wonderful, wherever it is, with you," said Sally. And only last night she had shrunk from the thought of leaving England with Philip Sanderson, even though she would have travelled with every comfort and luxury.

"I was going away today," Garry said presently. "If you had not come along the road, Sally, I should have gone away, and we might never have seen one another again."

"It was just Fate," Sally said dreamily, her head against his shoulder. "Something—I don't know what it was—just made me go down the road. I'd promised Mrs. Kiff I wouldn't stir till she came back, but I just had to! I think I must really have known you were near."

She turned her face to his coat and kissed it.

"I do love you so," she whispered.

Garry put her gently from him and got to his feet.

"I'm not worth it, Sally," he said almost angrily. "When you know everything—when I've told you——"

"It will make no difference at all," Sally said quickly. "Nothing could ever make any difference. If you'd murdered somebody I could forgive you. I could forgive whatever you'd done."

Mrs. Kiff's cheery voice sounded in the garden outside, and a moment later she was in the doorway.

"I've 'urried!" she began. "But with all my 'urry——" Then she stopped, like a clock that has run down, as she saw Garry.

The dull color mounted slowly to her cheeks, and without a word she turned and went away.

But Mrs. Kiff knew; that one glance from Garry Nairn to Sally had told her all there was to know, and she went into the kitchen and shut the door and sat down heavily on a chair, still grasping her basket of groceries tightly with both hands.

Then suddenly she spoke aloud into the silence.

"Oh, God, it ain't fair!" she said.

For Mrs. Kiff remembered Philip Sanderson, though everyone else seemed to have forgotten him.

Then suddenly through the still, summer morning she heard Philip's cheery whistle—the whistle always reserved for Sometimes—and she rose to her feet with a terrible feeling of panic, and she dropped the groceries anyhow, and went quickly out of the back door and round the little garden to the road.

Philip was just in sight, and he quickened his steps when he saw Mrs. Kiff hurrying towards him.

"What's the matter?" he asked sharply. "Is anything——"

"No, sir—nothing! It's only—Mr. Garry Nairn is there with Miss Sally, sir, and I thought——"

"Nairn!" Philip would have pushed her roughly aside, but she caught his arm and held it fast.

"Don't go in, sir," she said, almost sobbing. "Oh, sir, if I was you I wouldn't go in, not just yet, not until you feel you can bear to 'ear what they've got to tell you."

The tears ran down her cheeks, and she wiped them away with the rough back of her hand, for Mrs. Kiff loved Philip Sanderson, and she felt that her own heart must break with his.

Philip stood like a man of granite, then suddenly he made a passionate, furious movement as if to break away from her and fight this enemy who had come into his life at the eleventh hour to shatter it; but her trembling hand held him fast.

Then suddenly Sanderson laughed as a man may laugh who has rushed into the thick of the fight, confident of victory, and who instead receives a bayonet-thrust in his brave heart.

"Oh, all right," he said hoarsely. "All right! I won't go in——"

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1928.

(Copyright, McClure Newspaper Syn.)

Good luck attends this day, according to astrology, which finds in the horoscope for this date many benefic aspects.

The morning is lucky for all financial transactions. Buying and selling are well directed.

It is an unusually auspicious rule under which to advertise or to seek personal publicity.

Women should make the best of today's opportunities which may be extraordinary in business or the professions.

This should be a happy wedding day, making for establishment in a circle of prosperity and progress. Divorce will not disturb the careers of those who plight troth under this direction of the stars.

The rule is favorable for the planning of homes or additions to houses. Women are to find new amusement and interest in domestic concerns.

Again, gardens come under the best possible planetary government which will encourage the cultivation of the land. Through the winter interior horticulture will become a fad, it is foretold.

While this is read as a lucky day it may be depressing to political candidates and others who seek public favor, since there will be a strong tendency toward criticism on the part of the people.

Ambition may be strongly manifested under this sway, which is especially promising for high school and college students.

Sewing is to engage the attention of women of fashion, it is forecast, and this is one of the evidences of reactionary forces in the social world.

Persons whose birthdate it is may find new standards of life in the coming year. Those past middle age may become exceedingly religious. The subjects of Virgo who are often devoted to material things through their earlier years are capable of supreme spiritual development.

Children born on this day probably will be sensitive and inclined to artistic pursuits. These Virgo folk usually are lovers of nature and enjoy the countryside and the ocean beaches.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY HOLDING PUBLIC OFFICE IS A THANKLESS JOB.

(By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.)

There is nothing like an epidemic of smallpox to arouse people to the necessity of vaccination. We go along without giving contageous diseases a thought until it is forced upon us by sheer necessity. Then we hustle around and see what there is to be done.

Something unusual has to happen to quicken our sense of danger.

Not unlike is the political situation. We drift along and pay no heed to our public officials so long as the machinery moves and there is no open scandal. Thus the efficient official gets no special recognition. It seems to be a fixed policy to ignore a faithful public servant.

The head of a business college used to say there is no credit in being a good speller but a lot of discredit in being a poor one. The same applies to a politician and to the public servant.

Hence, holding public office is universally looked upon as a thankless job.

For this reason a great many of our best qualified people do not offer themselves for office. They know they will come in for a lot of criticism and mud-slinging with no encouragement for doing the honest and effective thing.

Those who are the loudest in their advocacy of some reform may be the first to desert the public official who tries to put it into operation against serious opposition. And for a hundred unkind things that are said about the men who serve us there is scarcely a single word of praise.

We are curious animals. A sense of outraged justice and wrong moves us to action; while justice and efficient effort in our behalf leaves us cold. The reason for this is simple. There is no need to get all wrought up over a perfectly safe situation. Safety relaxes our muscles and lulls us to indifference. It is trouble and danger that arouse us to action. Why worry when there is nothing to worry about.

Holding public office is a thankless job. The man who goes in for it must not expect any other reward than a sense of personal satisfaction.

LYRICS OF LIFE

MOTHER EARTH

No matter what our land or tongue,
From Mother Earth all races sprung,
Who little cares what tongue or land,
But treats us with an even hand.
The ocean isn't for the white,
Nor for the black the dew tonight,
The breezes for the yellow man,
Or flowers for some special clan.

She knew the maid who missed a meal
The selfsame sort of pang would feel
As some old squaw in some far clime—
We're much alike at suppertime.
And so she fed us, clothed the cold,
And east or west, or young or old,
She knew a fire to warm the back
Felt much alike to brown or black.

The flags and creeds we figure out
Old Earth has never heard about.
Whatever poses we may strike,
She only knows we're all alike.
And when our little time is done,
She takes us to her one by one,
Yes, back to Mother Earth again,
And who shall say we're different then?

18-INCH GUNS AT SINGAPORE

Huge Cannon Made During War to be Used at Naval Base.

WERE LITTLE USED

LONDON, Oct. 8 (Canadian Press).—The naval correspondent of the Daily News states that the famous 18-inch guns which were constructed as an experiment during the Great War, have been shipped to Singapore for the defence of the new naval base. No warship in the world carries guns of more than 16-inch calibre.

The 18-inch weapons are about 60 feet long, weigh nearly 150 tons each and fire a 3,333-pound projectile. So far as is known only three were completed. The first was carried by the 19,000-ton fight draught cruiser Furious, one of the ships designed by Lord Fisher for his projected naval campaign to the Baltic. Originally the Furious was to have had two of these pieces mounted, fore and aft, but a flight deck was constructed in place of her forward turret.

When the ship was completed the after gun was fired a few times, but the concussion was found to have shaken the ship so badly that it was decided to remove the gun and extend the flight deck, converting the ship into an aircraft carrier pure and simple. As such she still figures in the Navy list.

The three great guns were then mounted in the monitors Lord Clive, General Wolfe, and Prince Eugene for use in bombarding the German coast; but the war ended before they could be employed effectively.

The monitors having been discarded, the guns were left on the Admiralty's hands, and have now apparently been taken over by the War Office for the defence of Singapore.

Their immense range and destructive power should suffice to keep any possible enemy at a respectful distance. "It would be interesting to know what reserves of ammunition exist for these mammoth weapons," says the News. "Since they were fired so little during the war, it may be presumed that a considerable quantity of shells are still held uncharged."

20,000 FAMILY PLAN PROPOSED

Dominion Government Considering Settlement Scheme For British.

OTTAWA, Oct. 8 (Canadian Press)—The Department of Immigration has under consideration a proposal made by the British Government under which twenty thousand British families would be settled upon Canadian farms during the next ten years, but has not yet made any official announcement, and the Hon. Robert Forke, Minister of Immigration, left for Western Canada last night. Consequently it is impossible to ascertain whether or not the Dominion authorities are in favor of the proposal.

It is understood the scheme is based upon the recommendations of Lord Lovat, who toured Canada some time ago. Apparently the intention is that the Canadian government will administer the scheme which would cost a mill[illegible] a year if carried out.

UNCLE WIGGILY

By HOWARD R. GARIS

5-day Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY AND BABY JACK

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Once upon a time there were two little frog boys named Bully and Bawly. Their last name was No Tail, as you may remember for I have told you some stories about them.

And after a while there came to live with Mr. and Mrs. No Tail another little frog who was the baby of the family. That was what the new frog was called—"Baby."

It was all right for a time, to call him "Baby," but after a while Mr. No Tail said:

"Baby should have a regular name, such as Bully and Bawly have."

"What would you call our little frog?" croaked Mrs. No Tail.

"I'd call him Bowly," said the frog gentleman. "Then we would have Bully, Bawly and Bowly."

"Bowly isn't a pretty name at all," said the lady frog. "I think it should be Mountmorency, or something like that."

"Fiddle Sticks!" croaked Mr. No Tail.

"Fiddle Sticks!" croaked the lady frog. "No, indeed! No child of mine shall ever be named Fiddle Sticks!"

"I didn't mean that for a name!" chuckled the gentleman frog. "I just said fiddle sticks as I might say pish, or tush or nonsense! I mean Mountmorency is such a silly name."

"Think of a better one!" croaked his wife."

But the names the frog papa thought of weren't liked by his wife and her names were laughed at by Mr. No Tail until at last they went back to calling the new little frog "Baby" as they had at first.

But when Uncle Wiggily hopped along one day and learned that the brother of Bully and Bawly had yet no regular name the rabbit said:

"Leave it to me. I will take the little frog to school and ask the pupils and the Lady Mouse Teacher to write down a number of good names for frogs. I will bring the names back and then, Mr. No Tail, you and your wife can pick out a name you both like."

"Very good," croaked the frog gentleman.

"Very good!" croaked his wife.

So Baby No Tail was put in a small box that he might not catch cold and away hopped Uncle Wiggily with him to the Hollow Stump School. The bunny uncle thought of a little game to play.

"See here, Lady Mouse, and you, too, children," said Mr. Longears when he was at school. "I have in this box a little creature without a name. Now suppose some of you think of a good name without knowing what kind of a creature is in the box." Even Bully and Bawly didn't know it was their own little baby brother frog in the box.

"All ready, children," squeaked Miss Mouse. "Begin to think of names for Uncle Wiggily's little box creature."

So the animal boys and girls began to wonder first, what was in the box and next what would be a good name. But before any of them could call out anything, all of a sudden into the school came waddling the Skillery Scallery Alligator with the double jointed tail.

"What have you in that box?" asked the 'Gator and none too politely as he walked up to the desk where Uncle Wiggily stood with Baby No Tail hidden from sight. "What is it?"

"We don't know, yet," spoke Uncle Wiggily politely.

"What do you mean you don't know?" snarled the 'Gator.

"I mean we don't know his name!" said Mr. Longears. "In this box is—"

But before he could speak of Baby No Tail the 'Gator impolitely knocked the cover off the box and out jumped the little frog. Right in the 'Gator's face jumped Baby, for he was tired of being shut up in the dark.

"Oh, it's Jack in the Box!" howled the 'Gator. "You know I don't like a Jack in the Box! Why did you frighten me with one?" he howled and away he waddled with his double jointed tail.

"Ha! Ha!" laughed Baby No Tail. "I made him run, anyhow!"

"Yes, and now we have a name for you!" said Uncle Wiggily. "The 'Gator called you Jack, thinking you were one of those tricks that spring out of a box. And you did jump out of a box. So your name shall be Jack if your father and mother like it."

The papa and mamma frog did, and so Baby Jack was named.

"Isn't it strange we didn't think of that name first?" croaked Mr. No Tail when the bunny uncle hopped home with Baby Jack in the box.

"Very strange," said the lady frog. So it all happened for the best.

The oldest assembly in the world is thought to be the Welsh bardic congress, the Eisteddfod.

A PLEA

addressed to every serious-minded and public-spirited citizen!

THE NATIONAL COUNCIL OF WOMEN are making their first appeal for public support in the vital work this body of public-spirited women are carrying on in their effort to bring about improved conditions for the Women and Children of Canada. That this body may continue its services to the needy . . . that the excellent work so ably started may continue . . . YOU must help.

From the Atlantic to the Pacific this great organization draws its membership from the flower of Canadian womanhood — mothers and wives of the Dominion. It exerts a powerful influence for good on the life of community, province, and nation.

The Council was founded in 1893 by the Marchioness of Aberdeen and Temair as the second body of its kind in the world. During its thirty-five years, it has occupied an increasingly important place in the realms of Canadian art, literature, education, religion, philanthropy, and social service.

In fifty towns and cities, including all principal centres of the Dominion, it is represented by Local Councils, each of which is composed of from ten to one hundred women's associations.

Other nationally organized women's groups are affiliated with it.

The Council's Platform is set forth in the titles of its standing committees, each of which is at work on some problem of National import. Conveners and members have special knowledge of the subjects with which the committees deal. The National Standing committees are:

Arts and Letters.	League of Nations.
Child Welfare.	Mental Hygiene.
Cinema and Printed Matter.	Moral Standards.
Citizenship.	National Recreation
House and Town Planning	Press.
Household Economics.	Public Health.
Immigration.	Taxation.

Laws Concerning Women and Children

As a new need arises, a new committee is formed — when a committee achieves its goal, its members are released for other duties. In this way the Council is ever in step with the nation and the times.

Many national problems have been solved by this policy. One of them — the providing of skilled medical attention for poor families, or those of limited means, was cared for early in the history of the Council by the establishment of The Victorian Order of Nurses. These splendid women will be found on their errands of mercy in the slums of large cities and in sparsely settled districts where doctors have not yet become established.

As mentioned before, the Council secured supervised playgrounds. Through its efforts, it has succeeded in having Domestic Science and Manual Training added to the Curriculum, and Medical and Dental inspection later introduced into the schools. It demonstrated the need of women judges and police in cases involving women and girls — in some places this was done by paying these officials' salaries until civil authorities conceded their value.

The Council was instrumental in having the Mothers' Allowance Act passed, and in securing a Federal divorce law, giving equality in divorce between man and wife and in raising the age of consent to eighteen years. Through its influence the minimum wage was established, and mothers were granted the right of co-guardianship of their children.

These are some of the national achievements. The Council has an equally imposing record in the provincial and community fields.

The Council has the human resource to study problems, the ability to work out solutions, and the power to concentrate the influence of its member organizations. Its service to Canada would be of much greater value, however, if it did not have to face the obstacle — sometimes insurmountable — of inadequate finances. The revenue of the Council has been derived from the Two Dollar admission fee paid into local Councils by each Society, which in turn has been forwarded to the National Council with the Five Dollar Voting Fee of the Council and Ten Dollar Voting Fee of the National Organization Societies; but with increasing expense in conducting the work, this revenue is inadequate.

An assured income will enable it to develop an orderly method of study, planning, and action. TO ACCOMPLISH THIS, THE COUNCIL ASKS A FOUNDATION FUND OF $200,000 WHICH, WHEN INVESTED BY A BOARD OF TRUSTEES, WILL YIELD $10,000 ANNUALLY.

The workers are giving freely of their time and effort . . . efficient organization is complete and definite proof of the necessity of this body in the welfare of Canada today has been established . . . it now remains for every public-spirited citizen to contribute to the fund that will ensure this work being carried out year after year as long as the need is present.

The canvassers who are soliciting your contribution are volunteer workers contributing their time and effort to this cause . . . a favourable reception is asked for them . . . that their work may be lightened, and to enable them to cover as many as possible during this campaign, you are asked to forward any financial contribution you care to make to the Honorary Treasurer of The National Council of Women Foundation Fund, care of Mr. Merdy, Manager, Canadian Bank of Commerce at Kingston, Ontario.

Day by day throughout the Dominion the 200,000 members of The National Council of Women of Canada keep a constant watch on affairs in community, province, and nation. Whenever they are needed, they serve.

They perform a public service in which there is no self-interest. Their work in all cases is purely voluntary, and the only reward is that which comes from a good deed well done. There is no way of numbering the lives that have been saved, or of placing a yardstick upon the happiness and comfort that have been increased by their efforts.

In addition to these things — they care for many problems that otherwise would fall upon the communities, increasing the burden of the taxpayer.

The Council women will do their part in the raising of the Foundation Fund. But it will not be possible to raise the entire amount within the membership. Each member of the Council is an active worker in one or more component organizations to which she devotes her spare money.

For this reason The Council must go outside of its own ranks to secure part of the Foundation Fund, and since its work is for the good of Canada, it feels justified in asking Canadians to better the means of that work.

By aiding this cause you will pay a tribute to Canadian womanhood; you will help them in their constructive work. You will enable them to uphold Canada's proud position among the nations of the world council.

Two hundred thousand women — Canadian wives and mothers — ask you to help.

The National Council of Women can boast the following achievements.

THE ESTABLISHMENT OF THE VICTORIAN ORDER OF NURSES	REVISED FEDERAL DIVORCE LAW
SUPERVISION OF PLAYGROUNDS	MINIMUM WAGE ACT
THE MOTHERS' ALLOWANCE ACT	WOMEN MAGISTRATES
CO-GUARDIANSHIP OF CHILDREN ACT	WOMEN POLICE MATRONS

Copper Cliff Team Win O. B. A. A. Championship

ERRORS PROVE COSTLY FOR RAYBESTOS WHO LOSE OUT 8-4 IN SUDDEN DEATH GAME

Brakeliners Play Far Below Usual Form Displayed in Former Battles.

FIELDING POOR.

Cloutier Retires Nineteen Batters on Strikes—Heavy Hitters.

Led by their veteran playing manager, Bert Flynn, an infielding star of a dozen years back, Copper Cliff, champions of Northern Ontario, swept aside Raybestos in the sudden death game at Exhibition Park on Saturday afternoon to win the Ontario Intermediate championship by the score of 8 to 4. Far removed from the battle front was the dashing offensive of the team with an unbroken chain of victories. Little more than Wilf. Rogers' bat stood in the path of the invaders.

The blow hurt. A big crowd of fans were sadly disappointed over the work of the Rays. Not one in the grandstand, however, felt the reverse so badly as did the offending players. The loss of the championship was a mere incident. It was their own sorry showing that stung.

The good left arm of Arthur Cloutier was one big reason for the Copper Cliff win. Nineteen batters were retired on strikes, a remarkable pitching feat. In four frames, he retired the Rays on strikeouts. And he did all this fine work, with Archibald giving him only fair support behind the bat.

Out on the runways, the peppery leader of the Cliffs, dashed about, pilfering sacks, scoring runs, and finally donning the catching toggery to replace Archibald, in a successful effort to hold the lead over the Rays, and romp off with the silverware. The fans got to like the visitors' leader and were with him once the game was well under way.

Drennan was another cog in the machinery, with three singles, two of which scored runs, while he himself counted thrice.

Scotty Maudsley who had spent the best part of two weeks preparing for the champions from the north, was not as effective as in other games. He did not have his usual speed and he failed to improve as the game advanced. Furthermore, teammates were going badly, and errors were costly. This was particularly true in the fourth when with two batters retired, the visitors scored three runs after an easy fielding chance was fumbled. Masterson who relieved in the sixth with two out, did not allow a runner to reach first base during the remainder of the game.

Copper Cliff won the toss and elected to take the field. Hillier singled through Flynn, the second baseman making a fine try for the ball. Rogers rolled to the box, Cloutier losing a play when he lost the ball completely as it rolled about his feet. It was a fine start for the Rays but the visiting curver put on the brakes by striking out Moore, Scully and Corrin in a row.

Flynn played Maudsley for a pass and stole second, going down to third as Derrick grounded out via Scully. Drennan singled neatly to score Flynn. C. O'Reilly forced Drennan at second, D. O'Reilly was safe when . Nicholls missed his grounder, and Archibald fanned.

Cloutier made it six strikeouts in a row in the second by whiffing Maudsley, H. Nicholls and O. Nicholls.

Maudsley had little trouble with Copper Cliff in their half. Cloutier fouled up to Barry, Strong was thrown out from the box, Sleaver walked and stole second, after which Scully threw out Flynn.

Rays got going nicely in the third to score three runs but they stopped their rally. Barry fanned but had to be thrown out. Hillier went out in the same manner. Rogers slapped a double to left centre, and Moore beat out a liner to short. Moore went down to second and along with Rogers went home on Scully's drive across second. Corrin singled into left to score Scully. Maudsley walked. H. Nicholls sent out a fly into left which Strong dropped. Corrin slowed up on the play and headed for home when the ball was dropped. Strong threw to Flynn who in turn whipped the ball to the plate to get Corrin.

Two runs down, the visitors came back to tie the score. Herrick lined out to Barry. Drennan drew down his second single and C. O'Reilly walked. D. O'Reilly singled into short left to score Drennan. Archibald flew out to Moore. With Cloutier at bat, a throw to second went out to Moore who threw high to third to get C. O'Reilly, the runner scoring. Cloutier flew out to Moore.

Rays failed to do anything in the fourth, Cloutier whiffing O. Nicholls, Barry and Hillier to retire the side three times in four frames.

Two were gone when the visitors took a lead of three runs. Strong flew out to Moore and Hillier threw out Sleaver. Flynn singled into right and Herrick was safe on N. Nicholls' error. Drennan got his third hit into left to score Flynn and C. O'Reilly's drive scored Herrick and Drennan. D. O'Reilly popped to Barry.

Rays threw another chance to help their cause in the fifth, when Moore tried to go in on Corrin's short single to left. Rogers opened the frame by going down to first when Cloutier and Archibald allowed his high fly in front of the plate to fall to earth. He was forced by Moore. He later stole second. Scully flew out to Drennan, Moore being held at second. Corrin singled into left and Moore went down to third and on in, only to be nabbed at the plate on Strong's fine throw.

For Copper Cliff, Archibald was thrown out after missing three. Hillier threw out Cloutier. Strong dropped one down third and had the play on him beaten when Nicholls' throw was wild. Sleaver struckout.

Maudsley started the sixth by fanning. H. Nicholls also struckout, but reached the bag when the catcher dropped the third strike and threw badly. Nicholls also gained second and made third after which Manager Flynn decided to relieve Archibald. Flynn donned the harness, Archibald going to centrefield while Drennan moved to second. O. Nicholls struckout and Barry lined down first. The Rays claimed a foul, but Barry was declared out.

Flynn singled and stole second. Maudsley threw out Herrick, Drennan walked and C. O'Reilly's sacrifice fly scored Flynn. D. O'Reilly's drive into right scored Drennan. Manager Primeau threw in a towel which sent Maudsley to left field, and Masterson to the mound. Archibald was thrown out by Scully.

The Rays got a bad break in the seventh. Rain was falling when Hillier drew a pass. Rogers tripled to deep left to score Hillier. With Moore up, the game was called by Umps Colling, and when play was resumed Cloutier fanned Moore and Scully. Corrin ended it by popping to short.

Masterson quickly disposed of the side. Cloutier struckout, Strong sent up a soft fly to Hillier, and Sleaver flied out to Corrin.

The eighth was uneventful. Maudsley and H. Nicholls swatted in vain and Masterson popped to the first baseman.

Flynn flied to Moore, Herrick struckout and Drennan was thrown out by Scully.

Bud Weese hitting for Barry in the ninth, fanned. Hillier got a single between middle and right and Rogers hit into middle, his fourth of the contest, for a total of seven bases. It looked like a rally but when Moore grounded down third, Rogers was forced at second. With Scully up, Nicholls at third and Moore at second, the old fox behind the plate called for a pitch on which he nailed Moore going down to second, to end the contest and send the championship to Copper Cliff.

Yankees Set New Record For World Series

VIEWS ON SPORT

Junior rugby players are urgently requested to be at Confederation Park to-night at 5.45 in full uniform for practice work.

Backed by the sterling pitching of Cloutier and the peppy leadership of their manager, the Copper Cliff crew defeated the Raybestos here 8-4 on Saturday to win the Intermediate O.B.A. championship.

* * * * * *

Errors were costly for the locals, while Scotty Maudsley was not as effective as he had been in other battles, lacking his usual speed, while his control was quite wobbly at times. Masterson, who relieved him in the sixth, held the visitors down during the latter stages of the game.

* * * * * *

Needless to say, the fans were very much disappointed at the outcome of the game, as were also the players themselves. After going through the league schedule and O.B.A. play-off games with an unbroken string of victories, to lose all at the last was bad enough, but the real sting for them was in the poor showing they made in their own home town.

* * * *

The P.C.I. second team won a 5 to 0 decision over the Oshawa Intermediates here on Saturday in what would be considered a very tame affair in so far as rugby is concerned.

* * * *

The teams were about evenly matched with the boys from the Motor City having the advantage in their team work, while the local crew proved to be a hard lot of tacklers. Nevertheless, both teams passed up numerous opportunities to register, particularly in the first half.

* * * * * *

Led by the battery work of the "bustim-twins," Ruth and Gehrig, the Yankees won their third straight decision for this series and also their seventh successive victory in the World Series in two years.

* * * * * *

So far as homers this year are concerned, the Bambino has failed to get any of the honors up to date. Gehrig clouted two yesterday for a total of three, which puts him within one of the record of four made by Ruth in 1926.

* * * * * *

While he did not as yet get any home runs, the Babe kept up his sensational hitting spree, helping himself to two more hits and scoring a brace of runs. He now has gathered in a total of seven hits, including three doubles.

AMERICA TAKES POLO CHAMPIONSHIP

Win Two Out of Three Games From Argentine For Supremacy.

(By Jay R. Vessels—Associated Press Sports Writer).

WESTBURY, N.Y., Oct. 8.—Argentine's bid for world polo supremacy failed here Saturday when a swift-riding, accurate shooting United States four won 13 to 7, taking two of the three games.

Unlike the two previous contests, play was one-sided, one way or the other, after the first periods. The United States team scored as it pleased during the fourth chukker, scoring five times and running up a seven-goal lead. The visitors, after scoring but two goals in six periods, spurted in the seventh and eight session and counted five straight goals while holding their opponents scoreless.

The series nearly ended tragically when, with about two minutes of play remaining, Captain Jack Nelson of the Argentines and his mount went down in a heap. The horse fell sideways, pinning Nelson to the ground. In an instant the struggling steed had rolled over and then rolled back again, crushing the visiting star into the soft turf. Nelson lay motionless for a minute but soon was on his feet, and in a remarkable show of gameness insisted on continuing play.

The United States won because young Earle Hopping, a substitute, came through, playing his first game in international competition. Hopping, a rugged youth of 21, vindicated the judgment of the American defence committee, in substituting the hard-hitting lad for Malcolm Stevenson, the veteran.

Hopping was all over the field during that one-sided fourth period, holding up his reputation as a hard hitter. He drove several long shots close enough to the goal for his own associates to convert them quickly into scores. Captain Tommy Hitchcock and W. Averill Harriman shot four goals in two periods on assists from Hopping.

The heart of the average adult is 5 inches long, 3½ inches broad and 2¼ inches thick.

WITH SEVENTH SUCCESSIVE TRIUMPH IN TWO YEARS

Gehrig Leads Batting Attack Against Cardinals For 7-3 Victory.

PLAY RAGGED BALL.

St. Louis Toss Game Away With Wild and Woolly Exhibition in Sixth.

(By Alan J. Gould, Associated Press Sports Editor.)

SPORTSMAN'S PARK, St. Louis, October 8 (Associated Press). — The Yankee steam roller is still going down hill, unchecked, and in its wake the fleeting hopes of the Cardinals are flatter last night than ever.

With their c uting first baseman, Lou Gehrig, at the throttle engineering the drive with two home runs, the American League champions swept over the recumbent Cardinals for their third straight World Series victory and their seventh successive triumph a new record, in two years over National League opposition.

The final score was 7 to 3, and the Yankees, with Waite Hoyt ready to pitch again, are favored to make it four straight to-day.

This was a sad and disconsolate homecoming for the Red Birds and the record crowd of St. Louis rooters that jammed its way into Sportsman's Park. The throng that numbered 39,602 in paid admissions, also contributing to a record gate of $168,725 for the local field, came out to cheer Jesse Joseph Haines and the Cardinals in a desperate effort to stop the onrush of the grey-clad host from Gotham.

Lose Out in Exhibition.

Every element of encouragement was there for the Red Birds, the home crowd, the home field, and the pitcher who had beaten the Yankees twice in 1926, but it was not enough to revive the spirits of a club that has played raggedly from the start, more so yesterday than before, and that has every appearance of being as thoroughly "licked" as were the Pirates last October. After a brief thrust in the early stages, due more to loopholes in the Yankee defence than their own efforts, the Cardinals tossed the game away with a wild and woolly exhibition in the sixth.

After six stormy innings, big Jesse Haines, the sage of Phillipsburg, Ohio, gave it up as a bad job and retired, along the beaten path that Sherdel and Alexander had taken before him.

The Yankees emerged triumphant yesterday behind the masterful pitching of the veteran southpaw, Tom Zachary, and because the big punch is still in the bats of Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig.

These two factors enabled them to win in spite of one of the worst defensive exhibitions a world's championship club has ever given a slipshod brand of support that helped the Cardinals gain an early lead and remain in the running until the sixth inning. The Yankee defence was bad enough, but the Cardinals' fielding was worse in the fatal sixth when of the most unusual of series events a double error by the unusually dependable catcher, Jimmy Wilson, contributed to the decisive three-run rally of the invaders. Where that other old-timer, Alexander, had failed to show anything like his past World's Series form, Zachary came back with flying colors to win the third championship game of his 31-year-old career. The veteran portsider, who has been cast about during the past few years, joining the Yankees only last August, twirled as craftily and as brilliantly as he did four years ago in twice baffling the Giants for Washington.

Collected Nine Hits.

The Cardinals collected nine hits off Zachary, but at least five of these were scratchy, and after the first inning, when the Red Birds got off to a two-run lead on Bottomley's triple, old Tom had complete command of the situation. There would have been no scoring in the first had the Yankee infield functioned more smoothly or had Durst properly judged Bottomley's drive. Over the remaining eight innings, Zachary scattered the remaining six hits he allowed. He struck out seven Cardinals and yielded only one other run, tallied by Douthit in the fifth on Andy High's double to right. Tom was tight as a bass drum in the pinches.

The Yankees were outhit, collecting only seven safe blows off the combined deliveries of Haines, Sylvester Johnson, and Flint Rheim, but again they made them count, aided and abetted by the lapses of the Cardinal defence.

Gehrig, clouting home runs on his first two turns at the plate, not only featured the long range attack, but, by driving in three runs and increasing to eight his total of runs batted in for the Series, equalled the record made by his team-mate, Bob Meusel, in the 1923 Series.

Larrupin Lou's spectacular start put him in position to equal or beat the performance of Ruth. He hit three homers in the same park two years ago against the Cardinals, but the Yankee first sacker was walked in his last two turns at bat.

Gehrig's first home run, in the second inning, was a lusty clout that landed on top of the roof over the right field stands. The second came in the fourth inning, with Ruth on first by virtue of a single. It was a terrific drive that rolled to the centre field fence after Douthit failed in a desperate attempt to make a shoestring catch. It was Gehrig's third home run of the Series and also put him within one of the record of four, made by Ruth in 1926.

The Babe, helping himself to two more hits and scoring a brace of runs, kept up his sensational hitting pace. He now has gathered seven hits, including three doubles, but not yet swung into a home run stride. The bust-in twins, Ruth and Gehrig, together have gathered 12 of the Yanks' 22 hits and scored 10 of their club's 20 runs.

Indianapolis Wins Little World Title

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 8.—(Canadian Press).—The highest honor in minor league baseball—that of championship of the class A.A. Circuits—was won by Indiannapolis of the American Association when it walloped Rochester of the International loop, 4 to 3 in the Little World Series here Saturday.

It was the second time an Indianapolis club had copped the title, the feat first being accomplished in 1917. Rochester was outplayed virtually throughout the post-season series, winning only one game and tieing another of the seven contests.

Two misplays by Gelbert whose great playing was instrumental in the Red Wings winning the International pennant this summer, caused Rochester's defeat yesterday. With easy double plays in sight in the first and second innings, he muffed two grounders. The four runs the local club made resulted. Gelbert made another error later in the game, but no harm resulted.

PETES SHUT OUT OSHAWA 5 TO 0

Both Teams Pass Up Numerour Opportunities To Register in First Half.

INTERSCHOLASTIC MEET.

Providing plenty of excitement for a small crowd of loyal fans, the Peterborough Collegiate Intermediate rugby team struggled through to a 5—0 win over the Oshawa Collegiate Intermediates at James Stevenson Park on Saturday afternoon. The game, in which both teams passed up numerous opportunities to register, particularly in the first half, brought together a couple of evenly matched outfits, for while the boys from the automombile town seemed to have the advantage in team work, the Petes proved a hard lot of tacklers and took advantage of a couple of fumbles by the opposition, to gain position, from which they garnered their five points.

With Red Legon of Peterborough refereeing and Armstrong of Oshawa umpiring, the game started out to look bad for the homesters, for they were put back on their own back line soon after the kick. But the visitors were unsteady and failed to advance further and play shifted—and continued to shift until well on in the second quarter when Dinesen's drop kick netted the Petes a three-point margin.

No further scoring developed until on toward the close when Mackey kicked twice in close succession for a point each time. Unfortunately, Dinesen re-injured an already lame shoulder toward the end of the first half and had to be replaced by Robertson. Braund was the other unfortunate, taking a hard bump in the third quarter that put him out. Dineson, Young and Mackey were best for Peterborough while Hare and Lockie did the honors for the visitors. The teams:

Peterborough.—Flying wing, Clayton; halves, Dinesen, Braund and Young; quarter, Mackey; snap, McWilliams; insides, Chandler and Hamilton; middles, Fraser and Best; outsides, Ward and Wagar. Spares, Legon, Barnes, Robertson and Doukas.

Oshawa—Flying wing, Mark and Hazelwood; halves, Armour and Corrin; quarter, Hare; snap, Little; insides, Leckie and Guiltinan; middles, Meyers and Deyman; outsides, Hicks and Broadbent; spares, James, Bakogeorge, Henley, Gifford, Bradd and Brown.

THIS BIRD EATS FEATHERS

A strange bird that eats its own feathers is one of 188 specimens living in Porto Rico, reported recently by Dr. Alexander Wetmore, Assistant Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution. It is the Antilean grebe, a common bird of the island. Every specimen examined by Dr. Wetmore had masses of feathers in its stomach, says Popular Science Monthly. They had been plucked and swallowed and were apparently digested without difficulty.

Built in the shape of a ball, about 80 feet in diameter, and standing on a base 16 feet square, a house constructed for this year's Dresden fair is a German architect's suggested solution for the transport problem. He claims that his design leaves much more room in the streets around it.

DELORO DEFEATED DE LAVAL TEAM 3 TO 2 FOR W HITE CHALLENGE CUP

Local Trophy Leaves City For First Time—Deloro Were Superior Near Goal.

YATES BRILLIANT.

Dyer Scored From Two Penalties—E. Brown Got Deciding Goal in Closing Minutes.

MARMORA, Oct. 8.—The struggle for possession of the White Cup was won at Deloro on Saturday afternoon by the Deloro team, who scored three goals to two obtained by Peterborough De Laval. Thus, for the first time since 1923, the year of the cup's donation, when it was won by Peterborough G.W.V.A., it finds a new home outside of the city's limits.

The game provided ninety minutes of good, exciting play, and at no period did the verdict look certain.

Both teams attempted combination with a fair amount of success, that of the visitors being marked with stronger kicking. A feature of the game was the excellent kicking of Nicholson, the home left back.

First Half

Deloro won the toss and allowed De Laval the kick-off. Uneventful play for five minutes changed when, after a corner which came to the Smelters, Mitchell saved the situation with a good clearance. An attack was then made on the Deloro goal where the burley veteren Yates brought off a good save. Murray broke away on the right but play returned to the other end after the occasioned throw in. Following up a cleared free kick W. Brown opened the score with a warm shot from close in. Later on, presented with a good chance to score, Brooks placed the ball just over the cross-bar. Two corners came to the Peterborough boys in quick succession following good aggressive tactics, but nothing materialized. Before the half closed, Brooks was again unlucky in not registering.

Half time score—Deloro 1, De Laval 0.

Half Time

The second half opened with play being taken towards the home goal. Dyer almost scored on a rush, a collision with a team-mate spoiling the effort. Cross, too, had hard lines, a good shot of his hitting the right upright.

Yates made a couple of splendid saves, after which play was carried to the other end. With Deloro pressing, W. Brown grazed the crossbar with a nice shot. Play returning to the home goal, Peterborough were awarded a penalty, which Dyer made no mistake with. Deloro then brought off a fine rush which culminated in a lovely goal, Brooks being the scorer. End to end rushes ensued, and both goalies made splendid saves. A second penalty being awarded to De Laval, Dyer for the second time evened the score. The tie was soon broken. In a melee in front of the Peterborough goal, E. Brown's shot glanced off a De Laval player and the score then read 3 to 2.

Play was strenuously waged until the final whistle, without further scoring.

Final.—Deloro 3, De Laval 2.

G. Blowers of Peterborough, as referee, had a hard task in handling the game, but managed to keep it under good control

Cup Presented

At the close of the game, the cup was handed over by Vincent Stewart, president of the Peterborough and District Association, to Mr. S. B. Wright, general manager of the Deloro Smelting and Refinery Company, who in presenting it to W. Savage, the home captain, referred to the fine game played by both teams. He thought all would acknowledge that for their first season, the Deloro boys were shaping finely, and he was forced to admit that both teams played fine football. W. Savage replied in appreciative terms. About a hundred viewed the game, the Peterborough boys receiving the support of C.G.E. supporters with their own. Some close football games should be witnessed in the round for the Peck Cup, which will be drawn on Tuesday next.

The eTams

De Laval—J. Fowler; backs, R. Evans and A. Downer; half backs, J. Mitchell, J. Ward and V. Curtain; Dyer, E. Abraham and E. Hanson. forwards, J. Cross, H. Pulley, F. Hanson.

Deloro—Goal, A. V. Yates; backs, R. Murray and C. Nicholson; half backs, W. Savage, J. Kelly and J. Hart; forwards, G. Brooks, E. Brown, W. Brown, W. Simmons and T. Cousins.

Cubs Leading In Chicago City Series

CHICAGO, Oct. 8 (Canadian Press).—Alphonse Thomas allowed but four scattered hits and the White Sox won the fifth game in the city championship series 2 to 0, before an overflow crowd of 45,000 yesterday. The series now stands three games to two in favor of the Cubs.

Thomas, in holding the Cubs to four hits and striking out seven, turned in his second great performance of the series, having fanned 13 and yielding nine hits in the second game, before going down to defeat in 14 innings. His seven strike-outs yesterday included Cuyler twice and added Maguire to the list.

Great as Thomas was, Malone was also great in defeat, and the game might have gone into extra innings had not Wilson and Stephenson got mixed up on their signals in the first inning and allowed Hunnefield's easy fly to fall for two bases, driving home the only runs scored.

LEO DIEGEL IS GOLF CHAMPION

Beats Al Espinosa Six Up and Five To Play in Final Round.

SHOWS GOOD WORK.

(By F. G. Vosburgh—Associated Press Sports Writer).

FIVE FARMS COURSE, Baltimore, Md., Oct. 8.—Leo Diegel is the new king of the nation's professional golfers. Beating Al Espinosa of Chicago, six up and five to play in the final round of the championship tournament Saturday, the wiry professional of the Fenimore Country Club, White Plains, N.Y., ascended the throne made vacant when he defeated Walter Hagen in the quarter finals.

Diegel played golf that would not be denied. His shots were heartbreakers that wore out his opponent even as they had done on the previous two days when this great match player downed Hagen and Gene Sarazen in successive battles. Probably never did a man fight his way to a title in fashion more impressive or more worthy of a champion.

In Espinosa, Diegel met a player who had won the medal with a splendid 70-72—142 for this difficult Five Farms layout for which par is but 70, a man who had played around par virtually all week, shooting better golf over the entire stretch than he, yet when it came to the show-down it was Diegel who could win the holes. Espinosa, although putting up a courageous fight, was well out of it when they went to lunch after the morning 18 holes with Diegel leading by four up.

OTTAWA WINS HOME GAME

Defeat Montreal 10-8 in Initial Big Four Match at Capital City.

PLAY SWINGS.

Ottawa, Ont., Oct. 8 (By the Canadian Press).—Ottawa Senators opened their big four rugby campaign with a victory over Montreal here Saturday afternoon, the final score being 10 to 8. The result was largely influenced by the "breaks" which came the way of the home team.

Rarely has a game of football been played on local territory where the result was so much dependent on those same breaks. The huge crowd which turned out for the initial senior tilt of the season at Lansdowne park was kept in an almost continuous state of frenzy, so quickly did the play swing from side to side as the fortunes of the game asserted themselves. In the matter of loose play, both sides were equally guilty, but it was Ottawa's fortune to capitalize their opponents' mistakes that found them with a two-point margin when the final whistle sounded.

There was much high-class football shown by both teams, in between the times when they were playing very mediocre rugby. Particularly so was this in the case of the Montreal half-liners who gave a running display that would be hard to match. Moore and Perry were little short of sensational in their broken field running, and it may be safely said that this pair accounted for at least two hundred yards between them the course of the game.

Saved the Day.

The Ottawa line saved the day for Gilhooly's cause, but it seemed that only when they were in the tighest corner could they show their best wares. They outplunged the red and blue ball carriers through the line, but this advantage was too small to carry much weight in the final reckoning, and only capable booting by Tubman at critical moments pulled the Ottawa team back on their feet when it seemed that the relentless M.A.A.A. pressure must bring results.

The uncertainty of the game was in evidence on the second play. Bruce kicked off to Perry on the M.A.A.A. 15-yard line and on the first attempted Montreal play, the ball carrier fumbled and James grabbed the oval to fight his way to the 2-yard mark before being halted. It was then comparatively easy for Lynch to knife his way through the center for a touch on the first Ottawa down of the game. Immediately afterwards, an Ottawa Fumble gave M.A.A.A. a similar chance which they could not push to conclusion. Radley dropped the ball on a plunge and the visitors were in possession ten yards out. Two bucks failed to gain a yard and Harrison booted an outside. Lynch rescued it behind the Ottawa line for one point.

Played Two Men Short.

Emerson and Starr drew penalties early in the second quarter and Ottawas were forced to play two men short. The pressure was not apparent at the time but took its toll later on. Brassington booted to More who made the catch in the shadow of the M.A.A.A. goal posts. Bruce was on him like a tiger and when the ball eluded Moore, Bruce had the second Ottawa touchdown, which also went unconverted. Booth's kick to the deadline made it 10 to 2 at half time.

Playing carefully against the wind, the Senators held their own early in the third session and had the visitors at centerfield. Then Perry startled the assemblage by ripping around the Ottawa left end and continuing on through practically the entire Ottawa team for a beautiful fifty-yard run and a touchdown. Wright failed to convert.

Working into close quarters again, aided by great running by Moore and Perry, the red and blue scored another single point on Wright's deadline kick. That terminated the scoring, but not the excitement.

Through a scoreless fourth period the play alternated with first one team and then the other in an aggressive position, but no points were added to either total. The visitors had a royal chance to go in front from the Ottawa 20-yard line with a field goal, but a bad snap which went far down field over Wright's head, spoiled the opportunity. Again, in the final three minutes the visitors were in a threatening position, but Lynch again captured an onside kick and turned the tide. Lynch then held the ball for four successive downs, taking yards once, and Senators were on top by two points.

Moore and Perry were outstanding for the winners. Moore stepped out for three or four dashes ranging from 20 to 40 yards, while Perry had one fifty-yard dash, on which he scored his touch, and several others of a considerable distance. Booth was good on the kicking end when used and Taylor and Foran stood out on the line which seemed unable to do much with the heavy red horde which faced them on the line of scrimmage.

Outstanding in the Ottawa victory were Lynch and Starr. Lynch's effort was truly a magnificent one, while the Ottawa captain turned in a grand exhibition. Starr was injured and taken out in the third period, suffering a bruised shoulder, but he came back in the last period and finished the game. Brassington was good, despite a pair of greasy hands, and Tubman kicked in a scientific manner, repeatedly placing the ball into touch for good gains. Pinhey showed some fine tackling, while Stanyar, a substitute, was the only Senator able to pierce the M.A.A.A. front rank with any degree of success. The veteran Eddie Emerson played a useful game, although his two penalties hurt the team more than was apparent on the surface.

LADIES WIND UP BOWLING SEASON

Hold Banquet and Bridge in Paragon Tea Rooms—Prizes Presented.

The members of the Peterborough Ladies Lawn Bowling Club held their annual meeting in the Paragon Tea Rooms on Monday evening with a very large attendance.

The meeting was prefaced by a sumptuous banquet at 6.30, catered by Coleman Brothers. The tables were lovely with baskets and vases of autumn flowers and pink candles in silver holders. The head table was centered with the Denne Trophy and the Belleville Cup, which was won by Mrs. G. Coleman's rink at the Belleville Tournament last summer. The men's executive of the Peterborough Lawn Bowling Club was seated at this table, and Mr. J. Sedgwick, President, presided.

Immediately after the banquet the business was disposed of. A resolution was passed that the Men's Executive have charge of the Ladies Bowling next season.

A Social Committee, ocmposed of Mesdames G. H. Borland, F. Miller, W. H. Greenslade, R. J. Devy, R. French, H. Graham, Mrs. C. Wright, N. Henry and Miss L. Allen were appointed.

The prizes for the season's bowling were then presented. Mrs. Greenslade's rink were the winners of the first prizes in the rink games and will be the proud possessors of the Denne Cup for one year.

The rink is composed of Mrs. R. J. Martin (lead), Mrs. C. Wiley (second) Mrs. D. Eldred (vise), Mrs. W. A. Greenslade (skip). They received beautiful silver cake baskets.

Mrs. C. Wright's rink composed of Mrs. C. Cheverill (lead), Mrs. C. Wiggins (second), Mrs. R. J. Devey (vice), Mrs. C. Wright (skip), won second prize in rink games and received silver sandwich trays.

In Scotch doubles, Mrs. Wright and Mrs. J. Welsh received first prizes of silver bread trays and Mrs. F. Miller and Mrs. H. Staunton received the second prize, silver crumb trays with silver backed brushes in the doubles.

Miss Allen read an address of appreciation to Mr. H. Martin, expressing the thanks of the ladies for the interest he had taken in our games and the time and effort expended in their behalf, while Mrs. N. Henry on behalf of the ladies presented him with a small token.

Mr. Martin, although taken by surprise, made a suitable reply, complimenting the ladies on the improvement in their bowling.

After the meeting, progressive bridge was played.

Prize winners were Mrs. G. Coleman, Mrs. C. Wiley.

Tombstone Trophy and Field Day

The last organized games of competitive golf for the season will be played on the afternoon of Wednesday, October 17. The tombstone games for the Brown Cup (Tombstone Trophy) will be played on that day. The match will be played in foursomes. Prizes will be awarded to the best pair or team making the lowest net score and also to the team making lowest gross score. Prizes will also be awarded to the individual player making the best gross score and to the individual player making the best net score for the 18 holes. Players will play to their handicaps. It will of course be necessary for the committee to have the names of the members wishing to play, as the various teams will be drawn from the hat. Every player has a chance to win one of five prizes. The entry list will close Monday, October 16. Foursomes drawn together will arrange to tee off at a time convenient to themselves. Players wishing to compete will kindly hand in their names as soon as possible to any of the members of the match and handicap committee: J. P. Bond, F. M. Delafosse, W. F. Huycke.

YANKEES MAY SET NEW MARK

No Team Has Yet Won Two Series in Four Straight Games.

ONE GAME TO GO.

ST. Louis, Oct. 8. —Canadian Press.—Riding the high crest of a winning wave brought over from the last world series, the New York Yankees came to the fourth game of the 1928 affair to-day needing but one victory to make them baseball immortals.

If the Yankees can stop the Cardinals once again they will carve a new record in the archives of the game. The Yankees won from Pittsgurgh in four straight games last year, but this feat had been performed by Boston in 1914. No team, however, has taken two series straight like that.

The Cardinals have been forced back to their last line of defence. They realize they are down and if the stumble this afternoon they will be out. Starting the series odds on favorites, the Cardinals in four days have seen the situation change until there are no odds on the outcome of the series. They have a chance to win the series by taking four straight games and if they do this it will be the first time in baseball history. All the more honor would come to them for not in the twenty three years of the world series under modern rules has a team won four games after losing three.

BURNLEY LOSES LEAGUE LEAD

Manchester United Wins By One Goal in English Soccer Match.

FIRST DIVISION.

London, Eng., Oct. 8 (Canadian Press Cable).—Burnley were deposed from their position at the head of the English League First Division averages yesterday by Manchester United in a thrilling game. The United team looked as if they were going to overwhelm Burnley, putting in four goals in the first twenty minutes. Spence and Hanson scored twice. Then Burnley got going and before the interval had reduced their disadvantage to two through the tallies of McCluggage and Beel. Seven minutes from the finish after the United goal had been under a terrific bombardment McCluggage netted again from a penalty. The United held on to their slim superiority to the finish amidst considerable excitement.

Aston Villa got going first against Sheffield United through Waring's goal. Waring put in another at half time. Tunstall then scored for Sheffield, but Dorrell's fine goal for the Villa put the Sheffield team out of the running.

Derry County had an easy time at Birmingham, Whitehouse by his two goals in the first half giving them a comfortable lead. Bedford added a couple more soon after the turn round. Bond registered Birmingham's lone point.

Amos scored the goal which Enabled Bury to beat Bolton Wanderers. The score came in the first half. Bolton pressed hotly several times during the game, but finished poorly through the excellent defence of Bury.

Manchester City Win.

Manchester City and Sunderland battled before 45,000 people through the first half to a two-all tie. McKay started the scoring for Sunderland after 20 minutes of play. Then Broadhurst equalized, McKay sent the city team ahead again and Marshall made it all square. Manchester ran in three goals in quick succession after the interval to clinch the match. Halliday got a marker for Sunderland in the closing stages.

Leicester City had all the luck at Cardiff. For much of the time the Welshmen played without Nelson, who was injured. Carr opened the scoring for Leicester in the first half and there was no response from Cardiff until well on in the second half, when Harris, during the short time Nelson was on again, equalized. When Nelson had retired for good Hine put in the winner for Leicester.

Navy Loses To Boston College For Second Straight Defeat.

WESTERN RESULTS.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8 (CP).—It looks now as though Navy Bill Ingram who was correct when he said he couldn't tell which of three teams was his varsity, that Knute Rockne had much reason for pre-season gloom, and the dopesters were right when they tagged the "dynamite" sign on the Southern Methodists of Dallas, Texas.

A wild football Saturday, replete with huge scores gave the east two distinct knocks, the first in Navy's second straight defeat of the season, this time by Boston College, six to nothing, and the stirring battle the Southern Methodists made to lower Army's standards in the first intersectional meeting of the east and southwest. Army won 14 to 13, but only after facing such an aerial attack as the east ever saw before.

The mid-west saw two stunning upsets in the overwhelming defeat of Rockne's Rovers from Notre Dame by Wisconsin, 22 to 6, and Ohio Wesleyan's decisive triumph over Michigan, 17 to 7.

Indiana had a rugged time beating Oklahoma. After dropping a double-header last Saturday, Chicago turned around and won two, beating Wyoming 47—0 and Lake Forest 8—0.

Intersectional duels gained mid-season speed as elevens throughout the nation came to grips with opponents more to their own caliber. Vanderbilt chalked one up in the Southern column with a 12 to 7 win over Colgate, but New York University evened the score by trouncing West Virginia Wesleyan 26 to 7, and Syracuse tolled up 22 points, shutting out William and Mary.

Harvard, Yale and Princeton got away to high powered starts, rolling up large scores. All seem headed for robust seasons.

The big fellow on the Pacific Coast ran into trouble here and there. California beating St. Mary's 7 to 0, while the University of Washington could do no better with Whitman. Stanford, beaten by the Olympic Club last week, plastered Oregon 26 to 12.

SERIES FIRST HOMER

BEAUTIFUL OUT-OF-DOOR SCENES IN "ROSE MARIE"

For the first time since Dame Nature placed a winding, silvery lake in the lap of the beautiful Santa Monica mountains, in California, that body of water has heard the song and cry of the voyager and thrilled to the dip of hundreds of paddles as a great flotilla of birch bark canoes raced swiftly to the only landing spot along the rugged shore.

On the cliffs overlooking the water and along the shoreline stood hundreds of men and women garbed in the picturesque costumes of the Canadian north woods hunters trappers, traders, mounted police, Indians halfbreeds a scattering of women and children both red and white, their eyes focused on the spectacular and unique scene below.

A murmur of curiosity as to who is in the lead, a few hurrahs as the inmates of the leading canoe are recognised and a vociferous burst of applause as some other craft gains on the leader.

Horse, yacht or automobile racing means nothing to these people of the Canadian frontier, but the man whose canoe first touches land when the voyagers race down the stream with the winter catch of raw furs is the year's hero.

This colorful scene was filmed by a battery of cameras for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's film version of the famous musical comedy success "Rose-Marie" now playing at the Regent Theatre. In the winning canoe were James Murray, who plays opposite Joan Crawford; Lucien Hubbard, producer of the picture and a number of actors.

The men and women on the hills were actors and acresses, save here and there, safely outside the camera lines, newspaper and magazine writers who had gone out on location to witness the filming of the many thrilling outdoor scenes in "Rose-Marie."

For weeks the property department of the studio had been gathering canoes throughout California and western Canada. The wardrobe department had been designing and making costumes, location scouts, had been scouring the Sierras for the most picturesque and impressing location suitable for the filming of such a scene.

The casting office had been interviewing players who could handle canoes skillfully in a scene full of peril for any unfortunate canoest whose craft might be upset in the thrilling race through icy waters.

Throughout the entire day the race was staged while masked batteries of cameras on the cliffs and along the shoreline registered on film the scene unique in motion pictures. But it was a yearly event to the Canadian woodsmen of days when the great fur companies sent hundreds of men into the forests and snowy wastes to trap fur-bearing animals in order that civilized women could adorn themselves in elegance.

Veteran photographers and directors who saw the screen "rushes" of the race today declared them the most thrilling and photographically beautiful they had ever seen in a film drama of the great out-of-doors.

AT THE CAPITOL.

TO-NIGHT, AT THE CAPITOL THEATRE, McNABB'S LADIES' WEAR SHOPPE WILL PRESENT THEIR FALL FASHION REVUE—MISS MARGARET DICKSON (THE GIRL WITH THE BIRD VOICE), WILL SING, AND BEAUTIFUL FLORENCE VIDOR WILL BE SEEN UPON THE SCREEN IN "THE MAGNIFICENT FLIRT."

The newest creations for fall and winter in ladies' wear will be displayed by eight beautiful manniquins at the Capitol Theatre to-night, Tuesday and Wednesday at 8 o'clock, when McNabb's Ladies' Wear Shoppe will present their fall fashion revue. Miss Margaret Dickson, silver medallist at the Toronto Exhibition, and known as "the girl with the bird voice," will sing each evening in conjunction with the fashion parade.

Beautiful Florence Vidor will be seen upon the screen in "The Magnificent Flirt," a most suitable attraction for a fashion revue.

"The Magnificent Flirt" is the story of a Parisienne who has, during many years, accumulated a horde of male admirers. Finally, she succumbs to the attractiveness of one, a certain Count D'Estranges, whose nephew is in love with her daughter.

The nephew asks the mother for the girl's hand in marriage, and when she agrees to the troth, he kisses her. This kiss is seen by the count, who accuses the woman of being too careless in her love affairs. She is vindicated, however, and this forms the climax of the story.

Paramount has given "The Magnificent Flirt" a most attractive production, the modernistic French settings being a distinctive novelty, so far as motion pictures are concerned.

Miss Vidor appears in a number of startling gowns, and her supporting cast is an excellent one, including Loretta Young as her daughter; Albert Conti as the count, Matty Kemp as the nephew; Ned Sparks as a comedy American character, and Marietta Millner as the "perfect lady," Pifi.

ESSENTIAL FEATURES OF EDUCATION

The Presidential Address of W. J. Stacey at the Annual Convention of the Peterborough County Teachers' Association.

Every act is probably composed of three elements, and education is no exception to the rule. Whether it be the building of a school or the governing of a country, the act consists of those three things—a purpose, a plan, and a power. These are the three essential features of Education.

It is unnecessary to say which is the most important of the three. We can all agree that they are each of them significant and essential in the process of education. For instance, you may have the most perfect purpose in education and yet the best results may not be reached because your plan was so poor or because your power was inadequate. On the other hand, you may have the most perfect kind of method, and yet, because the aim was not high and because the power was insufficient, your result was very weak. Or, yet, again, you might have the most sufficient power conceivable and yet, because your methods were inferior and the end was not good, the result again was incomplete and unsatisfactory. So that for the purpose of a complete education these three elements must co-operate, and a due proportion must be given to each one of them.

First of all, then, let us think about the end of education. What is the end of education? What is its purpose? Why are men studying? Why do we set boys and girls their tasks? Why do we build our schools and colleges and institutions of learning? The end of education is the attainment of truth. The greatest teacher that the world ever had said "To this end was I born and for this purpose came I into the world that I might bear witness to the truth." So that to Him the end and the purpose of all living was to bear witness to the truth. So that we may conclude that the perfect end of education is the attainment of truth. But some may ask, "What is truth?" Perhaps the best way to answer that question is to draw some distinction and the first distinction I would like to draw is between truth and knowledge, for they are not the same thing. Knowledge is a thing of the mind, merely of the mind. Truth is a matter of the whole life, of character.

Frequently there are people possessing very great knowledge but that knowledge has never been pressed down into character, has not manifested itself in any living relationships. There are men who are walking encyclopædias so far as knowledge is concerned, and yet they are not noted for their influence, and their lives are not conspicuous for the power that they exercise upon their fellows. We might illustrate the difference between knowledge and truth in this way: A vessel holds water but the water never becomes part of the vessel. You could get the water out of the vessel at any moment and the vessel would be wholly uninfluenced, untouched by the presence of the water.

Truth, on the other hand, is like the sap in a tree. The tree holds its sap, but the sap is the very life of the tree. It flows up its trunk into its branches; it touches the furthermost leaf upon the furthermost twig and you could not withdraw the sap from the tree without destroying the very life of the tree, and truth is that possession of man that runs through all his faculties, permeates every atom of his being, is pressed down into his character and becomes manifested in his acts.

This, then, is the great difference between truth and knowledge. Truth takes knowledge and moulds and presses it into the personality until there is no part of the man's nature that is untouched and influenced by the possession of that truth.

Let us make another distinction, the difference between truth and fact. You may have all the facts and yet have no truth. Or you may have the truth and yet not be in possession of the facts. For instance, Aesop's Fables have a good deal of truth in them, but there are no facts. The Arabian Nights have very few facts in them, but there is a whole world of truth in those things.

And in our interpretation of much of literature we have to learn to distinguish between truth and fact. And in all our educational system we have to learn to make that distinction between truth and fact. That is the first thing. The end of education is truth transmitted into character.

The second thing is the plan or the method of education. "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." I am not going to deal with details of a particular method, but there are two things about method in education that I would like to speak about. It seems to me that they are essential in any good plan regarding education, and the first is freedom. The best education must be free. We talk a great deal about compulsory education. But as a matter of fact there is no such thing. You can have compulsory attendance at school, and you can have, perhaps, compulsory study at certain hours, but compulsory education is a matter solely between the teacher and the pupil and it can only come by consent, and I wonder sometimes if this idea of coercion in our education is not a very perilous undertaking. At all events there must be a measure of freedom. Is one of the dangers in all methods of education not this, a slavish attachment to schedules and timetables, and programmes and curricula?

Is there not a sort of idolatry to-day regarding machinery in education? We all understand the necessity of order and discipline, but my complaint is that we are getting so entangled in the machinery that we are almost shocked from the highest kind of action. There must be a measure of freedom for the teacher, and many a teacher finds himself or herself fairly suffocated by all the restrictions and intricacies of the plans and schedules and timetables that go to make up the modern system of education. A teacher must surely be allowed some play of the imagination and a pupil must also be allowed a certain measure of freedom so that it is not only packing the mind full of certain facts and information. The thing that you want to do with the child is to get it to use its mind, to think for itself, to imagine vividly. All these are parts of the system of education and they can only be conducted with a very large measure of freedom. The truth shall make you free. Wherever truth has been inculcated it has meant freedom and wherever there is slavish submission to machinery and to law there is all the absence of truth.

It is freedom that I make my plea for. I think we live in an age when machinery is altogether worshipped too much. There is more power in faith than in all the machinery ever set up by the hand of man, and it is this large measure of faith and freedom that we require in our methods of education.

A second thing about method of education is that all education ought to be conducted upon lines of beauty. Beauty must be an essential feature of education. I mean by that, that things ought to be made attractive. Why is it that boys and girls do not go to school with the same zest that they visit the picture show? Why do they not race off to school with the same enthusiasm that they go to the circus? It is all a matter of presentation. It is a matter of making things attractive, or presenting them so that the young mind will find in them beauty. Who of us has not had some subject poisoned for all time by the ugly way in which it was presented?—Ed. Mitchell. You see the whole difference is in the way a thing has been presented, and it is beauty that is needed in our instruction.

Beauty of boulevards, surroundings, class-room, etc., Impositions—

There is a right and a wrong way of doing things. Some of our memories glow with pleasure when we remember some teacher who took us by the hand and led us to the subject along a pathway where the sun shone and roses were strewed. And there are some teachers who always lead you up to a subject where the waters are foul-smelling and where the weeds are dank and where everything is unpleasant, and others lead you in over a beautiful road where everything is attractive and your mind is immediately prejudiced in favor of that subject towards which you are going to be led. Truth is beauty and beauty is truth. That is the whole thing and all we need to know. Both freedom and beauty seem to me to be two essential features so far as the method and plan of education are concerned.

I come to the last element and that is, the power of education. You know it is an old saying—Knowledge is power. It is not true—knowledge is not power. Used knowledge is power; applied knowledge is power, but knowledge in itself—there are many people who have lots of knowledge but who have not very much power. They do not seem to have the faculty of being able to use their knowledge of being able to apply it.

There are some men who are wonderful scholars and yet never seem to work any influence over people. Other men with very little reserve in the way of knowledge have marvellous influence because they can take that little knowledge and apply it so wonderfully. So that it is used knowledge—when it leads to service becomes power, and it is service that is power in education. Look over the land and ask yourself, who are the men who are greatest to-day? and you will admit at once the men of service. And is it not the truth that the Master said, that he who would be great among you let him become your servant and that is what we have from him: "I am among you as he that serveth." Service is power and it is really the only kind of power, and it is perfectly true that any knowledge or any truth that we keep to ourselves that is not applied in service becomes narrow, fantastic, poisoned.

What ambition will we set before the boys and girls of our school before the young men and women of our colleges? This and this only—the ambition to serve. Picture for them the time when they will be able to serve the cause of justice in the profession of law. Picture for them the day when they will be able to heal the broken body of man in the profession of medicine and drive disease out of the community. Picture for them the time when they will be able to take part in the legislation of the country—yes, in the government of the country, and I know no urge which will lift them over obstacles and make them dig in and seek after truth and the possession of knowledge than this very passion of service.

This is the interpretation of the essential features of education. The end of education—truth pressed down and manifested in character. That is the purpose of education, the method of education. By freedom and by beauty get the very best possible results out of any system of education, and then the power of education to take that which has been imparted to you and bring it to bear upon the problems of our time, upon the ills of humanity and have some part and share in the lifting up of men into higher places of happiness and usefulness.

These are the four corner-stones—truth, freedom, beauty, service—which hold up the whole glorious fabric of education.

UNIONS DISCUSS STRIKE XTENSION FOR WHARF WORKERS

MELBOURNE, Australia, October 8 (Canadian Press Cable via Reuters). The conference of maritime and transport unions is still discussing the proposed extension of the waterside workers' strike, despite the fact that a sub-committee to which the strike extension motion was referred reported yesterday against such action. A definite decision is expected to-day or Friday.

The Australian Workers' Union yesterday condemned the Federal Transport Workers' Act, which provides for the registration of dock workers, describing it as on the lines of "Mussolini's legislation."

Crews of volunteer workers have been obtained by two Tasmanian steamers. If the strike is prolonged volunteers will be engaged to man all interstate steamers on which seamen refuse to work because of their sympathy with the waterside workers.

The Communist Club was raided by police yesterday, but no firearms were found. A quantity of reading matter was seized.

The walk-out of waterside workers started two weeks ago yesterday.

ESSENTIAL FEATURES OF EDUCATION

The Presidential Address of W. J. Stacey at the Annual Convention of the Peterborough County Teachers' Association.

Every act is probably composed of three elements, and education is no exception to the rule. Whether it be the building of a school or the governing of a country, the act consists of those three things—a purpose, a plan, and a power. These are the three essential features of education.

It is unnecessary to say which is the most important of the three. We can all agree that they are each of them significant and essential in the process of education. For instance, you may have the most perfect purpose in education and yet the best results may not be reached because your plan was so poor or because your power was inadequate. On the other hand, you may have the most perfect kind of method, and yet, because the aim was not high and because the power was insufficient, your result was very weak. Or, yet, again, you might have the most sufficient power conceivable and yet, because your methods were inferior and the end was not good, the result again was incomplete and unsatisfactory. So that for the purpose of a complete education these three elements must co-operate, and a due proportion must be given to each one of them.

First of all, then, let us think about the end of education. What is the end of education? What is its purpose? Why are men studying? Why do we set boys and girls their tasks? Why do we build our schools and colleges and institutions of learning? The end of education is the attainment of truth. The greatest teacher that the world ever had said: "To this end was I born and for this purpose came I into the world that I might bear witness to the truth." So that to Him the end and the purpose of all living was to bear witness to the truth. So that we may conclude that the perfect end of education is the attainment of truth. But some may ask, "What is truth?" Perhaps the best way to answer that question is to draw some distinction and the first distinction I would like to draw is between truth and knowledge, for they are not the same thing. Knowledge is a thing of the mind, merely of the mind. Truth is a matter of the whole life, of character.

Frequently there are people possessing very great knowledge but that knowledge has never been pressed down into character, has not manifested itself in any living relationships. There are men who are walking encyclopaedias so far as knowledge is concerned, and yet they are not noted for their influence, and their lives are not conspicuous for the power that they exercise upon their fellows. We might illustrate the difference between knowledge and truth in this way: A vessel holds water but the water never becomes part of the vessel. You could get the water out of the vessel at any moment and the vessel would be wholly uninfluenced, untouched by the presence of the water.

Truth, on the other hand, is like the sap in a tree. The tree holds its sap, but the sap is the very life of the tree. It flows up its trunk into its branches; it touches the furthermost leaf upon the furthermost twig and you could not withdraw the sap from the tree without destroying the very life of the tree, and truth is that possession of man that runs through all his faculties, permeates every atom of his being, is pressed down into his character and becomes manifested in his acts.

This, then, is the great difference between truth and knowledge. Truth takes knowledge and moulds and presses it into the personality until there is no part of the man's nature that is untouched and influenced by the possession of that truth.

Let us make another distinction, the difference between truth and fact. You may have all the facts and yet have no truth. Or you may have the truth and yet not be in possession of the facts. For instance, Aesop's Fables have a good deal of truth in them, but there are no facts. The Arabian Nights have very few facts in them, but there is a whole world of truth in those things.

Carl M. Mohr, M.E., has just prepared a report on the Sudbury properties of the Capital Rouyn Mines, situated in Hess and Harty townships, and also on the company's Rouyn properties in Duprat township, Quebec. In commenting upon the Sudbury properties, Mr. Mohr concludes: "The results obtained from the limited amount of work done to date fully warrant the erection of more permanent camp accommodations, and the installation of a small mining plant with sufficient capacity to sink a prospect shaft to a depth of 200 feet with lateral work to contacts from the 100- and 200-foot levels. This amount of work should reveal the structure of the deposit and settle definitely the fact as to whether or not the sulphides which are now appearing on the surface will alter to copper and carry nickel values at depth." The report also gives a few of the essays taken, all of which show high values.

In the conclusion of his report on the Duprat township property, Mr. Mohr states: "In conclusion, I may say that the work on your property, as carried on to date, has been well done, and it is a matter of regret that more surface development had not been done prior to the diamond drilling. Had this been the case, the engineer in charge of spotting the diamond drill holes would have had a much easier task, and doubtlessly the diamond drilling would have given important results. However, it must not be considered that this diamond drilling, which would appear in every instance to have missed the vein it was intended to cut, has by any means been a total loss, as it has provided geological information which can be utilized in carrying on further operations to a very great advantage. The success which has crowned the efforts of the Nipissing Mines on their property, a few miles west of your company's holdings, which I sincerely believe is the same vein system (the values of the Nipissing being obtained from an identical geological structure with the same strike and dip) fully warrant further development on the property of your company, with every reason to believe that ore deposition of commercial size and tenor will be encountered."

It is understood that Laval-Quebec Mines, Ltd., is withdrawing from the Serpent Basin property, the results not having come up to expectations, and that the company is returning to the Quebec field.

Many Issues Stronger Loblaw Gains Four

TORONTO, Oct. 8 (Canadian Press).—Many issues moved into higher ground in the good trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day. International Nickel, however, dropped to 138, and the opening price, 140¼, was the highest reached. Loblaw, with a gain of 4 to 84 was the feature of the listed section. In heavy trading Hiram Walkers sold up to 64 for a gain of 1½ over the week-end. Shawinigan advanced 3% to 98¾, Hamilton Bridge, another heavy trader was up ; at 45¼. The oils were firm.

Mining Stocks Easier Trading Is Heavy

TORONTO, Oct. 8 (Canadian Press).—Prices turned softer after a strong opening on the Standard Mining Exchange to-day. Trading was fairly heavy throughout the list. Noranda climbing to 49, twenty-five from an initial sale at 48.75. Towards the close it dropped to 47.90 for a net loss of 45. Newbec, opening strong at 80½, dropped to 56, for a decline of 6. Sherrit Gordon at 6.26 was up two, Big Missouri was up 6 at 63, and Hudson Bay gained 20 to 18.95. Mond Nickel was down 90 at 39.60.

Liverpool Stock Low Wheat Price Advances

CHICAGO, Oct. 8. — Canadian Press—Unlooked for advances in the wheat quotation at Liverpool helped give the wheat market here an early swing upward to-day. Liverpool stocks of wheat were reported as being rapidly reduced with no offerings obtainable except at higher prices. Opening ⅛ to 1 cent up, Chicago wheat later reacted somewhat but then rose higher than before. Corn and oats were easier with corn starting at ⅜ to ½ decline to ¾ gain and subsequently receding all around. Provisions averaged lower.

Wheat, December, 130½; March, 125. Corn, December, 86⅝; March 85½. Oats, December 44⅛; March, 45¼.

Call Money Is Plentiful New Records Established

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.— Canadian Press.—The stock market continued to move to higher ground today under the leadership of the high priced specialties but the advance was checked, at times by flurries of selling in some of the recent speculative favorites. New high records were established by more than a score of issues, the gains ranging from fractions to 12¼ points. There were several soft spots also. Call money renewed at 6½% and supply became so plentiful at that figure that a lower rate was looked for. The Sterling Exchange stiffened somewhat but hope was still held out that the flow of gold from London to New York would reach at least $25,000,000 of which $10,000,000 already has been shipped. Allied Chemical soared twelve and a half points to a new peak at 215½. Montgomery Ward was pushed up nine points.

News From the Mines

Through
Solloway, Mills & Company

Potter Doal.

As mentioned in our last market letter, following the directors' meeting, work has been suspended on the Potter Doal property. Ore values have been erratic, and under the circumstances it was thought better to discontinue work and look for another property. The company's holdings were situated in Monroe and Warden townships.

Jackson Manion.

Directors of Jackson Manion at a meeting on Thursday reviewed the situation up to the present time. Results secured in all four faces have been so spectacular on the 125 and 250 foot levels that an independent engineer was sent to check up when the manager's report was first received. The vein is said to be approximately 17 feet in width and to be all high grade ore.

MINING BRIEFS

A Special Service to The Examiner

Ray Howey, brother of Lorne Howey and a well-known mining man, was in the city Saturday following a period spent in the Albany River district of Ontario. The Fort Hope Gold Mines is the premier operation in this field and Mr. Howey reported that a sensational find of uranium was made recently on this property. Uranium is the ore from which radium is obtained. This most precious of all metals is treated by an elimination process and uranium is usually derived after several treatments have been run on coarser ore. This find is regarded as most important in view of the prohibitive figure which radium commands. It may not be known, but several companies were formed recently and are conducting active operations in Haliburton, about 100 miles from Toronto, in search of this mineral. Several districts of Ontario are known to have favorable formation and ideal geology for the deposition of this metal. Fort Hope is also developing nicely as a gold prospect and this new find adds greater speculative zest.

TEACHER TRAINING CLASS INTERESTING

Smith and Lakefield Association Course Well Presented.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

BRIDGENORTH, October 6 — Rev. J. O. Totten conducted the opening exercises at the third session of the Bridgenorth Teacher Training School.

Mrs. White's topic was the equipment of the lower divisions. Religion should be taught under the most wholesome and beautiful conditions. Dr. Weigle says: "If we desire children to worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness, we ought to remember that there is holiness in beauty." An environment which inspires order and reverence and is conducive to worship and work is the ideal towards which we ought to move. The conditions under which many work are far from ideal. The child's attitude towards the room should be one of reverence and joyousness. He should feel a sense of personal possession. He should feel at home in his Father's house. Cheeriness and simplicity should be the keynotes of the decoration. A room that is bright and sunny needs a cool color scheme. Permanent pictures should be few and well chosen. Tables, chairs, and woodwork should match. A perfect day is one in which we see something beautiful, hear something beautiful and do something beautiful. How splendid to make every Sunday School a perfect day for every child who attends Church School.

Cradle roll class should be located on the first floor airy, homelike, beautiful. Blocks, objects pictures for illustrating the stories. Beginners rooms should also be an ground floor lest they step on stairs. Low chairs, low table, blackboard, birthday bank, calendars. Primary chairs slightly higher, blackboard, sand trays, permanent pictures.

Junior on second or third floor: Large enough to accommodate noisy active juniors. Central place for worship exercise class rooms adjoining.

Rev. T. M. Wesley dealt with the Prophets of Israel showing that in order to understand them properly you must know their surroundings and the conditions under which they lived, also the problems they were up against. He also spent some time over the historical books, the law and the priestly code.

On Thursday night, Rev. A. C. Kemp of Regent street, Lakefield, conducted the worship period, taking as his reading lesson I Corinthians 13.

The topic Mrs. White took was "Worship in School." First of all we were to remember that it was worship, not merely opening exercises. Worship includes prayer, praise and meditation. While posture is not everything, yet a certain posture is a help to certain leaflet. Some can worship God best when they kneel, others stand, others again sit. We should adopt whatever posture suits us best.

The aim in worship is companionship, fellowship, or communion with God. To realize this, we need first, atmosphere, second environment. This should be restful; the room should be well ventilated, well lighted. The program should not be spoiled by late comers, all such distractions as opening and closing doors should be avoided. Superintendent or teacher should be in their place at the proper starting time. The different parts of the program should have been gone over before hand. Hymns suitable to the different grades should be chosen. Scripture should be in study form, far more should be made of the offering which is really a part of the worship.

Rev. T. M. Wesley dealt with the substance of the Old Testament, confining himself chiefly to the Book of Psalms. He advocated the use of Moffat's Translation for the other parts of the Bible; but he believed the authorized version was more suitable for studying the psalms. The Book of Psalms is mainly a devotional book, and therefore we do not need the critical method of study. The Psalms do not depend on their background. It has been the favorite book of devotions for Christians right down the ages. In some Presbyterian churches they sing nothing but psalms. The psalms are expressions of the moods of souls of men in the presence of God. We have the experineces of men like David; their joys, and sorrows, defeats and victories. Psalm forty-five, for example, is a wedding song. The psalms have their problems, such as the imprecatory psalms, where the psalmist curse his enemies, and calls down the vengeance of God upon them. His spirit seems far removed from the Christian spirit where we are taught to love our enemies, to do good to them that hate us, pray for them that dispitefully use us. The solution of the problem is found in the fact that in New Testament times men had larger and hig

McQUEEN—McCULLOUGH

KINGSTON, Ont., Oct. 8.—At high noon on Saturday a pretty Autumn wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. David McCullough, Nelson street, when their youngest daughter, Eva Margaret, was united in marriage to James Ivan McQueen of Peterborough, son of Dr. and Mrs. James McQueen of Galt. The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a lovely gown of blue velvet, with hat and gloves to match. The bouquet was an armful of yellow chrysanthemums and white heather.

Rev. S. E. Morton, rector of St. Luke's Church, performed the ceremony; Miss Elsa Craig played the wedding music from Lohengrin, and during the signing of the register, Miss Marjorie Reid sang very sweetly "At Dawning."

The bride's only attendant was little Miss Elizabeth Prudham of Galt, niece of the bridegroom, who wore a dainty frock of yellow. After the ceremony a buffet luncheon was served, the bride's table being covered with a handsome lace cloth and centred with the wedding cake.

Mr. and Mrs. McQueen left on a motor trip to Quebec. The bride traveling in a smart ensemble of brown with small French hat and shoes to match.

Mrs. David McCullough, mother of the bride, wore a black crepe frock with silver embroidery and a corsage of red roses. Mrs. James McQueen, mother of the bridegroom, wore a smart frock of black velvet and wore a corsage of red roses.

After October 15 Mr. and Mrs. McQueen will be at home at 192 Dalhousie street, Peterborough.

TRUTH VERSUS ERROR

What the Israelites experienced in their day was a type of what the people in the preesnt day are hearkening to.

Satan, in order to deceive the Israelite and oppose Jehovah God, used tactics, sending amongst them false prophets, who came to them in the name of the Lord, and claimed to be representatives of Jehovah God, and who prophesied lies unto them.—Jer. 27, 14.

Satan is using a number of false teachers and preachers all over the land to-day to preach abominable lies to the people, and who pose as representatives of God and His truth.

Evolution, endless torments, Satan's lie (man does not die), false statements in regard to the end of the world and the day of judgment, with other false assertions are palmed off upon the people as the truth of God. We are glad to know deliverance from the machinations of Satan will surely come.—M. T. Butcher.

HARVEST FESTIVALS

AT WESTWOOD.

(Examiner Correspondence)

"Harvest Home" service was held on WESTWOOD, Oct. 8.—The annual Sunday afternoon in the Anglican church. A tistic decorations of flowers, fruits, foliage and vegetables ...tractively arranged and bore silent testimony of the ever bountiful Giver-of-all.

A sermon of thanksgiving was preached by the rector, Rev. T. J. O'Conor-Fenton, emphasizing the importance of being grateful for national welfare, as well as for individual blessings.

Rally Day Service.

The Rally Day service was held in St. Andrew's United church on Sunday morning and also the place of the regular church service. The church was beautifully decorated with a great many vases of cut flowers, with autumn foliage and branches of Scottish haw berries.

The pastor, Rev. C. H. Moyer, led the service and also preached the sermon of peace and goodwill taking "The Christ of the Andes" as his subject.

The choir was composed of the junior and intermediate classes of the Sunday school. Extracts from essays on "Peace" were read by Leslie Sargent, Ruth Cameron, Helen Cameron, and Margaret Lancaster.

AT WARSAW.

The choir of All Saints' church made their second excursion this fall to assist in the Harvest Home services. Following their visit to Norwood last week they went on Tuesday evening to Warsaw. A neighboring home was placed at the disposal of the choir for robing and they marched in procession to the church, singing as they entered the processional hymn of thanksgiving,

Praise oh praise our God and King
Hymns of adoration sing
For His mercies still endure
Ever faithful, ever sure.

The service was conducted by the rector, the Rev. J. T. O'Conor-Fenton, while the rector of All Saints' church, the Rev. J. Douglas Paterson, read the lessons and preached.

The canticles were sung to the beautiful setting in F by Caleb Simper and the two anthems rendered by the choir were "While the Earth Remaineth" and "O Lord How Manifold Are Thy Gifts." The church was very prettily decorated for the occasion and a good congregation joined heartily in the service

The Rev. J. Douglas Paterson preached from the text, Luke 12, 29-31, "Seek ye not what ye shall eat or what ye shall drink....for your Heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of these things; but rather seek ye the kingdom of God and all these things shall be added unto you."

The choir are indebted to the following for so very kindly providing the means of transportation: Miss Williams, Rev. J. D. Paterson and Messrs. F. Dawson, Kay, Branson and Boddy.

After the service a stop off was made at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Cuffe, where refreshments were served and much enjoyed before the homeward trip.

Eighteen-Year-Old Nottinghamshire Girl Wins Women's Closed Golf Championship

LONDON, Eng., Oct. 6.—(Canadian Press Cable).—Enid Wilson, eighteen-year-old Nottinghamshire girl, became the English women's closed golf champion yesterday when she defeated Dorothy Pearson, of Tunbridge Well, 9 up and 8 to play at Walton Heath.

The weather was unsettled, but a large crowd gathered to watch the 36-hole match between Miss Wilson and her 21-year-old rival. Both players were obviously nervous during the first eighteen holes and play during the morning round was generally poor. Miss Wilson finished four up on Miss Pearson, but had a score of 90, her worst performance of the week's play.

Miss Pearson started the afternoon round by scoring the first birdie of the match. She holed a 15-yard putt for a three. The second hole was halved. Thereafter Miss Wilson won five holes in a row, and was eight up at the seventh, Miss Pearson having had a number of adventures in the heather. The eighth was halved, Miss Wilson winning the ninth to become dormie. A magnificent pitch and run approached to within four feet of the flag for an easy half enabled Miss Wilson to win the match on the tenth green.

ANNUAL SPORTS DAY HELD AT LAKEFIELD HIGH SCHOOL

Good Program Presented at Athletic Event By Pupils.

SEVERAL RACES.

LAKEFIELD, Oct. 6.—(Examiner Correspondence)—The sports day of the Lakefield High School took place on Thursday beginning at 1:30 p.m. on the exhibition grounds with the high school staff, J. H. Harvey and Misses Curtis and Crinnall in charge, assisted by Mr. J. W. Ridpath and Dr. J. C. Smith.

For the first time the high school and public school sports were made separate and distinct events which benefited both schools as there was a greater amount of time for the events of both. Unfortunately several of the high school events had to be postponed owing to lack of time, these will be run off early next week, probably after school.

The weatherman was equally kind to both schools and "balmy breezes" prevailed which made it very delightful for both the spectators and the participants in the events. The number of spectators was not as large as might have been expected and one hopes that next year every parent, especially the mothers will try to be present. It is an encouragement to the children to receive mother's "well done" after a race into which you have put forth your best endeavours and father's voice cheering one on means a great deal. It encourages the teachers and benefits the pupils, and swells the crowd of on lookers which means more prestige for the sports day.

The number of girls was greatly in excess of the number of boys but both sexes were equally keen about the events and eager to enter and the showing in each case was remarkably good. In the boys' events the most popular apparent was the running broad jump which drew seventeen entries and was closely contested. Ten boys entered the running high jump and eight entered the pole vault. This was a greater novelty for several reasons, first, four of the entries were first form pupils and had never tried it and the pole vault entries of other years have passed on to higher classes or have left school so that with the exception of Ronald Kemp it was an entire novelty. The showing was good and promises well for next year.

Eleven entered the hop, step and jump with six doing twenty nine feet and over.

The standing broad jump, the half mile race and wheel barrow race were postponed and the obstacle race was ruled out although elaborate preparations had been made in which an old fashioned hack (a relic of other days) a door and ten barrels and a White Rose Gasoline sign all had a part, also a large net and some trestles.

The girls were just as keen as the boys in their events which were arranged to run alternately. Each sex was keenly interested in the prowess of the other and gave all the encouragement possible. The basketball throw and catching the baseball were novelties for the girls only and were very popular, so much so that the boys urged to have them included in their schedule. The girls relay race brought out five teams and in the hop, step and jump twenty five girls entered and twenty-three in the running broad jump.

In spite of the accepted sports' costume being prominent, the winners in these events and in the relay race were all clad in skirts which shows that the day of the skirt is not gone.

The complete returns for points for the boys will not be available until the remaining events are run off but at present Ronald Kemp is well ahead with Clayton FitzGerald and Dominick White 2nd and 3rd respectively, representing forms III, II, and 1.

Ruby Tedford, a second form girl, won first place in the girl's events, with Dorothy Sutton and Helen Porter second and third. In the girls' events Form II leads, taking first and second places and Form III third. Myla Bogue, who won fourth place led the Form I girls.

The following are the results:—

DARTMOOR PONY IS DISAPPEARING

Few Offered for Sale at Recent Fairs in Devon.

PRICE DROPPING

PLYMOUTH, England., Oct. 8 (Canadian Press). — The Dartmoor pony seems to be in danger of extinction. That is the lesson of Princetown fair, which was held recently, when the total number of these attractive little animals offered for sale did not exceed 100.

In former times a brisk demand for Dartmoor ponies would bring 300 or 400 of them into the ring at Princetown alone, while at other Devon fairs, sales at good prices were always to be depended upon. The place which the Dartmoor pony now occupies in the scheme of a world in which gasoline and electricity provide the motive force is sufficiently indicated by the low prices at which they changed hands. Animals which used to fetch $150 or $300 were sold at Princetown for a tenth of those sums, and ponies of poor strain could be purchased for $2.50 each.

Throughout the present year dealers from London, Bristol, and elsewhere have been in Devonshire organizing round-ups of ponies, and farmers have been glad to get rid of their stocks at $5 or $7.50 apiece. A number of these ponies have been shipped to Island, to take the place of the donkeys that are gradually dying out. In happier times the ponies would have been bought locally for use between the shafts of a jingle.

One of the causes of the dying-out of the Dartmoor pony is the careless introduction, some years ago, of undesirable strains. This had the effect of producing a weaker and less reliable type not so well fitted to withstand the hardships of the life they are obliged to live on the bleak moorland wastes during winter. Comparatively few pure-bred ponies now remain on Dartmoor, and the moorland herds have never been at such a low ebb.

Attempts are being made at the Prince of Wales' stud farm at Princetown to improve matters by placing true-to-type stallions on the moor. Experiments are also being made in mixing the blood of the Dartmoor pony with that of the Arab, with a view to producing a good type of polo pony combining the Arab's speed with the Dartmoor hardihood. It is possible to produce such ponies of from 13 to 15 hands.

St. Lawrence Canal Calamity For U.S.

Copeland Attacks Scheme

Senator For New York Says Canada Alone Would Derive Benefit.

BUILD UP MONTREAL.

More U. S. Grain Goes Via Canadian Port Already, He Declares.

(Special to The Examiner.)

NEW YORK, N.Y., Oct. 9.—Selection of the St. Lawrence route for the Great Lakes-Atlantic canal would be a national calamity, Senator Royal S. Copeland declared yesterday at a luncheon of the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York.

The Senator declared the more northern route woud rebound solely to the benefit of Canadian wheat farmers who already have a large advantage because of the government owned railways, cheaper labor and better soil.

"Last year 93 million bushels of American wheat was shipped from Montreal," he said, "as against only 38 million from American ports. Aren't we short-sighted. Can we help to build a still greater trans-shipment port at Montreal with attendant loss to American bankers, insurance men and laborers.

"For domestic use it would take almost twice as long for shipments to go from Chicago and Detroit to New York by way of the St. Lawrence route as by the all-American route," he said. "In the final analysis any canal would be used almost wholly for the exportation of wheat. There would be nothing to bring back from Europe in shipment to that we want and that would not compete with American manufacturers."

Another consideration, he said, was that the Straits of Belle Isle, off Newfoundland, where vessels from the St. Lawrence route would enter the Atlantic ocean is 700 miles north and 1,000 miles east of Lake Ontario, and the route is closed or dangerous to navigation for about seven months of the year.

WHOLE LITTER GRADES SELECT

M. Jones, of Emily, Raises Eight Fine Bacon Type Hogs.

SELLS TO C.P.C. HERE.

M. Jones, a farmer near Omemee, has proved himself one of the foremost hog breeders and feeders in the community. Recently he marketed a litter of eight hogs which when graded at the local Canadian Packing Company plant were all placed in the select class. This is something remarkable and probably can be taken as a record for this district and the Canadian Packing Company factory here. These hogs were sold the day they were six months old and they weighed 1720 pounds or averaged 215 pounds a piece.

Records made by dairy farmers and poultry men are constantly being reported, but to Mr. Jones must go the honor and distinction of being a most expert hog feeder. He maketed these eight hogs through S. Vaughan of Omemee and they were graded by D. A. McKinnon government grader at the Canadian Packing Company plant here. Mr. McKinnon was so impressed with the type and quality of the hogs that he made a visit to the farm of Mr. Jones, where he interviewed the owner. The sow of this litter farrowed on the 27th of March last. Mr. Jones said, and when marketed on September 27 or six months after the young pigs weighed 1,720 pounds.

Mr. Jones is a firm believer in raising the becon type of hog and believes they are as easy raised and mature as fast as the thick smooth kind. The sow is three years old and all her previous litters have graded over eighty per cent. select.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—It is estimated that 1000 sheep were killed in the district surrounding Constance, Saskatchewan, by an unprecedented hail storm recently. Several horses were also reported victims of the storm.

Taken To Hospital By Plane Route

WINNIPEG, Man., October 9 (Canadian Press). Two Canadian National Railways trainmen were brought to hospital here by airplane late yesterday following a derailment of their train near Brunkild, Man., 31 miles southwest of Winnipeg.

Engineer J. Clayton and Fireman Hammon were seriously injured when their engine jumped the rails and ran into a ditch. Both were scalded and Clayton is reported in a critical condition.

They were in charge of a westbound freight train. Along with the engine, several cars went into the ditch.

CARDS TAKE EARLY LEAD BUT LOSE IT

Ruth Hits First Homer of the Series in Fourth Inning of Game.

WEAK IN PINCHES.

Yankee Infield Wabbles in Crucial Moments of Decisive Game.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 9.—Entering the fourth game of the World Series down and nearly out, the Cards battled gamely to-day after getting an early lead.

The lineup was as follows:

New York—Paschal cf., Koenig ss., Ruth lf., Gehrig 1b., Meusal rf., Lazzeri 2b., Dugan 3b., Bengough Hoy; P.

St. Louis — Orsatti cf., High 3b., Frisch 2b., Bottomley 1b., Hafey lf. Harper rf., Smith C. Maranville ss., Sherdel p.

First Inning

New York—Smith smother Paschal's foul behind the plate. Koenig stung a single into left field. Ruth hit into a double play, Bottomley taking Ruth's grounder, and touching first. The Cardinals' first baseman then threw to Maranville, who touched Koenig as he slid into the bag. No runs, one hit, no errors.

St. Louis—Orsatti struckout, taking the third called strike with the wood on his shoulders. High sent up a high fly with Ruth lost in the sun, High making two bases on the hit. Frisch fanned, swinging for the third strike. Bottomley got a base on balls, the fourth pitch being high and wide. Hoyt threw out Hafey at first. No runs, one hit, no errors.

2nd Inning

New York—Gehrig walked. Meusel struckout, swinging for the third strike. Lazzeri sent up a high one to Maranville. Frisch took Dugan's towering fly. No runs, no hits, no errors.

St. Louis—Harper went out, Lazzeri to Gehrig. Smith got a single past Lazzeri. Smith went out stealing. Maranville hit a long liner into right for a two-base hit. Meusel was barely able ot get his hands on the ball, Sherdel grounded out to Gehrig unassisted. No runs, two hits, no errors.

Third Inning.

New York—Bengough got a long single to left. Hoyt sacrificed, Smith to Bottomley. Hight took Paschal's grounder and threw him out, Bengough going to third. Frisch tossed out Koenig. No runs, one hit, no errors.

St. Louis—Orsatti got a Texas Leaguer into centre for two bases. High bunted safely, Orsatti going to third. Orsatti scored on Frisch's fly to Paschal. Bottomley sent up a high foul to Bengough. Hafey walked, the fourth pitch being low, High moving to second. Harper struck out, swinging weakly on a curve. One run, two hits, no errors.

Fourth Inning.

New York—Ruth hit a home run over the right field stands. It was his first home run of the series. The ball went into the next street. Gehrig got a base on balls for the second time. Muesel sent out a long fly to Orsatti, and Gehrig had to gallop back to first base. Lazzeri singled sharply into left for his first hit of the series. Gehrig halted at second. Dugan lined out to Orsatti. Hafey made a nice catch of Bengough's short fly. One run, two hits, no errors.

St. Louis—Smith hit into right for a single for his second hit. Maranville forced Smith, Lazzeri to Koenig, who threw wildly into the stand, Maranville going to second. Sherdel filed out to Paschal. Maranville scored when Hoyt threw wildly into centre field, trying to catch him napping. Orsatti struck out, swinging for the third strike. One run, one hit, two errors.

Fifth Inning.

New York—Hoyt singled into right.

200,000 CHINESE MASSACRED

MOSLEM RISING IN KANSU ENDS IN SLAUGHTER

Word Received By Famine Relief Committee From Missionaries.

VILLAGES PILLAGED.

Fanatical Moslems Form One-Third of Population of Interior Province

NEW YORK, Oct. 9 (Canadian Press)—Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, chairman of the China Famine Relief Organization in New York city, received information to-day of the reported massacre of about two hundred thousand persons by fanatic Moslems in Kansu province, China.

Dr. Cadman received a letter from the China Inland Mission at Lanchowfu, depicting the horrors of the situation, which was intensified by an insurrection of the Moslems, who form one-third of the population of the province. The known massacred exceed two hundred thousand, he was informed, with numerous villages pillaged and burned.

Y. M. WORKERS MEET SUCCESS

Will Make Final Reports On Membership Campaign To-night.

A DIVISION LEADS.

A meeting of the Y.M.C.A. Membership Campaign workers held Monday noon showed that the men have been quite active C. S. Cummer's division still leads with 340 points to the good, and A. E. Dryland's Canadian Packing Company team has the team leadership with 446 points. W. J. Hamilton continues to be the individual leader with 171 points. Altogether 191 have been signed up in two days.

The other teams running closest are W. J. Hamilton's Colts, 289; J. Jenning's Bronchos, 202; H. Vicker's Percherons, 175 and W. F. Stewart's Pacers with 130.

It has been reported that J. H. Vernor's workers have been holding back a lot of valuable point getters which will surely bring home the bacon for his division in the final report meeting to-night.

HALLOWE'EN PARTY NOTICE OF MEETING

Last Year's Officials and Others Who Wish Asked To Attend Meeting To-morrow Night.

The success that has followed the efforts of the Hallowe'en Committee in putting over the big Costume Parade on Hallowe'en night, has suggested the idea of broadening out again this year, and as a number of aggressive young business men have offered their services in any capacity to make it a widespread city and district community event. A meeting of everyone interested in this organization is called for to-morrow, Wednesday, night, at 8 o'clock, at the Chamber of Commerce when it is hoped there will be a large attendance of those who desire to help organize and make it a bigger success than ever.

THREE FREIGHTERS REPORT DISTRESS

Many Small Craft Missing After Typhoon Passes Over Japanese Coast.

TOKYO, Oct. 9—(Canadian Press)—Three Japanese freighters, Oyama Maru, Fukei Maru, and Ibukiyama Maru, were reported, to-day to be in distress off the east coast of Japan after a typhoon which swept the section last night. Numerous small craft were missing.

Andorra Sells Out To French Syndicate, Will Become a Pyrenees Monte Carlo

PARIS, Oct. 9.—Europe's last unspoiled arcadia is about to become modernized The tiny Republic of Andorra, situated high in the Pyrenees between France and Spain, has been acquired for exploitation purposes by a syndicate of Paris and Strasbourg financiers, who intend to turn it into a mountain Monte Carlo.

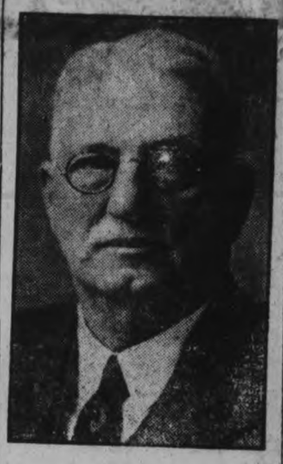
The syndicate is reported to have a capital of $4,500,000 and has already begun the work of making its property accessible to tourists. Now road are being built through the mountain passes. A railroad has been constructed from Barcelona and by 1930, when Andorra will burst into sophisticated glory, there will be a railway line from Toulouse.

Lack of money has been Anovia's downfall. Smuggling was one of its chief means of livelihood, but too strict attention by the Spanish and French customs officers to the activities of the smugglers has caused a serious falling off in the little republic's revenue. So it has sold itself out to the foreigner and henceforth will live on the proceeds of gambling. It will also levy a small poll tax on all who cross its frontiers—to be included in the railroad ticket.

The new syndicate has acquired all the mining, water power and tobacco growing rights and will develop the local industries, but its main profits will be derived from the gambling rooms. A hotel de luxe is being built at Lasescaldes, which is a spa situated at a height of 5,000 feet. There will be a casin with the accustomed trappings, golf links, tennis and lakes for swimming.

Politically Andorra is independent and can do as it likes though it is under the protection of the Bishop of the See of Durgel, on the Spanish side of the frontier, and the President of the French Republic who as successor to Henri IV is Prince of Andorra. Its total population is about 5,000 of the swarthiest, boniest and most taciturn people in Europe. Centuries of intermarriage in the place which until now has been almost cut off from the outside world has produced a people of poor physique.

45 YEARS AT THE HELM.



ROBERT FAIR.

Forty-five years in business on George Street, sticking to the one policy all that time of maintaining a high standard of quality for all goods handled, has established a reputation for Robert Fair Co., Limited, for that very feature. With a seven years' experience as a business man in Centreville, Robert Fair came to Peterborough, and started the dry goods establishment of which he is is still at the head, in the very store it occupies at the present time.

Mr. Fair's business instinct led him, right at the start of his Peterborough career, to endeavor to make his store known as the place where dependable goods could always be found, adopting the slogan, "The store where the goods always seem a little better for the same money." Looking back over the long period, almost a half century, Mr. Fair is satisfied that his idea was the right one, and he now feels that the public have entire confidence in anything bought at Fair's as the best value their money could buy. Mr. Fair shows the same vigor and aggressiveness as ever, and gives every department of the four crowded floors his daily personal supervision.

In this issue the rare announcement of a sale at Fair's will be found, telling its own story of a celebration of the anniversary event by attempting to reach a sales record for the occasion. Unusually attractive values is the magnet, and doubtless the response will be abundant.

MOTORIST HURT.

Man in Brockville Hospital As Result of Highway Collision.

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Oct. 9 (Canadian Press).—Albert Fegel, of Montreal, is in a grave condition in hospital here as a result of injuries to his head and internal injuries received last night when the car in which he and Samuel Bacher were driving collided with a truck on the Smith's Falls highway.

ASSIZES OPEN IN CITY TO-DAY

One Civil and One Criminal Case To Be Heard By Mr. Justice Rose.

GRAND JURY GOES OUT.

The fall sessions of the Supreme Court of the County of Peterborough opened in the Court House this afternoon before the Honorable Mr. Justice Rose. There are two cases on the docket, a criminal and a civil action. Wesley Devall is being tried on the charge of manslaughter arising out of the death of Graeme McMillan, in the Township of North Monaghan, on the evening of the 24th of May last.

The civil action arises out of an accident in Norwood last fall.

The criminal case was given to the grand jury this afternoon and their verdict is not expected before night. Irwin Hilliard, K.C., of Morrisburg, is acting as Crown Prosecutor in the criminal case.

His Lordship addressed the grand jurors, telling them of their duties and they went to their room. The petit jury for the civil case was then chosen.

Members of the Bar who were present when the court opened were: O. A. Langley, V. J. McElderry, K.C.; Irwin Hilliard, K.C.; F. D. Kerr, K.C.; W. F. Huycke, G. O'Shea, and G. W. Hatton, K.C.

The members of the grand jury are:

Albert Armstrong, G. A. Brethen (foreman), Walter Carveth, Bruce Garbutt, John M. Lillico, Ernest Mitchell, Albert Webster, William Breckenridge, Adolphus Crapp, William Forsythe, Arthur McClellan, James Wallace, and Michael Leahy.

His Lordship's Address.

"As you are aware the principal reason for summoning you is that you may inquire into the cases which the Crown officers have believed necessary to take action against. You will not try, but you will consider of such evidence: the Crown officers submit is sufficient to put the accused person on trial. You owe a certain duty to him to see that he is not put on trial on some frivolous charge, and you owe a much greater duty to the public that a man is put on trial if you believe there is some reason for doing so. It is not doing any injustice to him, for he can submit evidence to save himself.

"So far as I have been informed there is only one such case to come before you. That is a charge commonly known as manslaughter. Manslaughter consists in the unlawful but unintentional killing of a human being. That definition will cover a great variety of cases, but it is not practical to separate all these cases of unlawful killing under different categories. Parliament prefers to leave these cases in the one category and to trust to the common use of trial court, appeal court, or officers in Ottawa that they will deal fairly with such cases, and hence leaves one

LOCAL CHAMBER OPPOSES TAXING PUBLIC PLANTS

Delegates To Associated Boards of Trade Will Sustain Objections.

WOULD RAISE COSTS.

Cochrane Proposal of Levy On Utilities Subject of Report To Association.

At the seventeenth annual meeting of the Ontario Associated Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce, held in North Bay, October 9 and 10, Peterborough will be represented by four delegates, Ross L. Dobbin, Manager, Peterborough Utilities Commission; Harry G. Beatty, Superintendent, Peterborough Utilities Commission; E. F. Mason, Proprietor Mason Grocerterias and Past Chairman Peterborough Utilities Commission; and Frank G. Stinson, Secretary, Peterborough Chamber of Commerce.

Coming before the convention is a report having reference to the taxing of publicly-owned utilities such as gas, power, electric and steam railways, express, and so forth. At the fifteenth annual meeting in Toronto, November, 1926, a resolution was presented by the Cochrane Board of Trade urging the waiving of the prerogative of the Crown to exempt Crown property from municipal taxation when used solely for corporate business. The Cochrane Board of Trade took the stand that the prerogative of the Crown to have Crown property exempt from taxation was established prior to the Crown's ever expecting or undertaking to take up competitive business in full competition with private corporations subject to municipal taxation.

The result of the resolution from the Cochrane Board of Trade was that a special committee was appointed to make a study of the whole matter, and it is their report which will be presented at this annual convention and in which the local delegates are very much interested.

It is expected that the report when presented will call for the taxing of publicly-owned utilities except in cases where special exemptions are determined by law or a special tribunal. Inasmuch as the Premier of Ontario has stated that the taxing of publicly-owned utilities would raise the cost of power in Ontario at least twenty-five per cent, the local chamber feels that it is important to prevent the tabling of a report such as above outlined which, if recorded by the Ontario Associated Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce, would, it believes, undoubtedly harass the government to some extent. A twenty-five per cent increase in power rates would affect Ontario seriously in its competition with the other provinces for industries.

Other resolutions emanating from the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce to be presented at the annual meeting in North Bay are as follows:

1.—Whereas the adoption of daylight saving has in the past been anything but universal, and

Whereas the whole situation, as we experience it, each summer, is perplexing and confusing,

Therefore resolved that the Ontario Associated Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce petition the Provincial Government to bring legislation into effect which will make daylight saving operative throughout the province.

2.—Whereas upon the fishing of the province depends, in a large measure, the growth of tourist patronage; and

Whereas there is no closed season for angling for salmon trout, leading to indiscriminate taking in a manner that threatenes early extermination;

Therefore, resolved that the Ontario Associated Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce, in commending the Game and Fisheries Department for the special effort which is now being put forth to study up-to-date methods of fish propogation, do respectfully call the attention of the department to the above facts, trusting that, in their recommendations to the Department of Marine and Fisheries, they will request suitable legislation for the protection of salmon trout during the spawning season.

3.—Whereas it is advisable that a more expedient method than now exists should be devised for the collection of small debts owed by a debtor in one province to a creditor resident in another province;

Therefore resolved that the President be empowered to appoint a committee of five persons to enquire into and report to the executive committee as to whether or not it is practicable to have such legislation enacted by the various provinces as will

Veterans Of '98 Hold Re-union

HAVANA, Oct. 9 (A.P.)—Cuban and United States veterans of the war for independence of '98 clasped hands in re-union yesterday at the official opening of the 30th annual convention of the United Spanish War Veterans.

President Gerardo Machado Y. Morales, reviewing the progress of his country in the interval, said that she would welcome repeal of the Platt amendment, which gives the United States some supervision over Cuban affairs.

General John J. Garrity, commander of the Veterans, in responding to the welcome said that the cost in United States lives had been well justified by the later development of Cuba. "Now that wars are outlawed," he said, "let us hope that they remain forever outlawed, and let us believe that the rewards of international co-operation may be enjoyed."

NEW MINISTER GIVES ADDRESS TO CHURCH MEN

Rev. C. V. McLean Addresses St. Andrew's Men's Association For First Time.

ON CHURCH DUTIES.

Tells Them How Much Support Minister Expects From His Men.

Gathering for their first meeting of the Autumn season, over eighty members and friends of St. Andrew's Men's Association last night welcomed, and pledged thier support to the Rev. C. V. McLean, their new minister. While so doing, they found time to enjoy a most appetizing supper, provided by the central group of the Ladies' Aid under the convenorship of Mrs. Ivan Lillico; to earnestly applaud a violin and clarinet duet by Masters Barclay and Jack McKone (who were accompanied at the piano by Mrs. McKone) and to accord similar recognition to John Crane's self-accompanied vocal selection. The unanimous selection of Harry Tudhope to replace Dr. Cameron as treasurer, owing to the latter's departure for Ottawa, was the only business of the meeting.

Minister Welcomed.

President W. H. Dickin was a busy man both before and during the meeting for he made it a point to reach the hand of every visitor and make him feel at home—and he conducted the meeting in capable and pleasant manner. He it was who, during the course of the supper, voiced the Association's thanks to the ladies, mentioning the decorations of autumn leaves and flowers, and later carried out a nicely balanced program. He called upon Dr. A. Moir who, in turn, extended a sincere welcome to the new minister of St. Andrew's, the Rev. Mr. McLean. In so doing, Dr. Moir referred to the splendid work of Mr. McLean and his accomplishments and went on to bespeak for him the whole-hearted support of the association.

The Minister Speaks.

"Defining the Church" might well have been the title of the Rev. Mr. McLean's short address to the Association last night, for, in pointing out that the word "church" might have several meanings, each more comprehensive than its predecessor,

Drag Him Across Line

Huntingdon County Farmer Charged With Smuggling Aliens.

NOW OUT ON BAIL.

Troopers Said They Would Swear He Was Taken On U. S. Side.

(Special to The Examiner)

MONTREAL, Oct. 9.—How he was violently seized by United States immigration officers when he stepped off a country store gallery on to the street, on Canadian territory, stunned, handcuffed and dragged across the border into the States and there incarcerated on a charge of smuggling aliens, is the story told to-day by P. J. King of Glenelm, Huntingdon county.

The farmer said he had gone to James Oulmet's at Tolans Lines to see about getting help. Oulmet's place straddles the border.

"The trooper grabbed me. I don't know whether I got a kick or a bang with a butt or just an accidental bump on the head, but I was stunned and they handcuffed me and dragged me over the line by the wrists.

"When they got me well across, they stood me up and made me get into their car. I told them they were making a mistake assaulting me on Canadian territory, but one of them said 'There's enough of us here to swear we took you on our side.' The troopers took me to Malone where I was kept at the immigration office handcuffed all the time until next evening when I got preliminary hearing and was held in prison. I not being able to furnish $10,000 bail until I got a habeas corpus last Monday before Judge [illegible] H. Bryant. He reduced my bail to $3,000 and I got out on that on Saturday.

"Some of my friends in Huntingdon got up a petition to the Hon. James Roob, the member for our county but he does not seem to have done anything about it so far. I have three witnesses who have sworn that they saw the United States officers seize me on Canadian soil, handcuff me and drag me across. Now I am supposed to go back to Malone on October 30 to be tried."

King emphatically denied having ever smuggled an alien across the border.

TWO PREMIERS TO GIVE TALKS

MacKenzie King Will Discuss Development Before London Canadian Club.

BALDWIN ON EMPIRE.

LONDON, Oct. 9 (Canadian Press)—Premier Mackenzie King will speak on development matters at the Canadian Club tomorrow night, while the next evening Premier Baldwin is expected to deliver himself on Empire matters at large in a speech at Sheffield. It will be interesting to observe if one speech is intended as complementary to the other. The Morning Post approves the choice of Premier King's subject, expressing the belief that the Canadian Government has given the impression it does not want a free and abundant flow of British immigration.

Local Council Of Women

Appeal to the Citizens of Peterborough. Desire to Raise $1,000.00 as Share of National Foundation Fund.

The Foundation Fund Campaign now organized by the National Council of Women now brings to light many of the wonderful achievements of this active body of workers for the improvement of conditions among the Canadian women and children of to-day.

Many and varied are the achievements they have accomplished, notably among them stands the fact that through their effort the present Mothers' Allowance Act was passed....affording necessary relief to many needy mothers and dependent children.

The expert supervisor of playgrounds is another feature of the work of this body and associated groups of public-spirited women who are constantly devoting their time and effort gratuitously in an effort to better conditions among the needy in each community.

The National Council of Women is constructed of local councils across Canada, each council being divided into separate and co-operating committees formed to attend to each separate branch or phase of their work among local conditions.

To ensure the continuance of their excellent efforts the National Council of Women are now attempting to raise a Foundation Fund of $200,000.00 that will enable the local councils in each community to work in closer harmony with the councils in every city in Canada that all may benefit by the experiences of each local council.

Certainly the organization has demonstrated its ability to work for the common good of the women and children of Canada and for that reason the present campaign is deserving of support.

ITALY REPLIES TO PARIS NOTE ON ARMAMENT

Maintains Interdependence of the Different Forms of Armaments.

PROPOSES DISCUSSIONS.

Stresses Willingness To Co-operate In All Things For Limitation of Arms.

ROME, October 9 (Associated Press). — The Italian reply to the Franco-British proposals for limitation of naval armament, delivered on Saturday to the ambassadors in Rome proposes more sweeping discussion of all disarmament.

The Italian reply declares for a global limitation of tonnage instead of limitation by categories.

The note maintains the interdependence of the different forms of armaments, military, naval and aeronautical, and reaffirms the principles outlined by the chief of the government in his speech before the Senate last June, that disarmament conversations should include all branches of arms.

The willingness of Italy to concur and co-operate in all things that can make limitations an instrument capable of adding to the consolidation and reconstruction of Europe was stressed, it was her disposition to accept limitation of her own armaments.

By global limitation Italy believes that each state should have the right to use its established tonnage in the construction of naval types which it feels best answers its necessities.

Jeopardizes Attempts.

The tendency to increase the number of naval categories jeopardizes attempts to reach an accord and adds to the disadvantages of limitation.

Only by global limitation, said the note, is a less powerfully armed country permitted to adopt certain compensation for the superiority of others. This consideration gains value for Italy because of its special necessities for national defence because of natural conditions. These conditions are that Suez, Gibraltar, and the Dardanelles are Italy's only communication with the rest of the world, and the enormous development of her coast near which are located her centres of greatest importance.

The note also examined technical points raised by the Washington treaty, and later discussions of the problem.

ORONO FAIR GOOD.

Pontypool People Attend in Large Numbers—Ladies' Aid Meets.

(Examiner Correspondence).

PONTYPOOL, October 9.—A large number of the local citizens attended the Orono Fair, which was bigger and better than ever. The play given by Orono talent, entitled "The Live Ghosts," was a huge success, all the characters performing in an excellent manner before a packed house. Orchestra music was furnished between acts. The Durham Regimental Band is now wearing new uniforms and gave a very creditable performance in front of the grand stand.

Ladies' Aid Meets.

Mrs. E. Shaw entertained the members of the Ladies' Aid for the regular meeting held on Thursday afternoon. Owing to the temporary absence of the secretary, Miss Iva Shaw was appointed secretary pro tem. Considerable discussion took place in regard to the autograph quilt which will be sold at the fowl supper in connection with the anniversary services on October 28 and 29. Committees were chosen to make other necessary arrangements. At the conclusion of the meeting, a dainty supper was served by the hostess. The next meeting will be held at the parsonage.

Personals.

Miss Zella Fuller, New Park, returned to Toronto on Sunday after having spent her vacation under her parental roof.

Mr. John Payne and Miss Ida Payne were guests of friends in Bowmanville on Sunday.

A couple of old boys of Pontypool now residing in Peterborough, called in the town on Sunday and gave some very interesting history of the old town some fifty years ago.

Mr. M. E. Hinton and Mr. J. Payne motored to Nestleton recently to attend a meeting of the baseball league executive, which was held to settle a protest over game finals between Pontypool and Nestleton.

Word was received in the village of the death of Mr. E. Harper, a former resident of this locality. Mr. Harper sold his farm here a few years ago and moved to the States, where he lived with his daughters until his death.

Fire Prevention Week At Lakefield

(Examiner Correspondence)

LAKEFIELD, Oct. 9.—Next week is Fire Prevention Week and the fire chief has secured the co-operation of leading citizens in putting over a campaign in this regard.

The clergy, the teachers in the schools have all promised support and if the results are what they should be the object will be achieved. Canada has too large a yearly fire loss and an overwhelming number of losses are due to carelessness. If the individual is careful the losses will soon diminish and our country will become a more desirable place to live. It is up to the individual citizen to stand behind a campaign which costs him nothing but gains him a great deal.

NORHAM SCHOOL SHOWS UP WELL

White School Pupils Also Capture Prizes at Warkworth Fair.

NORHAM NEWS.

NORHAM, Oct. 9 (Examiner Correspondence).—Much disappointment was felt when Friday was such a wet day for Warkworth fair.

The pupils of the school who had practised very strenuously for the school events at the fair were at a great disadvantage, as only half of them were able to be present on account of the day.. Notwithstanding, under Miss Curtis' able leadership they made a good showing as milkmaids and farm lads and obtained third prize in the singing contest by singing "The Farmer's Boy."

The pupils of White School (Miss F. Clare, teacher) obtained first prize in singing, "Flow Gently Sweet Afton," accompanied by guitars, played by Lucille Palmateer, Frances Lean and Amy McNeilly; also first prize for physical drill and fourth prize in first aid. Much interest is shown by the parents in these school competitions.

Norham Girls Win

The Norham girls, who are attending Collegiate Institutes at a distance are keeping up their record in sport.

Miss Claire Curtis won first prize in the hurdle race and came second in a race at the field day at Picton Collegiate, while at Guelph Collegiate field day, Miss Ida Clare obtained the second highest number of points in girls' events and broke the record of the collegiate in the hop, skip and jump by three feet.

Anniversary Services

The anniversary services of the Norham Church have been postponed until October 28, on account of the Masonic service on October 21.

Personals

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Gummer returned on Monday after a week's visit in Toronto.

Miss Jean Diamond left on Wednesday for Oshawa, where she has the position of pupil dietician in the General Hospital.

Miss Della Diamond accompanied her sister to Oshawa on Wednesday.

Mrs. Bets and daughter of Rochester are visiting her mother, Mrs. Woddard, this week.

Miss Claire Curtis of Picton Collegiate, is spending the week-end at her home.

Miss Mildred Curtis of Norham school, and Miss Florence Clare of White school, attended the teachers' convention in Campbellford on Thursday.

Mrs. George Palmateer is ill.

A bad epidemic of colds has broken out in the neighborhood.

Willie and Randall Ireland of Cordova Mines are staying with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Pierson, and attending school.

BRETHREN HOLD ANNUAL CONCERT

Sunday School Treat Much Enjoyed By Little Ones.

(Examiner Correspondence).

BONARLAW, Oct. 9.—The Brethren held their annual Sunday School treat on Thursday, October 4, at the Gospel Hall on the 10th Concession of Rawdon. About two hundred were present, with forty-five children.

After tea was served to all present Arthur Smith, of Toronto, played several selections on the violin and also told some very interesting stories to the children. Mr. Bently also assisted Mr. Smith, and Messrs. Smith and Bently sang very beautifully together, "How Much I Owe." After the service James Gibson, superintendent of the Sunday School, presented each child with a beautiful scriptural card and also a bag of candies.

Mr. Smith returned to Toronto on Friday and Mr. Bently will remain for one week and hold meetings at the Gospel Hall.

The Weather

Almost every night there is a shower, and last night was no exception. In some portions of Western Ontario, along the shores of Lake Erie, the ground is too dry for plowing. Around Sault Ste. Marie, rains have been so frequent that grain crops cannot be harvested, and the potato crop is threatened with destruction. The same conditions prevail in some sections of New Ontario, farther north. I was told by a man who was on a fishing trip north of Gooderham (on the northern border of this country) that there was half an inch of snow one morning recently, and occasionally some of the grain trains passing through here from the north, carry snow on the roofs of the box cars. Highest temperature yesterday, 60 degrees; lowest last night, 38 degrees.—W.P.

Meteorological Office, Toronto, Oct. 8.—Pressure is high on the Atlantic Coast and over the Rocky Mountain States, while a fairly deep depression is passing eastward across Northern Ontario. Except for showers in Northern Ontario, the weather over the Dominion has been fair.

Probabilities.

Manitoba—Moderate westerly and north-westerly winds; fair and a little cooler.

Saskatchewan and Alberta—Moderate winds; mostly fair, with much the same temperature.

MASONS HOLD CHURCH PARADE

Marmora Lodge Attends St. Paul's Church For Annual Service.

SUITABLE SERMON.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MARMORA, Oct. 9.—The evening service at St. Paul's on Sunday was of a special character owing to the attendance of officers and members of Marmora A.F. and A.M. No. 222. Bro. Rev. A. B. Caldwell officiated.

An augmented choir was heard to great effect in W. K. E. Vincent's setting to Kipling's Recessional, the solo part being effectively taken by Mrs. S. B. Wright. The special psalm was the forty eighth while the lessons were Chron. 3 and 1 Cor. 3, preaching from "And the word was made flesh and dwelt among us." John 1, 14. Mr. Caldwell in part said "This is a day of change. New discoveries in the world of science have made this an entirely new world. Under such conditions as have arisen religion could not remain untouched. In that field changes tremendous in their significence have been going on apace. In such a time of change it is well to recall the great facts of life and religion and to remember that, in spite of new theories, new opinions and new attitudes these change very little.

In the words of the text, John gives us the basic facts of Christianity. Upon them stand the whole superstructure of Christian thought and life. What are these facts? The first fact is God. The second basic fact is Christ. The third is the one we are all so sure about—Man. There are many other great facts in our religion but these are the centre of all and occupying the most important position in the Christian scheme of things. Along with facts go theories. For every fact there is a theory. A theory is an attempt to explain a fact. It is not the fact and it is not nearly so important as the fact. In regard to the great facts of our religion, differences in theory almost as momentous have taken place. We may rest assured that those facts have not changed. What was real to the Apostle St. Paul and to the other apostles may be just as real to us. Bearing this in mind, let us look again at the old facts of our faith. Underlying John's philosophy is the fact of God. Without the fact of God there would be no meaning to life, let alone to Christianity. According to our training and our knowledge will be our conception of the nature of God but He is greater than all we can think or hope for. It is for this reason that we should not allow new discoveries or new theories to obscure Him. John's words give us the second great fact—Christ. There have been enough theories about Jesus of Nazareth to hide Him from our sight and some people have been more willing to fight for a theory than to follow Him in their lives.

His spirit has been lost in quarrels about His nature." After briefly outlining Christ's life and influence upon His followers the preacher continued 'Jesus is the greatest fact in history. He is perfect Man in whom God's thought is clear who is the measure of all things. The last words of our text speak of the third fact—Man.

Throughout history there is little difference in the essential man. We find almost the same questions agitating Him in the dawn of history as he ponders to-day although he now brings to these questions a greater show of knowledge and perhaps a little more wisdom. Man is still man and craves for fellowship and friendship. Out of this need we find societies growing up. Among the many societies, we find the order of Freemasonry" It has never professed to take the place of the Christian Church. Eighty-five per cent. of its membership however are members of the various branches of the Christian Church Freemasonry exalts the Bible and looks upon it as its great light. It

CASE ORDERED SETTLED TO-DAY

New Bolts Must Be Put In and Money Paid, Judge Declares.

MANY WITNESSES.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, October 9. — Not later than to-day there must be eight new bolts in the stables of Robert Cleugh, farmer, on the Eighth Concession of Seymour. The order arose out of a judgment in favor of the Louden Machinery Company of Guelph, given by Judge Huycke on April 11 last. The judgment provided that the money be paid as soon as the bolts which were considered faulty were properly replaced. There were twenty in number, and it appears that only twelve have been changed. Judge Huycke, in a special session of the Court yesterday afternoon expressed the opinion that the eight bolts did not amount to as much as eight hills of beans, but ordered that they be replaced nevertheless.

Harry Wickett, hardware merchant of Stirling, was the first witness called. He stated that he was the local representative of the Louden Machinery Company, and had seen the stanchions in question. The twenty bolts had been sent to him, and he had asked Cleugh if he would put them in himself, Cleugh had agreed to do so, and the bolts were forwarded to him unopened. He could not say whether there were twenty or twenty-five.

C. W. Pilkey, salesman for the Louden Company, said that he had visited the Cleugh farm and put in eight or nine new bolts. This had left the stanchions in first-class condition. He also claimed that he was about to change others, but that Cleugh said they would be all right. When he visited the farm yesterday he found that two of the bolts he had put in had been changed for two older ones.

Found Job Satisfactory.

John Wallace, the third witness, said he had visited the farm and inspected the job yesterday morning. He found nothing wrong, but a couple of loose clips. In his opinion the job was satisfactory. He had been a far-

REV. D. R. CLARE NEW CHAIRMAN

Elected at Annual Meeting of Cobourg Presbytery, Held at Welcome.

MUCH BUSINESS DONE.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

NORHAM, Oct. 9.— The autumn meeting of the Cobourg Presbytrey was held at Welcome Tuesday, Oct. 2nd, when a large representation from the various charges was present, and only two charges failed to report, Campbellford and Cobourg King Street.

Rev. J. T. I. Wilson, B.A., B.D., chairman, of Brighton, opened the morning session with devotional exercises, assisted by the secretary, Rev. J. G. McKee, B.A., of Baltimore, Rev. W. Down, of Centreton. and Rev. Sisco, B.A., of Port Hope.

Upon calling for the election of officers the following were elected to serve the presbytery for the coming year: Chairman, Rev. D. R. Clare, B.A., B.D., Norham; secretary, Rev. J. G. McKie, B.A., Baltmore; treasurer, Rev. J. F. Lane, Canton.

The various commitees of the presbytery were appointed, of which the Maintenance and Missions committee was of prime importance. The presbytery was divided into four divisions and vice-chairmen were named for each section as follows: Rev. W. W. Jones, B.D., Millbrook; Rev. J. W. Tanton, Cobourg; Rev. Harold Neal, Wooler; Rev. D. R. Clare, B.A., B.D., Norham.

The Presbytery was so successful in its efforts to raise funds last year that upon an urgent plea from Dr. Laird, of Toronto, a 3 p.c. increase was accepted, raising the allotment from $38,500 to $40,000.

Matters pertaining to the new church at Codrington, Norham charge, and also affecting Roseneath charge, were considered.

It was deceided to increase the regular meetings to four: June for organization; November for finances and spiritual plans; February for new year's problems; April for pre-conference work.

The November meeting held at Smithfield this year will be set aside for social service, temperance and evangelism, and for religious education among the young, for which a day of special council was set aside, Oct. 19, at Colborne, beginning at 10 a.m.

The presbytery was pleased to view the new parsonage at Welcome during the noon hour. Appreciation of the services of last year's officers and the Welcome ladies was noted. The delegates returned home full of inspiration and optimism for a good year's work in the United church.

The most noteworthy point in connection with the meeting was the spirit of unity and fellowship that prevaded all the sessions of the presbytery.

CHIEF NEWHALL SPEAKS OUT.

Chief Newhall's warning to reckless and careless motorists is timely.

"I am prepared to go the limit from this out to check reckless driving," the head of the police department declared yesterday in announcing that constables are to be put in plain clothes to round up the offenders.

In this course the police will have the backing of hundreds of careful motorists, as well as of the public generally.

The driver who obeys the law himself and drives sensibly and carefully realizes that the other type of motorist is a general menace and should be eliminated.

We have in Peterborough many drivers whose operation of their cars is above reproach, but we have, on the other hand, a percentage of irresponsible and reckless people driving automobiles whose actions suggest that they are mentally unfit for the responsibility.

It is with them Chief Newhall proposes to deal, and he may go ahead with his campaign fortified with the feeling that public opinion is behind him.

THE SCHOOL FAIR.

The interest that has been shown in the various school fairs conducted throughout Peterborough County is due to reach a climax this week when the County Championship Fair is being held as a feature of the Norwood Fair.

In this final competition the winners from all the school fairs in the county come together, and the results will be eagerly awaited in all parts of Peterborough County.

The popularity of such fairs is a very healthy sign. Undoubtedly they are doing much to keep before the eyes of rural school pupils the advantages and benefits of agriculture, and to keep alive among them an interest in the farm, a development that merits commendation in these days when the drift cityward gives good reason for alarm.

The school fair plan deserves to succeed, and apparently is doing so to a degree that should give general satisfaction.

As for the Peterborough County competition, those pupils who emerge victorious from the final tests at Norwood will have every right to feel elated.

WHERE CARE IS NEEDED.

At the corner of George and Murray streets is a sign calling attention to the fact that that territory is in a school zone.

Yet around that same corner yesterday afternoon, just a minute or so after the Central School pupils had been dismissed for the day, swung a car, operated by a woman driver, at a speed that would have been dangerous at any intersection, but at that particular point might easily have resulted in a very serious accident.

Fortunately, no children happened to be on the road at the moment; the driver could not have prevented an accident if there had been any one crossing.

There is no excuse for that kind of driving, particularly in a school zone, and at a time when the streets are full of small children.

And, unfortunately, as The Examiner pointed out the other day, the incident is not an isolated one.

The signs designating school zones are disregarded by a large percentage of motorists.

They will be disregarded until a few licenses are suspended, as was done in the case of a Toronto offender of this type.

UP TO THE HOUSEHOLDER.

Fire Chief Gimblett, pointing out that 85 per cent. of fires occur in dwelling houses, is asking citizens generally to co-operate with his department in rendering Peterborough's homes free from fire hazards.

The inspection service carried on by the fire department solves the problem so far as business places and factories are concerned, but there is no inspection of dwelling houses.

Therefore, Chief Gimblett urges citizens to see to it that conditions likely to cause fires in their homes are eliminated, and he promises his assistance and advice to all who wish to consult him in regard to the matter.

Any householder who is in doubt as to what should be done about the elimination of fire hazards can have the benefit of the chief's advice by calling up the fire department and making his wishes known.

The vast majority of fires are the result of carelessness, and could be prevented so far as dwelling houses are concerned by a thorough cleaning up of fire hazards and by care and caution on the part of members of the household.

Every week a fire prevention week, is a slogan that might profitably be adopted by the community.

THIS SHOULD NOT HAVE BEEN.

On all hands keen regret and not a little criticism was voiced at the absence of any of Canada's army fliers during the recent visit of the flight of United States airmen to Toronto. The invitation to join in welcoming and entertaining the visitors was extended to the Department of National Defence, it is understood, but this important branch of the Canadian government was not represented.

According to one of the daily newspapers, the reason given was that the department frowns on "stunting" by army fliers. If this was the only excuse, it hardly holds water, for such air evolutions would have been entirely unnecessary. Formation flying can hardly be termed "stunting," and the presence of a flight from Camp Borden would have strengthened the gesture of international friendliness so gracefully made by the Canadian National Exhibition. Perhaps the department would explain more fully their action in the matter.

In this regard the remarks of Colonel Charles Danforth, commandant of Selfridge Field, whence the visiting fliers came, are significant. "In the States," he observed, "we take a little different view as to how our air corps should be moved around. Almost every week we send planes out into every State. We are encouraging our cities to build municipal airports, and some small cities are building airports costing a quarter of a million dollars. We think our planes belong to our people; the fliers are only the public servants."

Granted that our army air force is small; granted that a number of pilots from Camp Borden were on leave at the time. It still appears to many who have brought the matter to our attention that some special effort might have been made by the department to have extended this small courtesy to the fliers from across the line. Where possible, in this particular, the department should consider following along similar lines to those pursued by the military authorities in the United States. Let our people see our army machines and appreciate the efficiency of our army pilots. Civil aviation and the establishment of municipal airports can be encouraged by such a policy.—Canadian Aviation.

HOW MANY FEET IN A SECOND?

Charles Hopewell, police magistrate, of Ottawa, Can., contributed to a recent bulletin of the Ottawa Automotive Club a suggestion for motorists which, if universally followed, would no doubt effect a marked change for the better in automobile statistics. "Cease to think in terms of miles and hours," writes Magistrate Hopewell, "and think in terms of feet and seconds. . . . If an object suddenly crosses your path fifty feet ahead from where you are sitting at the wheel and you are travelling thirty miles per hour, you have only one second in which to act to avoid an accident, and only half a second if the object is only twenty-five feet away." Illustrating his advice by figures, Magistrate Hopewell points out that an automobile travelling fifteen miles an hour is covering twenty-two feet a second; at twenty miles an hour it is covering twenty-nine feet a second; at twenty-five miles, thirty-six feet; at thirty miles, forty-four feet; at thirty-five miles, fifty-one feet; at forty miles, fifty-eight feet; at forty-five miles, sixty-six feet. What should, therefore, be constantly in the motorist's thought is the time limit which his speed is setting for him should an emergency rise up before him.

Experienced drivers will generally agree that this is good advice; many might probably add that they have found it out for themselves. But the statistics show by inference a considerable proportion of drivers who give no thought whatever to the number of feet that a car goes in a second. Cars are driven both responsibly and irresponsibly, carefully and carelessly. The responsible driver must needs be vigilant to protect his passengers and himself against the irresponsible and careless. A driver whose perception is trained in terms of feet and seconds is far more likely to have his own car in constant actual control, and to be quicker to judge the speed and behavior of an irresponsible, than is one who thinks in terms of miles and hours. It is not space and time behind but space and time immediately in front that he may have to reckon with. As things are, a good many drivers, as they come to hear of it, will no doubt adopt Magistrate Hopewell's suggestion, and one may believe that he has thus prevented a good many mishaps that might otherwise have occurred.—Christian Science Monitor.

BRITISH ELECTION TO BE CHEERY ONE.

We have not yet arrived at the happy art of fighting elections in this country as they fight them in the Old Land, although the London Free Press recalls the campaign of 1896 when Ruthven MacDonald toured the country with Laurier and a quartet rendered songs to the big crowds. The English managers have devised a number of campaign songs which will be put over to capture the woman's vote, if possible. Perhaps a counterpart is found in the "Sidewalks of New York" in the presidential race, but the song festival is not nearly equal what will be staged in England.

The English politicians are planning to make use of the song on a large scale. The song sheets already issued contain 31 traditional songs which every community knows well. The Conservative version of John Brown's body ends with the following mouthful of a stanza:

Hurrah! for Austen Chamberlain,
Hurrah! for Joynson-Hicks,
Three cheers for Winston Churchill
And our party's politics.
Hurrah! again for these fine men,
Our country's golden bricks,
Who with Baldwin go marching on.

"Mademoiselle from Armentieres" becomes "Mademoiselle of 1928." Here are two verses:

Mademoiselle and all you dears,
Parley vous,
Haven't had a vote for twenty years,
Parley vous,
She's twenty-one and now you see,
She has a vote like you and me,
Inky, pinky, parley vous.

Mr. Baldwin thought in time,
Parley vous,
To bring the ladies into line,
Parley vous,
Along with the men an equal vote
If only to stop the Socialist's dope,
Inky, pinky, parley vous.

The question of equal franchise has also inspired a parody of "Here's to the Maiden of Bashful Fifteen." It is called "Girls of the Baldwin Brigade," and begins:

Here's to the maiden of sweet 21
And here's to the matron of 30,
Here's to the widow of young 45
And here's to the flapper of 60.

Chorus:
Give them the vote! Give them the vote!
And I'll warrant they'll vote right and Tory.

An extra chorus in honor of the Prime Minister has been added to "The Old Brigade." Conservatives are exhorted in the following terms:

Then march along, we'll fight and win for Baldwin,
March along, a noble fight we'll make;
March, march along, sturdy and strong,
The boys of the Young Brigade.

—St. Catharines Standard.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The Toronto Flying Club leads in the matter of flying hours. And this, we understand, does not take account of the number of times Mayor McBride has been up in the air.

The weather did something yesterday that the St. Louis Cardinals have been unable to accomplish. It prevented the Yanks from winning a scheduled World's Series game.

A Thought

LUCK

"You're in luck!" How often we hear that! Well, there is such a thing as luck—things do break our way; but luck is too tricky to trust Earnest thought, strong concentration, and hard work are very good substitutes for luck, and are far more stable.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

TORONTO, Oct. 9.—With another fairly heavy run, trade opened slowly. Choice cattle of all classes are selling steady at unchanged prices. A better feeling seems to be in evidence on cows.

Sales on choice butcher steers were made at $10.50 and some better class medium and common types are not moving rapidly. All poorer classes are left to the last.

Choice fancy cows reached $9. All good quality cows tend towards better prices. Heiferish cows sell as high as $10.

There is quite a number of prospective buyers for stockers and feeders on the market. Prices are steady with choice steers at $10.50, and yearling steers at $10.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Oct. 9 (Canadian Press).—The foreign demand for grain here yesterday was quiet and the only business transacted was the sale of a few loads of wheat and barley to the United Kingdom.

There was some inquiry from local exporters for Manitoba barley in the spot market and several loads of No. 4 grade were sold at 10¾c per bushel over the Winnipeg October option and feed barley changed hands at 4½c over, c.i.f., Montreal. A moderate trade was done in car lots and prices were firm.

In sympathy with the further strength displayed in the Winnipeg cash wheat market a stronger feeling developed in the local spring wheat flour situation and prices were marked up ten cents per barrel. The demand was fair. Prices for winter wheat flour were steady under a fair inquiry.

A fairly active trade was done in all lines of millfeed and values were firm. The tone of the market for standard grades of rolled oats was firm with a steady trade passing.

Prices for all grades of fresh and storage eggs were fully maintained under a good demand. The receipts were 497 cases.

Owing to the increasing scarcity of imported beans on spot and the very limited supplies on the way, a much stronger feeling developed in the market and prices were advanced twenty to thirty cents per bushel. Sales of small lots of choice white hand-picked were made at $4.50 to $4.60 per bushel, ex-store, and car lots to arrive were quoted at $4.40 to $4.50 per bushel, ex-track.

The undertone to the butter market was steady with a moderate amount of business passing. The receipts were 440 packages.

The trade in cheese was fair under a good demand from English importers and local buyers. The receipts were 5,283 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, October 9 (Canadian Press).—Confronted by announcement of United States visible supply figures of record-breaking size for this time of the year, the wheat market yesterday toppled over. A huge increase of 6,530,000 bushels for last week made the total 116,377,000 bushels compared with only 90,936,000 bushels a year ago. The fact that government crop report from Washington is due to-day appeared also to have a bearish influence.

Closing quotations on wheat were heavy, 3-4 cents to 1 cent net lower. Corn finished 5-8 cents to 1.3-8 cents down, oats 1-8 cent to ½ cent off, and provisions varying from 15 cents decline to a rise of 55 to 57 cents.

In addition to the bearish effect of the figures on domestic stocks of wheat in sight, increasing the total much more than had generally been expected, advices were also at hand that 1928 production of wheat in 31 countries will probably aggregate 3,232,139,000 bushels against 2,996,190,000 bushels in 1927.

Under such circumstances, price upturns which had been witnessed earlier in the day were more than wiped out, and the close was at almost the bottom level reached, despite word that a fair amount of export business was being done in wheat from North America, both Canadian and domestic. Number 2 hard winter wheat from the United States, however, was said to be yet out of line for export.

An unlooked for upward swing of the Liverpool wheat market yesterday was largely responsible for temporary gains scored here. Liverpool stocks of wheat were reported as being rapidly reduced, with no offerings obtainable there except at higher prices.

Moreover, houses with foreign connections were at times conspicuous buyers of wheat future deliveries here, and talk was current that world consumption of wheat is increasing. On the other hand, hedging sales from the north-west enlarged yesterday when prices bulged, and buying power thereafter proved to be inadequate.

Notwithstanding, 1,300,000 bushels decrease of the corn visible supply, corn values gave way yesterday under persistent selling from recent supporters of the market. The selling appeared to be largely in the nature of profit-taking, but notice was also taken that the country was selling new corn in fair-sized lots on any little rise in prices. Oats were easier, sympathising with corn and wheat.

Except in a few cases, the provision market went lower yesterday, influenced by set-backs in the value of hogs.

BUTTER AND EGGS.

TORONTO, Oct. 9.—Due to decreasing receipts and the continued good demand on the part of the consumers, the wholesale egg market was firmer yesterday in Toronto. The firmer quotations applied both to the buying and selling divisions of the market. One of the largest wholesale produce houses in Toronto were quoting to country shippers a flat rate of 44c a dozen for fresh extras, 41c for fresh firsts and 33c for seconds, and expressed the opinion that a further price change in the direction of higher quotations was probable some time during the present week. In selling, there was a 2c rise in the quotations to retail dealers on fresh extras in cartons, 53c being quoted. Fresh extras, loose, were up 2c to 50c a dozen, fresh firsts up 1c to 46c on the best grade, fresh seconds up 1c to 37c to 38c.

MANY HERE END FALL COLDS QUICK WAY DOCTORS ADVISE

Get Instant Relief Instead of Added Misery Caused by Neglect of Proper Treatment

Goes Straight to Seat of Head or Chest Cold and Quickly Drives It Out of System

Urging the need to "play safe in dealing with a cold during this changeable weather," doctors are now advising home use of a pleasant and inexpensive hospital method that has given almost instant relief to vast numbers of people in Peterborough, Lindsay, and vicinity.

Pleasant Taste—Quick Relief —Then Cold Just Disappears

Chas. G. Miller, for example, neglected a head cold several days in the hope it would clear up without treatment. Instead, it started spreading. Realizing that he was sure to feel worse and might ...k pneumonia, he called his doctor, who advised double strength doses of Aye... Cherry Pectoral — a hospital certific remedy of wild cherry, terpin hydrate ,and other ingredients used in treating even the most extreme hospital cases.

Relief began with the first pleasant swallow. He felt the healing, comforting warmth as it was absorbed by his system, loosening up congestion and clearing up his nose, throat, and chest. In a few hours the "feverish," "achy" feeling was gone, and in a day or so the cold had disappeared entirely.

Mother Ended Child's Cough Before Doctor Arrived

Mrs. P. C. Murphy 'phoned her doctor late at night when her little daughter, Louise, coughed hard and started running a temperature. He advised her to have a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral sent up immediately from the drug store and promised to call the next day.

Little Louise loved the pleasant taste, and it stopped her coughing spell almost instantly. Soon she was sound asleep and awoke the next morning feeling like a different child. The treatment was continued as the doctor directed, and in a day or so she was out playing—as well as ever.

Note: Other cases reported daily—all certified by attending physician.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral quickly penetrates and heals inflamed linings of the air passages. Absorbed by the system it helps allay congestion and drive out the cold from the nose passages, throat and chest.

Just a few pleasant spoonfuls of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral now and you, too, will feel like a different person to-morrow. At all druggists—60c and twice as much in $1.00 hospital size.

TEACHERS' TRAINING COURSE IS CLOSED

Final Session Featured By Address On Prayer—Certificates Presented.

The closing session of the Bridgenorth Teacher Training School was held in the United Church on Friday night.

Mrs. White's topic was prayer. A child cannot pray to God until he loves God. He cannot love until he knows. He cannot know until someone links his consciousness of God with his world of experiences.

The child can know God through nature. God at one time was the only living being in the universe. He wasn't satisfied to be alone, so He made the world and all that it contains, fishes, animals and man, providing food for man and beast. All this can be made plain to a little child.

The elements that enter into prayer are: Petition, thanksgiving, intercession, confession and adoration.

The work of training children is a great work. The cradle roll child learns first from his parents, then from his teachers. It is personality that counts in training children. Certain questions teachers should ask themselves, What is my mental capacity? What is my personal and social equipment? What expenditure of time and effort am I prepared to make? What am I doing to reach a high standard of efficiency?

Teaching is primarily a relationship of persons. We teach not lessons but children, and we teach less by what we say than what we are. This is the statement of Professor Langford.

Rev. T. M. Wesley, continuing his subject, "Teaching values of the Old Testament," said we had to select the material for the various grades, and to make use of the story of the Old Testament, also the biographies, and to study the historical and social problems.

The closing exercises were conducted by A. B. Burrows, of Lakefield. He called upon Rev. J. O. Totten to present the certificates to the successful students, namely: Misses Helen Jopling, Pauline Udy, Lily Udy, Miss Harrison, Miss McCall of Lakefield, Mrs. Albert Northey, and Mr. P. T. Udy.

Short addresses were given by the two teachers, Mrs. Norman White and Rev. T. M. Wesley, also remarks were made by Rev. J. O. Totten, Rev. W. S. Edgar and A. B. Burrows.

CARS COLLIDE.

Two Automobiles Damaged in Crash On Front Street, Campbellford.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, October 9. — Two cars crashed at the north end of the Front Street business section about three o'clock yesterday afternoon. It appears that a coach driven by a young lady of this town was proceeding north along Front Street when the nose of a touring car appeared from the line of parked cars. The lady applied her brakes, but was unable to stop her car in time to prevent a crash. Her car, however, suffered the greater damage, and was driven away with a pair of bent fenders and a damaged running board. The lighter car fared more fortunately, and suffered only minor damages to the left front wheel and fender.

SOCIAL EVENING HELD BY B.Y.P.U.

Campbellford Young People Open Season's Meetings—Splendid Address.

BY REV. J. H. SUTCLIFFE.

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 9.—Members of the Baptist Young People's Union spent a very pleasant and instructive evening in the Sunday school rooms of the church last night. The event was a banquet and entertainment. The Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe, Water street, Peterborough, was the speaker of the evening and his remarks were received with much applause and appreciation by the fifty members and friends present at the function.

The banquet was the chief attraction for the first part of the program and those present made manifest their appreciation in a very realistic manner. In order to give everyone an opportunity to move their chairs to any desired postion before the speakers and regular program began, there was a brief singsong led by Mr. Thompson and with the Rev. L. M. Smith at the piano A brief period of devotion in charge of the president followed the singsong and preceded Mr. Smith's introduction of the Reverent Sutcliffe. Mr. Smith explained that the Rev. J. L. Horton, of Peterborough, had been asked and had accepted the invitation to address the gathering, but unfortunately he had been suddenly taken ill and was under the doctor's care. It was Mrs. Smith who had suggested that the case be laid before the Rev. Mr. Sutcliffe and who had felt certain that he would come. The young people, Mr. Smith thought, greatly appreciated the excellent spirit in which the last minute invitation had been accepted and he felt sure that what Mr. Sutcliffe had to say would be of vital interest to every person present. Mr. Smith also welcomed Mr. and Mrs. Campbell who had accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Sutcliffe from Peterborough.

The first number on the program proper was a vocal solo by Mr. Sutcliffe. His accompaniment was played by the Rev. L. M. Smith. Donald Lloyd's recitation was the next feature and won the lad a place of envy in many an older mind. Donald is a boy of nine years and his elocution was most interesting. He has none of the childish manner which might be expected from one so young. His number was "Our Minister's Sermon," a lengthy affair and extremely humorous and containing more than a little truth. He gave as an encore, "Other Fruits." A solo by Mr. Thompson and the president's remarks followed.

Mr. Gilford, the president, expressed his pleasure at the good attendance and hoped that it would continue throughout the year. He recalled the fact that the Union had ended last year with a flourish and so far this season had indicated an even more successful winter. All the young people, and the older ones as well, were invited and welcome to attend the meetings. Next Monday evening, the topic would be taken by the minister, he said.

Applause greeted the Rev. Sutcliffe as he rose to speak. His remarks began in a decidedly humorous trend leaning mostly to narratives of an entertaining nature.

Some Idea of Value

Then Mr. Sutcliffe became more serious and said that his desire was to give the young people some idea of their worth in the world and exactly what the young people's organization was for. He owed much to the Young People's Union, he claimed and gave that as the reason for accepting the invitation to address the Campbellford branch last night. He had never met the minister here although he had often seen him. His desire to become acquainted with Mr. Smith was another reason for his appearance here. He was greatly in love with the work among young people and derived his greatest joy from it. The church, he claimed, needed young people and always had. But it needed young people who had definite ideals and who would become leaders in the church. There was a great need for leaders in the church. Young people of to-day were too prone to measure sucess from a material angle. They desired medals and material display of achievement. This could not be found among the young people in church work. Aside from a button or certificate for regular attendance there was nothing material to be gained. There were various reasons why young people attended the meetings. The girls came because some of the boys might be there. The reverse was also the case. Others came because they had nothing more exciting to do. Again there were others who only attended the social evenings once each month. These were not ideals, but merely poor excuses. There must be interest for the cause of christianity in their attendance.

Leaders Must Mature

Leaders were not common among the younger people. They were something like flowers. Just as it is impossible to go out and pick a flower at will, so it is impossible to pick a leader. As a flower must first grow before it can be selected and picked, so a leader must mature before he can be chosen to take charge of affairs. And this took time. Mushroom growth was not the sign of a good leader. The only way to become great was to "Stick to it and stick to it a long time." This point, Mr. Sutcliffe illustrated by a reference to President Garfield, who had once said that a large squash might grow in a few weeks, but an oak required years, perhaps a century. There were those who sprang into prominence suddenly and who thought they ruled the world, but they were mistaken. To rely on such as these was the same as relying on a quack doctor in time of illness.

A real leader must believe in himself if he were to achieve results. He must not be pessimistic. There were already too many pessimists in the world and in churches, it did not require any great length of time before the pastor of the church had the pessimists listed. The church's need was for young people who would actually do the work. A pessimist, said Mr. Sutcliffe, had once been described as a person who hovered under the tree of life and nibbled at the unripened fruit. It was only natural that the bitter taste would make him curse the tree. At this point, Mr. Sutcliffe paid glowing tribute to the accomplished young orator, Donald Lloyd, who had received such favorable hearing earlier in the evening. There was no use, he said, in trying to learn Latin or Greek, or anything else late in life. The proper time was in the earlier years. Later it became practically impossible to master these things. The day of vision of the older people had passed with their youth.

Just as Napoleon Bonaparte had believed in himself and achieved such success, so any other person could become prominent. It was necessary to have faith in oneself. He must be wholehearted, enthusiastic and must persevere. He must be able to overcome obstacles and not quit when he received the first hard blow. This he illustrated by a sketch of the present world series baseball, in which the Yankees have covered themselves with glory after it had been predicted that they would probably lose "four straight." Instead they had won three games and were expected to win the fourth. Then, after relating some personal experiences, Mr. Sutcliffe closed by stating that happiness came to those who were successful in weathering the storm.

The president of the Young People's Union spoke a few brief words of appreciation to Mr. Sutcliffe and also to those who had in any way assisted in making the evening such an outstanding success. A solo by Mr. Gifford and the National Anthem closed the entertainment, a most successful event from every angle.

BRUCE OPENS ELECTION TOUR

Defies Extremists to Disrupt Empire By Fomenting Various Troubles.

ANNOUNCES AIR PROGRAM.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Oct. 9 (Canadian Press Cable). — The Australian government has thrown down the gauge of battle to the extremists who are seeking to disrupt the Empire, declared Premier Stanley Bruce in the opening speech of his election campaign tour to-day. Discussing the strike of the dock workers which has been in progress for some weeks, the Prime Minister said extremists by fomenting trouble were working insidiously to overthrow national institutions, and said the government was determined to keep the Empire united and to maintain law supreme in Australia.

Premier Bruce said the government's defence program would be directed towards the extension of the Air Force, as recommended in the report to the government by Air Vice-Marshal Sir John Salmond of Britain. The extensions would cost close to six million dollars as recommended, and if financially possible will be carried out for the first three years.

The Premier also said the government was opposed to unrestricted immigration. It proposed a state conference on questions of transport, social legislations, and the development of electric power resources, and also was in favor of an extended agreement granting a reciprocal preferential tariff treatment on Australian and British goods.

A torch has been devised that can cut steel in a sunken ship at any depth.

News From the Mines

Solloway, Mills & Company

Pandora Gold Mines

A crosscut on the 100-foot level recently encountered the vein which shows a width of over five feet with visible gold. Shaft sinking was started on the vein and at a depth of between forty and fifty feet the deposit dipped out. Operations are to be suspended temporarily in order to enable the installation of new equipment to take place as speedily as possible.

Amulet

Our field man in Rouyn reports that one diamond drill is now working from the first level exploring "C" ore body. Just recently a drift through the top of this body intersected seventy feet of good grade ore, twenty feet of which was massive chalcopyrite. The present program calls for drilling this body from eight diamond drill stations, three holes being put down from each station with the same set-up.

One diamond drill is working from surface, immediately above "C", drilling a vertical hole which had already been put down under a previous program to a depth of five hundred feet. This hole will be extended to fifteen hundred feet in depth. Ore has already been indicated below "C" ore body. About 450 feet vertical depth a section of some ten feet mixed zinc and copper was intersected last fall. There are chances of another body underlying "C".

It is also intended to diamond drill "D" ore body 50 feet northwest of the shaft. This body was mostly copper with the bottom of the drift looking the best. There are chances of a nice amount of ore being opened up here.

The north showing is not being drilled at present. The management know that they have ore there, but have not the time to trouble with it. Work immediately around the shaft is taking up all their attention.

Jock McGregor is now back and will conduct an exploratory campaign looking for new ore, whilst A. J. Anderson will open up those already found. It is intended to have five drills working from the surface.

The shaft sinking has been resumed. About eight feet is being made daily. Three weeks should see the sinking finished, when drives will be made to "B," "C," and "D."

Mining Briefs

A Special Service to The Examiner

A directors' meeting of the Pawnee Kirkland Gold Mines was held recently, and it was decided to concentrate development on their main vein system and cease lateral work on the new vein. It will be remembered that Pawnee was driving a long crosscut to the north of the main system in the hope of picking up a new vein which was discovered on surface.

September was a record month for International Nickel smelter, according to a wire received from the north this morning. It was stated that the smelter handled 75,000 tons of Creighton ore during that period.

Good progress is being made with the new shaft at Noranda, the workings now being around 25 feet depth. It is thought that the shaft will go down about five feet every 24 hours once the workings are under way in earnest. It was stated that in two shots taken recently, about nine feet of rock was taken away in one and about seven feet in the other. Present equipment is good for going down to about 450 to 500 feet where new plant will have to be installed. The objective is 1,000 feet. The shaft is at present in very good formation, and owing to its location it is known that any ore that may be encountered will be entirely new.

Few people know that Northern Ontario is not the only portion of the province where gold mining operations are carried on. It is now learned that a gold mining company, the Rich Rock Gold Mines, Ltd., former to take over the Cobalt Frontenac property, has carried on operations in Hastings, about 150 miles from Toronto. Development is underway on a large scale. A dam has been built and abundant water power is available. There are three known veins on the property, all of which are stated officially to show good values over good widths at the 100-foot level. A modern 250-ton mill is on the property and substantial ore is already said to have been blocked out. Prominent mining men have reported favorably on this property, among these being N. E. Odell, J. E. Hardman, W. E. Simpson, A.R.S.M.; W. G. Anderson and the Ontario Department of Mines. Further details will be forthcoming shortly.

The Decline in Kirkland Lake Gold

Officials of Kirkland Lake Gold Mines report that conditions at the property continue satisfactory. The workings at the 2975 foot level are proceeding but have not as yet got under the enrichment opened up at upper horizons. News that the enrichment has been encountered should be forthcoming any day now.

Gold values were encountered at the 2975 foot level much sooner than at upper horizons, almost at the commencement of the drive along the ore zone from the end of the crosscut from the winze. This material ran $3 to $4 per ton at the first, but has lately improved to $9.00 per ton. Further along the line of the drive at the next level above the ore body widened to 20 feet in places, averaging better than $20 per ton.

During September, a considerable proportion of the ore put through the mill was the low grade ore encountered first on the 2975 foot level, which accounted for relatively low millheads. Possibly, this accounts for the decline that has occurred in the stock on the market. This, however, was but a transient phase in the development of the mine. The policy of the company is to put through the mill all pay ore as it comes from development.

Keeley Driving on 500-ounce Ore Body at 1425-Foot Level, it is Reported

Favorable news on developments at Keeley Silver Mines at depth came by wire to the city yesterday morning. Drifting is proceeding along the vein at the 1425 foot level and the drive continues in ore averaging 500 ounces to the ton. This work is being done from the Mining Corporation workings. This ore body is growing in importance. The stock sold at 42 yesterday morning.

At the recent annual meeting of Keeley, Dr. Whitehouse, consulting engineer, referred to the excellent geographical conditions indicated at the Keeley at the lower contact of this diabase.

Questioned regarding this report, an official of the company stated that the company was drifting on an encouraging vein at the 1425 foot horizons. He stated further that they had some 1,000 feet further to go before they got under the expected favorable zone in the lower contact. Encouraging results already obtained in extending the workings from Mining Corporation ground into Keeley ground at this low horizon opens up very interesting possibilities.

International Nickel's Frood Smelter Might Do Customs Business for Mond's Frood Extension Enterprise and Greatly Benefit Both Parties

While denials have been made by Lord Melchett, chairman of Mond Nickey Company that merger proceedings are under way between that company and International Nickel Company, that does not eliminate the possibility of a working agreement between the two companies, regarding the Frood and Frood Extension properties. The Frood and Frood Extension properties not only lie side by side, but the Frood, which is owned by International Nickel Company, surrounds Frood Extension on three sides. They have a common ore body. A shaft has been sunk on each property to a depth of below 3000 feet, to open up the massive high grade capper-nickel platinum zone common to them both.

International Nickel is building a huge plant and electrolytic copper smelter at the mouth of the Frood shaft. The dimension of the Frood Extension ore body warrants building of another large smelter of similar design at the top of the Frood Extension shaft. Would it not be more economical and a good stroke of business if an agreement was made whereby International Nickel Company's smelter handled the ore from the Frood Extension on a customs basis? This would save Mond Nickel a large outlay for smelter construction and represent at the same time a substantial revenue for International Nickel from customs business. The two shafts, one on the Frood and the other on the Frood Extension if connected at depth, would furnish ideal facilities for development and hoisting ore on a tremendous scale.

Comment On The Market

Canadian Brewing Sales Up.

Sales of Canadian Brewing so far in the current year have been running well ahead of those of the preceding year and this has been particularly so in the recent months, when the showing has been altogther pleasing to the management. At the end of the previous fiscal period Canadian Brewing was in an exceptionally strong liquid position, and this has been further built up as a result of the year's activities

U.S. Cotton Estimate.

The Department of Agriculture announced yesterday that a cotton crop of 13,933,000 equivalent 500 pound bales is indicated for this year, and that the condition of the crop on October 1 was 54.4 per cent. of a normal.

Standard Oil Group's Dividend Record.

The Standard Oil group of companies distributed $3,515,684,207 in cash and stock dividends, figured from dissolution of the old Standard Oil Company of New Jersey in December, 1911, to the end of September, 1928. Of this total, $2,684,795,412 was in cash and $1,450,888,795 in stock dividends at par value.

The total does not include rights to subscribe to $400,789,144 par value of common and preferred stocks offered to stockholders of the various companies. Nor does it include the preference given to Standard Oil Company in 1926 of New Jersey shareholders to subscribe to that company's 5 per cent. 20-year debentures at 100½.

Record year cash payments thus far were $213,730,695, distributed during 1927, comparing with previous record of $200,327,594 in 1926. Last year's payments were significant in that a new record was established in a year in which the oil industry suffered from adverse conditions practically throughout the 12 months. Cash dividends for the first nine months aggregated $155,833,950, compared with $158,108,089 in the corresponding periods of 1927.

Catelli Macaroni Products Corp. Offering.

An offering of 60,000 participating convertible redeemable Class A preference shares, par value $30.00, of the Catelli Macaroni Products Corporation, Limited, is being made by a syndicate composed of Geoffrion & Co., Ernest Savard Limited, Hodgson Bros. & Co., and the Municipal Debenture Corporation, Limited, at $30 per share and accrued dividend with a bonus of one share of Class B stock being given with every ten shares of the present issue purchased. The shares offered carry a dividend of $2.00 per annum.

Capitalization of the company consists of 60,000 shares of $2.00 participating convertible redeemable Class A preferred stock (this issue) all to be presently outstanding and 125,000 shares of no par value Class B common shares of which 30,000 shares will be issued.

The business of the company is to manufacture alimentary pastes known as macaroni, vermicelli, spaghetti, noodles, and fancy pastes. The present offering is to provide funds for the taking over the several companies engaged in this industry.

Basing calculations upon earnings of the largest constituent, C. H. Catelli Company, Limited, for the last ten years, it is found that earnings, after depreciation and income tax, should amount to about $5.00 per share on the Class A stock.

Directors of the company include A. Geoffrion, K.C., Montreal, president; A. Bienvenu, Montreal, vice-president; Paul Bienvenu, Montreal, managing director; Hon. N. Perodeau, R. R. Dobell, W. W. Hutchison, J. M. Brusek, A. Raymond, and I. Raeder.

Mine Operations

As Reported to F. G. Oke & Company.

F. G. Oke and Company wires as follows:

HAILEYBURY, Ont., Oct. 9.—Buckingham East drift now shows four and one-half feet quartz and well-mineralized schist carrying free gold. Looks decidedly important.

There is nothing detrimental to Teck Hughes ore bodies in regard to lamprophyre coming in south west. Ore length and widths not affected on this property. At present Teck Hughes looks better than ever and we recommend highly.

KIRKLAND LAKE, Ont., Oct. 9.—Wright Hargreaves has large ore body on 1250-foot level, averages $60, full width of drift. On 2000 level north vein good ore is being drifted on east and west, mill heads running $9.50. Can see no possible chance of passing dividend.

KIRKLAND LAKE, Ont., Oct. 9.—Goodfish has encountered high grade ore on 400-foot level. This contains much free gold, but no assays made yet.

Bearish Crop Reports Send Wheat Prices Down

CHICAGO, Oct. 9 (Canadian Press).—Influenced by bearish Canadian grain trade crop estimates, wheat values here tended downward early to-day. The relative strength of Liverpool wheat quotations, said to be based on buying orders there from America, had but little apparent effect here. Opening a shade lower to ⅛ cent higher, Chicago wheat subsequently showed something of a setback all around. Corn, oats and provisions were also easier, with corn ¾ to ⅞ cent off, and later holding at about the initial range.

Opening prices were:
Wheat, December 119, March 123¼.
Corn, December 81⅛, March 83⅝.
Oats, December 43⅜, March 44⅞.

Toronto Market Picks Up After Very Dull Opening

TORONTO, Oct. 9 (Canadian Press).—After an extremely dull opening, trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange livened up towards noon. Prices as a rule were firm. International Nickel suffered a sharp relapse to 135 to ¼, a net loss of 2¾ on a heavy turnover. Hayes Wheels, up a point at 37, rivalled Nickel in activity. The agricultural implement stocks were active, Massey Harris dropping 1 3-8 to 46 1-8, and Cockshutt advancing ¾ to 29¾. Walkers was down 5-8 to 63 3-8, and Service Stations gained ¾ at 47.

General Slump Sets In On Mine Stock Exchange

TORONTO, October 9 (Canadian Press).—The Standard Mining Exchange experienced the worst slump in many weeks to-day. Teck Hughes, with a net drop of 28, led the downward slide. The closing price was 7.85 but the stock sold as low as 7.55. Wright Hargreaves, down 14 at 2.51, was another heavy loss. Noranda followed the general trend with a drop of 1.50 at the closing price of 46.25, and Mond Nickel dropped 75 to 33.00. Newbec was the heaviest seller of the session and was down three and a half at 51. Amulet dropped to 2.60 and Abana to 4.23. The Western issues and a few of the Plenty stocks were the only issues to make a show of resistance.

A FEW THRILLS

Earlier in the afternoon, we had passed through Peterborough waters, and had experienced a thrill mingled with genuine amazement, and had with genuine amazement, as our cruiser boat had been literally scooped from the lower channel and carried higher and higher by that famous piece of engineering, the Hydraulic Lift Lock. But two hours later, we return to Little Lake.

A courteous invitation from Col. C. H. Ackerman—and we were standing before his trim little D. H. Moth plane as Pilot Miller deftly manoeuvred her to the dock. We were soon to realize, and certainly to approve, the enthusiasm that Col. Ackerman has for this, his newest pursuit—a pleasureable one indeed, but one that has a dual purpose. For not only does he enjoy flying to the "ninth" degree, but he is showing and interesting the people of Peterborough in the practicability of safe civil flying. Next year, because several local men have already realized their great advantages, Peterborough will not speak of its "plane," but of its "planes."

And if all are so fortunate as to obtain such careful and skilful pilots as young Miller, the uncertainty of flying will be reduced to the minimum, locally.

We climbed in, not without a certain tremor of misgiving, and were still testing the security of the straps and wondering just how badly they would be needed when Lo, and alas! We were in the air, and Little Lake was dropping away beneath. The plane had raced due east from the George Street Dock, swerved slightly north at the point — and now we circled, higher and higher, and the bottom of the upper part of the lake could be seen quite plainly. The dizziness of great height, so often spoken of, was not there, and we looked down upon Peterborough—a toy city of miniature factories and flattened buildings, all so uniformly divided by tiny lines that must have been paved streets. A momentary traffic jam at the red and green light corner of Charlotte and George Streets lost its significance—Hunter Street Bridge spanned a ridiculously small flow of water that unceremoniously destroyed the uniformity of a network of streets.

And even as all the greatness of man's surroundings is lost when he rises above them, so, we now looked down upon "that achievement of engineering skill," the Lift Lock, and wondered why it had seemed so thrilling.

We were now at a height of some 2,800 feet, and drifting in a southwesterly direction (there was very little sense of speed). A white ribbon that was the Peterborough-Port Hope Highway wound its way further and further over and through an amazing "crazy quilt" that was brown and green fields, and a curiously beautiful appointment of woodland in all the glory of Autumn garb. And down below us, seemingly crawling to the shelter of the city, was a freight train, with a smudge of smoke to mark where it had passed. Throttling down his engine, Pilot Miller directed our attention to Scugog Lake that lay just at the limit of our vision; turning slightly, we beheld in the foreground, Rice Lake, and when the plane circled a bit, we looked out and beyond our wing tips and were able to trace that chain of waters that is Katchiwano, Clear and Stoney Lakes.

To say that the recently re-opened highway to Chemong Lake was six miles long would have amounted almost to absurdity, for it seemed only a street more lengthy than the others—but out and beyond, in the direction which it pointed, lay Chemong Lake, Curve, Buckhorn and Pigeon.

Safety First.

Slots in the upper wings of the plane, that had no significance at first, were highly important ("highly" not in the nature of a pun) according to a brief demonstration that Pilot Miller carried out at one juncture. Invented by DeHaviland, they soon answered the purpose for which they had been designed. At a good altitude, the engine was completely cut off, but instead of diving, nose first for terra firma, the plane merely settled in easy stages, maintaining a slight forward speed and an "even keel" throughout. During this time, we were able to converse with each other without difficulty. Lack of an extra helmet with the necessary apparatus had made impossible the use of the speaking tube, with which the ship is equipped.

Then we were circling down, the earth rushed up to meet us, and we speculated, momentarily, regarding the clearance of a certain line of wires and poles. A neat side-slip landing, and we were skimming over the surface of the lake and taxiing toward the dock. To Colonel Ackerman and Pilot Miller we were indebted for what was, to us, a supreme thrill of pleasure.

Provinces Win First Battle

Dominion Counsel's Bulky Appendix Refused Admission By Court.

WATER POWER CASE.

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 8.— (Canadian Press.)— The provinces won a technical decision in the battle before the Supreme Court over Federal and Provincial authority on the water powers of the Dominion, when their Lordships decided that the provinces' objections to a bulky appendix introduced on behalf of the Dominion should be supported. It would be highly inconvenoent and dangerous to receive documents such as those in question as part of the case, remarked Chief Justice Anglin, unless with the full consent of all the parties involved

The Chief Justice suggested, however, that certain parts of the document, which gives a history of canals and navigations transferred to the Dominion under the B. N. A. Act and other subjects, if containing a statement of relevant facts upon which counsel might reach an agreement, might be put before the court in the form of a memorandum.

"I am afraid my appendix has been slaughtered," remarked H. J. Symington, Dominion counsel, proceeding with his argument.

"You mean your appendix has been removed," interjected W. N. Tilley, K.C., Ontario counsel.

How many people you know who end their colds with Aspirin? And how often you've heard of its prompt relief of sore throat or tonsilitis. No wonder millions take it for colds, neuralgia, rheumatism; and the aches and pains that go with them. The wonder is that anyone still worries through a winter without these tablets! They relieve quickly, yet have no effect whatever on the heart. Friends have often told you Aspirin is marvelous; doctors have declared it harmless. Every druggist has it, with proven directions. Why not put it to the test?

CASE ORDERED SETTLED TO-DAY

mer all his life, but the last five years when he had been residing in town, he said.

I. W. Plowman, bailiff, recalled his different visits to the Cleugh farm and Cleugh's refusal to sign any papers. He also said that the man he had left in possession had been ordered off the place. This closed the case for the plaintiff.

Robert Cleugh was the first to testify in his own deefnce. He said he had received notice to attend Court on October 1st, and had done so. When the bailiff arrived and attempted to seize his "stuff," Cleugh would not allow it. He said he did not think the act was legal, and since there were two executions in one, he was firmly convinced that he was right. Some bolts had been put in by a representative of the company, but they were not all right yet. There were still eight to be put in. These were too short. Parts of the salesman's evidence were not correct, he claimed and denied that he had said certain bolts which Pilkey was about to change were all right. When the bailiff came to seize the equipment in question, he had locked the barn. But he had not ordered the other man off the place, because he had never been on the property.

Joseph Dewey identified himself as a Seymour farmer. He had chanced to visit the Cleugh farm and had seen the new stanchions. When Cleugh said he would probably have to tell it to the Court, Dewey made a more detailed inspection. He found eight bolts which he would not consider correct. He would not call it a good job.

Robert Matthews, a farmer, had also seen the stanchions. He also had seen the eight bolts which were not right. He had the same kind of stanchions in his barns and they were by the same company. His own were a much better job than those at Cleughs. He would not call the latter work a good job. It was two weeks since he had seen them.

This was the case for the defense, and two witnesses were called to give evidence in rebuttal. Lewis Hay was the first. He said that he had seen the work in question yesterday morning. Most of the bolts were from one quarter to one-half inch through the nut and practically all the remainder were flush. There there were perhaps two that were not flush with the head of the bolt. Later, Hay admitted that he was not an expert and had never lived on a farm. I. W. Plowman was recalled and related further details of his visits to the Cleugh farm.

D. J. Lynch, counsel for the defense, argued that his client might be considered to have stood very strictly on his rights, but that the judge had issued an order and the order had not been carried out. Therefore the machinery company had not the right to put in a bailiff. He explained that his client was prepared to pay the cost of the court and of the machinery but nothing further.

Much Confusion.

N. Alex MacColl, counsel for the plaintiffs argued that there had been some confusion throughout the entire affair and reminded His Honour that the judgment had been given last April and that the court was still struggling with the case. There was some difference of opinion as to the time set for the execution of the order.

Having heard all the evidence, Judge Huycke expressed the opinion that it was a "pretty kettle of fish." The defendant had appeared to be clever, obstinate and meticulous in the interpretation of his rights. Nor did His Honor think that the Louden company had acted wisely or a manner likely to induce people to buy from them. As he saw the case there were still eight bolts that were not as they should be. "I really don't thing they amount to as many hills of beans," said His Honor and further expressed regret that so much time should be taken up in court over such a trifling matter. He directed that the company send a man there not later than this morning, and that this man put in the eight bolts complained of under the direction of Cleugh. His Honor did not care where they were put so long as there were eight put in and in such a manner as to satisfy the defendant.

This was the judgment which was given by Judge Huycke after hearing about eight bolts, twenty bolts, and several other numbers of bolts for exactly two hours.

FAREWELL RALLY FOR MADOC BOYS

Sunday School Class Enjoys Program of Sports and Supper.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MADOC, Oct. 9.—The "Ever Ready" class of boys of Trinity United Sunday school held a class rally on Saturday afternoon to give a "send-off" to two of their members, Francis and Stanley Smith on the occasion of their removal from Madoc village.

Sports and games were superintended by Roswald Dafoe and Grey Rivers. These included a paper chase which covered some five or six miles in the afternoon and other games in the evening. A very pretty supper awaited them on their return to the parsonage, where Mrs. Rivers of Trinity parsonage assisted by Mrs. Nickle their Sunday school teacher waited to see that the famished appetites were appeased. After supper some souveners and tokens of remembrance were presented to Francis and Stanley by Grey River on behalf of the class. With music and games a pleasant evening was spent and good-byes were regretfully said.

Preparatory Service

On Friday evening the Preparatory Services was held in St. Peter's church and in Trinity United church, Madoc. In Trinity Church the pastor Rev. G. W. Rivers was assisted by Rev. Mr. Beckley of Marmora, who delivered a very instructive address.

On Sunday morning, Rev. Mr. Rivers conducted a very impressive Reception Service before the Communion where twelve persons united with the church on profession of faith, six of these being from the Sunday school classes and also two united by letter.

About two hundred Communicants were present.

Personals

Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Smith and family of four children are leaving during the next week for the new home in Pakenham where Mr. Smith has been employed during the summer by the Hydro Electric Power company.

Mr. A. Ashley of Queen's College, Kingston spent the week-end with his parents in Madoc.

Mr. Raymond Rivers, of O. B. C. Belleville spent Saturday and Sunday with his parents at Trinity parsonage.

Miss Grace Phillips of Peterborough, was a week-end visitor at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. Ashley. Miss Phillips was welcomed by her friends of the choir of Trinity United church and was the soloist for the morning service on Sunday.

Mr. Donald Whytock, of Queen's University, Kingston, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Whytock in town.

DUNSFORD W.M.S. HEARS ADDRESSES

Members Read Papers On Mission Work in Various Fields.

(Examiner Correspondence)

DUNSFORD, Oct. 9.—The Women's Missionary Society held its meeting at the home of Mrs. T. V. Thurston, with an attendance of seventeen. The vice-president, Mrs. Albert Thurston, presided in the absence of Mrs. Percy H. Skitch, who has moved to Lindsay. The following papers were read: On India, Mrs. William Courley; Africa, Mrs. Silas Thurston; China, Mrs. J. F. Everson; Trinidad, Mrs. Albert Thurston; Our Outgoing Missionaries, Mrs. Irwin Thurston. Mrs. J. F. Everson sang "Just When I Need Him Most." Miss Evelyn Thurston read the Scriptural lesson from Psalm 103. Mrs. Albert Thurston gave a talk on the fifth chapter of the study book, "New Paths for Old Purposes." The November meeting is to be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Skitch in Lindsay.

Lunch was served by Mrs. William Courley, Mrs. W. F. Thurston and Mrs. T. V. Thurston.

Personals.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernie Mann, of Peterborough, were recent visitors with Mr. and Mrs. Archie Beavis.

W. H. Thurston has a number of men busily engaged erecting a cottage on his farm at Greenhurst Bay, near Thurstonia Park.

Miss Nettie White has returned home after spending ten days visiting friends in and around St. Catharines.

What Your Want In the WANT ADS

21ST RE-UNION GREAT SUCCESS

Attendance of Ex-Members of Battalion Twice That Expected.

400 VETERANS PRESENT.

(Kingston Whig-Standard)

In the neighborhood of four hundrew veterans of the Great War, just about double the number expected and made up of some 325 ex-members of the 21st Battalion C.E.F. and their guests, took the Hotel La Salle by storm on Saturday evening shortly after eight o'clock demanding their rations.

The veterans took a detour before the main attack was launched, leaving the Armouries, where they had established their headquarters during the afternoon, and marching up Queen street to Barrie street and from there down Princess street headed by the Kingston Kiltie Band. The route was lined by interested citizens, traffic being at a standstill during the parade.

While the enemy scouts had reported to Harry Dean, Manager of the Hotel La Salle, that the attack was to be made in greater force than was originally expected, and something more than a warm welcome was awaiting the veterans. Mr. Dean's troops were taxed to the uttermost to cope with the swarming throng which, eventually had to be catered to in two sittings, with the large convention hall of this magnificent hotel packed like a Boche prisoners' corral after an attack by the 21st in days gone by.

Scene in Lobby

In the lobby of the hotel, before "Come to the Cook House Door" was ordered to be sounded, the scene was a never-to-be-forgotten one. Pipe Major Fraser and his band played stirring reels to which many of the veterans danced, while comrade sought comrade in order to exchange greetings and bring back still more strenuous days.

A great spirit of comraderie prevailed, rank being something absolutely forgotten except as a very dim memory as evidenced by smatterings of conversation which could be overheard from time to time.

"Billy, you old scamp," one veteran was heard to remark to Brig.-General W. St. P. Hughes. "You give me twenty-eight days field punishment for nothing a few years ago," the reply being, as Gen. Hughes shook his old comrade warmly by the hand: "Well maybe fifty days would have done you more good. Remember the time that you," etc., and the two recalled some other incident of their experiences in the same unit.

Old Days Recalled

Still another old soldier exclaimed as he clapped Brig-General A. E. Ross on the shoulder. "Hello, Doc., got any number nine on you?" while Lt.-Colonel T. A. Kidd, who served with the Second Battalion, and Colonel-Commandant C. F. Constantine, who for some time commanded the Fifth Brigade of Artillery and was often "in support" of the 21st Battalion, met many old comrades who were eager to renew acquaintanceship.

In the banquet hall, when the proceedings got fairly under way, W. G. McCullagh, M.M., acted as toastmaster in a most capable manner, not one of the speakers escaping a personal reference to some incident of their service delivered in a most humorous vein.

Laid Wreath

During the afternoon, as the large body of veterans reported for registration at the armouries from all over Canada and in many cases from the United States; many meetings took place between old comrades which had been looked forward to for some time.

At about 4.30 o'clock, when nearly three hundred out-of-town veterans had already registered, a parade was formed up and the entire body of veterans marched over to the memorial cross, erected in memory of those who gave their lives in the battalion, on the grounds of Royal Military College.

On arrival at this memorial short but impressive ceremonies were held, a wreath being laid at its foot by Brig-General W. St. P. Hughes.

Wedding Bells

LLOYD—BARTON

HAVELOCK, October 8 — A quiet wedding took place on Wednesday evening, October 3rd, at 7.40 o'clock, in the Bridge Street United Church at Belleville, when Miss Erma, the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Barton of Rush Point, became the bride of Mr. A. B Lloyd, son of Mrs. Margaret Lloyd, of Belleville.

Rev. Dr. Mallott officiated and the wedding music was played by Prof. Hunt.

The bride looked charming in pale blue satin, with ecru all-over radium lace gown and wore a rope necklace of pearls. Her shoes were white kid with stockings and hat to match, and she carried a bouquet of ophelia roses and baby's breath.

The young couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Henn also of Belleville, the bridesmaid attired in white and blue georgette.

After the ceremony a wedding dinner was served at the home of the groom's mother. The bride's table was beautiful decorated with pink and white crepe ribbon. Later the happy couple left for a short honeymoon trip to Peterborough and western points, the bride travelling in a handsome black seal coat with hat and shoes to match. On their return they will reside in Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd were the recipients of many beautiful gifts, showing the high esteem in which they are held.

does not lay stress so much upon those theological teachings of the Scriptures that divide men as it does upon those that unite them. There is no creed—a covenant of mutual agreement and fellowship takes its place. The world to-day as in the past needs Freemasonry and Freemasonry needs the Church. And as so large a part of one makes up the membership of the other, they should work together to make the world sweeter and better and render it easier for men to do right and harder for them to do wrong so that the great Christian facts can meet all theories. They belong to the things that are not shaken. Let nothing shake our hold on them.

HOCKEY PLANS ARE DISCUSSED

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, October 9. — So far there has been nothing definite done along official lines regarding a hockey team this year, but the fact that the doors of Davidson's Arena were open yesterday afternoon and workmen were busy making certain repairs and alterations has started considerable talk among last year's players and fans. Several of each chanced to meet in the Royal Cafe last night and the entire proposition, so far as is known, was discussed. When the discussion ended, it was decided that a meeting of any interested would be called for some evening at the latter end of the week and some definite conclusion reached. Last year, hockey was the event which aroused the greatest interest in local sporting circles, and there is every possibility that when the ice forms, Campbellford will have a fast sextette ready to step into the orange and black uniforms and carry the colors creditably.

British General Warns Against Too Great Dependence on Machines.

NOT SO MOBILE

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE, Oct. 9—(By the Canadian Press).—Contending that war "machine hospitals" would be filled with ineffective mechanized units hopeless of repairs, Major-General Sir John Moore formerly director of the Army Veteranary Service, has warned the government against placing too much faith in the new mechanical army in time of war.

Addressing the National Veterinary Association Congress, Sir John said: "Mechanization has descended on the army, and the outlook generally for light horses for commercial, private, and army purposes is not too bright. Any innovation, such as progressive mechanization of any mounted units, which tends to wipe out or reduce the outlet for the sale of light horse breeding, and I appeal to the army authorities and the government to bear this issue carefully in mind. The latest figures show that the strength of the home army in horses is 14,502, compared with 22,774 in 1912.

"For the army to advance exaggerated claims on behalf of mechanization based on movement and manœuvre in easy and open country like Salisbury Plain would be altogether unwise. One war is no criterion of the next. Theatres of war are different, and it is reasonable to assert that as the country to be traversed becomes more difficult so does the mobility of horses proportionately exceed that of machines. At all events as in civil life, there is room for both horse and machine without destroying the identity of any particular unit of mounted troops.

"It will be a serious position to wake up in war to find that requirements in horses cannot be met because the fountain has been allowed to dry up and it is obvious that during war the casualties in machines will far exceed horse casualties. As war progresses machine hospitals will be a mighty park of inneffectives, hopeless of repair and in many cases, difficult to get rid of, and a picture of awful expense. As an economic and indespensable factor in an army, the horse rises and will continue to rise supreme over any mechanical equivalent as alternative."

FINE HYMN-BOOK FOR MRS. HOWARD

Trinity Church Choir Shows Appreciation of Her Help in Work.

(Examiner Correspondence).

MILLBROOK, Oct. 9.—Among the several gifts made to Rev. P. C. and Mrs. Howard before their departure to their new field of labor at Havelock, was the presentation of a handsomely-bound hymn book, containing both music and words of the church hymnology, to Mrs. Howard by the choir of Trinity Church (The Marsh) one evening last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard were guests at the tea hour in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Porteous, the choir coming later in the evening for practice. The surprise feature was forthcoming when the gift was presented, the accompanying address making it clear that genuine affection prompted its giving, as well as a very real appreciation of the help Mrs. Howard has constantly and willingly given with the musical part of the church services during the two years of her husband's ministry in the parish.

The congregation of Trinity Church showed its affection and esteem for Mr. and Mrs. Howard by the presentation of a beautifully made autograph quilt, containing the names of practically every family connected with this charge, at a social gathering held a short time after it became known that the Bishop had appointed Rev. Mr. Howard as rector of Saint John's Church at Havelock.

Trinity Church also contributed generously to the community gift of a purse of gold made to Rev. Mr. Howard at the big public gathering held in the Town Hall on Monday evening.

Mrs. R. J. Doak Honored.

At the social gathering held last week at the home of Mrs. S. E. Eakins, to say farewell to Mrs. R. J. Doak before her departure for her new home at Orillia, when the presentation f a handsome "chime" mantel clock by the women of Grace Presbyterian Church was the feature of the evening. The address was read by Mrs. J. R. Eakins, secretary of the Women's Auxiliary, and the gift presented by Mrs. Thomas Ingram, secretary of the Women's League. It was under the auspices of these two organizations that the event was planned, and successfully carried through.

Pupils Have Holidays

The public schools of Millbrook and vicinity had a holiday on Thursday and Friday of last week; the teachers being absent attending the teachers' convention at Cobourg. Those going from here were: B. B. Dawson, principal; Miss Orchard and Miss Montgomery. Miss Dorothy Hall of Fairview school; Miss Jean Burnham of Zion; Miss M. Davey of Carmel, and Miss Moise of Cork were also among the delegates at Cobourg.

Upper School Work Taken

Upper school classes, in connection with the continuation school, have been organized, as formerly, this year, the subjects including: English, French, and Trigonometry.

Personals

Among those from this vicinity who motored to Orono on Wednesday and attended the fall fair were: Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Ball, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Henderson, Mrs. P. I. Bentley, Messrs. H. A. Fallis, Oscar McGill, J. O. Ball, T. W. McIndoo, W. Thorne, Mr. and Mrs. R. McCamus, and others.

Dr. C. W. Walsh of Vancouver, B.C., and his mother, Mrs. C. M. Walsh, have been guests of Miss L. Burton and Mr. and Mrs. Albert this week, going to Port Hope Thursday evening, and leaving for Montreal the following day. Dr. Walsh and his mother will visit Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Walsh for a week when the former intends going to New York for a post-graduate course before returning to his home in the west. Mrs. Walsh will remain with her son at Montreal until Dr. Walsh returns from New York; she expects to spend the winter with Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Walsh at Toronto.

Mrs. R. Bateson of Campbellford, who has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Raper for the past week, returned home on Thursday.

Mrs. Millard of Oshawa, who has been the guest of her daughter, Mrs. V. C. Lambert, for the past week, has returned home.

Miss Janet Needler of Toronto is visiting her uncle and aunt, Mr. A. A. and Miss Etta Needler.

Mr. and Mrs. John Dawson have returned home after a three-months' trip in the west, visiting Mr. and Mrs. W. Turner at Victoria, B.C.; their sons at Edmonton and Rosthern, relatives at Winnipeg, and several other points.

There is a family in San Pedro, California, in which the male tendency is so strong that for four generations no daughter has been born, although there have been 35 sons.

MANY WORSHIPPERS TAKE COMMUNION

First Evening Celebration in Years Held at St. Paul's Church.

For the first time in at least twenty years, the Communion service was observed at the evening sederunt yesterday at St. Paul's Church. The session had in mind the large number of members who could not attend the morning Communion service, and judging by the crowd last night, the idea was well received.

Along with the local congregation were many from Keene, Westwood, and Buckhorn churches where, through being ministered to by students, these folks rarely have Communion, aside from the visits of ordained ministers. Rev. Mr. Allan preached an inspiring sermon from the subject, "If They Had Only Known," dealing with the Last Supper in the upper room.

Give this better domestic fuel a trial in your home

Ford Coke

Product of the Ford Motor Company

YOU need not alter your furnace to burn Ford Coke. It requires care only morning and night. That should ease your mind of any doubts you may have had about using coke.

Now for what you gain with Ford Coke. First, a clean fire with neither smoke nor soot. And no clinkers if you use ordinary care. Next, a fire that responds quickly—warms a chilly house up while you're dressing in the morning. Another thing, more heat for your fuel dollar. Remember you buy fuel by weight. And the smoke and soot that don't burn are heavy. When you pay for them your money goes up the chimney. That weight is replaced by burnable fuel in Ford Coke.

Perhaps most important of all, Ford Coke is of uniform and high quality. It's made by the Ford Motor Company in its own coke ovens, and is used in the Ford industries, where fuel variation cannot be tolerated. That's the fuel you can have in your bin. Order Ford Coke right now.

XLVII—SALLY'S WEDDING DAY

It seemed to Philip Sanderson that he had been lying awake for hours, staring into a darkness wherein he would never again see a sign of dawn.

The summer had gone out so quickly, and now it was late October, with already the chill breath of winter in the air. Outside, the wind was moaning restlessly round the little cottage, blowing down the last remaining leaves of summer.

Sanderson knew that in the morning the flower-beds, with their last mournful chrysanthemums, and the little strip of lawn would both be leaf-strewn again, although only that afternoon he had swept them all up so carefully and burnt them, so that everything should be tidy for Sally's wedding-day.

Sally's wedding-day!

The words had been in his mind all night, jeering at him, but still they seemed to convey nothing.

Looking back upon that morning when Mrs. Kiff had met him down the road and prevented him from trying to kill Garry Nairn, it seemed a lifetime ago, and yet it was not more than two months—two months during which Sally had improved out of all belief or recognition in the sunshine of her happiness.

The crutches had been put away, and though all her life she would walk with a slight limp, there was nothing now to show that she had once been so hopelessly crippled.

And tomorrow she was to be married—and married, after all, in the little church at Ash Hill village, and to Garry Nairn.

Sanderson had passed through deep waters in the last two months. He had played a giant's part as only a giant could play it, and had come out victorious.

He knew that now Sally believed he had never really loved her so desperately, after all, and that sometimes the belief even piqued her vanity a little.

God alone knew how he had lived through her explanations and Garry's. Looking back upon it seemed like a fevered dream through which he had been forced by brutal hands.

Sally had cried and clung round his neck. She loved him, she said, in all ways but the way in which a woman should love the man she is to marry. She had tried her best, but it was in vain. It had always been Garry, and she would never change.

"You've done everything for me, I know," she sobbed. "And I'm so grateful, Philip darling, that if it would do any good I would be glad to die, but I can't marry you. I can't marry anyone but Garry. Oh, I hate myself. I'm so ashamed—but that's life, isn't it? I can't help loving him, can I?"

Garry had been less emotional but more manly than Sanderson had ever known him.

"I'm more sorry than I can say. I'm not half good enough for her. You deserve happiness more than I do——" And so on and so on till Sanderson could have shouted in his despair:

"What the hell do I care about you? It's only Sally that counts, and I've lost her. For God's sake shut up and keep out of my way!"

Only Mrs. Kiff had known the truth, and Mrs. Kiff could be a giant, too, when it came to the point.

She gloried in the strength and pride with which Sanderson covered his defeat and hid his terrible wound.

"That's a man for you," she would say to herself. "A man in ten millions! And what she can see in that Mr. Garry——"

And then she would melt into soft tears as she looked at the radiant happiness in Sally's face.

"Bless her; and, after all she's gone through, why shouldn't she be happy?" she defended the girl against her own judgment.

But that was only when Sanderson was out of the way. When he was near, Mrs. Kiff could not bear to raise her eyes to the tragedy in his which she alone seemed to see.

And now Sally was to be married, and, after all she had said, she was to be married at the little Ash Hill church, and all the villagers were to be allowed to stand at the gate and stare to their heart's content.

Philip Sanderson had arranged everything. He had gone up to Town and had a long interview with his lawyers, settling every thing upon Sally except just enough to keep himself going.

The cottage was to be sold; but only he and Mrs. Kiff knew that. Sally believed that they were still to live there after she and Garry had sailed for Australia.

"I shall be able to think of you," she told Philip with tears in her eyes. "And I shall think of the garden and the apple tree, and dear old Sometimes playing about——"

"I shall think of you, too," Sanderson answered stoically. "And we shall look forward to your letters, shan't we, Mrs. Kiff?"

"We shall that," Mrs. Kiff agreed; but she had to hurry from the room to hide her emotion.

For she knew that the cottage was to be sold, and that she was going back to London with Philip, to a flat of which he had heard, where she could look after him and keep the London smuts at bay.

It broke the good woman's heart to think of it, but she heroically hid her pain. After all, she was not the chief sufferer. Garry and Sally were to leave England the day after their wedding.

"Best get right away," Philip had advised, and the vicar had backed him up.

Sally was to be married in bridal dress and veil complete.

"Must do the thing properly," Sanderson had insisted, and he had stood smilingly by while Sally pored over patterns and pictures of wedding-gowns.

And now the last night had come. Tomorrow Sally's bedroom on the other side of the narrow passage would be empty. There would be no slender little figure under the pink satin quilt, no golden hair for the first rays of morning sunshine to play lovingly around, and the cushion with the golden dragon in the sitting-room would know her no more.

A dozen times during the long, wakeful hours Sanderson's iron self-control had almost snapped and driven him across to her, to lay his broken heart at her feet and plead with her not to leave him.

Once he had gone as far as the door, only to whip himself back with thongs of steel.

She was so completely happy. He would be worse than a coward to throw a shadow across her sunshine at the last moment.

Thank God! At last a streak of dawn!

Sanderson got up and drew the blind. Greyness in the garden and everything leaf-strewn, as he had known it would be. The branches of the little apple tree were bare and brown, and shivered in the autumn wind.

Perhaps the sun would be kind and shine when Sally went to church.

Sanderson sat staring down at the floor with grim eyes. Why couldn't he take a sane view of the thing and put it from him? After all, he would be no worse off when Sally had gone out of his life than he had been before she came into it. He had still got enough money to live on, and he had still got Sometimes.

He glanced across to the corner where Sometimes lay curled up on his rug. The dog was faithful to him, at any rate—poor old Sometimes, who was growing old and tired as well as his master.

It was getting light rapidly now, and there was a faint rose-color in the grey sky, as if the sun was promising to come along presently and shine on Sally's wedding-day.

Sanderson got up and looked at himself in the little square mirror which stood on the chest of drawers.

In the morning light his face looked old and grey. No wonder Sally had found it difficult to love him as a woman should love the man she marries.

Youth to youth! It was the old law of Nature.

The wedding was to be early, at nine.

Yesterday, with clumsy hands, Mrs. Kiff had decorated the little church with shaggy chrysanthemums and brown foliage. She had insisted upon doing it all herself.

"She'll like to remember that I did it, when she's miles away in that 'eathenish country," she told Sanderson.

"Australia's a very fine country," he had answered disinterestedly. "And Miss Sally will love the sunshine."

For weeks he had felt as if he were moving and speaking in a dream. It was as if the heart and soul of him had died, and only his body was being propelled about by some mechanical contrivance.

He did not know what explanation Garry had given to Sally of the way in which he had left her, and he did not care.

Nothing could alter the ultimate issue. He had lost Sally; it mattered little by what means.

Mrs. Kiff was astir at last.

Sanderson heard her heavy step, then the sounds of a fire being lit, and a kettle being filled with water.

Then the opening of the front door, and the vigorous scouring of the little step.

He roused himself and whistled to Sometimes.

A walk before breakfast would clear his aching head and give him fresh courage with which to face the day.

But Sometimes was lazy and would not stir. Sanderson called to him again impatiently.

"Here, what the devil—"

Still Sometimes did not move, and Sanderson was across the room in a stride, down on his knees, his shaking hands groping at the motionless body of his most faithful friend.

"Sometimes—oh, my God!"

But Sometimes was miles away, chasing rabbits in the Happy Hunting Fields.

Westwood

WESTWOOD, Oct. 8 (Examiner Correspondence).—Rally Day service was observed in the Presbyterian Church on Sunday afternoon. The Rally Day program was followed. Mr. Fraser, a student of Knox College, giving the address on the topic "Things That Abide."

A solo, "Jesus Wants Me for a Sunbeam," by a little primary scholar, Marian Hope, and a duet, "Growing Up for Jesus," by Mary Steele and Effie Cameron, were well given. A recitation, "To the Kirk," was given by Mary Steele, and "Our Mission," by Jack Graham.

The church was decorated beautifully for the occasion, with flowers and foliage.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate)
WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 11, 1928

Although a benefic aspect dominates this day, according to astrology, it is well to avoid important business while this rule prevails.

In the morning hours it is well to conduct business in the most conservative manner, for they may be a temptation to be too sanguine.

Lawyers, preachers and all who seek to influence public opinion should not waste energy while this sway prevails.

The planetary government is most favorable for men and women in places of prominence. They will probably be stimulated and encouraged by influences that encourage self-confidence.

This day is more fortunate for persons who have already attained success than for those who seek it. The signs are fairly promising to all who look for employment or promotion.

Again women are subject to adverse rule, presaging disappointment for those who desired to serve the public.

The seers warn women that the stars are antagonistic to their progress in politics. The aspects may affect certain candidates in eastern and western states.

Transition will mark the theatres as well as the destinies of various artists who should know that a period of tremendous prosperity for all who aspire to the finer vocations is at hand.

This is not a particularly lucky rule for theatres and motion picture houses may experience chanegs that are costly but ultimately profitable.

Astrologers announce that with the passing of the giants of the world of achievements new leaders are developing in secret. They will command instant recognition something after the fashion of Colonel Lindbergh, who is a type of the new order of things.

While this configuration prevails lovers may be apathetic and not inclined to enter bonds of matrimony. They should be managed with skill.

Summer flirtations will be slow in materializing into bona fide marriages this year, it is foretold. But there will be many weddings in the winter.

Persons whose birthdate it is should be prudent rather than adventurous in the coming year which should bring fair fortune to all who attend strictly to their own affairs. This may not be lucky for women who desire change and amusement.

Children born on this day may be inclined toward pride and vanity. These subjects of Virgo usually require the best of everything and are sensitive regarding good appearances.

Ennismore

(Examiner Correspondence.)

ENNISMORE, October 8 — Misses Agnes Cavanagh and M. O'Brien left by motor for the latter's home in Kingston on Thursday to spend the week-end.

Mrs. H. Hennessy spent a few days recently with her sister, Mrs. T. Sullivan, of King's Wharf.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Guiry, of Downeyville, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Crough last Sunday.

Miss Grace Shannahan, of Buffalo, N.Y., is spending a few days the guest of friends here.

Mrs. R. Killen, of Peterborough, and daughter Edna, R.N., of New Jersey, were the guests of friends here on Friday.

Mr. H. A. Shearer, of Buckhorn, made a business trip through here on Thursday.

LYRICS OF LIFE

THE THINGS FORGOTTEN

The things forgotten are the stars,
With sunlight on the ground,
The things that bloom in winter jars,
With roses all around.
For what's a rose within a room,
With gardens at our door?
And what's a star to light the gloom,
With midnight here no more?

The things forgotten are our pray'rs,
With not a fear or doubt,
The friend who helps, the friend who shares,
With new friends all about.
For what's the need of faith or trust
When all the world is fine?
And what's a friend to share a crust,
While strangers share our wine?

But if the midnight should return,
The winter bring the snow,
If suns should ever cease to burn,
Or gardens cease to blow,
A star's unchanging constancy,
A flow'r, and God again,
And one beloved friend, would be
The things remembered then.

Too Much Acid

Many people, two hours after eating, suffer indigestion as they call it. It is usually excess acid. Correct it with an alkali. The best way, the quick, harmless and efficient way, is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. It has remained for 50 years the standard with physicians. One spoonful in water neutralizes many times its volume in stomach acids, and at once. The symptoms disappear in five minutes.

You will never use crude methods when you know this better method. And you will never suffer from excess acid when you prove out this easy relief. Please do that—for your own sake—now.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. Each bottle contains full directions—any druggists.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

By MARION

AS WE go through life we hear people complaining of their lot and the things they are compelled to bear. There are always some, no matter where one might go in Peterborough, who think they have more to bear than others.

• • •

If those who grumble could only get a glimpse of what the person they envy, perhaps, has to bear, they would be quite willing and quite satisfied to live their own life.

• • •

One cannot always tell by looking at a person, whether he is carefree or not. Responsibilities and worry often weigh heavily upon one's mind, but which another would not suspect.

• • •

These are the persons, who, as we sometimes say, "grin and bear it." Let us all be like this and keep smiling.

• • •

I have often heard people in this city ask what life really is. A well-known editor answers the question by saying that "life is a series of enjoyments, disappointments, and sad experiences." In our daily work our spirits go up and down perhaps as often as a busy elevator.

• • •

Have you ever stopped to study life. Most of us go through life laughing and weeping; loving and hating; many times failing but more often succeeding.

• • •

It is truly a great man or woman who can lgugh in spite of great misfortune or disappointment. There are many such people in Peterborough and it would be well for those of us who cannot, or do not look on the bright side of life, to acquire this delightful habit—the habit of always smiling and saying something pleasant.

We are always too ready to laugh at other people until the tide turns, then everything is different; we weep in bitter grief.

• • •

It is often very trying and as much as we can bear, to have known the pleasures of prosperity and then to have felt the pangs of poverty—to have dreamed great dreams, then to have been suddenly awakened to some stern reality.

• • •

This little paragraph, I think, sums it up very nicely. It is a passage by F. D. Van Amburgh, of New York City.

"Life is a little boat carrying a soul, and both are being tossed upon the waves of pleasure and pain, by the tempest we softly speak of as our passions, but without our passions, religion, romance, art and the sciences, would all be useless."

• • •

We so often come across women in Peterborough who have a mysterious sort of fascination for the men they meet. Often, too, there are young girls like that—you would not call them exactly pretty but because they always seem to have a man or so in attendance, people think perhaps they have some sort of witchery, which other women do not possess.

• • •

Do you happen to be one of these women—whom other women envy? If you are, perhaps you can give some secret formula for the sterner sex fascination for you.

• • •

One of these women has told me the secret of her supposed charm. All this woman did was to get the men she met to talk about things that interested them. This is a polite and well bred thing to do, anyhow.

• • •

When you are given the opportunity of meeting a man, don't just make some remark about the weather. That is unless he looks as if he thought a great deal about the weather.

• • •

Don't waste time talking about things that a man isn't interested in so as to make people think you are keeping up a conversation.

• • •

Make an effort to find out what interests him. Perhaps you could get some clues on the subject beforehand. By all means, do not start off by "pumping" as if you were a reporter getting an interview. Bring up the subject that you know interests him and then make those little remarks that make him feel you are interested.

• • •

A very popular woman, who possesses all this secret charm, says that older men like to talk about their hobbies; younger men who haven't had much experience, like to talk about their work.

• • •

We are now coming to what is called "the entertaining season" in Peterborough. Here is a way for making fruit whip which might be served. Rub soft cooked fruit through a strainer and add four egg whites to two cups of pulp and bake twenty minutes in a slow oven. Serve with cream. This is good with prunes, peaches, apricots or any other soft fruit.

• • •

Do you wish to know how to make the little wool flowers which are worn a great deal on sweaters? If you do, fill in the coupon which you will find somewhere in this paper and send it with a two-cent stamp to Marion, and the instructions will be sent by return mail.

AFTER FIVE YEARS

Views of Examiner Readers on How to Make Married Life as Happy After Five Years as After Five Months.

"Dear Marion:

In order to hold one's husband, after five years, timely preparation is essential. An old father, seeing his daughter departing from the old land to make her home in our fair domain, gave as his farewell admonition—'Study your husband.' That girl did as her father advised and made one of the happiest unions known to the author. As the old Quaker said regarding his wife and himself, 'All the world is a little queer except thee and me, and thee is a little queer.' So study your better half—seek in all things to please and avoid the irritating episodes.

Possibly one incident will suffice to illustrate. One winter eve a couple were invited for the evening with friends a few miles distant. The eventful day proved to be one of the winter's worst and when friend husband, exhausted, finally arrived home he exclaimed in no uncertain tones—"No going out to-night!" His wife, who had made all arrangements for her husband and her to go along in a friend's closed car, was discreet. In no brawling tones did she voice her sentiments on the question. She held her peace and presented her husband with a meal of his favorite dishes. After he had satisfied the inner man and had rested he again inspected the weather and declared that it wasn't such a bad night, after all. The wife, appreciating the wealth of meaning in the old adage, 'Strike when the iron is hot' divulged her plans and in due time they arrived at the gathering. This artful female confided to me 'Never attack a man on an empty stomach.' I pass the tip on to you.

Do not become cold and indifferent as so many couples do. We all love to be loved. It is not enough to know we are loved. To revert to the colloquial 'We're from Missouri, we like to be shown.' There was the case of the two sisters, one, selfish and proud, married a wealthy man of much the same disposition as her own. They lived a very unhappy life. The other sister unselfish and kind-hearted to the nth degree, married a man of even temper and modest means. Their home was a veritable paradise. The first sister was at a loss to know why the other was so happy and was told that if she would bestow more affection on her husband and think less of everything coming her way, life would be more tolerable. The ungrateful sister retorted, "Oh, you make me weary, you're always fussing over John." The [illegible] sister only said, 'Well, doesn't it pay?' If you're unhappy after five years look to your own disposition and seek to improve it. Be lavish with your affection. Remember your husband is just a big boy at heart and needs your love. After five years there will probably be children. Do not make the fatal mistake of lavishing all your love and attention on them. They will grow up and leave you.... Only natural, you did the same thing yourself. Your husband alone will remain with you to the end. Think of this and give him his just share of your affection.

'Actions speak louder than words' but let us not forget the words. Here is a little verse I think worth remembering.

'Keep watch on your words, my darling.
For words are wonderful things
They are sweet like the bees' fresh honey,
Like the bees they have terrible stings.
They can bless like the warm, bright sunshine
And brighten a lonely life
They can cut in the strife of anger,
Like an open, two-edged knife!'

These lines are explanatory and how very true.

I think there is more unhappiness caused in homes by nagging than any other fault. The nagger is a home wrecker. Ponder on the lines 'The love of praise, no matter how disguised by art, reigns more or less and glows in every heart.' Human nature responds to words of commendation, while harsh words kill the spirit. Be lavish with your praise.

There are times when a wife feels she is neglected and unloved. Generally, this is at times when friend husband is engrossed in affairs of business.

'With man love is a thing apart, with woman her whole being.' Remember the scene between Brutus and Portia in 'Julius Caesar'! Brutus, torn asunder over his duty to Rome and the proposed assassination of his great friend, Caesar, seemingly neglects his wife and is gently rebuked by her for his inattention. Sadly he declares his love to Portia in these few lines. 'You are my true and honorable wife as dear to me as the ruddy drops that visit my heart.' Wives, remember this, at times when you feel neglected Man is by nature, a hunter, you were the object of your husband's pursuit: he captured you. Of course, if he is wise he will pretend to keep up the chase, but why among us is always wise? Just think this way—he chose me from the millions of women he might have taken. Surely, this thought alone should make any woman rejoice and be happy.

The play instinct is more developed in man than in woman. Be sure to encourage this rather than discourage it and by all means be a partner in it. "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy.' Remember, that if you're too busy with your hundred and one household duties, to accompany your husband there are others just around the corner with plenty of leisure time and it may be another female and presto change! You're life is ruined. Not that you need to dog your husband's footsteps. Let him have a night a week out with the fellows and no questions asked. Let him go on a vacation alone—ten chances to one he'll come back and appreciate his home and you more than previously, and you also will be benefitted by the change.

By all means keep yourself attractive. 'A thing of beauty is a joy forever,' and a man never grows too old to admire a beautiful woman. Keep yourself that your husband will be proud of you. Command his respect and here we have the crux of the situation. If you have his respect all will be well with you.

Our old friend, Aunt Het, says, 'If there were more gingham aprons and less silk underwear, homes would be happier.' I, for one, can't agree with her. Of course, the ideal is attained in the woman who can wear with equal grace, the gingham apron and the gorgeous dinner gown. As Kipling says in his well-known 'IF'—'To walk with Kings, Nor lose the common touch.'

Not beauty of face or form alone but beauty of mind is essential. Cultivate your mind to that you will be intellectually a companionable mate. Seek charm of manner, that inexplicable 'it' we hear so much of nowadays. Be original and above all, avoid a monotonous humdrum existence.

Strive to have a home where nothing is lacking. Then as you can plainly see there will be no need for friend husband to seek abroad for pleasure. Like his friends and make them welcome in your home. There was once a husband, who was much pitied in the community in which he lived. Truly, he had a cross to bear. His wife was a total invalid, never leaving her bed. A friend extended his sympathy to the husband in question. He replied, 'Why man alive I'm the happiest man on the street, my wife is always there to greet me with her smile, to sympathize with me and to advise me.'

'Keep your smile pinned on' is a good motto for a wife. Man, all day long, is battling with the world. At eventide, he longs for peace and rest in his home. Make yours like 'The Little Grey Home in the West.'

When the golden sun sinks in the hills
And the toil of a long day is o'er
Though the day may be long
In the lilt of a song,
I forget I was weary before
For ahead where the blue shadows fall
I shall come to contentment and rest
And the toils of the day will be all charmed away
In my little grey home in the west.

There are hands that will welcome me in
There are lips I am burning to kiss
There are two eyes that shine
Just because they are mine
And a thousand things other men miss.
It's a corner of heaven itself
Though it's only a tumble down nest,
But with love brooding there
Why no place can compare
With my little grey home in the West.

Mutual trust is essential. Do your best under all circumstances and right must triumph. 'Who does the best his circumstances allows, does well: acts nobly, angels could do no more!

I wish to end my discussion because I know I have over-satisfied you ere now, but no discussion, to my mind, would be in any measure complete without reference to my final point. Married life is a veritable pit-fall for trouble, and human nature is so frail that we are incapable, in our own strength, of coping with the many difficulties, which confront us. We must resort to higher authority for help and guidance. Let us close by quoting from Tennyson: 'More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of.'

'DAGMAR.'"

MARION'S MAIL

Address correspondence to Marion, at The Examiner Office.

"Dear Marion:

This is my first letter to you but I have been an interested reader since June I enjoy the page very much and look forward to reading it every day.

I agree with Mrs. Warsaw, and like to see girls ladylike.

I approve of bobbed hair and short skirts providing they are not too short, but I do not approve of girls sitting in such a position as to show their under garments; this does not include girls alone, because I have seen ladies who are out of their 'teens for many years sitting in the most vulgar positions.

I think smoking is a very immodest habit, no real lady will be seen with tobacco in her possession.

In looking over "Neighborly Helps" I was wondering if we might talk more reasons along with recipes.

There are many young housekeepers who can't learn much from an arbitrary rule, and many careless ones who would mend their ways if they saw any good reason for doing so. Think it over.

Here are a few reasons for a few rules.

When we stew meat, we first braise it, that is we sear it on a frying pan that is almost red hot, because we want to seal up the juices and so keep the meat tasty. Then we do not boil it, as that would boil the good out; we simmer it over a low fire, keeping the liquid moving gently, but nothing more.

When we cook steak, we sear the meat in the same way, we broil it but do not fry it. When we "fry' it as too many do, we fry the juices out and the grease in, and the steak loses flavor and gains indigestibility.

When we cook vegetables as a general rule, we plunge them into boiling water and keep them closely covered and on the boil. The less water we use, the better they will be, so long as we take care to keep them from burning.

This method preserves the salts and the flavor better than if they are put to swim in a bath. The water in which they are boiled also gives us a very desirable foundation for milk and other soups. Vegetables contain very valuable mineral salts, salts that are necessary to the welfare of our bodies. Even with the greatest care and the use of a small amount of water in which they have been boiled is saved and used.

Strain the vegetables through a colander, or lift them with a draining skimmer and set aside this water for further use.

As we are speaking of this by-product of our dinner vegetables, we may as well give a recipe for its use. Take the water that has been saved from carrots, celery, potatoes, onions, cabbage and so on, heat and add to it sufficient milk to make enough soup for your family. Mix a little flour with some cold milk, stir into the heated milk and vegetable water, add a bit of butter, a dash of onion juice (unless the foundation was onion water) a drop or two of kitchen bouquet and serve. You can be proud of that soup. It has cost very little; it contains the nourishment of milk and the blood cleansing properties of the salts, and it tastes like the soup that your neighbour's French chef concocts.

This soup is excellent for luncheon or for the children's tea, especially in winter, when they come in cold from play. If you want a meat flavor, a few bones left from the roast will give it to you. But given the ingredients I have mentioned, you will not feel the need of meat.

Here's hoping I have not taken up too much of your valuable column, and wishing you every success with the Women's Page.

Sincerely yours,
Mrs. L. J. S."

Ida.

Thanks very much, Mrs. L. J. S., for your valuable ideas and for the splendid recipes which I will print later. I certainly think you are right in saying more explanation might be given in connection with recipes, for the advantage of young housewives.

Touches that Add Style to Dresses

By MAE MARTIN

It's amazing to see how easily out-of-style dresses are transformed by a few buttons, a little braid and the quick magic of home tinting or dyeing.

Your tinting or dyeing will always delight you, if you are sure to use only true, fadeless Diamond Dyes. Tinting with them is easy as bluing, and dyeing takes just a little more time. New colors appear like magic right over the old colors. They give all the fashionable tints and shades, with never a hint of that redyed look which comes from inferior dyes. Insist on Diamond Dyes and save disappointment.

"Color Craft," my big new book of dollar-saving hints, will be sent you FREE. Write Mae Martin, Diamond Dyes, Windsor, Ontario.

TUCK-IN SKIRT.

A violet crepe de chine blouse with hand-stitched vestee, collars and cuffs, is worn with a purply-grey diagonal worsted suit with a tuck-in skirt.

SOFA PILLOWS

New sofa pillows should be as inevitably a fall occurrence as bonfires. There should be at least two modernistic covers this autumn, in the new metal-patterned silks or satins.

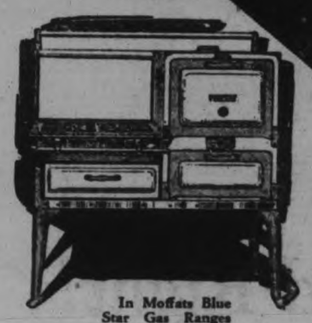
TESTING LABORATORY CGA APPROVED TRADE MARK REG'D 1927 CANADA

BEAUTY of Design, Beauty of Workmanship, Beauty of Color, are steps in the development of Moffats Blue Star Gas Ranges, acclaimed by combustion engineers, leading dealers and many, many thousands of Canadian people, as the finest, most serviceable and most beautiful gas range that money can buy.

Just over a year ago, Moffats Limited, adopted the Blue Star Specifications for Gas Ranges. During the past months this step has been more than justified, even by the action of others, who have so freely imitated—yet never equalled—Moffats designs and construction.

Therefore, make sure you see the name Moffat with the Blue Star, on the oven door of the Gas Range you buy. These are your protection and assurance that you secure the highest quality range at no higher cost than for an ordinary gas range.



In Moffats Blue Star Gas Ranges you have six color options: Nile Blue, French Grey, Oriental Green, Yellow, Fawn and Red.

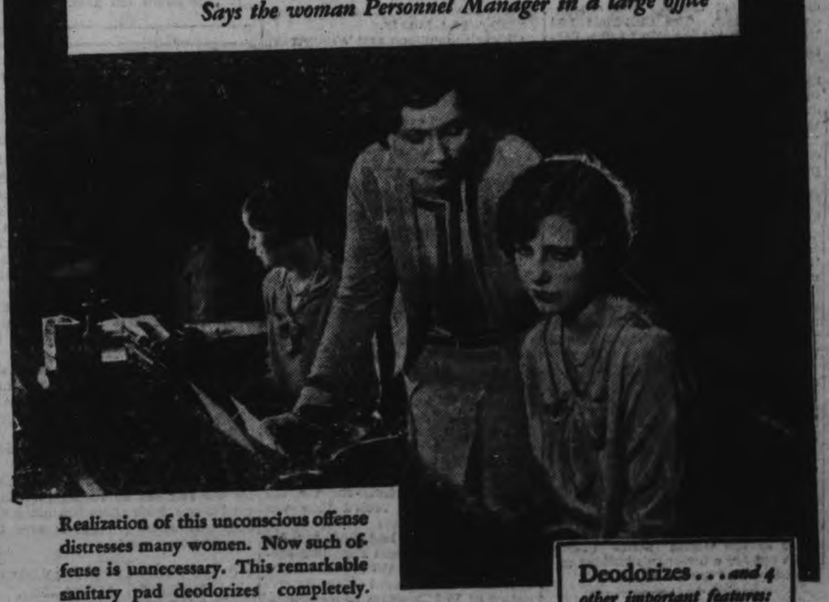
"I warn every woman I employ"

Says the woman Personnel Manager in a large office



Realization of this unconscious offense distresses many women. Now such offense is unnecessary. This remarkable sanitary pad deodorizes completely.

IN the world of business, in society, women often find themselves embarrassed at certain times. Sometimes they offend without knowing why. When they learn, miserable self-consciousness follows. Make-shift efforts to counteract the difficulty seldom succeed. Now a discovery made in Kotex Laboratories ends all these fears and worries. Science has discovered a way to counteract a serious offense.

Kotex now completely deodorizes

Kotex has brought a new idea of feminine hygiene to women all over the world. In the past ten years they have learned new comfort, new ease-of-mind through this sanitary protection. Now, after years of work, a process has been perfected that completely ends all odors. The one remaining hygienic problem in connection with sanitary pads is solved.

Shaped to fit, too

Because corners of the pad are rounded and tapered it may be worn without evidence under the most clinging gown. There is none of that conspicuous bulkiness so often associated with old-fashioned methods. And you can adjust the filler, make it thinner, thicker, narrower—to suit your own special needs. It is easily disposed of, no laundering is necessary. A new process makes it softer than ever before.

Buy a box today—60c for twelve. On sale at all drug, dry goods and departmental stores.

Deodorizes . . . and 4 other important features:

1—Softer gauze ends chafing; pliable filler absorbs as no other substance can;

2—Corners are rounded and tapered; no evidence of sanitary protection under any gown;

3—Deodorizes—safely, thoroughly, by a new and exclusive patented process;

4—Adjust it to your needs; filler may be made thinner, thicker, narrower as required;

and

5—It is easily disposed of; no unpleasant laundry.

Cardinals Must Win To-day to Prolong Series

FINE WEATHER PROBABLE FOR RESUMPTION OF WORLD SERIES

Began To Clear Quickly After Calling Off of Fourth Game.

CARDS MUST WIN TO-DAY.

Decision To Postpone Game Arouses Considerable Protest From Fans.

(By Alan J. Gould, Associated Press Sports Editor.)

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 9 (A.P.).—The Yankees were stopped yesterday in their push toward a second successive world's championship — but not by the Cardinals.

A downpour of rain early yesterday morning swamped the playing field at Sportman's Park to such an extent that Commissioner Landis authorized the postponement of the fourth game. The weather prospects favor resumption of the series to-day and playing prospects indicate its abrupt end, unless the National League champions show a remarkable reversal of form.

The decision to postpone the game, made at 10.15 a.m., more than three hours before the scheduled starting time, not only disappointed thousands of fans but aroused considerable protest.

At that time, after virtually three hours of steady rain, Sportsman's Park was a morass, with high pools of water in the outfield and the stretches along the foul lines slippery with mud.

Infield Under Tarpaulin

But the infield proper was fairly well protected by a heavy tarpaulin, carrying off most of the downpour, and the field dried quickly when the sun came out and a brisk breeze blew up.

The ground was still a bit soft in spots at 1.15 p.m., but it seemed to the small cluster of disappointed fans that an emergency corps could have put the field in good playing shape. Conditions were much better for play, in fact, than they were three years ago in the final game of the series between Pittsburgh and Washington at Forbes' Field.

Commissioner Landis, however, after poking his deliberated cane into the turf, backed up the earlier decision and expressed the conviction it was too soft for combat. He explained that the early announcement, made on the recommendation of Sam Breadon, president of the Cardinals, was issued in order to give the fans, especially those from surrounding parts, plenty of advance notice of the postponement.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 9.—Just as they started to ring down the curtain on the annual baseball show yesterday with the headman ready to take a bow and grab the American beauties, and the poor buffoon with three punctures in his bladder about to receive the fourth and fatal thrust, the whole affair was called off on account of rain, and postponed until to-day.

It was said that nothing could save the St. Louis Cardinals, but those white-haired Boy Scouts, J. Pluvius and K. Landis, teamed up in a fast double play and prevented the New York Yankees from defeating their unhappy National League rivals for at least another twenty-four hours.

Clearing Nicely

Fifteen minutes after the fourth game of the 1928 world series was postponed because of rain, the sun was shining brightly again. But that didn't matter; the day was saved—or rather lost. The Cardinals and Yankees will try it again to-day, barring further bad weather.

The rain, which forced postponement of yesterday's game started falling heavily shortly after midnight. Judge Landis, baseball's high commissioner, with whom the decision "to play or not to play" rested, stuffed cotton in the bell of his room telephone and retired for a night's rest.

Daybreak found the rain still falling, and the commissioner still sleeping.

'Twas Heavy

When he finally did get around to taking a squint at the weather, only about 4.07 inches of rain had fallen, and marines in flatboats cruising around over the spot where Sportsman's Park had been located, still were able to make soundings and find the diamond.

"Wait," said Judge Landis, "and see."

Still the rain fell, and the judge procrastinated.

Finally a cloudburst crashed through the ceiling of the judge's living room and sent Landis scurrying to the rooftop, whence he announced that the game was off on account of rain.

A few minutes later the sun was chasing away the rain clouds, and some of the worlds series players went out for a bus-man's holiday and fooled around with a baseball.

OSHAWA WINS SENIOR GAME

Defeats Peterborough Collegiate 7-1 in Close Rugby Match.

NOW LEADING LEAGUE.

OSHAWA, Oct. 9 (Special to The Examiner).—In one of the closest games ever played between the rival Peterborough Collegiate and Oshawa C. I. senior rugby teams, Oshawa, by scoring a fortunate touchdown in the second quarter and adding a convert a rouge, defeated the visiting aggregation by a 7 to 1 score after sixty minutes of exciting rugby.

Oshawa's touchdown which gave them their victory and which puts them on the top of the league with two victories and no defeats thus far in the season, came when Cornwall kicked over the Peterborough goal line, and the Peterborough half, in his hurry to carry the punt out from behind fumbled the ball, and Red Evans, fast Oshawa half back dove for it and came up with the ball safely tucked under his arm for the five points..

Murray Cock, Oshawa's newly-found snap back and drop kicker, increased the score when he made the convert on a well-placed kick. The local team's seventh point came in the last quarter near the end of the game when another kick over the Peterborough goal line was fumbled and then recovered but the guilty halfback was downed before he could sidestep his way out of the goal territory.

Peterborough's score came from Hewitt's educated boot when he sent the ball over the Oshawa goal line for a rouge after the team had staged a determined drive down the field.

The Oshawa line-up was:

Snap, Cock; insides, Henry and Smith; middles, Cutler and Hele; outsides, Daniels and Glass; flying wings, Davidson and Crothers; quarter, Carver, (Capt.); halves, Evans and Cornwall; subs, Irwing, Bondurant, McIntosh, Green, Grant, Fletcher, and Mundy.

Officials, Jamieson and Westbrooke.

NURMI SHATTERS THREE RECORDS

Veteran Finnish Star Shows Real Form in Berlin Meet.

BERLIN, Germany, October 9. — Paava Nurmi, famed Finnish footracer, broke three world's records in a sensational running performance here.

Jean Bouin's record for 15 kilometers and for one hour, set at Stockholm in 1913, both fell before the Finn's prowess yesterday, as did Alf Shrubb's ten-mile record set at Glasgow, Scotland, in 1904.

Paavo ran the 15 kilometers in 46 minutes 49 5-10 seconds, compared with Bouin's mark of 47.18 6-10, and a moment later set a new record of 50 minutes 15 seconds for the ten miles. Shrubb's record time was 50.49 6-10.

By the time he had been running for an hour, the great Finn had covered 19 kilometers 210 meters and 82 centimeters, compared with Bouin's record of 10 kilometers 21 meters and 90 centimeters.

Was Getting Chilled.

At this stage, Paavo hesitated for the moment, trying to decide whether to continue in an effort to break the world's mark for twenty kilometers. Suddenly he stopped and ran into the dressing-room without listening to the plaudits of the crowd.

"Had the day been less cold, I also would have tried for the twenty-kilometer record," Nurmi told the Associated Press after the race, "but I felt I was getting chilled, so I left well enough alone."

Nurmi's opposition, including the German police sergeant, Husen, of Hamburg, and the Finn, Marttelin, was left far behind. Thirteen runners started, but only six were able to finish.

Harry Larvo, of Finland, the Olympic champion, just manage to beat Wichmann, of Germany, in the 1,500 meters in 3.52. Dr. Otto Peltzer failed to finish.

The annual softball league will be held in the Empress Hotel on Wednesday night of this week.

Mr. Weatherman stepped in to put a stop to the Yankees' push towards their second successive world series championship yesterday in the form of a wet field.

Prospects are favorable for a resumption of the play to-day but unless the National league champions show a remarkable change of form there is not a doubt in the world but that the series will be brought to a close to-night.

Winning the senior lacrosse championship of Ontario after many years of hoping and battling, by reason of their victory on Saturday, Oshawa is out to strive for still more honors.

* * * * * *

They have accepted a challenge from Buffalo for a series for the Association (O.A.L.A.) championship. This series will likely be home and home games the victor s to receive a handsome trophy offered to the winners of this yearly competition if the challenge is accepted.

* * * * * *

After the 7 to 1 drubbing they received at the hands of Oshawa on Saturday the local P.C.I. senior team need a little more polish and combination practice if they are out to win the interscholastic championship this year.

* * * *

The Motor City's victory was indeed a triumph for them as these two teams have been rival aggregations for the past ten years.

* * * * * *

Oshawa's big score came in the second quarter when the local half fumbled the drop after a drop kick for a score of five instead of a possible one.

* * * * * *

The play was exciting enough for all of that unexpected reverses and fumbles were thrown into the play while the winner was not decided until near the very last.

* * * * * *

The Lindsay gridders did rather well against their old rivals at Cobourg in their second appearance for this season. Fumbles on either side were few and far between and the play was considered fast and fairly clean.

* * * * * *

The week's practice since their game with the local seniors showed up well, their backfield and line worked in good combination while the tackling and interference was of the best.

Ty Cobb Will Lead Ball Nine To Japan

AUGUSTA, Ga., Oct. 9.—Ty Cobb confirmed reports that he will make a tour of Japan this year with a team of major league players for exhibition games against Japanese teams. He said he was unable to announce at this time the names of those who will accompany him.

Present plans are for the party to sail from Portland, Oregon, Oct. 24, and to return to the United States December 16, after playing about ten games.

The G. E. Engineers Open League.

The G. E. Engineers bumped the Duffus Alleys for the first time this season on Wednesday last, when plenty of enthusiasm and bowling ability was displayed by each of the ten teams that make up this league. The fact that fifteen players turned in an average of over 170 is a pretty good indication that the position at the top of the average list is going to be keenly contested for this year.

"Cannonball" Benson turned in an outstanding performance, piling up a high three score of 644 and an average of 215 which places him in first position, but to all appearances many of last year's stars are keeping the ball out of the gutter much more regularly and ought to soon eclipse him in toppling the pins.

Miss Ann. Simpson set a fast pace for the fair sex by rolling high single 243 and high three 606, being the only girl whose average is over the two hundred mark.

May Hold Title For Many Years

NEW YORK, October 9.—Polo leadership, centered in the United States now through the final round victory of the Americans over Argentina on Saturday, may remain here for years because of the youthfulness of the American team.

The four which defeated Argentina 13 to 7 on Saturday comprises the youngest team in history of international competition. Captain Thomas Hitchcock, Jr., is 28; Winston Guest is 25, and Earl A. S. Hopping is only 21. The fourth member, W. Averill Harriman, is still in his thirties.

Draws His Release After 13 Years

NEW YORK, October 9.—Unconditional release of Bill Doak, one of the few surviving spitball pitchers in major league baseball, was announced recently by the Brooklyn Baseball Club.

Doak spent 13 years in the majors, coming to Brooklyn on waivers from St. Louis in 1924. He pitched good ball his first year with the Robins, but retired at the end of the season, returning in 1927 when he had a fair year.

He was not so good in 1928. Doak will return to the real estate business at Bradenton, Fla.

General Meeting Is To Be Held in Near Future To Arrange For Season.

The executive of the Peterborough Intermediate hockey club has held a meeting recently to discuss plans for the season, and make preliminary arrangements and it is likely that a general meeting will be called in the near future to re-organize for the coming campaign.

PRINCE OF WALES BEAT QUEEN MARY

Boys Gave a Splendid Exhibition of Soccer Code—Winners Won By Four Goals to Nil.

In a public school fixture last evening, at King Edward Park, Queen Mary were defeated four goals to nothing by Prince of Wales school in a very good display of the code. Success of the winners was attributed to the offensive and defensive tactics of the half-back line—all three boys giving a brilliant display. In the previous game Queen Mary won one to nothing.

Opening exchanges were of an interesting character in which both goal-keepers were called upon to save their charge. After five minutes play the Prince of Wales boys scored through Dunkley, who sent in a low ground shot that the goal-keeper of Queen Mary failed to stop. Encouraged by their success they went back again to bombard the opposing citadel for a long period that was responded by an occasion visit to the other end. White, at centre, carried the ball the full length of the field to have hard luck in not scoring. Exchanges continued even for a while until Prince of Wales visited the losers' goal again to get a goal through a scrimmage in front of goal. Time and again Queen Mary visited the winners' goal without success.

Half Time

On resuming, the winners settled down to defensive tactics against the persistent attacks of the losers who raided the winners' goal to gain flag kicks that were unproductive. Fifteen minutes had gone when Dunkerly accepted a ground pass from the foot of Menzies, just outside the goal area. Quick as a flash, he accepted the opportunity to put his team further ahead, giving his opposing goal-keeper no chance to stop the shot. Then the losers raided the Prince of Wales' goal to find it difficult to get past the halves. They tackled very closely against the Queen Mary boys. During the last period the winners missed chances to score, although they increased their score through the winner's outside right, who rattled the inside of the upright to go through the goal for number four.

Full time—Prince of Wales 4, Queen Mary 0.

TRAINS RUGBYISTS INSIDE

Dr. Harry Hobbs, the popular and famous coach of the Toronto Balmy Beach squad, Dominion rugby champions of last fall, is collecting another bang-up team this year. Although he lost a number of real stars, it does not follow that the team will be crippled for he has gathered together in Ross Robinson and the fast travelling little "Buck" Billings, both of the former Oakwood C.I. city champions, also Alex. Mackenzie, who made himself famous this summer when he paddled under the colors of the Parkdale Canoe Club and captured Dominion honors in his event at Lachine, Montreal.

According to Harry Hobbs, what helped his team most last year was the proper kind of a fighting spirit. This spirit that played such a great part the day the team won the title, was originated on the basketball floor. Harry doesn't believe in outdoor workout on rainy days and prescribed this indoor limbering up.

This year he will again field a team that will not be burned up before the season is half over and when the time comes for the real test they will be in the pink of condition.

EX-PUGILIST HEADS CLUB

Benny Leonard Acquires Controlling Interest in Pittsburgh Pirates.

EXECUTIVE RE-ORGANIZED.

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 9 (Canadian Press).—Benny Leonard, retired king of the lightweight division of pugilism, yesterday became a hockey magnate, having acquired a controlling interest in the Pittsburgh Pirates, local entrant in the National Professional Hockey League. The club was purchased from Horace H. and Edward Townsend, brothers.

Interested in the team with Leonard is James P. Callahan, Pittsburgh lawyer, and at a reorganization meeting following formal transfer of the franchise here yesterday, Callahan was named president; Benny Leonard, treasurer, and the latter's brother, Charles, secretary.

The retired title-holder also made known he would attempt the promotion of boxing here, using the home of the hockey club—Duquesne Garden—as a fight arena while the puck chasers were playing away from home during the winter.

Speaking of hockey purchases, Leonard said the new owners of the Pirates expected to buy several new players before the season started and that every effort would be made to give Pittsburgh a championship ice squad.

ERNEST CROWE WINS FOR FOURTH TIME

Carries Off First Prize in Alderville Plowing Match.

ROSENEATH, October 9. — There were a good number of entries at the annual ploughing match held at Alderville on Tuesday, October 2. The sod plowing was divided into two classes. In the senior class Ernest Crowe carried off the first prize for the fourth time, he also captured the specials for the best strike out and the best finish. Amos Marsden was a close second, and Alfred Simpson came in third place.

In the junior class, Edgar Marden won first place, Olive Crowe second, and James Bigmur third. J. J. Duffus of Peterborough was judge, assisted by Elliott Moses, of Barnia.

Three Ceremonies To Marry Couple

TORONTO, Oct. 6.—(Canadian Press).—One third and final marriage ceremony for Judith Farina Romero, of Toronto, in St. John's Roman Catholic church took place recently.

Twice before have the couple been united in wedlock. The first ceremony was done by proxy, an uncle of the bride taking place of the groom, who was in Toronto when the ceremony took place. The second was a civil rite performed before a justice of the peace. The first marriage, a survival of an ancient Brazilian custom which called for the bride to be married at home if the groom is absent, took place last July.

CELTIC RETAINS GLASGOW CUP

Defeat Queen's Park 2-0 in Final of Series For Trophy.

SCOTTISH LEAGUE RESULTS.

Glasgow, Scotland, Oct. 9—(Canadian Press Cable).—Forty thousand people saw Celtic retain the Glasgow cup here Saturday at Hampden Park by beating Queen's Park, their opponents in the final of the series for this trophy, by two goals to nil. Heavy rain fell before the start of the match, which kept the attendance down.

Queen's Park had hard luck in not winning. The amateurs outplayed Celtic in the first half but could not score. After the interval, McCrory and Gray scored for Celtic and Queen's good chance to win the cup for the first time in thirty years was crushed by those tallies.

Glasgow, Scotland, Oct. 8 (Canadian Press Cable).—Third Lanark gave the unbeaten Rangers a surprise in Scottish league soccer matches Saturday. Third Lanark put in two goals in the first half through Hamil and Wilson. Rangers woke up after the turn round and not only equalized but added three more for good measure. Ranger scorers were Horton, Meiklejohn; from a penalty, McPhail and Muirhead, two. Hearts, who have not been going too well lately, changed their formation against Falkirk and very effective results were achieved. Battles, the ex-United States player, went from center to inside right. Hearts goals came from McNeil, two; Murray, two, Battles and Smith. Houston and Morrison registered for Falkirk. Partick Thistle swamped Hamilton Academicals by the score of eight goals to nil. Haie netted five times for the victors, while Ness, Ballantyne, and Elliott had one apiece. The Hibernians had a goal in each half against Airdrieonians. Bradley found the twine in the first half and Finlay in the second. Cameron's goal for Motherwell defeated Aberdeen and ejected them from league leadership. Motherwell deserved to have won by a larger margin. Dundee won their third game in succession when they downed Raith Rovers by three to nothing. Smith put the ball through his own goal twice to give Dundee two of their tallies and McNab had the other one. St. Johnstone won against Kilmarnock by the one goal scored, Robertson doing the trick. Only one goal was scored in the St. Mirren-Clyde fixture and Rankine of the former team got it. Ayr United won from Cowdenheath through the goals of McColl, Brae and Robertson. Wilson netted for the losers.

BALMY BEACH WINS EXHIBITION GAME

Defeat McGill 7-6 in Annual Tilt at Molson Stadium.

Montreal, Que., Oct. 9 (C.P.)—A returned punt, which rolled to the deadline in the last thirty seconds of the game, gave Balmy Beach a 7 to 6 victory over McGill in their annual exhibition tilt at the Molson stadium Saturday afternoon. It was a narrow margin for the Dominion champions, who were forced to overcome a six to nothing lead obtained by the intercollegiate team in the final half. It was the first game of the season for the students, who gave a snappy display in the first two quarters but wilted in the last quarter against the deadly plunging of a better-conditioned and heavier team.

In the first half, the Beachers failed to impress and looked far from a team that last fall steam-rollered its way over the much-touted Hamilton Tigers to a Canadian title. Their play was sloppy and loose and their defensive thrusts got nowhere against the untried but alert McGill team. As a result of two fumbles McGill were twice placed in perfect position for placement kicks, and on both occasions, Ken Tremain, McGill half, connected, both kicks going squarely between the uprights. This gave the students a six-point advantage at the rest interval.

Force Line Back.

With the resumption of play, the hitherto disorganized Beachers snapped out of their legarthy, and, led by the sterling plunging of Crowhurst, McNichol and Trimble, began forcing the red and white team back. Twice in the third quarter the Beachers were within striking distance of the McGill goal-line but upon each occasion bad breaks cost them their golden scoring opportunities. These turns of ill luck did not halt the titleholders, however, and they kept on gradually forcing the students back. The McGill team began to show signs of weariness, but was still full of fight. The pressure finally told, however, and following a fumble by Tremain, his only one of the game, the visitors gained possession well in McGill territory. They then started another drive goalwards. This one succeeded, and after several good ground-gaining plunges, Billings carried the ball across the McGill line on a trick play which completely baffled the opposition. Ponton converted to tie the score at six-all. The Beachers continued to press and finally clinched the game when Billings caught Tremain's hoist on the McGill 40-yard line and immediately returned it behind the McGill goal-line, from where it rolled out of bounds for the winning point. The game ended a few seconds later.

UNCLE WIGGILY

By HOWARD R. GARIS

Every-days Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE PROUD ALLIGATOR

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Once upon a time, as Uncle Wiggily was hopping past the Hollow Stump School, he saw Johnnie and Billie Bushytail, the squirrel boys, coming out of the back door. The two brothers walked very softly and made no noise. They held their tails, which were like little dusting brushes, arched over their backs.

"Ah ha!" said Uncle Wiggily to himself. "I have caught Johnnie and Billie slipping out of school when they shouldn't. They are going to fool the Lady Mouse teacher. But I will stop them!"

So the rabbit gentleman hopped up behind Johnnie and Billie as they softly closed the back door of the school and Mr. Longears cried:

"Boo!"

"Oh!" exclaimed Johnnie.

"Oh!" chattered Billie.

"No wonder you are surprised," said Uncle Wiggily. "I have caught you trying to slip away from school."

"Oh, no, Uncle Wiggily," said Johnnie. "You do us wrong. We are not sneaking away from school."

"We knew our lessons so well that Lady Mouse said we might come out early to go look for hickory nuts," added Billie.

"But if Lady Mouse said you might leave school before it is over, why did you come out so quietly and shut the door as soft as a feather?" asked Mr. Longears.

"We made no noise so we wouldn't disturb the other boys and girls who must stay in and study," softly chattered Johnnie.

Then Uncle Wiggily knew the little squirrel boys were telling the truth and he said:

"I will come with you and help you look for hickory nuts."

"Oh, fine!" chattered Billie and Johnnie, and when they were far enough way from the school they could make as much noise as they wished and so could the bunny uncle.

Over the fields and through the woods hopped Mr. Longears and the squirrel boys scampered beside him. Pretty soon they came to some hickory trees on the ground under which were some of the hard, round, white nuts that Jack Frost had scattered there, bursting open the brown outer shell or husk.

"Bushels of them!" echoed Johnnie. "We can eat a lot and take a lot home for daddy and mother."

"I'll help you," offered Mr. Longears. "But I will not eat any of the nuts, for my teeth are not made for gnawing the hard shells, though I can easily gnaw the bark of trees. So I will pick up the nuts off the ground."

"Thank you," said Johnnie and Billie politely.

The squirrel boys ate a few hickory nuts, gnawing through the hard, white shell to get the sweet meat within. Then they looked at the pile of nuts Uncle Wiggily had gathered. But as soon as Johnnie looked he laughed and said:

"Oh, Uncle Wiggily! You should put on your glasses!"

"Why so?" asked the rabbit gentleman.

"Because," answered the squirrel boy, "instead of picking uphickory nuts you have picked up a lot of round, white stones, that are just the shape and size of nuts. But, as strong as our teeth are, my brother and I never could crack these stones."

Then Uncle Wiggily put on his glasses, which he had at first forgotten, and he saw, truly, that he had made a mistake and picked up stones for nuts.

"Ha! Ha!" laughed the bunny. "That's a joke on me!"

"Yes, and here's another joke on you! I'm here!" suddenly bellowed a harsh voice, and out of the bushes waddled the Skillery Scallery Alligator with the double-jointed tail.

Right away Uncle Wiggily knew there would be trouble. But he also knew that this was a very proud Alligator, so the bunny thought of a trick he could play on the Bad Chap.

"What is the joke you think is on me?" asked Mr. Longears.

"The joke is that I am going to nibble you," gargled the 'Gator.

"Are your teeth strong enough to bite?" asked the rabbit.

"Are they?" shouted the proud 'Gator. "I have the strongest teeth in the world!"

"We shall see about that," said Mr. Longears, winking one eye at Johnnie and Billie.

SORE EYES—STYES

Don't think if you have one stye you must suffer with a number of these ugly, painful blemishes. DR. ORIGINALS BACK IN GAME TO-DAY

Hoyt and Sherdel Will Pitch in Fourth Match of Series.

IMPORTANT BATTLE.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 9 (Canadian Press).— With the original world series cast again on the bill the New York Yankees and St. Louis Cardinals to-day welcomed the opportunity to resume their performance, postponed a day when rain prevented the fourth act yesterday. For the game that may prove the most important of the series, Manager Huggins and Boss McKechnie selected the opening day athletes, with Waite Hoyt pitching for New York and Wee Willie Sherdel for the Cardinals.

A tarpaulin covered every inch of the infield throughout the night, and prospects were good that the game would be played to-day. There was no hint of rain, while warm but not too strong winds prevailed.

Sherdel, selected as the Cardinal's last hope to-day, lost four to one in the opening game.

THEATRES

AT THE REGENT.

"ROSE-MARIE" HAS LOST NONE OF ITS CHARM ON SCREEN.

Film Version of Musical Stage Success Proves Equally Effective.

"Rose-Marie" which opened yesterday at the Regent Theatre, means fully as much to the screen as the famous musical play from which it was adapted meant to the stage.

In other words, the charm of Arthur Hammerstein's stage presentation, by Otto A. Harbach and Oscar Hammerstein III, has lost none of its original charm in its transition to the screen.

It seems to the reviewer that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer deliberately set out to outdo its own good work of several seasons back when that organization adapted and filmed Lehar's "The Merry Widow."

Unlike as these two musical plays are, I know of no other picture to which "Rose-Marie" could be compared suitably. The latter has been every bit as carefully handled as was the former vehicle. Though all of the marvelous and elegant society backgrounds of "The Merry Widow" are missing from M-G-M's new play, these are made up for by the grandeur of the scenic backgrounds in the French Canadian north woods story.

Joan Crawford and James Murray are seen in the featured romantitc roles and each is ideally suited to the role. Miss Crawford has oft proved her ability on the screen in other productions but she clinches the matter with the manner in which she has portrayed the role of the daughter of the fur post. Murray, almost unknown on the screen, proves to be a real find which we hope producers wil not carelessly lose in the shuffle when future pictures are cast.

The supporting players are among the best ever gathered for a single cast and include such film notables as House Peters, Gibson Gowland, Polly Moran, Creighton Hale, Gertrude Astor, Lionel Belmore, William Orlamond, Harry Gribbons and others.

The picture is lavishly presented at the Regent Theatre with the full musical score by Rudolph Firml and Herbert Stothart. The film was produced for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer by adaptation of the musical play.

AT THE CAPITOL.

FLORENCE VIDOR IN THE MAGNIFICENT FLIRT

The Magnificent Flirt, the feature picture last night, was light and entertaining and gave Florence Vidor ample opportunity to display her charms against the background of sophisicated Paris cabarets. At several places it gave the impression that cubist art has at last gained a foothold in the movies, and the clever use of mirrors in introducing some of the scenes heightened this effect.

Miss Vidor, as Marguerite, a charming widow, lived a gay life with many admirers. She asked one for an early dinner date, suggesting ten o'clock as she had a theatre engagement afterwards and as she went out advised her daughter that it was time for little girls to go to bed. Albert Conti, as the Comte de Castelle, was a dashing figure in evening colthes who, finding her glove, instructed his valet to send it to her with the customary flowers and the usual note. They went to a restaurant where they met Georgette, his former charmer, in a gown like that which Marguerite had just stated was made exclusively for her. Georgette's companion, an American, played by Ned Sparks, appeared as wooden in looks and actions as it seemed possible for a man to be.

Both men attended Marguerite's party, given in honor of her daughter's birthday the next day, although in the meantime the Count had refused to let his nephew marry the daughter because he did not approve of the mother. Seeing Marguerite kiss his nephew in token of her consent to the engagement, he left the party and apparently went on a glorious drunk with the American as both were next shown in bed with a very "morning after" look as a cabby came to deliver the horse they had bought.

To show his nephew what kind of woman Marguerite was, the count invited her to dinner and asked her to go to Venice with him. She had been told by her daughter that the count objected to the wedding so was on her best behaviour and staggered the count by agreeing to go, and then happily suggesting a wedding in the little church on the Grand Canal. Of course, the trip to Venice was made, but as a double honeymoon.

The comedy was a Lloyd Hamilton one, that fat comedian showing his usual faculty for doing things wrong.

Stomach Troubles, Headaches and Dizziness

When your stomach is sick, you are sick all over. If you can't digest your food, you lose strength and "pep"; get thin and nervous; and feel as tired when you get up as when you went to bed.

This was the condition of Mme. P. Joyal, 2170 Letourneux street, Montreal. She says: "I was so nervous that the rustling of a newspaper upset me. My appetite had left me; indigestion was giving me a great deal of trouble; I could not sleep; and steadily lost weight. Tanlac soon had me eating again, corrected my stomach trouble, steadied my nerves, ran my weight up ten pounds, and made me feel just right in every way. Let Tanlac do for you what it did for this sufferer and thousands of others. It is marvelous to see how it corrects the most obstinate digestion troubles—relieves gas, pains in the stomach and bowels—how it restores the appetite, vigor, sound sleep and strong nerves.

FINE BIG YACHT GOES UP CANAL

Virginian II Will Be Stored at Orillia—Luxurious Vessel.

EVERYBODY WORKS.

Approaching with all the majestic dignity of her 78-foot white hull and polished metal, Virginian II knocked at Lock number 19 for admittance to Peterborough waters at mid-day Monday and a few minutes later crept quietly yet steadily into the east pontoon of the Peterborough Hydraulic lift lock. And in a manner quite in keeping with the dignity of her person, that marvel of scientific engineering carried her higher and higher, until she was able to float into the upper canal to her temporary moorings.

Virginian II, with her owner, Gordon Lefebvre, vice-president in charge of operations of the General Motors plant at Pontiac, Mich., on board, accompanied by Mrs. Lefebvre and a party of twelve others, "tarried awhile" before continuing on the final trip of her first season afloat, a season that has witnessed her voyages the length and Breadth of Lake Ontario, the St. Lawrence and the Thousand Islands. At the Ditchburn plant in Orillia, she will be stored for winter, very near the scene of her launching some months ago.

Through the courtesy of C. O. King, assistant manager of the Peterborough Teco stores, The Examiner representative joined the party at Lock 19, together with His Worship Mayor Denne, President James Dutton and Secretary Frank G. Stinson of the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce. Aboard, besides Mr. and Mrs. Lefebvre were Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Dyas, of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Gary Woodley; Mr. and Mrs. Roy Bishop; Mr. and Mrs. Bremner Green; Miss Mary Clarke and Philip Wiener. Following the "lift" His Worship Mayor Denne's invitation to join a motor tour about the city was taken advantage of by the ladies, who expressed their pleasure and surprise at the splendid industrial and residential features of which Peterborough is so proud.

Find the Crew

During a brief tour of inspection, the Examiner could not have failed to note the luxurious cabin accommodation which provides, if necessary, for thirty passengers; one could not but be impressed by the formidable assemblage of a power plant, water facilities etc., two dinghys with out-board motors and an impudent looking "sea flea" that had been hoisted to the forward deck, seemed to imply that the party was not content to take life easy—but where was the crew? Surely, the young chap who cast a parental eye over the motors, could not do it all, assisted by one other helper aboard!

The secret was soon out. "Everybody works on this boat" declared one of the party, and this declaration was borne out when the locks were approached. "The women folk helped too and certainly, with so capable a crew, the skipper (Mr. Lefebvre) could not have gone wrong.

The boat will tie up for to-night at Bobcaygeon. It left Toronto on Friday at six o'clock and arrived at Crow Bay on Saturday at noon. Orillia will be reached within the next few days or so.

Speaking of the Trent waterway, Mr. Lefebvre was enthusiastic regarding its possibilities as a tourist attraction. He regretted that the Severn link had not been completed ere now for he believed that the canal traffic would be increased many times by such an improvement. Indeed one of the party casting an approving glance over the cruiser, sounded a fine argument in favor of the Trent when he stated that the industry that had built her could not have existed were it not for the waterway. Such boats are seldom carried overland and it would have been necessary for the boat works to have located somewhere on the Great Lakes not in Orillia.

WOMEN! READ THIS ALOUD TO YOUR HUSBANDS

There are many men who are old long before their time. They may not "look" old; but they have lost the old-time fire and "pep" that made them so attractive in years gone by.

In many instances, they themselves have not noticed it, or they may have passed it by as just a temporary condition which would soon right itself. Oft-times it is no fault of theirs—sickness, sorrow, overwork, any of a hundred things may have caused this condition. They are too young to be "old" because old age is a condition of the body as much as it is a matter of years—science has proven this and science has found an easy way out for many men in this condition.

After long and careful research, there has been produced a little lemon-colored tablet called ERBAC (please remember that name—it may mean much to you) which, when taken regularly according to directions, goes straight to the CAUSE of many of these conditions. ERBAC is not a "cheap" remedy. Bond and other druggists are selling it for Two Dollars a packet. But a packet contains a supply for twenty days, and every reputable druggist sells ERBAC with a positive guarantee of money back if you are not absolutely pleased with results.

For your own sake and for the sake of your family, don't you think you ought to look into this at once? Go to your druggist. Get a packet of ERBAC and start right in taking it. Notice how, after a few days, the old time sparkle comes back to life, how to do things suddenly manifests itself. Then tell all your friends about ERBAC and what it has done for you.

NOTE: While ERBAC is a perfectly safe and harmless combination of scientific ingredients, it is not intended for children. But many women have been taking it and are reporting remarkable results.

CANCER CASES RESPOND TO NEW RADIUM TREATMENT

Insertion of Radium Needles Produces Encouraging Results.

NOT DEFINITE CURE.

LONDON, Eng., Oct. 9.—(Canadian Press).—A new tecnnique for the application of radium for the treatment of cancer was reported at the Quarterly Court of the Governors of the London Hospital recently. The committee wished to emphasize that in reporting that to the governors they were not announcing a cure for the dread disease. The radium for this particular method of treatment is mounted in the form of needles. The needles in appearance are similar to gramaphone needles. They are of platinum and hollow and contain from two to six milligrammes of radium each. The new technique which has been in use on the continent, at Brussels in particular, for some time past, consists in inserting a number of needles containing radium all round the cancerous growth. The needles remain there for varying times, generally five days, and in favorable cases the growth is not only destroyed, but is prevented from spreading to the surrounding tissues A large number of needles are required, in fact as many as 40 are used in treating a case of cancer of the breast. The committee said it could be stated that in many cases the results were most encouraging. In some cases radium can be used where the knife can do nothing, and often a less severe operation can be preformed than would otherwise be necessary.

Sadga Saburi, the Japanese Charge d'Affairs in London, who recently was sculling in a racing skiff with "Bill" East, the King's bargemaster, when the craft was struck by a motor launch and cut in two. Both Mr. Saburi and his companion were thrown into the water, and their boat sank within a few moments. They were rescued.

HIGHWAY OPEN END OF MONTH

Dufferin Construction Company Has Stretch Near Omemee Nearly Finished.

ROAD IMPROVED.

LINDSAY, Oct. 9.—The Dufferin Construction Company, which has the contract for the construction of that stretch of the Peterborough-Lindsay highway between Omemee and Fowler's Corner, has made splendid progress with the work. It is understood that the contract will be completed about the end of October unless unfavorable weather conditions prevail.

The company entered on the preliminary stages of the work last May, and despite the fact that weather conditions at different times during the summer retarded the work somewhat, excellent progress was made. Those who have gone over the stretch have marvelled at the wonderful transformation which has taken place. Steep hills have been cut down, dangerous grades eliminated, the highway widened and levelled—the whole undertaking being the last word in modern highway construction.

So satisfactory has the work progressed that the construction company was able to transfer some of its equipment to York County and also to the Niagara district, where construction work was in progress.

NEW MINISTER GIVES ADDRESS

he showed the men quite plainly how much the pastor may be assisted by the men of his congregation.

In ancient days, the speaker explained, the word church had meant "a big house," the servants in it being duty bound to keep it clean. But the truer function of such an association as this would be to assume certain responsibilities, and developing this thought, Mr. McLean brought to his listeners, the conception of a synagogue in which the pastor may call upon members of his congregation to assist him. He pointed out that the choir is the minister's second line of defence, and that failing this, the initiative of private members may be of great assistance. Perhaps this last factor may be developed in the Men's Association with its freedom to bring in more members and allow them to contribute their share of assistance.

In conclusion, the new minister asked the aid and co-operation of the men in a great move to increased interest in St. Andrew's.

Vote of Thanks.

Joseph John, president of the Peterborough Kiwanis Club, moved the vote of thanks, not only to Mr. McLean, but also to those who had contributed to the program.

FOR THE

Foundation Fund

OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL OF WOMEN.

The Local Council has promised to raise

$1,000

OF THE

$200,000

that is being subscribed in Canada. This sum is to be invested as a fund and the interest returns are to be used by the National organization so that it will be able to give more effective service.

The local campaign is under way, and the officers of the Local Council of Women commend the work and objects of the organization to the citizens of Peterborough and trust the response locally will be such as to reach the small objective that has been set, which would be a very practical appreciation of what the Local Council of Women has accomplished and hope to continue in the future.

Subscriptions mailed to Mrs. C. H. Edwards, 206 Smith Street; Mrs. Jos. Wearing, 75 Benson Ave., or Mrs. N. D. Seaton, 313 Frederick Ave., will be thankfully received.

MISS E. SANDERCOCK IS Y.P.L. PRESIDENT

Roseneath United Young People Re-organizing For Winter.

(Examiner Correspondence).

ROSENEATH, Oct. 9.—The Young People's League has been re-organized, with the following new officers:

President: Miss Elva Sandercock.
Vice-President: Orra Robins.
Secretary: Miss Bessie Turner.
Treasurer: Miss Thelma Thompson.
Organist: Miss Doris Mouncey.
1st Vice-President: Miss Hildred Taylor.
Assistant: Mrs. (Rev.) R. M. Brown.
2nd Vice-President: Miss Jean Craighead.
Assistant: Mrs. C. W. Varcoe.
3rd Vice-President: Miss Gladys Blodgett.
Assistant: Mrs. Delbert Brisbin.
4th Vice-President: Miss Mabel Stewart.
Assistant: Mrs. Reg. Crego.

The meeting will open at 8 o'clock p.m. every Wednesday.

Last fall and winter the Young People did wonderful work in this society, and many times the League hall was filled to capacity. It is hoped that this season will continue and make it as interesting and beneficial as it ever was before.

Personals.

Rev. Brown went to Toronto on Friday to attend the Dominion Laymen's Missionary Convention, which was held in Massey Hall on Friday and Saturday. Mrs. Brown and Master Freddie accompanied him to the city.

Sunday, October 14, is the date set for Rally Day, when the Sabbath School will take charge of the services.

Mrs. Ellen Marsh, of Detroit, is renewing old acquaintances in the village and neighborhood, and guest with her nephew, Mr. Fred Sherwin.

Mr. M. Davey and Miss Jean Craighead attended the teachers' convention at Campbellford on Thursday and Friday. Mr. Davey being one of the speakers, gave an interesting talk about his trip through the States and Western Canada during his summer holidays.

The village is overstocked with men at the present time, there being a heavy force of men working on the Hydro, also the electricians wiring the residences.

G. E. ENGINEER TO GIVE TALK

R. E. Doherty of Schnectady Will Address Local Institute.

ON EDUCATION.

All interested in education and particularly engineering education will be welcome at the next meeting of the local branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada which has been arranged for Thursday, October 11th at the Chamber of Commerce Room at the usual hour of 8:15 p.m. The speaker will be R. E. Doherty, prominent consulting engineer of the General Electric Co. at Schenectady who has entitled his address "Effects of Present Engineering Education as it is reflected in the young men who come to the General Electric Company."

Mr. Doherty is not only an engineer and mathematician of very high standing but also a very able speaker to whom it is very easy to listen. It is hoped that all members and friends will be able to attend.

What Would You Do—

If you saw a car
With doors wide open
And without a driver
Rapidly gaining speed
In a downhill rush
Toward a railroad track
And almost certain destruction?

A well known west end resident was faced with just a crisis as he drove west on Hunter street the other day. Quickly stopping his own machine, he climbed out and was barely able to catch the driverless car in time to apply the brakes which a couple of youngsters had released. Needless to say, he was sincerely thanked by the owner, who rushed hatless from a nearby residence.

Wedding Bells

SMITH—COFFEY
A very pretty wedding took place at St. Peter's Rectory on Monday, October 8, when Margaret Coffey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. Coffey, of Kinmount, was united in marriage to Carol Smith, son of Mrs. Smith and the late Mr. G. Smith. The Rev. Father Corkery read the ceremony.

The bride looked very pretty in a gown of white georgette with hat and shoes to match, and wore a fox fur. She was attended by Miss Alta Hickey, who wore pink satin, with a small black hat with shoes to match, and a fox fur.

The bridegroom was supported by Mr. Jack Brandon of Midland.

After the ceremony they motored to the home of the bridesmaid's sister, Mrs. Emerson Woodcock, 288 Westcott street, where a very pleasant evening was spent. There were about forty-five guests. The happy couple left on the 7.45 for a short honeymoon in Toronto. On their return they will reside in the city.

HARRISON—YOUNG
St. Andrew's United Church, decorated with autumn leaves and dahlias, was the scene of a very pretty wedding at 1 o'clock to-day, when Mildred Mary, youngest daughter of Mrs. Young and the late Mr. T. D. Young, was united in marriage to Melville Ross Harrison, son of Mr. Richard Harrison.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Orville Young, was becomingly attired in a gown of poudre blue georgette with trimmings of transparent velvet and touches of silver. With this she wore a small black felt hat with blue trimming, and an Isabella fox fur. She carried ophelia roses, and her only ornament was a white gold wrist watch, the gift of the bridegroom.

Miss Mildred Fowler, cousin of the bride, as bridesmaid, wore flowered chiffon over yellow, with a small black hat and fur, and carried sunset roses.

The bridegroom was supported by Mr. Ernest Thompson.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. C. V. McLean, pastor of the church, and the wedding music was played by Mr. John Crane, organist. During the signing of the register, Mrs. R. C. Breckenridge sang "Until."

After the ceremony a dainty buffet luncheon was served to the immediate relatives of the bride and bridegroom at the home of the bride's mother. Later Mr. and Mrs. Harrison left by motor, mid showers of confetti and good wishes, for Montreal; the bride travelling in a black georgette and velvet frock with a blue coat with mole trimming and a small black hat.

The bridegroom's gift to the bridesmaid was an amber necklet; to the best man, a leather bill fold, and Mrs. Breckenridge received an amber and gold necklet.

OBITUARY

MRS. G. A. CARRUTHERS
The death occurred at Cobourg, on Sunday, October 7, of Clara Warne, beloved wife of the late George A. Carruthers, and beloved mother of Ella Carruthers.

Funeral service will be held on Wednesday, October 10, at 2 o'clock. Interment at Cobourg Union Cemetery.

PAINT IS THROAT OIL
PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 9.—Customs officers here know the difference between paint and throat oil. Following a recent investigation they seized 43 barrels of alleged liquor which was billed to a fictitious consignee as "dry paint." "The only thing dry about it," said one official, "is the throats of prospective purchasers."

BIRTH

McNABB'S FASHION SHOW

From the simplicity of the street and sport dresses and coats to the elaborateness of evening gowns there seemed to be a definite and regular trend in the latest styles, as shown in the annual fall fashion show held last night by McNabb's at the Capitol Theatre. In fact, the trend was even more extended, as the only girl to appear in the comedy which preceded the show wore a very plain office dress, while the main picture, Florence Vidor in "The Magnificent Flirt," showed the most magnificent and sophisticated of Paris styles. There was a good attendance both downstairs and in the balcony.

Eight charming models from the Peter Robinson Chapter, I.O.D.E., displayed the various costumes, each appearing five times. The first to be shown were street and sport dresses, nearly all of Jersey knitted cloth in two-tone effects. Some Rodier crepes were also displayed in these. All the frocks were close fitting at the waistline and had even hem lines, neither longer nor shorter than those worn this summer.

Shagmoor topcoats were worn by all the girls with these dresses on their second apparance. This new fabric is made of the same yarn as tweed but is knitted instead of being woven, forming a waterproof garment which will not shrink nor sag nor show wrinkles. The coats were all of quiet colors, tailored perfectly plain, some with and some without fur collars.

Afternoon frocks were of many materials and struck an average in elaborateness between the dresses which preceded them and those which followed. One striking model had a gold metallic bodice and black silk transparent velvet skirt. Uneven hemlines were found on all these dresses, some having a number of points evenly spaced around while others had all the extra length concentrated at the sides in bunches of drapery. Rose and gold metallic cloth was used for the bodice of another gown, while a simple model in black transparent velvet with scalloped skirt was also good.

Heavier coats were of brighter hues than the sport garments. Elin and Blin French broadcloth was most featured, with Kashagranda and French gerona cloths also used. All these coats were lavishly trimmed with shawl or stand-up Paquin collars of wolf, fox, lynx and beaver, with cuffs to match. Most of the cuffs were so trimmed with fur that put together they would look almost like the muffs which all women carried a decade ago.

The crowning feature of the presenation was of course the showing of evening gowns. These were all elaborate in period styles, with plain bodies but with skirts lavishly trimmed with petals, flounces, and gathers of lace or tulle. One pretty model was of transparent velvet and tulle of an orange shade. Metallic lace was used to good advanstge in another creation, while plain black velvet with black lace for the bottom tier attracted much attention. This last was the only evening gown to have a straight hemline, most of them having bouffant skirts, short at the front and long at the back. Most of them were of high pastel shades.

The culmination of the show came when all the models, still clad in their gorgeous evening gowns, filed in from each side and ranged themselves around the stage, which was arranged as a living room, with a handsome chesterfield suite from Comstock's, and ferns and plants.

None of the details which go to make up the complete ensemble was neglected. The hats, from Mrs. Wilson's millinery parlors, were carefully selected to match the coats and gowns; the bags, canes, and other accessories from Warne Brothers' also matched; and furs from William Lech's completed the ensemble. Madame Merriam did the coiffures, which were quite in keeping with the gowns and hats.

The eight young ladies who acted as models were Mrs. R. C. Cummings, Mrs. H. Borland, Misses Olga Johnston, Florence Adams, Mildred Morphet, and Isobel, Violet and Daisy Davidson.

Three charming numbers by Miss Margaret Dickson, soprano silver medallist of the C.N.E., added to the attractive program. Miss Dickson was heard between phases of the fashion show, and wore a black taffeta gown faced with pink, and black diamante ornaments. The gown was also from McNabb's.

RATS IMPERIL CHILD
ADENA, O., Oct. 9.—Mothers in towns near idle coal mines are seriously alarmed since 1-year-old Betty Sickle was attacked by rats while asleep in her bed. Lack of refuse in the mines is forcing the rodents to the surface and into homes, and mothers are taking precautions to protect their babies. Baby Betty suffered nine lacerations and the flesh was eaten from her knuckles to the bone before cries of the protesting infant alarmed the household.
